Nov. 13, 1856, Bro. Stoner was married to Sister Belinda Engel. To this union were born ten children, all dying in their younger years save three daughters who, with their families and the faithful, patient mother survive to comfort each other in their loss.

While Bro. Stoner's education in the schools was limited, he was a faithful student of conditions about him, well read in the Scriptures, and a good interpreter thereof. For thirty years he conducted a weekly Bible class among the members of Union Bridge.

Among these and his old comrades in the work of the church, of whom there remain quite a few, we find it hard to say farewell, when we remember the years of toil together. Somehow he kept so much in touch with things about him, especially in church affairs and the younger people, that we were not aware that he was growing old.

His body was reverently carried to the old Pipe Creek cemetery by six ministers of the congregation, after services in the adjacent church by the other two, assisted by Bro. Geiser. There, in the silent "city of the dead," where for fifty years he had exhorted and comforted others with the hope in Christ,—we placed the body of Eld. E. W. Stoner, knowing that the church had lost a father and faithful servant, but in the hope that "they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars forever and ever."

Take Your Choice.

BY ELEANOR J. BRUMBAUGH.

In the thirteenth chapter of Genesis we find an account of the separation of Abraham and Lot. A beautiful spirit is shown in Abraham when he gave the younger man his choice. The most natural thing for the elder man would have been to choose a place. This was his privilege, but he gave Lot the privilege of choosing. We have no account of Lot saying, "My dear uncle, I wish you to choose," but he selfishly took his own choice.

When we have such a privilege, we need to exercise care, lest our choice prove injudicious. When we choose selfishly and unwisely, our choice has taken us. Many people allow their choice to take them. They see only their own interests, disregarding the interests of others. Paul teaches us not to look only on our own things, but also on the things of others. It is pitiful to see how some do contend for their choice,—their way of doing things. They think others should see things as they do, and give up to them. The smallest things are held to so tenaciously as to cause contention.

I heard two girls speaking very unkindly to each other as to which clothes should be washed first. They were doing the washing, and one thought certain pieces should be washed first. The other thought differently. I also know two other girls who talked unkindly to each other because one liked more blueing in the clothes than the other did.

If you will notice, it is just such trifles as these that often cause discord in homes, unkind words between parents, brothers and sisters, and others in the home. When we think it over, we are disgusted with our ignorance. Wisdom should lead us to sacrifice some trifle like the one above mentioned, and control the tongue that would speak unkind words concerning some insignificant preference.

O, that we might see the beauty of a peaceful, quiet home! Let harsh words be changed into kind words. The dear ones are with us for only a short time. They sicken, and leave the circle so suddenly sometimes. Then we shall feel sorry we ever spoke the harsh words because of a mere trifle.

We must learn to give up our ideas as to how things ought to be done, even when they seem much better than those that others suggest. Perhaps you remember that, when you have contended harshly for something and got it, you did not enjoy it as much as you thought you would. The one who gave up to you, won the greater victory. One who will keep quiet, and let another say what is not true, rather than have a contention, is learning a blessed lesson in the school of Christ.

The peace that comes into our lives because we have given up something we wanted to have done our way, is a more precious blessing than the selfish enjoyment of having our own way. Let the husband sometimes give up to the wife, and the wife sometimes give up to the husband. Let brothers and sisters yield to one another, for Jesus' sake and for the sake of peace. It makes happier homes, and helps to bring nearer the time when his will shall be done on earth as it is in heaven. O that the children of God might see the difference between doing things that make for peace, and doing things that stir up strife! It does bring blessed harmony into the home, the church, and community, when we really live the Christ-life.

There is much unfairness and oppression in some homes, and in some places of business, but the continued living of the life that reflects only love, will break down oppression, put to shame the unfair, and spread the peaceful truth of the Gospel faster than anything else. Try it! The beginning of many church troubles and home troubles, is often so trifling that we are thoroughly ashamed of it all. A little more thought, a little more careful guarding of the tongue, a little more willingness to yield our opinions, would do away with many difficulties in workshop, church and home. Choose the better way!

The Two Points of Destiny.

BY I. N. H. BEAHM.

The pivots of destiny are myriad. Carlyle says, "Mighty events turn on a straw; the crossing of a brook decided the conquest of the world." I may not be able to point out the straw; but when Cæsar crossed the Rubicon, his conquering of Rome was decided. The imperial palace sprang up. Concerning his successor, St. Luke says, "And it came to pass in those days that there went out a decree from Cæsar Augustus that all the world should be taxed" (Luke 2: 1).

This decision occasioned the journey of Joseph and Mary from Nazareth to Bethlehem, whereas, without Cæsar's having crossed the Rubicon, Jesus would have been born in Nazareth instead of Bethlehem. Cæsar decided. God had also decided. Therefore God could say that Bethlehem was the place, even though no good could come out of Nazareth. God foreknew all things, of which Cæsar's crossing the Rubicon was one; therefore he could say, "And thou Bethlehem, in the land of Juda, art not the least among the princes of Juda; for out of thee shall come a Governor that shall rule my people Israel" (Matt. 2: 6).

In considering the individual, the great pivots of destiny may be listed as three: heredity, environment, and volition. What one has at birth is a tremendous factor in his destiny. All his ancestry are, in some shade of potentiality reproduced in him. We discover that in genetic psychology, or in the unfolding infant mind, the child is very dependent also upon his environments to act upon his system—his nervous system—and that his consciousness is aroused, or occasioned to act as it does, because of given surroundings. Thus one's environment is a marvelous factor in his destiny. There is yet a possible greater factor in one's destiny. It is the power of decision. It is the power of determination. It is the power of volition—will. In fashioning one's speech after the Apostle Paul, he may say, And now abideth heredity, environment, volition, these three; but the greatest of these is the dominant and triumphant, the heaven-ascending and all-conquering "I will." The power of human choice is a transcendent gift from God. Within the domain of will we find the germs of personal responsibility and personal accountability, so that responsible individuality is one supreme pivot of destiny. Self, will, volition, free moral agency, but God rules!

Everything converges to the interest of Jehovah. "We can do nothing against the truth, but for the truth" (2 Cor. 13: 8). "Surely the wrath of men shall praise thee: the remainder of wrath shalt thou restrain" (Psa. 76: 10). "The Lord God Omnipotent reigneth" (Rev. 19: 6).

To understand the mystery of Divine Sovereignty and free moral agency taxes man's philosophic ingenuity. We are to accept it unequivocally as a matter of faith, if not as a matter of philosophy. Among men God works his will in the common, everyday occurrences of things by and through human volition. Every human volitional act has its two parts or pivots, its free moral agency and its Divine Sovereignty. It has been said that every man who believes in free moral agency and Divine Sovereignty can not go far wrong. If one were to believe in Divine Sovereignty to the exclusion of free moral agency, he might become inactive, and with reference to himself make life a failure. If one were to depend wholly upon himself, as though God did not exist, with reference to God he would make life a failure.

In mathematics, two points determine a straight line. In fundamental ethics, it is just as true that these two pivot points,—free moral agency and Divine Sovereignty,—determine the straight line of conduct. The man who believes in Divine Sovereignty fully is always at ease. He is perfectly confident. He is absolutely comfortable and peaceful. The man who believes that he is personally responsible to God and that he must appear before the judgment seat of Christ, to give an account of himself to God, will be exceedingly active. When he looks to God in prayer, as though everything depended upon God, and then looks to himself in service, as though everything depended upon him, we have the foundation of Christian ethics. The straight line of Christian conduct is the result, and this conduct is a straight line. "Prepare ye the way of the Lord; make his paths straight" (Matt. 2: 3).

It is interesting to know that every human action is a Divine Action and that every Divine Action among men is a human action. Simple! Sublime!

Please see free moral agency and Divine Sovereignty in a few words quoted from the impetuous, irresistible eloquence of that revolutionary orator, Patrick Henry:

"They tell us, sir, that we are weak; unable to cope with so formidable an adversary. But when shall we be stronger? Will it be the next week, or the next year? Will it be when we are totally disarmed, and when a British guard shall be stationed in every house? Shall we gather strength by irresolution and inaction? Shall we acquire the means of effectual resistance by lying supinely on our backs and hugging the delusive phantom of hope until our enemies shall have bound us hand and foot?

"Sir, we are not weak, if we make a proper use of those means which the God of nature hath placed in our power. Three millions of people, armed in the holy cause of liberty, and in such a country as that which we possess, are invincible by any force which our enemy can send against us. Besides, we shall not fight our battles alone. There is a just God who presides over the destinies of nations, and who will raise up friends to fight our battles for us."

By a careful analysis of this paragraph it is clearly seen that here we have a giant appeal to man's inherent power to act and an implicit trust in the sovereignty of God Almighty.

When the human will submits to the Divine Will, it can do so fully only in the light of the highest intelligence. In submitting to the Divine Will in all things, the greatest possible exercise and culture are given to the will. Therefore Christianity, which is an adoption of God's Will, is great educationally and puts man in tune with the Infinite. What marvelous opportunities! What sublime possibilities! What pivots of destiny! What fulcrums of Eternity! Divine Sovereignty is the basis of imputed righteousness. Free moral agency is the ground of personal righteousness. The straight line of true human conduct is determined by the two points—Divine Sovereignty and free moral agency. Accept the former and be always happy in God under all conditions. In him, by him, for him! All men perform God's Will. Not, each man performs God's Will, but all men together perform God's Will. Free moral agency in universal application is the evolution and expression of Divine Sovereignty.

These two pivots of destiny are the fundamental and philosophic conditions of absolute and universal trust, and of diligent and abounding work. A balance of the two gives a straight line for heaven—a bee line for the throne of the Almighty—eternal bliss. An antagonism of the two gives a straight line for hell—everlasting destruction.

How important, then, that the point of human volition be properly placed, as this determines the proper direction of the line—heavenwards! "Not my will, but thine, be done" (Luke 22: 42). "As my Father hath taught me, I speak these things. I do always those things that please him" (John 8: 28, 29). This is volitional idealism!

THE ROUND TABLE

Homiletic Hints.

BY E. B. HOFF.

Obedience and Disobedience (Matt. 7: 24-27).

JESUS was closing the Sermon on the Mount, in which he had laid down the fundamental basis for the kingdom of heaven. He had before him his faithful disciples and the thronging multitudes. With an awe-stricken sense of his authority and majesty they heard his words. In verses 13-27 he concludes his discourse with a series of bold contrasts:

The narrow gate,
The wide gate.

The broad way,
The straitened way.

The good tree,
The corrupt tree.

The one crying, "Lord, Lord,"
The other doing the will of God.

Therefore, in final conclusion, we have the two strong contrast pictures,—two builders, two buildings; two foundations and two results.

Both these classes hear the words of this sermon. The one class obeys and the other does not, and here lies the ground for the different results. To hear the words of Christ and obey them, is, in our picture, so to build as to be able to withstand any storm of life. Such assurance Paul sets forth in Rom. 8: 28, 31-39.

But, on the other hand, to hear the words of Christ and then to disobey is, in our picture, so to build as to be sure to fall before the abundant ills of this life, and to fall to stand acquitted before the throne of God. "Heaven and earth shall pass away but my word shall not pass away" (Matt. 24: 35).

In these days, when men are resting their eternal hopes upon the shattered fragments of the Law, or upon theological speculations, or upon the conclusions of human ideals, it is time that we set forth, with no uncertain emphasis, the great truth of this text. To obey is to rest our eternal destiny in the hands of a Loving Father, but to disobey is to be sure to fail and fall, and miss the purpose of our creation.

Saved by Grace.

BY MARY M. COX.

"For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God. Not of works, lest any man should boast" (Eph. 2: 8, 9).

"Wherefore, my beloved, as ye have always obeyed, not in my presence only, but now much more in my absence, work out your own salvation with fear and trembling" (Philpp. 2: 12).

THE above passages of Scripture, taken by themselves, seem to be contradictory but they are not so if we read all of both chapters in which they are found.

Supposing we wish to go to a certain place. There is only one road leading to it. We do not know which road it is, but a man who has traveled over the road offers to act as our guide. He wants no pay. All he asks of us is to follow him. Would we, by following him, merit his care and guidance? Certainly not. What he did for us would be clearly done for our special benefit, and yet we would have to travel in the road marked out by our Guide, if we are ever to reach our destination.

Even so has Christ marked out the way we must go if we would ever reach heaven. He has traveled the road himself, and he knows all of the dangers of the way. If we follow him (obey his commandments) he will keep us from all dangers on the way, and finally save us in heaven.

We could never have planned a way by which we can be saved. No works of ours would have availed. Jesus trod the thorny way for us,—even dying on the cross for our transgressions. So, by grace, we are saved.

But we must do the works Christ has given us to do, travel the road he has marked out for us, and thus work out our own salvation with fear and trembling.

Manuscript Sermons.

BY ALLIE LOOKINGBILL.

MUCH is being said, these days, of the "good sermons," we hear from time to time, from different pulpits, delivered by different ministers, but very little is being said about the manuscripts that are used in delivering the same.

How many times have we heard some of the best thoughts, which, if spoken extemporaneously, or face to face, from the minister to the congregation, would have had a telling effect, and would have made a lasting impression on the multitude when, otherwise, they would have been scarcely noticed or listened to, simply because the minister was not preaching but reading his manuscripts. The question is often asked, "Why is our attendance not larger?" The reasons are many, but I verily believe that it is because some ministers have gotten so in the habit of using manuscripts that the force or power of God's Word, or God speaking through man is lost, and it seems to be "man reading" instead of "man preaching."

Methinks I hear ministers everywhere saying, "That person knows nothing of the duties of a minister, or what a task it is to prepare and deliver a sermon." This may all be very true, but what would we think of a Sunday-school teacher who would write down every question, and would ask her class that much and no more? What value is a teacher who could answer only those questions?

If, then, it is necessary for the Sunday-school teacher to be fully prepared, how much more should the minister speak without reading his sermon? Some of our best sermons,—those most convincing, convicting and lasting, those that made the best impressions,—are those that are delivered, not read. Brethren, destroy your manuscripts, instead of permitting the manuscripts to destroy your influence.

Looking Through the Wrong End of the Glass.

BY C. H. STEERMAN.

ONE time, while visiting a family of Brethren, the brother and I stepped out on a railroad. The brother took a field glass from his pocket and said: "Look through this end of the glass and see how perfect the road is." I took the glass and looked, but I could see no defects, because I was looking through the wrong end of the glass. "Now," said he, "look from the other end." Then I looked, and how crooked and imperfect the road was! This set me to thinking, and I thought of the Christian life. How often, when viewing our own lives, we fail to see the defects just because we use the wrong end of the glass! How careful we should be to look at ourselves as God looks at us! Then we can remove the defects and appear before the judgment bar of God as more nearly perfect Christians.

True Greatness.

BY IDA M. HELM.

How do we know Joseph was great? Was it because he was made chief ruler in Egypt? Was it because he rode out in his chariot with grand display, and a retinue of attendants? The position Joseph attained in life did not go to his head. We know Joseph was great because he forgave his brethren for the outrageous wrong they did to him. He might have taken revenge and inflicted on them all the tortures of Egyptian tribunals, but he banished from his loving heart all memory of the great wrong they had done him. He freely forgave them and gave them the best he had. We know that Joseph was great by the loving-kindness he showed to his brethren.

Kind Words Kindle Warmth.

BY NELSON SHIRK.

SOME time ago I met an elderly gentleman from the town of S——. During our conversation he spoke very warmly and commendingly of the brother who is in charge of the Church of the Brethren at that place and referred to him as having a kind word for everybody. He further said that although he is a member of another denomination, he frequently attends services where this brother preaches.

Faithful in All Things.

FAITHFULNESS in little things does not excuse us for faithlessness in greater things. Yet there are some who think so much of their faithfulness in little things that they forget that the important word in that connection is not little, but faithful, and that real faithfulness shows itself without regard to whether the trust is small or great. The man who prides himself on his ability to "watch the pennies," while he spends his pounds extravagantly, may be "faithful in little things," but this faithfulness does not count for much as a general recommendation. Little responsibilities are intended as stepping-stones to greater responsibilities; and we have no right to shirk the greater while we complacently point to our record in the lesser. If we would be really faithful in anything, we must strive to be faithful in all things.

No man would be willing to live in sin for an hour if he were not stone blind to the truth.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS' TOPIC

"Fellowship With His Son."

1 John 1: 1-4.

For Sunday Evening, July 23, 1911.

I. Fellowship with Christ Means—(1) Intimate friendship (John 15: 14, 15). (2) Similar life purposes (Amos 3: 3; Matt. 12: 49, 50; Mark 10: 45; Luke 19: 10; Rom. 8: 9). (3) True comradeship, sharing, (a) his inheritance (Rom. 8: 17; (b) his joy (John 17: 13); (c) his glory (John 17: 24); (d) his persecution (John 17: 14); and (e) service (2 Cor. 8: 4).

II. Paul's Estimate of Such Fellowship.—Philpp. 3: 8-10.

III. Its Privileges and Rewards.—(1) Give access to heaven's storehouse (John 15: 7; 1 John 2: 24; Rev. 3: 20). (2) Give freedom (John 8: 36). (3) And eternal life (John 10: 28, 29; 14: 1-3).

Note.—(1) Am I willing to pay the price? (2) Have I given my life to Christ? (3) Is he now my "all in all"?

Prayer in This Meeting.—Pray for the grace of patience that you may say to your soul, "Wait thou on God." Pray for all those you know who have not yet trusted themselves to Christ.

Song.—"I am trusting thee, Lord Jesus, trusting only thee."

PRAYER MEETING

Missions the Supreme Duty of the Church.

Matt. 28: 18-20; Luke 19: 37-40.

For Week Beginning July 23, 1911.

1. The Message of the King.—At Christ's triumphal entry the multitude burst out in the joyous refrain, "Blessed is the King that cometh in the name of the Lord." It is still the duty of the Lord's hosts to proclaim the glad tidings,—the saved must reach the unsaved. "The King's business requireth haste," for time is quickly passing by (1 Cor. 3: 9-11).

2. Christ's Message Is World-wide.—"His line goes out into all the earth, and his words to the world's end." To us, who believe in him, who have accepted his Gospel, and who, in turn, have been accepted by him as laborers in his vineyard, there has been given the privilege of carrying the King's proclamation. It is the duty of some to go to the burning sands of the tropics, others must go to the frigid shores of the arctic seas, and still others must go to the crowded marts of trade. "To every man his work" means that a grave responsibility rests upon each one,—a duty that must be discharged (Acts 1: 8).

3. We Can Not Evade the Responsibility.—Every one who claims to be a follower of Christ is, by virtue of his call, a missionary of Christ, and the nearer to Christ he is, the better missionary he is. The chief concern of the church is the one great and supreme duty of-saving souls for the Kingdom. Jonah was told: "Preach the preaching that I bid thee." It is our business to proclaim the Gospel "to every creature," and wherever the "creature" is that has not received the Gospel, there the missionary is,—there the willing worker joyfully proclaims the message (Mark 16: 15).

HOME AND FAMILY

Sunlight and Shadow.

God sets some souls in shade alone,
They have no daylight of their own,
Only in lives of happier ones
They see the distant shine of suns.

God knows, content thee with thy night,
Thy greater heaven hath grander light,
Today is close, the hours are small,
Thou sit'st afar, and hast them all.

A Beautiful Life.

BY M. J. FIKE.

THE life of Esther is a beautiful one and, to me, a most marvelous one. It has well been made the subject matter of books. It is the province of this article to suggest merely a few things that made Esther what she was, and kept her pure.

The story of Esther, as recorded, has a wonderful setting, and I urge each reader to read and reread it. Esther was God's chosen agent to save Israel from the hands of Ahasuerus,—the Grecian Xerxes,—who was about to blot them from the earth in answer to the request of that arrogant, selfish, disreputable, lewd, godless character, Haman.

The story says that Esther was fair and beautiful. To some, like Esther, beauty is of inestimable value, while for others it is most unfortunate. Esther could never have done what she did, had she not been beautiful, for this was an attribute very necessary in order to obtain favor with Ahasuerus. Thus her beauty was a very essential factor in the accomplishment of Esther's purpose.

When Esther, in appearing before the king, was fortunate enough to gain his favor, she had the privilege of asking whatever she desired. It was the same privilege that was granted to her rivals, and I imagine that some of them requested purple robes, golden earrings and necklaces. Had those queens been of the present-day type, they would have had hobble-skirts and peck-measure hats, half covering their faces. But note Esther's modesty and simplicity, as she asks for that only which her lord and master should appoint. She must have understood that, in order to find favor with the king, she must be natural. If she had not been herself, she never would have saved Israel. Lew Wallace, in "Ben-Hur," says that perfection is God and simplicity is perfection.

Haman, being enraged at Mordecai, because he would not bow down to him, obtained a decree from the king to kill all the Jews. Mordecai, hearing of this, entreated Esther to go before the king in behalf of her race. But Esther said, "If I go in without being summoned, and the king should not hold out the golden sceptre, I shall have to die."

Esther was never unmindful of respect to rightful authority. There is a very important lesson that many have yet to learn. God has ordained powers whom we must obey, and he has given rightful authority into the hands of those to whom we must submit. Thus the recognition of rightful authority in the king helped to make Esther what she was.

She must be faithful to duty. She must save Israel and she did not have much time in which to do it, either. I think she learned to be faithful to duty while keeping house for her cousin, Mordecai. Many have said, "I do not want to wash dishes." "I do not want to till the soil," "I do not want to teach school." "I want to be prominent before the eyes of the people." These are they who never occupy any position of trust. I would have you hear the declarations of Sacred Writ: "He that is faithful in a few things shall be made ruler of many." "He that exalteth himself shall be abased, but he that humbleth himself shall be exalted."

Esther had that self-sacrificing disposition which is so necessary for one who would serve his fellowman. "I will go in unto the king, . . . and if I perish, I perish." She was a very logical reasoner. If she did not go before the king she and all her people would be killed. If she did, there was still the dim possibility of being saved. Thus she determined to make an effort to save her race. If it did not make things better, it could not make them worse.

Lastly, Esther was what she was because she made the proper use of invested authority. When the father and mother wanted to place some responsibility on one of the children, I think Esther was always the one selected. When her parents died, Mordecai took her and gave her full possession of his house. At this time, God's eye was scanning the world for a preserver of Israel. As Esther had always been faithful, honest, virtuous, and true, he knew she might be the queen in the palace at Shushan without getting puffed up, and that she would be ready to save his people.

Esther did her part nobly. She saved Israel, got rid of Haman, promoted her cousin, and undoubtedly won for herself a happy life.

Strange, isn't it, that God should choose an insignificant and, for the most part, unheard of servant girl to do this great work? And yet it is not strange, for God knows no limits or partiality.

If all these things made Esther what she was, what kept her thus? Why was she not carried away by self-esteem when she left the common duties of Mordecai's house to take up a greater work? The answer is simple and yet momentous. She was willing to be directed by God. When she was to appear before the king, she might have said, "I can not find favor with him. I am but a poor peasant orphan girl. I never was cultured in the king's manner. He would laugh me to scorn if I even presumed to become his queen."

Ah, no! When God laid out a larger field of usefulness for Esther, she at once got ready to do her best. A certain philosopher has said that there are ten thousand chances to one that genius, talent, and virtue shall issue from a farmhouse rather than from a palace. Willingness to be directed by God will make a tower of strength and power out of the most insignificant servant.

Mother, Home.

BY J. G. ROYER.

To have model homes there must be model conditions. To have model conditions there must be model mothers. Therefore, to have model homes there must be model mothers. Men have not all, but almost all, to do in furnishing those conditions.

"The women of the idle rich," says Rev. Samuel Fallows, "have neither the desire nor the capacity to be mothers; and the women of the overworked poor have both the desire and the capacity, but many of them lack the necesary means, and the home is filled with the cries of underfed and uncared for offspring." Here, again, men are largely to be blamed.

The primary seat of religion is in the home, not in the church. When the children of Israel were encamped in the wilderness, the tent doors of the families faced the tabernacle,—an object lesson in the promise of the covenant, "In thee shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." God's pledge to Abraham embraced his descendants.

On the eventful day of Pentecost, Peter affirmed that "the promise is unto you and to your children." And in the early days of Christianity,—the days of the apostles, the church was in the home. In his greeting Paul says, "Aquila and Priscilla salute you much in the Lord with the church that is in their house." "Salute Nymphas and the church that is in his house." "Unto Philemon . . . and to the church that is in thy house."

The school, too, is based on the home and not the home on the school. As is the home, so is the school in the community. The highest form of government must be founded on the best kind of homes. Show me the kind of homes that go to make up a nation, and I will tell you something of the kind of government you may expect.

One of our greatest authors on social science lately said, "The home which has hitherto been the fundamental agent for fostering morality in the young is just now in sad need of repairs." The statement needs to be repeated throughout the length and breadth of our land, for it is evident that there are elements at work which, if allowed to grow, will undermine the entire social fabric of our nation.

The mother is the divine and love-anointed queen of the model home. Her happiness is in the happiness of her children. She points to them and says, "These are my jewels." She loves them and lives for them. She watches them as they grow and develop, and notices the changes their features and voices undergo. She patiently waits for the day when they shall be men and women,—men and women of God.

She may, at times, do some strange, even foolish things for her children, but it is the foolishness of love. Is it a wise or a foolish thing for mothers, instead of teaching their sons how to vote, to strive as some now do, to become voters themselves? It seems to me it would be much better for mothers to strive to keep the springs of the "water of life" pure in the home than to attempt to filter its muddy currents in the political street-whirlpool.

The greatest honor any woman can have is to be the divinely-crowned queen of the model home,—the Christian home. The cultured Christian home is the nearest earthly return to the Eden lost. It is almost Paradise regained. And that is the place where is heard the music of the model mother's voice.

Does God Save?

BY HOMER F. CASKEY.

Too often we, as Christians, let disappointments, afflictions and tribulations crowd out the joy and hope that should ever fill our breast. When we stop to consider what a wonderful price God paid for us, we can rest assured that he will not withdraw from us and leave us in the devil's clutches. His love was not at all limited at Christ's death. "If by his death we are justified, much more shall we be saved by his LIFE" (Rom. 5: 10).

It was through God's love that Christ came, and it was through Christ's coming that we all have the Holy Spirit as our Guide. It is a glorious privilege to be led by such a Guide and to look up to God, and rightly call him Father. It is a glorious privilege to be a joint-heir with Jesus, but there are certain conditions we must meet, which Paul closely identifies with the beautiful picture,—"If so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified with him." We, then, must expect some suffering. That is the way Christ learned obedience. Are we better than he?

If we have the "love of God shed abroad in our hearts through the Holy Spirit," we will "rejoice in our tribulations," and they will only be reminders to us that we are on the same road that Jesus traveled long before us.

Are we persecuted enough? Do we see the thorny crown often enough?

No, Christ has not left us alone. He is at the right hand of God, interceding for us, and the "Holy Spirit himself maketh intercession for us, with groanings which can not be uttered." "And we know that to them that love God all things work together for good, even to them that are called according to his purpose."

Can we afford to let the trifling things of this world take away the love of God from our hearts? If we do, we stand alone, but if we keep ourselves in the love of God, all hell can not move us. God has left it all with us, as individuals, to say whether we will be separated from his love or not. If we do separate ourselves we will be lost. If not, we will come out "more than conquerors through him that loved us." We have abundant resources of power that God holds in reserve for us to overcome the adversary.

Let us have more faith in God's Word; then we can "count it all joy when we fall into manifold temptations."

BRO. LEVI S. MOHLER, of Elizabethtown, Pa., began a series of meetings at Union Bridge, Md., July 29.

BRO. D. D. CULLER, of Mount Morris College, is on a trip through Wisconsin, Minnesota and South Dakota.

BRO. R. F. MCCUNE, of Ottawa, Kans., thinks of devoting a few months to evangelistic work the coming fall.

CONSIDERABLE correspondence and church news, along with several programs, must be held over until next week.

OUR correspondent for the Medicine Lake congregation, Mont., writes that eight were baptized since the last report.

BRO. S. S. BLOUGH closed a very fruitful revival at Franklin Grove, Ill., last Sunday evening. There were fifteen accessions.

BRO. WILLIAM BIXLER, of East Akron, Ohio, says that during the fall months he can serve a few more churches in a series of meetings.

THE Ministerial Meeting for Eastern Virginia will be held in the Midland church, July 27. The program reached us too late for this issue, but will appear next week.

BRO. CHAS. D. BONSACK conducted a series of meetings at Elk Lick, Pa., and five young girls made the good confession, and put on Christ in the rite of holy baptism.

WE are publishing the program for the Sunday-school, Ministerial and Christian Workers' Meetings of Southern Iowa, to be held in the English River church October 5.

BRO. MICHAEL KELLER, of Larned, Kans., wishes us to say that Bro. S. E. Hylton, of Macksville, his State, was called to the ministry and installed by the Larned church.

THE First District Meeting for Idaho is to convene in the Boise Valley church Aug. 3, but the elders are to meet the day before at 2 P. M. The Ministerial Meeting is announced for Aug. 4.

A VERY devoted sister, before starting to the Annual Meeting, procured a number of good tracts, and distributed them on the way. She also distributed a number of them at St. Joseph.

BRO. TOBIAS MYERS, of Philadelphia, Pa., has been visiting some of the churches in Northern Illinois. He recently preached a very acceptable sermon at the Cherry Grove house, north of Lanark.

THE missionaries for China, eight in all, have planned to sail from Seattle, Wash., on the Minnesota, Sept. 19. With the four already in the field, this will give us twelve American workers in the Celestial Empire. With this number of earnest and efficient helpers a splendid work should, in course of time, be accomplished.

THE Brethren in Tennessee are announcing their Ministerial Meeting for July 28 and 29, to be held in the Pleasant View church, Jonesboro, but we can not make room for the program until next week.

THE Brethren in Southern Iowa are announcing their District Meeting, to be held in South English, Oct. 6. The elders are to meet in the afternoon of the 4th. There will be a love feast that evening.

BRO. JOHN HECKMAN, of Polo, Ill., has been doing some evangelistic work in North Dakota since the Annual Meeting. When last heard from he was in a series of meetings at Salem with a good interest.

WHEN last heard from, June 18, Bro. J. E. Miller, and his party were at Gibraltar, where they were scheduled to remain several hours. They seem to have had a very pleasant voyage across the Atlantic.

THE several members of the General Mission Board will probably be in attendance at the District Meetings of Northern Illinois and Wisconsin, to be held at Mount Morris, beginning on the evening of Aug. 1.

BRO. M. M. ESHELMAN, of Tropico, Cal., writes us that a good three-story building in Los Angeles has been placed at the service of the Berean Bible School, and will be occupied by the school the approaching year.

THE moderator of the late District Meeting of Western Pennsylvania has issued a call for a special District Meeting to convene at the Scalp Level, Shade Creek church, Aug. 23, at 5:30 P. M. See notice on page 448.

THE additional workers to be sent to the mission field, the coming fall, will increase the mission expenses fully $10,000. This means that the churches should increase their offerings, and this can be done if we give as the Lord has prospered us.

BRO. J. S. GEISER, of Baltimore, Md., writing us concerning the St. Joseph Conference, says: "It has been my happy privilege to attend twenty Conferences, and I am glad to report each year my joy is deeper and greater from a spiritual viewpoint."

THE July issue of the Missionary Visitor contains "Temperance Bulletin No. 5." It is full of splendid temperance reading, and ought to be widely circulated. Orders for the Bulletin, for general distribution, may be sent to the Brethren Publishing House, Elgin.

WRITING from Grinnell, Kans., Bro. Geo. R. Eller says that with the exception of several weeks in October and the early part of November he will be engaged in evangelistic work until the first of March, and may be communicated with by churches desiring his services.

THE day before the Fourth the Shade Creek congregation, Pa., closed a splendid revival conducted by Bro. L. T. Holsinger, of Rossville, Ind. There were six accessions, and a number were deeply impressed by the earnest and logical preaching of Bro. Holsinger.

THE Editor of the Missionary Visitor would like to come in touch with all the Brethren working among the Italians in any of our cities besides Brooklyn, N. Y. A card from some one, giving the name and address of a person who is in any way engaged in mission work among the Italians, will suffice and be appreciated.

THE regular time of the next meeting of the General Mission Board is August 16, but the Board is meeting Aug. 4, at Mt. Morris, Ill., in order that the members may enjoy the District Meetings of Northern Illinois, held Aug. 1-3. Business for this meeting should be sent to Elgin, Ill., so as to arrive not later than July 29.

THE date of the public discussion between Bro. B. E. Kesler, upon the part of the Brethren, and Rev. E. G. Denney, representing the Disciples, has been changed to Aug. 8. The debate is to be held at a mission point, near Stoner, in the Beaver Dam congregation, Ind. For further information see special announcement by Bro. J. G. Stinebaugh, on page 443, this issue.

THE District Meeting of Michigan, to be held at the Harlan church, near Harlan, Manistee Co., is announced for Aug. 18. The Ministerial and Missionary Meetings convene the day before, while the Sunday-school Meeting is to be held on the 16th. The elders will meet on the afternoon of the 15th.

TWO car loads of American Standard Bibles were recently sent across the country, to be distributed by the Gideons in hotel rooms on the Pacific Coast. This is presumed to have been the largest shipment of a single book ever made. There were 25,000 copies in all. If we are not permitted to have the Scriptures read in the public schools, we may place the blessed Book in the hotels. While it is not as good as reaching the children, through the schools, still it is far better than doing nothing at all. Some of their fathers may be reached, and in this manner sentiment in favor of Bible reading may be developed.

SISTER SADIE J. MILLER is certainly a busy woman. She writes us from Brooklyn, Iowa, saying that this makes the fifty-fourth congregation she has visited since her return from India, and that she has six more to visit before the 16th of this month. Then she goes to Waterloo for a solid rest, if such a thing be possible at a place like Waterloo. About Sept. 10 she starts on her western trip, stopping with not less than ten churches in Idaho and Washington. She will sail from Seattle for China and from there she takes a steamer to Calcutta, India, having planned to meet her sister, Eliza B. Miller, at the latter place. Together they will return to their field of labor on the western coast of India.

WE received no news regarding the Annual Meeting of the Old Order Brethren until the arrival of the July issue of the Vindicator. The meeting was held near Gomer, a short distance north of Lima, Ohio, on Tuesday, June 6, and closed the same day, there being but two papers presented for consideration. Eld. M. Montgomery was Moderator; Eld. Henry Garber, Reading Clerk, and Eld. E. M. Senseney, Writing Clerk. There were services on Saturday, Sunday and Monday, but none of the meetings were as largely attended as in former years. The representation, outside of Ohio and Indiana, was very small, but the spirit of the gathering is reported to have been commendable. There is no call for the meeting of 1912.

JUDGING from the reports that come to our desk, it would seem that an unusual number of brethren are being called to the ministry. Hardly a week goes by that we do not have to write from one to three letters calling for the address of ministers, just chosen to the office. It is good that the churches are fully realizing the importance of sending more workers into the Lord's vineyard, and yet there are large congregations where no efforts whatever are being made to increase the ministerial force. The ministers chosen years ago are growing old, while an abundance of young talent is left unemployed, and the cause is left to suffer, not for the lack of a force from which to draw, but because of an indifference upon the part of aged ministers, who ought to take the first step in a move to increase the ministerial force. We often wonder what might be done to help those churches.

THOUSANDS of the MESSENGER readers will be pained to learn of the death of Bro. E. W. Stoner, of Union Bridge, Md., who passed into the spirit land July 3. He was a good man, widely known, much beloved, and a most diligent worker in the Lord's vineyard. As an elder and a minister he was faithful, efficient and exemplary. Among his people in the East, and wherever known, he was looked upon as a father in Israel. While always careful about his business affairs, he invariably gave the interest of the church first consideration. In the death of Bro. Stoner the Church of the Brethren has lost much. By the Brotherhood at large he was not recognized as a special leader, but he was an ideal standby, and could be entrusted with any duties assigned him. We are glad for the splendid, brief sketch of his life, prepared by Bro. Chas. D. Bonsack, and published on page 436, this issue.

It would appear that York is not the only place in Southern Pennsylvania that is working for the Annual Meeting of 1912. It is reported that the noted and historic Gettysburg is a strong bidder for the Conference. It would be remarkable, indeed, if the Conference of a people, who have always stood for peace, should be held on one of the most famous battlefields of the world.

THE Ministerial and Sunday-school Meetings for Southern Pennsylvania will be held in York, Aug. 17 and 18. We are requested by Bro. J. A. Long to announce that a special District Meeting is to be held at the same place, Aug. 16, for the purpose of planning for the Annual Meeting of 1912. It is important that all the churches in the District be represented by delegates. Since this meeting is to be held in connection with the Ministerial and Sunday-school Meetings, the attendance should be large.

WHEN brethren of influence, and widely known among our people, die, notice of their death, along with some data regarding their life and labors, should be sent us without delay. Correspondents ought not to wait for a week or more. It is not advisable to wait even twenty-four hours. As soon as the facts are known, let us have them. Our readers are interested in what is going on in all parts of the Brotherhood, and when a widely-known member takes his departure to the other world, the news is a matter of importance to thousands of our readers.

We have always been frank to admit that the Brethren in Southern California have a much more enjoyable winter climate than we can afford in Northern Illinois, but when they write us that at 8 A. M. on the Fourth the mercury stood at 60, and at noon at 75, while with us, here at Elgin, we were glad to have it stop at 102, it would seem that, so far as climate is concerned, we have little whereof to boast. Our good Brethren on the Coast may not always get the Annual Meeting just when they call for it, but they come wonderfully near having the summer thermometer behave to their liking.

Conversion of Cornelius.

CORNELIUS was the best unconverted and unsaved man mentioned in the New Testament. For proof that he was unsaved, when visited by the angel, and told to send for Peter, we quote from Acts 11: 14. The angel speaking of Peter said: "Who shall tell thee words, whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved." By this it will be seen that Cornelius was not a saved man until he accepted Christ and complied with the gospel conditions of pardon. So far as he understood God, he was a devout man, and his prayers were heard in heaven, but he was not a converted man in the New Testament sense. It required more than what he knew, at that time, about God and his will, to save him. So he was told to send for Peter, who would tell him words whereby he might be saved: that is, saved from the sins of the past and be made a member of the body of Christ.

Peter's preaching led to his acceptance of Christ, and when he was baptized he was numbered with the saved. The Holy Ghost falling on him at the time it did, was not regarded as proof of his full conversion, but as proof of the fact that the door of salvation was opened for the Gentiles, as well as for the Jews. Peter seeing this clear evidence of the acceptance of the Gentiles, asked if any one could forbid water, that these believing Gentiles might be baptized. They were then baptized, evidently for the remission of sins, the same as had been commanded on the day of Pentecost.

In order to complete his conversion, Cornelius had to take the steps required for others. He believed in Jesus, turned from his errors, whatever they may have been, and put on Christ in the holy rite of baptism. He was not merely transplanted, as some teach, but was born again, and made a new creature in Christ Jesus. His conversion did not require so great a change as that experienced by Saul of Tarsus, but there was a change, nevertheless. There was the new birth, the regeneration, the necessary reformation in life,—the New Testament baptism, and the translation from his former state into the kingdom of God's dear Son. Like other men who accepted Christ, he had to be born again, and had no assurance of salvation until the new birth was completed. Generally speaking, he was the best man outside of the church, for his day and generation, but he did not become a member of the mystical body of Christ until he made the good confession and put on Christ in baptism.

Where Art Thou?

It would be a good thing for us all to know just where we are,—to take our bearings and be sure that we know where we are, and the ground or foundation on which we are standing, our location, latitude, possibilities and obligations. Many of us may be where we think we are not, and where we would not wish to be, did we truly know our real location.

The two disciples, when asked by Jesus, "Whom seek ye?" did not know where they were, and to get out of their dilemma, asked Jesus the very question they should have asked themselves: "Where dwellest thou?"

The time has come when we, as individuals and as Christian people, should see to it that we are able to locate ourselves socially, morally and religiously.

Where are we socially? What is our standing in our neighborhood, in our home, in society and in the church? Do we know, or don't we care to know? It is important that we should know. It will help us to be what we ought to be, and to get where we ought to stand.

Some men, and women, too, who are professing Christians, don't stand and live, in the estimation of the people, where they ought to be,—and where they would like to be, simply because they are not in the habit of asking themselves this question. Much of the wrong being and wrong doing is the result of our not knowing where we are. Our indifference, as to our standing in society, becomes a habit, and it grows on us until we lose all concern and sensibility as to what we really should be. Then we become bitter, sour and disagreeable with everybody, because they have made themselves unfit to associate with good and respectable people.

All men and women ought to know where they are, so that they can place a true estimate upon themselves, and then be satisfied to place themselves in the place where they belong. If this place should be unsatisfactory, or too low in their estimation, the right thing to do is to change their standard of living and thus, by their own personal effort, get up into a higher plane,—one where they should like to be. We are glad to know that this is a possibility, in our own blessed land, as wide as are the desires to make such a change.

All men and women have the possibility and the privilege of entering and living in the social society for which they are fitted, or for which they fit themselves.

If people, from a choice of their own, are determined to live a low, ugly, filthy, obscene and sinful life, they ought to avoid and stay away from decent and respectable society. They don't belong there. They soil and besmirch every clean person they touch. And, further, no self-respecting, well-thinking person should stoop to indulge in such society, except to rescue and uplift the depressed. No one can do it without becoming defiled and spotted by the obscenity, looseness and filth found there. The danger, on the part of too many of our young people who are otherwise clean and respectable, is the doing of this very thing.

When we see our clean and nice young girls promenading the streets, hanging at the side of a rowdy young man, smoking a cigar and puffing the vile fumes into their faces, we are made to say: "What a pity!" Yes, it is more than a pity. It is a disgrace. What kind of husbands will such young men make? What do you think? If any young man does not have more respect for himself and the girl that is willing to associate with him, in his single days, what is to be expected of him when he gets married? Look around in our towns and cities and you can see the answer every day. The cigar has been changed to an old pipe, the fine clothes to cheap, worn and dirty ones, and the gay young man to a slovenly growler while at home, and a lounger at saloons in the evening, when he should be at home with the wife whom he disgraced when he married her. Is this too dark a picture? We wish it were.

Girls, where are you socially? Please ask yourselves this question every time you go out into society. Your character is measured by the society you keep, and it is right it should be. Are you satisfied with your measurement? Much is being said about "White Slavery." The downward step is the starting point. Set your social standard high and you will never be caught in the fowler's net.

Again, we ought to know where we are morally. Of course, all Christians ought to have a good moral standing. But, unfortunately, this is not always the case. It is astonishing how much slang, and even profane language is used by people professing godliness. This is especially true of people during the unguarded moments, and under slight as well as serious provocations.

How sad it is when men forget where they are, and use language and do acts that are not at all in harmony with the religion of Jesus Christ! Men don't want to do such things and would not, did they always keep in mind where they are. We should remember that we are always shadowed by witnesses. If not by men, our Lord is always near and hears what we say, sees what we do, and knows what we think.

All that is necessary for us to know and keep in mind, to keep us from profanity, getting into a passion and thus befouling our manhood, is to remember this truth: Let us always keep our location in view and we will be saved from many of the sins that defile our Christian character, and so often bring us to grief and deep repentance.

And, lastly, Where are we religiously? This takes in a large field. Where are we with our neighbors, in our communities, in our homes,—in the church, the prayer meeting, the Sunday-school, the church meeting, the regular preaching services, in missionary effort, and all of the other activities of the church? Do you know this would be a very profitable subject for our private meditations,—in the morning, in the evening, on the Lord's Day, in our offices and fields of labor, and in the night-time, as we lie down to sleep? Let us ask ourselves where we are, where we have been, and where we expect to be in the future.

This matter of properly locating ourselves is so important that we can not afford to neglect it. No, not one of us, as all of our relationship with God, as our Father and Friend, depends on where we find ourselves, and where God finds us. There are a great many places where we may place ourselves, in which we cannot find God, and in which he will not be found of us. We only want to go to, and be found in, such places where we feel that we can take Jesus with us. Have you ever found yourself in a place where you felt that Jesus could not be with you? And do you remember how utterly lonely you felt?

Where art thou, my brother, my sister? If you are not where Jesus would have you be, get right with God at once.

Land and Development Companies.

DURING the past four years we have had a great many letters asking questions about various Cuban propositions largely advertised in the States. Sometimes we have been able to give definite information, and sometimes not. But since questions are still asked, it has seemed good to say how we are impressed. What is said here is not said because of any unwillingness to give as full information as possible to those wishing it. This is written for those who do not ask questions, rather than for those who do. If persons having a little money saved up could fully understand the schemes presented to them, probably not one in ten would invest. And I believe that is as true of Cuban land and fruit companies as it is of anything else.

This is not saying that they are all bad. But a large per cent of the fruit propositions are experiments. The investor may or may not find his money safe and good returns coming from it. Time will settle that. It seems likely that fruit will pay in Cuba; but just what the result will be, is more than any man can say. There can be little doubt, however, that it will not pay in anything like the way the promoters say it will. They are in the business for their own profit, and their harvest time is during the years while the monthly payments are coming in. They do not guarantee the investor anything but his acre or more of land planted to fruit trees. They lead him to believe that in a few years he will have an income running into the hundreds of dollars from each acre. It is hardly to be supposed that the man who puts up the money will ever realize even a fourth of what he expects.

If a man or a woman has plenty, and will not miss what he or she invests, the fruit business may as well be tried as something else. But it would not be wise for one to put into one of these schemes the money which he expected to make him independent and comfortable in his old age or his time of need. Probably some of them will turn out all right. It must not be forgotten, though, that the fruit growers and land sellers are looking out mainly for themselves. If the other fellow happens to make something, well and good; if he does not—well, the one to whom he trusted his money comes out all right. The method of procedure is based on the showing of a profit to the man who runs the business. He knows all the items of expense, and he sets his price high enough to make sure he will come out with good pay for his work.

We have no grudge to satisfy. We know that some of the promoters work hard to make a good showing. But all our observation makes us believe that the investor is the one who "pays the freight." We have written as we believe time will prove; and we have written because there are so many advertisements gotten up in most attractive ways, and the great majority of persons with small means are not good financial managers. And they are the ones who cannot afford to lose the little they have managed to scrape together. They earned the money, and now they want it to earn something for them; and this desire, if the returns promised are great, leads them to take chances. We have known cases where persons of middle age were over-persuaded by land agents, and as a result had a hard struggle for years. Even now the end of the struggle is not in sight. We do not know of any proposition that pays well enough to make it worth while to go through with what they have.

The best thing is to be very sure before taking stock in these companies anywhere. It is safe to say that the small stockholder is not the one who reaps the reward when success does come. And it isn't wise—unless you are very sure of your man—to trust another with what you may some day need. There are more promoters than are needed, more than are good for the welfare of the common man. But that is their way of making a living; and many good things have been pushed by promoters. The difficulty is that people cannot always tell the good proposition from the bad. Hence the need for care. G. M.

Competent Leadership.

Our people have not yet had much trouble with young preachers, as pastors, fresh from college, but the Disciples have, and we may do well to profit by some of their mistakes. Discussing the value of good elders in each congregation, especially when young pastors are employed, a writer in a late issue of the Christian Standard says:

> The young man who passes through the high school, graduates at one of our Christian colleges and is ordained to preach is very poorly equipped, and more frequently unqualified to govern, lead, teach, guide, shepherd and care for a congregation, and when he undertakes this and assumes to take the place of the Scriptural elders, he usually makes a miserable failure, and the last estate of that church is worse than the first. How many congregations have had the sad experience of the "pastor in charge" leaving the congregation worse than he found it? We have had it many times. Many times the "pastor" was not wholly to blame,—I believe we should have more young men entering the ministry,—but they should not assume more than God intended. He knew their unfitness for some things, and he wisely ordained the elders to safeguard the local congregation. Some pastorates should be extremely short. What would be the prospect for justice in our courts, if we were to place the last young man admitted to the bar upon the bench? Age, experience, mental development and breadth of intellect should wear the ermine.

The purpose in this is not to discourage young brethren in their preparation for the ministry, but to emphasize the importance of years of experience in actual church work for those who are placed in charge of congregations as shepherds or overseers. Were we, in our church work, to exercise as much wisdom as is displayed in placing men on the legal bench, there would be fewer mistakes, more strong congregations, and fewer run-down churches. The most competent of elders are none too good for even the ordinary church, and incompetent leaders are unsafe for any congregation, be it large or small. Let us have well-educated pastors, where pastors are needed, but we must not overlook the importance of prudent elders, men sound in the faith and thoroughly interested in the welfare of the flock over which the Holy Spirit has made them overseers.

The Annual Meeting Minutes.

Referring to the value of our Conference decisions, we would not have it understood that the Minutes published, from year to year, are a set of laws brought into existence by legislative enactments. Their purpose is to unify the church and to make known the mind of the Brotherhood respecting the teachings of the Scriptures on the points presented for consideration. With those sent to the Annual Meeting it is not a matter of enacting laws, but the deciding of questions in the light of what the New Testament teaches.

Should it become necessary to enforce the findings of the Conference, it will be well to bear in mind that the authority for action is not vested in the Annual Meeting, but in the Gospel. The Minutes are supposed to set forth what the New Testament teaches on a given question, and to carry out a decision simply means to enforce the Gospel on the point covered. Let this thought be impressed on the minds of our people, and they will be prepared to give the work of the Annual Meeting the consideration and credit that it deserves.

But has the Conference any authority? Most assuredly it has. This authority, however, is to interpret and to enforce what the New Testament teaches, and not to make laws that supplement those given in the Word of God. In the Conference the the representatives become unified on their understanding of the Scriptures and, having settled on this, it becomes their duty to set forth, teach and put into operation that on which they may agree. And to the extent that they may conform strictly to the Written Word, and to the spirit of the Scriptures, to that extent will their work receive the endorsement of the Holy Ghost.

The Supported Ministry.

The mere fact that Annual Meeting did, some years ago, pass a decision or two against the salaried ministry system, is no proof that the Conference is now opposed to the support of ministers who give their time and attention to the work of the church. Nor is the Conference opposed to paying such ministers a stipulated sum for a given amount of service. The Brotherhood has, for some years, been committed to this plan. Even the General Mission Board has adopted a scale of support for her missionaries in India and elsewhere. All over the Brotherhood we have ministers who are serving churches or District Mission Boards for stipulated amounts. These ministers are in good standing, a number of them serving on the Standing Committee, year after year, and some of them may be found among the Conference officers.

Among us the stipulated support is hardly a debatable question any more. If any of the Mission Boards wish to employ a minister for a mission point, at a stipulated sum per year, they feel themselves at perfect liberty to do so. A congregation exercises the same liberty without thought of being called into question. True, there may be danger in the system, but our people seem not to have reached the danger point. Let this be as it may, one thing is certain, Conference, by some of her late decisions, and by precedents in endorsing Standing Committee elders, who receive a full support, has become fully committed to the stipulated support system.

In saying this much we do not wish to leave the impression that we are opposed to the free ministry, for we are not. Years of experience and observation prompt us to suggest that the Church of the Brethren will do well to maintain both systems. There are places where the minister should receive an ample support. The amount can be stipulated, or it may not, as wisdom may dictate. Then there are localities in which the free ministry should be the rule. Paul found a number of such fields in his day. There are ministers who can well afford to give their time and attention to preaching the Gospel without any support whatever. There are not a few who prefer to preach a free Gospel. Paul, it would seem, belonged to this class, and yet his writings, properly interpreted, do not show that he was opposed to the supported ministry. He was quite willing that others should receive help from the saints, but as for himself, he preferred not to be chargeable to any one.

It will be wise in our people not to take too narrow a view of this subject. There is merit in both the free and the supported systems. Both systems have been abused, and at times they have been shamefully abused, but this does not argue that either of them should be wholly discarded. Let us "prove all things, and hold fast to that which is good."

Trashy Preaching.

A writer in the Brethren Evangelist gives some good reasons for disapproving of what he calls "trashy preaching." Among other things he says:

> I have heard Mr. Moody, John McNeal, of Scotland, R. A. Torrey and Wilbur Chapman, all noted evangelists who are an honor to the ministry, the church and God, but none of them used slang phrases nor clownish sayings or methods. Such men could preach until doomsday; they will never wear out, but the cheap, "clap-trap," clownish preacher is like a cheap novel,—it tickles for a while, but don't last long. When I listen to men like Moody, Chapman and Torrey, I feel the depth of my soul afire, while the "clap-trap" preacher only tickles the surface, for there is no depth in him. Men who are preachers of "clap-trap," are certainly hard pressed for power to draw.

The object of this trashy talk is to draw, but as a rule it draws more chaff than wheat. Not only so, but it often drives good-meaning people away from the church. Paul could draw large crowds, and was the means of leading thousands to accept Christ, but he used no catch phrases, and said nothing whatever to amuse his hearers. He preached Christ and him crucified, and in this way put more people to thinking than any other man of his day and generation.

Wants Chapter and Verse.

An earnest reader, who means it all well, wishes us to give chapter and verse for high schools. He might as well ask for Scripture in favor of common schools. High schools, subject to church management, may become a blessing to the church, or they may prove a curse. It all depends upon the use made of them. And what is true of schools, may also be true of the printing press, as well as some other things that might be named. They may be used for the glory of God, or they can be employed in the interest of sin. We thank God for every school, as well as for every printing press that has for its purpose the upbuilding of the kingdom of God. But as for the chapter and verse, describing every contingency relating to the church and her work, it may be well to bear in mind that the church is supposed to be made up of sensible and intelligent people, and that such a people ought to be able to determine on the value and necessity of some things without having them named and classified.

Chas. D. Bonsack, ...Timberville, Va.
J. J. Yoder, ...McPherson, Kansas.

Address,
General Mission Board, Elgin, Ill.

THE DEBATE.

The date of the debate between Bro. B. E. Kesler and Rev. E. G. Denney has been changed to Aug. 8. The discussion is to continue not less than eight days. There will be two sessions each day,—at 2 and 7 P. M. Those coming by rail will reach here via the Winona Interurban Railroad, which runs north and south from South Bend to Indianapolis, touching Elkhart, Goshen, Warsaw, Peru, Kokomo, and Tipton, making connections with all intersecting roads. Stop off at Stoner, which is one and one-half miles from the church.

There will be conveyances for all who wish to ride. As this is a mission point, with but few members, we must depend upon outsiders for help during the meetings. They are anxious for the discussion, and are willing to help care for the people, but will naturally expect a small remuneration for board, and, possibly, some of them, for lodging. All are invited to come. You will be made welcome. J. G. Stinebaugh.

UNION CITY, INDIANA.

We met in council June 15. Our elder, Bro. W. K. Simmons, had charge. Considerable business was transacted. Three letters of membership were granted and two were received. Other members are moving into our district, but their letters have not been read. Our love feast, held June 17, was very pleasant. The weather was somewhat unpleasant, but the attendance was good. A number of ministering brethren were with us at our love feast. They were Brethren A. Brumbaugh and —— Hay, of Greenville, Ohio, Bro. Samuel Snell, of Union, Ohio, Bro. Harley Snell, of Camden, Ind., Brethren David Minnich, Charles Stockdale and Herbert Studebaker. Bro. Samuel Snell officiated. Bro. Studebaker gave a splendid talk to the children on Sunday morning, which was followed by a very impressive sermon by Bro. Harvey Snell. Bro. Studebaker remained with us and preached on Sunday evening. At the close of his sermon one soul was willing to confess Christ, asked admittance into the church, and was baptized on Monday morning. Bro. Studebaker preached for us on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. We were glad to have him stay with us. He is surely a strong instrument in God's hand.

R. D. 41, Union City, Ind., June 21. Effie K. Netzley.

SOME OBSERVATIONS.

On my way home from our Annual Conference I listened to an explanation, given by an M. E. pastor, concerning the Sunday-school Convention in San Francisco,—a conclave of the leading Sunday-school workers of the North American Continent. It is evident that the best workable brains in the Sunday-school field were present, with an abounding enthusiasm. The terse, clear and forcible expressions, as to winning the child into betterments, are enjoyable and convincing. Evidently the speakers are not "past-masters" but "present chiefs" of expression in English. Their epigrams and alliterations were eagle-winged and sparrow-hawked. None could be heard.

But the display was theatrical, and spectacular, so often carried into the worship, communion and fellowship of God, also had their place on the program. The modern Sunday-school Conventions seem to be already permeated with the noisy demonstrations of the political assemblies, and more, the methods of selling life memberships are weakening the simplicity of gospel giving, and doing honor to world-spirits. Can our members, who seem devoted to the common exemplifications of the lowly principles of our Master, afford these extravagances?

Reports show that seventy-five per cent of the Sunday-school children, at twenty years of age, drift out into the world, away from further Sunday-school participation. Why this seventy-five per cent loss? Why do so many fail to "stick"? Do they tire of the displays, the spectacular demonstrations, the half-truths, and the inconsistencies which characterize so much of the Sunday-school popularity? Why is "reverence" for godly things fast decaying among Sunday-school children?

I have been wondering whether these "modern methods," gotten up in a great wave of enthusiasm, each year, have some bearing upon the losses? Born in the midst of the awful noises of enthusiasm and material display, when the methods are sent out to do local work, the varnish soon wears off, and then decay does the rest. I am sure that our people need not "borrow" these "wasting glories," for with the solidity and trueness of divine principles and their sober inweaving into our souls, the Spirit will aid us to pull out of the Gospel such methods for our Sunday-schools that will be more lasting, more effective in soul-power, holy service and commendable living. Should we not try to be leaders in enduring methods rather than mere imitators? Imitation smacks of laziness; originality means the employment of divine forces freely bestowed. The Book has sound methods. Dig for them! M. M. Eshelman.

INDIAN CREEK, IOWA.

We have been enjoying a "feast of good things." Last Friday Bro. John Robinson, of Muscatine, Iowa, came among us in discharge of his duties as Sunday-school Secretary. He gave us an excellent discourse on Friday evening, which was a great help to us. On Saturday Bro. Burton, who is in search of a location, was with us, his wife and children accompanying him. Bro. Burton gave us an excellent sermon on Saturday evening, which was listened to by a goodly number of people, and much appreciated by all. On Sunday morning Bro. Robinson gave us another talk, "The Art of Teaching," occupying the time from ten to eleven. At eleven o'clock Bro. Burton again spoke to us. His sermons were well attended, and the audience was held in rapt attention. In the afternoon, at 2:30, Bro. Robinson gave a talk to the children and the Sunday-school workers,—especially to the teachers. After the service a Christian Workers' Meeting was organized, with Sister Ella Robinson, Superintendent, Sister Bertha Enfield, secretary. We all appreciated the presence of our brethren among us, who labored with us so earnestly. We should be pleased to have Bro. Burton locate among us. Rebecca Enfield.

PRAIRIE CITY, IOWA.

Our church met in council June 10. Our elder, Bro. W. I. Buckingham, was present. Some changes were made in our services. We decided to discontinue our meeting at the church each alternate Sunday night, and have services at the Kingery schoolhouse. Bro. William West will hold our series of meetings during the month of December. We will have a Bible school during the Holidays. Officers were elected for the Christian Workers' Meeting and Sunday-school. Bro. Carl Elrod and Sister Nora Brubaker are our superintendents. Sister Murl McCune and Bro. Earl Brubaker are our Christian Worker presidents. Our prayer meeting still moves on, in spite of the hot weather and hard work. Not many attend during this warm weather, but enough to keep the fire on the altar burning, and there is a good sense of keeping in touch with our Great Commander, who sometimes spent whole nights in prayer. We were strengthened and encouraged by the presence of Bro. I. W. Brubaker (our former elder) and wife, and Bro. John Heckman, who stopped off on their way home from Annual Meeting. Bro. Brubaker gave us two splendid discourses, one on Sunday at eleven o'clock and one in the evening. Bro. Heckman gave us a fine talk in our Christian Workers' Meeting. We are far apart, yet we have to work the harder to keep the Master's work advancing. Jennie Alexander.

Monroe, Iowa, June 30.

THE WORK AT NEVADA, MO.

I came to this place thirteen months ago. There were only nineteen members here. They were struggling hard to keep the church together. They had moved their churchhouse from the country into the city, as most of the members live in the city. In moving they were obliged to contract a debt of $375. Last year the church paid one hundred dollars and the interest on the debt, and also raised fifty dollars for other expenses. This year we have received some help from a Christian Workers' Meeting of another congregation, which we much appreciate. We hope soon to be able to clear the debt.

While this may not seem very much, yet, when we take into consideration the limited circumstances of most of our members, it means much. Previous to the writer's arrival they had no resident minister. We started preaching twice each Lord's Day. The attendance was small to start with, but increased to a fair attendance. Our Sunday-school, midweek prayer meeting, and Christian Workers' Meeting have increased in interest.

We have had two series of meetings and two love feasts, have baptized fourteen, reclaimed two, received three by letter and anointed two sisters. We have had some strong opposition, but our prospects for the future are good. We have enjoyed visits from several of our ministering brethren, which have been very helpful in our work here. The church is making fair progress in the work now, for which we are thankful to our Heavenly Father. We are also grateful to the General Mission Board for the help they have given us. There is much work to be done here. There are thousands in our church District who never hear a sermon preached by our ministers. Nevada is a city of eight thousand inhabitants, has two railroads, the Missouri Pacific and Missouri, Kansas and Texas, and is surrounded by a rich agricultural and stock-raising country. There are about twelve or thirteen churches in the town. Much opposition is met with in preaching the simple gospel of our Master. The field is large, the need is great. Many know nothing of the Church of the Brethren. Leander Smith.

TWO CONDITIONS AS I FIND THEM.

It may be hard to determine which of the two following conditions is the more distressing, viz.: To be in a condition altogether wretched and not know it or in this same condition and know it. Both of these are here among the people of these jungles, this question has come to us daily in one way or another. Truly, their condition is most pitiable, but they have only a very faint consciousness, if any at all, of it. When told about it, its causes and remedies therefor, they say, "Yes, this is true what you say, but what can we do? Our fathers and forefathers have done this way, so we must too."

The man who is in such a condition and truly realizes it, will do something to better his condition in some way. The reckless and desperate man may take his life; the wicked man, who cares not for the rights or welfare of others, may rob, plunder, commit murder or do anything that he thinks will ameliorate his condition. But the fearing man will use the means God has given him, and thus bring about a better condition in his life, but the man who is satisfied with a wretched condition is very hard to reach.

Marvel not, brethren, at this, for in India, where the Light of the World has shone for centuries, there are those who are sinners, and know they are, and yet are well satisfied to remain so. They are far less excusable and wise than the ignorant people of these jungles. How very bitter will be their disappointment when the life which they now live flickers out!

Brethren, let us pray God to show us how truly to feel for these benighted ones, whether they be in India, in China or in the regions beyond. We are their keepers, and if there be in us even a taint of the feeling which Cain had for his brother, then we become guilty of their blood. It is useless, as well as absolutely unreasonable, for us to claim we can do nothing for them. We can if we will, and there must be no sense of "it must be" in the doing. If you doubt this statement, just read 1 Cor. 13 carefully and prayerfully, a dozen times, and then express your opinion in accordance with the light that will then be yours. Even the very least of us can agonize in prayer for these benighted yet loved ones.

If we long truly to see these dear ones come into the Light, continued delay in coming may try our souls supremely. We are not to give up and say that the task is a hopeless if not a useless one. But, Brethren, let us not forget the promises in the power of God. He is the One who perfects all things. We are only instruments in his hands for the doing of things, and it may take a score like ourselves to finish up the work.

Were you ever in a dentist's office? Did you ever have a tooth extracted or one filled? And did you not notice what a lot of instruments the dentist had at his command in doing the job? The work you gave him? True, he may have used only a very small number of all the instruments he had, to accomplish the work he did for you, but it takes all those instruments, remember, to do the sum total of his work. So, brethren, remember, as you work for God, that you are only an instrument in God's hands for the accomplishment of, it may be, but a small portion of his work. But forget not that it is a definite and very blessed portion, no matter how insignificant and humble it may seem to you and all who know you, and recognize what you do. It's a thrice blessed portion if you recognize it as God-given, and do not look to men for praise because you have done it. Let the fact that you have done it through God's guidance and help, be praise and assurance sufficient for you. J. M. Pittenger.

Ahwa, via Bilimora, India.

The way in which we say "Thy kingdom come," is as sure a test of our spiritual temperature as the rise and fall of the mercury is of the weather. If there is any flaw in our consecration it will infect it with alkali and petrifaction. It will quickly show whether we have surrendered all, and how much or little we have of the mind that was in Christ.

SISTERS' AID SOCIETIES

DAYTON, OHIO.—The following is the report of the Bible-tract Aid Society of the Dayton Union College Street Church of the Brethren for the quarter ending June 14, 1911. The amount in the treasury on March 1 was $47.76. The basket collections and sales during the quarter amounted to $38.94; collections and sales during the quarter to be $78.70; paid out total in the treasury during the quarter is $78.70; paid out for material, $15.24; balance on hand to date, $64.46. Eight meetings were held during the quarter, with an average attendance of seventeen. The society furnished, to date, 108 aprons, fifty-nine sunbonnets, twenty-six dust caps, eight prayer coverings, seven comforters, four quilts and many other articles. We are very much encouraged with the work and feel that God is blessing what is assisted in any in this good work. May God help us all to do more work in his vineyard.—Bessie Abshire, 1819 West Second St., Dayton, Ohio, June 19.

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

ARKANSAS.

Rosie—Bro. W. I. Woodall, of Austin, Ark., will begin a series of meetings at this place July 11. Any members living at a distance, who wish to attend these services, should notify the writer, and they will be conveyed to the place of meeting.—Caleb Aitis, Hoxie, Ark., July 1.

CALIFORNIA.

Chico.—Our church met in council on Friday evening, June 3. On Sunday morning after we had all received the Sunday-school lesson together, Bro. Forney told us all about the International Sunday-school Convention, which he had attended at San Francisco. When he had finished his talk, Sister Forney gave us a talk on the Annual Meeting at St. Joseph. Both of these reports were helpful. Our morning services then closed with an earnest, heartfelt prayer for our members, for those who are already in the field, and for those who are soon to go.—Bertha G. Kerr, Chico, Cal., June 27.

Covina church met in council June 3, with our elder, Bro. D. A. Norcross, presiding. This being the regular church-day, we would expect it to be one of the best of Southern California, but as many are moving away, our largest organizations, but as many are moving away, our number has been reduced. Satan hinders the work in many ways. We are near the beach and mountain resorts, and many go there during the summer. Six other causes, which are in our little town, and with a pleasure-loving people the work is rendered more difficult. Some are tired of the service, but we mean to buckle on the armor more securely, and stand for greater purity and consecration, to overcome every obstacle and win a glorious victory. Our love feast will be held June 3, at 7 P. M. Communion services will be held the previous Sunday. Bro. Peter Fesler was chosen Sunday-school superintendent.—Eulalia Overholtzer, R. D. 1, Box 4, Covina, Cal., July 7.

Fresno.—Wife and I arrived in Fresno, Cal., May 23, to do mission work. We located at 1351 Broadway, which is in the northeastern part of the city. We started a Sunday-school at our home, and now have seventeen pupils, with the prospect several new scholars next Sunday. We also have thirteen acres of ground adjoining which need to be worked. This part of the city has only recently been built up, and I think the brethren have a great opportunity for work here in Fresno.—John H. Getz, 2258 Harvey ave., Fresno, Cal., July 7.

Imperial Valley church met in council July 1. Our elder, Bro. C. E. Gillett, presided. Much business came before the meeting and was pleasantly disposed of. Brethren Workers' officers were elected for the next six months, with Sister Rachel Gillett as our presiding elder and Sister Ida Hershey secretary-treasurer. One has been received by letter since our last report. We decided to have a series of meetings, which is to be conducted by Bro. S. G. Lehmer, of Los Angeles, Cal.—Minnie B. Gillett, Holtville, Cal., July 7.

Live Oak.—Bro. J. O. Hartman preached in the U. B. church last Lord's Day at 11 A. M. and 7:30 P. M. Brother preached at 3 P. M. Bro. D. M. Hartman preached in the hall at 4 P. M. Our Sunday-school was held at 3 P. M. with good attendance and good interest. Bro. F. F. Eshelman and family arrived here from North Dakota last Friday, where he met his brethren in Christ. We welcome them to our midst and their assistance here in the Lord's work. We have a good climate and good soil. Any information will be cheerfully given.—F. S. Hartman, Live Oak, Cal., June 26.

Long Beach church will begin a series of revival meetings, the Lord willing, on Sunday, July 16. The meetings are to be conducted by the pastor, Bro. A. L. B. Martin. These services are to be the reviving of the church spiritually and the awakening of the unwakened. These meetings will continue until such a time as seems best to us. We are planning to use the new book, "Kingdom Songs," and shall have a good leader to conduct the song services. We invite all our members visiting on the coast at this season. We earnestly desire their presence and help in these meetings. Come to Bible with you. We want to see the Word of the Lord proclaimed to all around. Thus we may have a glorious feast of good things together. Recently Brethren Wolfe and Norcross, of Lordsburg, Cal., were here and ordained Bro. Masterson to the fellowship.—J. M. Shively, 1744 East Second st., Long Beach, Cal., July 7.

South Los Angeles.—On Sunday morning, June 25, we had our Children's Day Exercises, instead of the regular Sunday-school and preaching services. The very interesting program was rendered by the school, after which certificates were awarded to those who were present every Sunday. We also had a very good program at the Sixty-first and Wall Street Mission in the afternoon.—Clara B. Custer, 1336 East Forty-sixth St., Los Angeles, Cal., June 28.

CANADA.

Brisbane church met in council June 26. We decided to hold a series of meetings, beginning July 2. Our love feast is to be held July 22. It is to be an all-day meeting. Seven members were received by letter.—Blanche Button, R. D. 2, Attoona, Alta., Can., July 1.

Pleasant Ridge.—Our church met in council June 24. Eld. Shatto presided. We were instructed by the elder regarding certain decisions of Annual Meeting. Several committees were brought before the meeting, some of which were a surprise to many. Two letters were read. Our congregation is steadily increasing. On the last to Sunday in June we had a called council to be held one week previous.—P. E. Pobst, Liberty, Alta., Can., July 5.

COLORADO.

Good Hope church met in quarterly council June 21, with Bro. F. Steele presiding. Business was transacted pleasantly. Sunday-school officers were chosen for the coming six months with Bro. Orville Hoover as superintendent, and Miss Ara Lewis as secretary and treasurer. We organized a Young People's Society with Bro. Orville Hoover as president, and Bro. Arthur Hulse as secretary and treasurer. We decided to have a two weeks' Bible study, a series of meetings to be conducted by Bro. J. C. Groff, of Wayne, Colo. We are greatly in need of more workers here, especially ministerial help, and we would be glad to communicate with any one looking up a new location. We have a fine country here.—Maude C. Hurtz, Haxtum, Colo., July 3.

IDAHO.

Clearwater.—The members of this church reorganized their Sunday-school for the next six months, with Bro. Neal and Sister Bertha Eisenbise are the superintendents; Bro. Paul Lind, secretary. Sister Ida Hershey was elected president of the Christian Workers' Meeting; Sister Maud Frantz, secretary. The children of the Sunday-school gave a well prepared program on children's day, which was listened to by a crowded house.—Bertha Eisenbise, Lenore, Idaho, June 26.

ILLINOIS.

Decatur church met in council. Bro. George Miller, our elder, was present. Bro. D. J. Blickenstaff opened the meeting. Bro. S. Lear read the Scriptures. Sister Rachel Gilbert was elected leader of the praise meeting. Bro. Perry Oliver was elected president of the Christian Workers' Meeting.—W. Cripe, 1443 West Decatur St., Decatur, Ill., July 7.

Dixon.—Our church met in council June 26. Our elder, Bro. O. F. Shaw, presided. One member was received by letter. Brethren O. F. Shaw and W. P. Dickey were elected delegates to District Meeting. Bro. Henry Hahn, secretary of the Christian Workers' Meeting. Bro. John Robinson, of Bethany Bible School, will be with us in a series of meetings, beginning Aug. 13.—Emma Boyd, 108 Harrison Ave., Dixon, Ill., July 1.

Liberty church convened in council July 1. Our elder, Bro. J. W. Harshbarger, presided. One letter was received. Arrangements for meetings, to be conducted by Bro. Frank, of La Place, Ill., will begin Sept. 3. Our love feast is to be held Sept. 2. Communion services, Sept. 1.—Ida Ott.

Mansfield church met in council July 1, with Bro. S. G. Nickey presiding, accompanied by Bro. Daniel Wysong, elder of Oakley, Ill. Bro. J. C. Lightcap was advanced to the second degree of the ministry. Sister Daisy Isley was added to the membership.—J. E. Swartz, Mansfield, Ill., July 7.

Shannon church met in council this forenoon, with Eld. Horace Ankrum presiding. One letter of membership were received. It was decided to hold our love feast Oct. 9, at 6 P. M., to which we expect to have a large attendance. Bro. Frank Brethren Arthur Bryan and Milton McNutt were elected as delegates to District Meeting. Bro. Arthur Bryan was elected Sunday-school superintendent, Bro. Milton McNutt secretary. Bro. Bryan was elected leader of the Christian Workers' Meeting, and Sister Ida Bryan secretary. The Christian Workers' Meeting have a special program several weeks ago. After the program Bro. Ira Bennett and Sister Ida Bryan were elected to the Christian Workers. His remarks were encouraging and upbuilding.—Etta Kreider, Shannon, Ill., July 1.

Stillman Valley.—We have had some splendid Gospel sermons delivered by Bro. James M. Moore, commencing June 4, and closing June 18. While there was no visible addition to the church, yet we feel built up and established in the faith, and hope for more in the near future. Bro. Moore, Jr., gave three sermons on the street, which were well attended by earnest attention. Collections were also received during the street meetings. We hope this has been a time of seed sowing. Bro. Moore, Sr., preached his farewell to a large house, an enrollment of 128. Our council meeting convened June 27. Bro. Chas. Cosy is our delegate to Sunday-school District Meeting. Bro. Noah Hendricks, Meyer, delegates to District Meeting. Bro. Ezra Flory will be in charge of the Children's Day, and the girls will be Misses Lillie A. Frantz, 319½ Ninth Ave., Sterling, Ill., July 2.

Walnut church met in council July 1. Our elder would do general house work. Any one desiring the position, should write to him. A sister is preferred. Address, M. Smeltzer, Supt., Girard, Ill., July 1.

INDIANA.

Elkhart City church held its council June 27. Our Christian Workers' Meeting was reorganized, with Bro. Lynn Groves as president. Bro. Noah Hendricks was elected delegate to Sunday-school Convention. Bro. C. C. Kinzie was chosen pastor for another year. A local temperance committee was appointed. Sunday-school officers elected for the next six months: Brother Lynn Groves and Sister Chas. Miller. Our love feast will be held Aug. 19. Our Sunday-school convention is now organizing and assisted in the installation of Sister Lulu Snetzer Business Manager of the Gospel Messenger. Sister was recently located here. The average attendance at our Sunday-school for the month of June was 124, with a collection, $4.87. We had our annual Sunday-school outing July 4, at a near-by park, and we feel that the day was well spent.—Mrs. Lulu Miller, R. D. 5, Box 50, Elkhart City, Ind., July 1.

Farmington.—We met in business meeting June 24. Our elder, Bro. J. D. Mishler, was moderator. One letter was granted. Bro. Daniel Snell, of North Liberty, Ind., will have an all-day harvest meeting in the near future. Sunday-school officers were elected for the next six months: Brethren Jesse Hoke and Leo Miller as superintendents—Rosella Shock, Huntington, Ind., June 26.

Kewanna.—Our next meeting will be held July 16. We are invited to be with us. Our love feast is set for Sept. 17 and 18.—Mrs. Ida Hershey, July 1.

Lick Creek.—Eld. C. B. Smith, of Morrill, Kans., will be at a series of meetings at this place, beginning the first part of August.—Bessie Kieffaber, Coal City, Ind., July 6.

Mexico church met in council. Bro. Daniel Brubaker, Ind. came to the-Denmark house June 24, to assist in some meetings. He remained over Sunday, and as a result three were baptized, one reinstated, and one awaits baptism. Bro. Studebaker's work was greatly appreciated.—Bessie Studebaker, Peru City, Ind.

Maple Grove.—June 18 Bro. D. D. Culler, of Mount Morris, Ill., was with us and preached for us at Sunday-school morning and evening. He gave us three excellent talks. June 24 Bro. D. L. Miller, of North Manchester, Ind., came to our place and remained with us over Sunday, preaching four sermons and one Sunday-school address. Interest and interest were excellent. One noble young man came out on the Lord's side and was baptized. We feel greatly inspired and encouraged by the visits these two dear men have given us by our brethren. Our Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meeting are moving nicely.—Ada Shively, Mitchell, Maple Grove, Ind., July 6.

Nappanee.—Our love feast closed the first love feast held at this place. We have a mission in the city, but no church. June 24 Bro. Daniel Snell, of North Liberty, came to our meetings. Bro. Daniel Snell preached every day and evening. His words, natural eyes are fixed on him, but his spiritual eyes are surely wide open. Two fathers were baptized. Our meetings closed with an all-day love feast. The feast was well attended. Sunday-school was organized, and probably two hundred spectators witnessed the ordinances. Bro. Snell left for his home July 1. We long to buy a church if we can raise the money. Our work is among the factory people, and we will be pleased to correspond with any if we buy. We believe that God will open up the way and make it possible for us to do so. If we trust and obey him.—J. W. Harris, Marion, Ind., July 1.

Monticello congregation met in council meeting June 24, with Eld. Jesse Billing presiding. Meeting was set for Oct. 7 at 6:30 P. M. We also decided to have a harvest meeting. Bro. Daniel Snell, of North Liberty, and Eld. David Dilling was again chosen elder in charge for one year. We elected Bro. Jesse Billing to the office of elder for two years, and one for three years. Sister Nettie Whitcher was elected president of the Christian Workers' Meeting. Sister Elsie Kepp, secretary; Bro. R. G. Keever, Sunday-school superintendent.—L. L. Hiner, Monticello, Ind., July 1.

Mount Pleasant.—Our church met in council July 1. Eld. E. E. Goshorn presided. Considerable business came before the meeting, which was pleasantly disposed of. Council meeting was set for Aug. 6. We decided to hold our love feast in September, the exact date to be set later. We have not the definite date later. A collection of $56 was taken up.—L. E. Shively, R. D. 1, Box 4, July 1.

Ridge Schoolhouse.—Immediately after Sunday-school Bro. Jacob Beer, of Mexico, Ind., began a series of meetings. His theme was "The Word of God is Life." He will be with us again in four weeks.—Hattie Carbiener, Bremen, Ind., June 26.

Walnut.—In my report from this church concerning the advancing of some of our ministers to the second degree of the ministry, the name of Brother and Sister Howard Dicks should have appeared.—Minnie Gillett, R. D. 11, Argos, Ind., July 1.

Wawpecong.—We held our love feast July 1. Seventy-five members surrounded the Lord's tables. Many came from other congregations. Two from Mexico and three from Nappanee congregations were present. Bro. Daniel Wysong, of Nappanee, Ind., officiated. He remained and preached for us on Sunday morning. Bro. Everett Pippin, also of Nappanee, preached for us on Sunday evening. The meetings were very spiritual and a great encouragement to the Wawpecong church. We will hold an all-day harvest meeting Aug. 6. Bro. Harvey Hartzough will preach for us on this occasion. Our Sunday-school is still progressing, and we hope to attend with more throughout the coming quarter than has been done in the quarter that is past. On account of the increase in attendance it has been necessary for us to form a new class. We solicit the prayers of the brethren in our behalf.—Mrs. Ida Overholser, Wawpecong, Ind., July 1.

IOWA.

Beaver.—Our love feast has been held, and we feel that it was one of the best ones that we had. There were not so many members from other congregations, but a large number of our members were present. Bro. Brenneman, of Des Moines, was with us. Bro. Rowe and Harvey Rowe, of Rock Rapids, came July 4.—Mrs. Ida Rowe.

Clarence.—Sister Sadie Miller, who is on a furlough from India, came to the Lone Cedar church July 2, and gave us inspiring talks on her work and experiences in that far-off heathen country. We are always glad to welcome workers to our home, friends and our native country, with congenial religious influences, appreciative of the great work of missionaries and the money that is bearing among the heathen. Sister Miller presents the needs and conditions in India in an impressive manner, and deserves success in her work. Our church responded with an offering of $20.83 for the India work. May the Lord bless the efforts of our returned missionaries and that of their interests in the Lord's command: "Go ye." "Give ye." "Pray ye the Lord of the harvest" etc.—John Spack, Clarence, Iowa, July 2.

Long Meer church celebrated Independence Day in a very pleasant and profitable manner at the church near Panora. The forenoon was given to song services and an address by the elder. At noon a bountiful dinner was served. The afternoon program was rendered mostly by the Sunday-school children, assisted by others. The singing was interspersed with recitations, followed, with a short and impressive address on "Loyalty," by Eld. Geo. Detrick, of Panora, who delivered the Probable Independence Day. It is generally conceded that giving our Sunday-school children a Christian training and encouraging work to do, in times of special temptation, goes a long way toward securing their future safety. Bro. Geo. Detrick, of Panora, Sister Nettie Senger, of Bethany Bible School, occupied the Sunday-school hour, last Sunday morning, with an address on the Sunday-school work. The remarks were full of interest and instruction. She held her audience with appreciative attention for the whole hour.—Mrs. Minnie Blake Eld. A. M. Stine, of the Child Rescue Committee, of Middle Iowa, came to the Lone Cedar church July 4, and gave a very appropriate and impressive address on the importance of the Child Rescue Work. Iowa is awakening to a realization of the importance of both the Temperance and the Child Rescue Work, and our committees are doing effective work in their respective lines.—Mrs. Ida Overholser, July 5.

Libertyville.—Sister Sadie Miller was with us June 24 and 25, and gave us two interesting talks on "Life in Mission Work." A collection was taken for that work. Our Sunday-school was reorganized June 25, by Eld. J. Long, who elected superintendent for six months. Our Sunday-school 6 months' Love Feast will be held at Bro. Noah Beal's, at the beginning of a series of meetings to be held by Bro. Jacob Mishler, of Nebraska.—H. E. Johnston, Batavia, Iowa, July 3.

Muscatine.—June 11 Sister Sadie Miller came to us and gave us three talks on "Mission Work in Northern India." Truly, their needs are many. We are responsible for helping to bear the Gospel message as they are in need. Our church appropriated a part of her meager resources ($5) for the India work. We feel that it is a privilege for us to help in the support of a native worker, making $12. May all our members have a home and abroad at heart for the work of the cause!—A. Robinson, Muscatine, Iowa, June 26.

South Ottumwa church enjoyed a very spiritual love feast Sunday, June 25. Bro. Daniel Wysong, of Nappanee, had charge. Eld. Peter Brower and Bro. Homer Wenger, of South English, Iowa, Bro. Jacob Beer, of Mexico, Ind., were present. Bro. Beer is getting along slowly, yet the outlook is very good, we think. We have hopefully been looking for the last two weeks. There has been no sickness among the members this spring and work is very scarce. We are rejoicing over the fact that the saloons are closed.—Minnie E. Wyrtzen, R. D. 3, West Street, Ottumwa, Iowa, June 30.

KANSAS.

Altoona.—July 2 the brethren and sisters of this church met for worship. We had Sunday-school at ten o'clock, after which we had preaching. Communion services followed, our elder, Bro. J. S. Clark, of Parsons, Kans. After preaching we had our council meeting, with Bro. Clark presiding. A letter was read from Bro. Daniel Snell, of North Liberty, and request to District Meeting. The Sunday-school and church work of the coming quarter was discussed, and the brethren and sisters are working together in love and union for the Lord's cause.—Mrs. Blanche Button, Sunday-school Superintendent, R. D. 2, Altoona, Kans., July 5.

Chanute.—Our church met in council June 17, with our elder, Bro. J. H. Cakerice, presiding. Considerable business was disposed of satisfactorily. Our love feast will be held Oct. 7 at 6:30 P. M. Bro. J. H. Cakerice was elected delegate to Annual Meeting.—Emma Correll, Ashlees, Kans., July 5.

McPherson.—We met in council July 4, at 9 A. M. Eld. F. S. Holsinger, of Abilene, Kans., was present. At 10 o'clock the church budget was made. This church raises yearly over $1,400 for the India work. Sunday Evening services were advanced to the second degree of the ministry.—Sarah Minnie Hoisley, McPherson, Kans., July 3.

Monitor.—We met in council June 17, with Eld. J. J. Yoder presiding. The usual business was disposed of in a pleasant and profitable manner. Arrangements were made for a Junior Christian Workers' Band, which will be organized soon. Our love feast will be held Sept. 16, at 6:30 P. M.—Mrs. Ella Yoder, R. 7.

Bro. W. H. Yoder was advanced and duly installed into the second degree of the ministry.—Emma E. Stutzman, Harveyville, Kans., July 3.

Mont Ida.—We met in council June 17, with Eld. F. G. Edwards presiding. One paper was sent to District Meeting. Our Christian Workers' Meeting was reorganized for six months, with Sister Lizzie Hoover president. We elected teachers' meeting, and also a cradle roll department in our Sunday-school. Several additional appointments were made at various meetings.—Lucy B. Price, Mont Ida, Kans., July 1.

Morrill.—Our council meeting was held June 24, with our elder, Bro. C. A. Miller, presiding. Bro. C. M. Yearout, of Morrill, Kans., was elected to the office of deacon. Council set June 30. We decided to have preaching each Sunday morning for an indefinite time. One paper was sent to District Meeting. Eld. Jesse Ebbert will be with us July 8 at 10 A. M. Bro. Yearout gave us two excellent sermons while with us

Elder Henry Miller, one of our aged members, is afflicted with paralysis.—Lewis Smith, Wenatchee, Wash., July 5.

Verdigris church met in council June 24. Our elder, Bro. S. B. Lantz, had charge of the meeting, assisted by Bro. John Spitzer. Quite a number of members were present, which made a very interesting meeting. Two were received by letter, and two were restored. We decided to hold a series of meetings here, and also at Madison, with a love feast at the close of the meetings in this place. The exact time is not decided upon yet. There is church twice every Sunday, and preaching every other Sunday night at Madison. We have very good attendance at our morning and evening services in the country. The general attendance at church is fairly almost every evening. We decided to take up a collection every time we have preaching services, to be used to help support the Fourth at the church with an all-day temperance program, which we hope will interest every one.—Miles Quackenbush, R. D. 1, Olpe, Kans., July 1.

Washington.—At our last council we presented one of our young men for a letter of recommendation. Our love feast will be Sept. 9, at 10:30 A. M. We have the supplies for the cradle roll department. Sister Nora Dauby Washington, Kans., June 19.

MARYLAND.

Edgewood.—On June 11 we began a series of meetings at the Edgewood house, with Bro. A. P. Sonder in charge. Bro. Sonder gave us soul-stirring sermons, and as a result four put on Christ in baptism. Others are near the kingdom. We have a wide-awake Sunday-school, with Bro. Levi Green as superintendent. We have Christian Workers' Meeting each Sunday evening, with Bro. Howard Blackstes as president.—Mariana Engler, New Windsor, Md., July 5.

Glade View.—Bro. E. T. Pike began a series of meetings June 17, and continued until June 25. Many sermons were preached, and a number of people were buried with Christ in baptism. He gave us many encouraging words. We feel that God has richly blessed us.—Ira C. Miller, R. D. 2, Oakland, Md., July 3.

MICHIGAN.

Hanlan.—We met in council June 24. We had a very pleasant meeting. Bro. C. H. Beardorf presided. Two letters of membership were received. Our love feast will be held Sept. 26, beginning at 2 P. M. Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meeting officers were then elected. Bro. Willie Patrawalt was chosen superintendent; Bro. Grover Arnold, president of the Christian Workers; and Bro. Ora Hill, committee on Arrangements for District Meeting met and appointed the committees and officers for our Christian Worker Meeting to be held at Hanlan, beginning Aug. 14. June 24 Bro. R. H. Nicodemus, of Chicago, began a series of meetings. He is preaching the Lord's truth in abundance, and our members are being aroused to our duty, as well as stirring the hearts of many outside of the ministry. The meetings are excellent, and the outlook is good so far.—Rosa Weller, R. D. 3, Copemish, Mich., June 30.

MINNESOTA.

Worthington.—Bro. Andrew Hutchison, of McPherson, Kans., began a series of meetings June 25. The meetings were good and much appreciated by a full house nearly every evening. Three were baptized and one reclaimed. May the Lord bless Bro. Hutchison in his work, his wife duly installed. Brethren J. A. Eddy and Joseph Long were ordained to the second degree of the ministry. We expect another love feast at this place June 24. Bro. Hutchison officiated. We have a list of our isolated members, and a list for which our hearts were glad. A children's meeting was held on Sunday afternoon, and was enjoyed by all.—Minnie Schechter, R. D. 5, Worthington, Minn., June 26.

MISSOURI.

Mineral Creek.—Our Sunday-school and temperance meetings were held July 1. We were glad to welcome Bro. Levi Irvin V. Enos, our District Sunday-school Secretary, could not be with us. Our efficient superintendent, Bro. Ellis Wolfe, presided the meeting successfully. The program of songs, speeches and recitations by the children was much enjoyed by a good audience. A bountiful dinner was served on the lawn at noon, and a good social time was enjoyed. Our church is moving along nicely under the leadership of our elder, Bro. Mohler. Our series of meetings, to begin Sept. 3, has been postponed until Sept. 10, on account of the date of Bro. J. T. Holsinger's son he is unable to get to us before this date. Quite a few brethren, visited in the home of Bro. Wolfe during the meeting. Among them were Bro. Paul Mohler and family and Bro. D. N. Eller, of Virginia. The sermons preached by these brethren were much enjoyed. We always enjoy having any of the brethren with us.—Zilpha Campbell, Joplin, Mo., July 5.

Nevada church met in special council June 26. The church decided to use the new book, "Kingdom Songs No. 3," in our Sunday-school. A committee was appointed to look after the book. Eld. Smith read his decision in the case appealed from on the "Lamb Question," and gave us a talk on the subject. All the members seem to be in peace and harmony, and the work is progressing nicely. Nearly all the members were present. During the council the rain fell in torrents. All realized that the heavy downpour is now broken, for which we are thankful.—R. M. Ellis, Nevada, Mo., July 1.

NEBRASKA.

Enders.—We held our love feast June 17. Forty-two members were present. Bro. A. J. Nickey, of Kearney, Nebr., officiated, assisted by our elder, Bro. Ira Hoff. Bro. Nickey preached us twice on Sunday. We were glad that he could be with us. On Sunday afternoon a communion service was held at the home of one of our aged members, Sister Flory, as she was unable to attend the feast at the church. Bro. Ira Clark, of Quinter, Kans., was called to the ministry. One week from the time of the communion, Sister Flory passed away.—Orville Eby, Enders, Nebr., July 5.

Red Cloud.—We had the pleasure of having with us Bro. W. R. Miller, of Chicago, Ill., in some illustrated Bible Land talks, commencing June 19 and continuing three nights. We had very good crowds, considering the busy season and the warm weather. We all enjoyed his lectures and felt sorry when the time came for him to leave us. We held our sixteenth annual Sunday-school picnic on the Fourth of July, so prevented Providence.—Ella E. Eshelman, Red Cloud, Nebr., July 2.

NORTH DAKOTA

Berthold.—Our church met in council June 24. Eld. D. W. Shock presided. One letter of membership was read and one was granted. Eld. J. H. Petry and Bro. Shock were elected delegates to District Meeting; Brethren A. H. Jones and E. S. Petry, alternates. Brethren evangelistic meeting to be held four confessed Christ. Bro. E. E. Eshelman knows his Bible and is able to teach and preach it to others. Sister Jones' membership card for the anointing, which was administered by Eld. D. W. Shock and Bro. Eshelman.—F. J. Weimer, Berthold, N. Dak., June 30.

Bowdon Valley.—The members of this church held their love feast June 24. About twenty-five surrounded the Lord's tables. Bro. Daniel Deardorff, of Surrey, N. Dak., preached for us on Saturday evening and evening of communion. He is very spiritual and inspiring. We all feel much encouraged in the Lord's work. We have preaching every other Sunday by Theodore Price does the preaching. He moved among us in the spring. We feel that much good is being done by having a resident minister. The attendance and interest are increasing.—Mrs. J. E. Glessner, R. D. 2, Manfred, N. Dak., July 5.

Kelvin.—The Brethren in the Turtle Mountains have secured the use of the District tent, and the writer held a series of meetings beginning June 24. On the 29th the members met in council, and Bro. Ira Hoff was elected to the office of deacon. The choice fell on Bro. Fred Schroeder who, with his wife, was duly installed. Bro. Jacob Bowser, of Tofte, N. Dak., was with us and delivered the charge. In the evening, with a few visiting members, we gathered around the Lord's table to partake of the Lord's supper. Bro. Bowser officiated. As a body we feel encouraged to do more aggressive work for the Master.—Ella Hoff, Kelvin, N. Dak., July 1.

Remmare.—Today our church met in council. Eld. J. C. Toney had charge of the meeting. Bro. J. C. Forney is our superintendent. Bro. Ira Hoff was elected delegate to the Sunday-school Meeting. June 25 one was received by baptism. Eld. J. C. Toney began a series of meetings.—G. I. Michael, Kenmare, N. Dak., July 1.

Rugby.—Bro. J. H. Myers, of Minot, N. Dak., began a very interesting and instructive series of meetings at this place. June 24 Bro. Myers preached for us at 10 A. M., after which we had the Lord's supper. Many were encouraged in their willingness to accept Christ as their Savior. We held our love feast at 2 P. M., with Bro. Myers in charge. Many friends surrounded the tables. The following Sunday we met at 10 A. M. for Sunday-school, which was in charge of the writer, and by Bro. Hartsough, gave a very interesting sermon.—T. W. Stutson, Rugby, N. Dak., July 1.

Salem.—We are having a very interesting series of meetings, conducted by Bro. John Heckman, of Turner, Indiana. We met for council June 24. Our elder, Bro. J. W. Shively, presided. Two letters were received and one granted. Sunday-school officers were elected.—Ida Shively.

Williston.—Our love feast was held June 10. Forty-eight members were present. Bro. Jacob Kaufman, of Minnesota, from adjoining churches were with us at the feast. Ministers present were Eld. Jacob Kaufman, Eld. Jacob Hoff, Eld. Ira Hoff, and Eld. Isaac Frantz. The latter officiated. For the first time the writer has had the privilege of washing feet and passing the cup. Eld. Isaac Frantz came to us from the late Annual Meeting and conducted a series of meetings, beginning June 4 and continuing each evening at June 25. The meetings closed with an unabating interest. We had a splendid attendance every night. Bro. Frantz is a worker. On seven dear souls were made willing to confess Christ and seek the new birth. Two were baptized on the evening of June 25. Two have expressed themselves that they are ready to enter the fold also.—Etta Myer, R. D. 2, Box 191, Williston, N. Dak., June 28.

OHIO.

Black Swamp.—The members of our Sunday-school were made to rejoice last Sunday when twelve of the Toledo Sunday-school were present. Bro. Harbert Studebaker, of Toledo, garner preached for us. As all had brought well-filled baskets, we ate our lunch on the church lawn. Then came the time for speaking, singing, and devotional exercises. All departed after having spent a most delightful session. On Wednesday a dear sister was willing to put on Christ in baptism. —Edith Baker, Le Moyne, Ohio, July 1.

Covington.—Our last report of the Story we were glad to welcome to our church Eld. G. N. Falkenstein, who preached for us on Sunday, June 18, and remained with us over the "Second Coming of Christ." Bro. Herbert Studebaker and Eld. D. D. Wine were with us on the 25th. Their sermons were much appreciated by this congregation. Our teacher-training class is doing good work.—Elizabeth Boorman Covington, Ohio, July 2.

Pittsburg.—We held our love feast June 17. The attendance was large. Eld. Jacob Hoff officiated and washed the Lord's table. Eld. D. C. Hendrickson officiated. The meeting was much enjoyed by all. Sunday-school last year was a success in the church by baptism.—Ruth Delk, R. D. 4, Box 118, Arcanum, Ohio, July 1.

Poplar Grove (Ohio).—This church and the five adjoining churches were favored with a visit from the Sunday-school Meeting July 4. Some Sunday-school workers from other places were also present. At 9:45 A. M. a basket dinner in places were also present. At 9:45 A. M. a basket dinner in the beautiful, well-filled baskets. A splendid program had been arranged. The Round Table was an interesting feature of the program. The next Annual Sunday-school Meeting on the national holidays was well demonstrated. The boy children are learning to work and the girls abounding in the cities, to enjoy the day in the country, spending it in the fellowship of the brethren and sisters. We succeedingly warm, yet the day was enjoyed by all, and it was decided to meet on the first Tuesday in July, 1912.—Anna Bowser, Dayton, M. Royer, R. D. 40, Union City, Ind., July 6.

Portage.—Our church met in council June 24. Much business was transacted. Bro. Ira Hoff was to be our next union. Eld. J. C. Witmore, of Fostoria, Ohio, was chosen as our elder for one year. Bro. Ira Hoff was elected delegate to District Meeting. Sunday-school Meeting on the national holidays was well demonstrated. The boy children are learning to work and the girls abounding in the cities, to enjoy the day in the country, spending it in the fellowship of the brethren and sisters. Portage.—Our church met in council June 24. Much business was transacted. Bro. Ira Hoff was to be our next union. Eld. J. C. Witmore, of Fostoria, Ohio, was chosen as our elder for one year. Bro. Ira Hoff was elected delegated trustee for three years, and also chosen clerk for one year. Bro. Geo. Bowser is our superintendent. We expect to have preaching every two weeks. Our next preaching services will be July 9.—Mrs. Myrtle Wilkinson, Portage, Ohio, July 1.

OKLAHOMA.

Hoyle.—At our late council it was decided to hold an election, and Eld. Jacob Hoff presided over the same. Bro. T. C. Root was called to the ministry. Brethren Cook, H. Boose, A. J. Smith and E. Lauver were present at the meeting.—Wm. Myers, Hoyle Station, Okla., R. Shenefelt, Amen, Okla., July 1.

Pleasant Plains church met in council June 17. Our elder, Bro. H. Booze, presided. We elected our Sunday-school officers for the coming six months. Bro. Ed. Taylor was superintendent. Bro. H. Booze was chosen delegate to the District Meeting. Bro. Geo. Pautice, alternate. June 25 our District Sunday-school superintendent was with us. At eleven o'clock he preached a very good sermon, and in the afternoon he held our Sunday-school meeting.—Mrs. Hulda Prentice, R. D. 3, Alline, Okla., June 29.

Red Rock church met in council June 29. Our elder, Bro. A. G. Hillmore, presided. One letter was received. We elected our Sunday-school officers for the coming six months. Bro. D. Post as superintendent; Bro. Albert Murphy, secretary. Our revival meeting closed with a basket dinner on the 4th, to close with a love feast. Bro. C. D. Hylton, of Kansas, will be held over a week. Bro. A. G. Hillmore is our delegate to District Meeting.—Gay Nill, R. D. 1, Hollister, Okla., June 30.

OREGON.

Ashland church met in council June 24. Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meeting officers elected. Eld. Jacob Hoff with Sister Lizzie Detweiler as Sunday-school superintendent, and Sister Nellie Morton as president of Christian Workers. Brethren Jacob Hoff, E. E. Decker and J. G. Miller were chosen delegates to District Meeting. Since our last report Bro. Hoff has been with us. Bro. Jacob Kaufman, of Washington, Iowa, preached for us.—Cora B. Decker, Ashland, Oregon, June 29.

Newberg church met in council July 1. Owing to a change in conditions, it was decided to discontinue the use of what has been known as the equality plan of raising funds for church expenses. Bro. Henry Brubaker was chosen delegate to District Meeting, with Bro. Otis Welsh as alternate. An election was held for a minister and a deacon. The choice of election was held for a minister and a deacon. The choice for a minister resulted in a tie, and Bro. Jacob Hoff was called upon to decide who was chosen. Bro. J. W. Brooks was chosen deacon. He and his wife and Bro. Pete Hoff were installed. A brother was restored to fellowship.—Bessie Marie King, Newberg, Oregon, July 1.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Elk Lick.—June 17 Eld. C. D. Bonsack began a series of meetings, and preached eighteen soul-stirring sermons. As an immediate result of his labors, five young girls united with the church. Our council, held June 28, was unusually well attended, and was also characterized by the excellent spirit which prevailed. Our elder, La Rue Beachy, presided. It was decided to continue the services of the present pastor, Bro. D. J. Zigler, another year. On Sunday evening, July 2, we enjoyed a very spiritual love feast. About 110 surrounded the Lord's tables. Bro. Bonsack officiated.—Clive Bollinger Eagan, Elk Lick, Pa., July 4.

Johnstown.—We held our local Sunday-school convention in the Maple Grove house. We spent a very pleasant day together. We had a meeting with Eld. Ira Ober, in the Locust Grove house. At the present time Bro. Wm. M. Howe is teaching an Bible class at the Walnut Grove house, on the Book of Daniel. We meet every Wednesday night. These meetings are largely attended and are interesting. We wish that more might avail themselves of the means on the Book of Daniel. The dates set for the starting of our revival meetings are as follows: Aug. 6, in the Maple Grove house, conducted by Bro. Silas S. Blough, of North Manchester, Ind.; July 31, at the Locust Grove house, by Eld. Chappel; at Walnut Grove, Aug. 13, at the Walnut Grove house, by Bro. E. S. Young, from Ohio. Aug. 13 at the Oriental house, by Eld. Johnstown, Pa., July 6.

Lost Creek.—The Lord willing, we will begin a series of meetings Aug. 26 at the Oriental house, to continue till Sept. 18, to be conducted by Bro. H. M. Myers, of Waynesboro, Pa. Preliminary services for our love feast will be held Sept. 9, at 9:30 A. M., with meetings next day also.—John S. Showers, R. D. 1, Box 19, Liverpool, Pa., July 6.

Lower Cumberland.—The Mechanicsburg Sunday-school of this congregation held its Children's Day Exercises June 18. About 200 enjoyed a well-rendered program. The children did especially well. Bro. J. H. Cassel, Superintendent, delivered an excellent address on "The Ingredients of a Good Sunday-school." Bro. Wm. Mechanicsburg, Pa., July 1.

Marsh Creek.—On Sunday we had the pleasure of having with us our aged brother in the Lord, Eld. F. P. Crist, and wife. Bro. Graybill preached for us at the Pleasant Hill house in the morning, and in the Gettysburg house in the evening. Our meetings were very much appreciated. We appreciated having them with us in our home, and our prayers are with them in the declining years of labor. Since our last report three have been added to the church by baptism. We expect Bro. C. D. Bonsack to be with us in August to conduct preach for us in the Gettysburg house.—Ida M. Lightner, Gettysburg, Pa., July 6.

Mingo church met in council June 17, with our elder, Bro. Jesse Blough, presiding. Assisted by Eld. F. P. Crist. Five letters of membership were received. We decided to hold two series of meetings in the fall,—one at the Shippack house by Bro. Hoover, beginning Sept. 4, at Mingo by Eld. Solomon Martin.—Elizabeth B. Hunsberger, Royersford, Pa., July 3.

Nearing Springs church met in council, held June 24, well attended, and the members at home much appreciated the presence of our elder, Bro. Jesse Blough. Arrangements in the future arrangements will be made so that all members present may have the privilege of being present at all the tables. Our expectations were exceeded as to the number of members attending. We are expect that by the time of this meeting the final resignation of our faithful pastor and elder, Bro. O. V. Long, was tendered. We hope that the service of Bro. Long will be long remembered, as no much for other flocks as it has for the church he has just left, and that we may be able to fill in a measure the protecting care of a faithful elder. Eld. David A. Sell has been called to take the place left by the church in getting some one to look after the needs of the church.—Elizabeth Barnett, Roaring Springs, Pa., July 6.

Spring Run.—Bro. J. M. Blough and wife were with us July 2. Sister Blough gave an interesting talk during the Sunday-school on the Lesson, after which Brother and Sister Blough sang two songs in the Indis language. Bro. Blough then gave an interesting talk about his mission work in general. He held his audience for one hour, with much interest. We surely appreciate their efforts very much. An offering of $8 was lifted for the work in India.—Lawrence Ruble, McVeytown, Pa., July 6.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Willow Creek.—We closed our two weeks' series of meetings last night with good interest and attendance, which was

DAYBREAK IN THE DARK CONTINENT

By WILSON B. NAYLOR

As mission field, ripe for the harvest, Africa is now attracting unusual attention. This makes this book a timely one. No one is better fitted than the author of this volume to furnish a comprehensive treatment of the theme. His travels in Africa have been quite extensive. It is an excellent book for mission classes. It contains many illustrations, pen sketches, chronological and statistical tables, charts and suggestions, a two-page map, with key and a concise index. It will do any one good to read it. We all ought to know more about the conditions of our fellow beings in heathen lands. This book is a great eye opener. 260 pages, cloth 57c.

manifest at every service. Bro. Brumbaugh, of Muncatine, Iowa, worked earnestly both in the homes and in the public services. Three accepted Christ during the series. Our next love feast will be held June 24.—Eva Heagley-Hurst, Wetonka, S. Dak., June 29.

TENNESSEE.

Bristol—The building committee that was appointed last fall, at the District Meeting, consisting of Bro. Reed, chairman, Brethren S. J. Bowman, N. B. Sherfy, John Swadley, J. C. Jones and the writer, met here Saturday, the 24th. They met with encouragement, and recommend that it is advisable to purchase a lot at West Point and build a church soon. Bro. Peter Reed preached a good sermon Sunday, the 25th. Bro. and Bro. N. B. Sherfy preached for us in the afternoon at three o'clock, at the same place. Bro. Brumbaugh and Gans and the writer had to go about five miles into the country, where Bro. Garst baptized a man about seventy-five years old, who had once belonged to any church. Sister Bealer, who united with the Church of the Brethren a few years ago, is now confined mostly to the fact that there is a church in which there is not so much pride like in some churches. The brother was very feeble, but he came out of the water feeling stronger than when he went in. That is the way with all who take up the cross and follow Christ.—J. H. Good, 809 State St., Bristol, Tenn., July 3.

TEXAS.

Nocona church met in council July 1. Bro. E. M. Kidwell conducted the meeting. We decided to hold a series of meetings, beginning Aug. 19. The first one we have had in this set for Aug. 26.—Maggie Molsbee, R. D. 6, Box 2, Nocona, Texas, July 2.

VIRGINIA.

Mount Joy church met in council at the Bethel house June 24. Our elder, Bro. A. F. Pursely, presided. Much business came before the meeting. Two letters were received; three members were reclaimed. We decided to hold our harvest meeting Aug. 12, beginning at 10 A. M. We decided to hold a series of meetings commencing in October. We decided to have the Bethel house having departed. Brethren W. H. Duke, F. P. Vanness and the writer were chosen as trustees of the above office. Brethren the council we had an election for a deacon. The vote was a tie, and two were elected, Brethren E. Bridgeman and F. E. Vanness. We are glad to report that our number is increasing. Our elder preached two interesting sermons on Saturday night and Sunday. Bro. J. Blough and wife, of Ivanhoe, were with us.—J. W. Sumner, R. D. 1, Eagle Rock, Va., July 8.

Topeco.—Our church met in council July 1. Eld. A. N. Hylton presiding. Brethren E. J. and G. C. Reed were with us. Brethren Willis Burgess, Peter Hylton, C. H. Mitchell and Luther Harman were elected to the deacon's office. Brethren Willis Burgess, Peter Hylton, C. H. Mitchell and wife were installed. The following officers were elected: 10 A. M. for Sunday-school. Bro. S. P. Reed gave us an interesting and helpful Sunday-school talk. At 11 A. M. Brethren G. O. and S. P. Reed preached. The services were enjoyed. The choir had 6 large and attentive audience.—Lizzie Spangler, R. D. 2, Box 54, Floyd, Va., July 2.

WASHINGTON.

Centre.—Our church convened in council June 24, with Eld. M. F. Woods, as moderator. This is the beginning of a new church year, it was a very busy day. With but one exception all old officers were re-elected for both the church and the Sunday-school. Bro. M. F. Woods was elected delegate to the District Meeting and Bro. Jesse Myers. Bro. Myers was elected president of the Christian Workers' Meeting; Sister Ella Hylton, secretary. Bro. Myers was re-elected for the year we were very much encouraged in the upbuilding of the church, both spiritually and numerically. There was a decided increase in the number added to the fold by baptism and in the two years we have only lost one of our members by death. Surely, the Lord has been very merciful and gracious to us.—Anna Myers, Centralia, Wash., June 26.

Sunnyside church met in council June 13, with Eld. D. B. Eby presiding. Our Sunday-school was reorganized with Bro. W. Mickles as superintendent. A committee was chosen to arrange for a series of meetings this fall. Sister Elsie Sayer was chosen president of the Christian Workers' Meeting.—Mrs. M. E. Oswalt, Sunnyside, Wash., July 1.

Tacoma church met in council on Friday evening. Church and Sunday-school officers were elected, with Bro. W. Garman, clerk; Sister Mabel Thomas, agent for the Publishing House; his writer, correspondent. Sister Mary Emmert, Sister Mabel Thomas, superintendents. Bro. J. U. G. Stiverson was chosen delegate to District Meeting. Bro. Stiverson, Treasurer of the District Mission Board, and his wife have been with us since April. They are looking for the District Meeting, and later will return to their home at Payette, Idaho. We will miss their presence and loving counsel. Sister Maymie Faidley's year is finished, and she will return to her home in Centralia. We will miss her also. We are glad to have Brother and Sister Robertson, of Bible School, with us, to assist in the work in this city, where sin and sorrow abound. Our Sunday-school is growing. We are planning to have a picnic on the Fourth of July, with preaching in the morning, and a program in the afternoon.—Elsie Garman, 526 South Fifty-first St., Tacoma, Wash., June 28.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Sandy Creek.—We met in council at the Salem house July 1. Our elder, Bro. Jeremiah Thomas, had charge. Our Ministerial and Sunday-school Meetings take part, as we have very much encouraged over the good things we heard. The visiting brethren gave us many good words of encouragemidst again. Our Christian Workers' Meeting reorganized midst again. Our Christian Workers' Meeting reorganized last Sunday.—James M. Thomas, R. D. 1, Clifton Mills, W. Va., July 8.

NOTES UNCLASSIFIED.

Prescott.—July 2 our church organized a Christian Workers' Meeting. Bro. John L. Van Buskirk is our president; Sister Lena Myers, secretary-treasurer. The president and Brethren E. R. Wellrich and Chas. Boatright comprise the executive committee. After the organization Eld. J. F. Bowman gave us a very good discourse on the "Lord's Prayer." Fourth of July meeting was well attended. The forenoon was spent in Sunday-school and song service by the Sunday-school. In the afternoon we went to the beautiful Hardwood Lake where an aged minister, whose home is in Prescott, preached. Our services are increasing in interest. Last Sunday the attendance at Sunday-school was sixty-eight.—Ruth Blocher, Prescott, Mich., July 6.

Medicine Lake.—Our love feast, held July 1 and 2, was said by many to be the best they ever had. Two brethren, Bro. Cookson and L. M. Williams, were elected deacons. They and their wives were duly installed. Also one afternoon a young man was baptized.—Katie E. Keller, Enterprise, Mont., July 2.

Motive.—Quarterly Meeting of the District of Washington, with the meetings held in connection with it, will be held in the Harlan church, near Harlan, Iowa, on the 22d, following Sunday-school Meeting, Wednesday, Aug. 16; Ministerial Meeting, Thursday, Aug. 17; Missionary Meeting in the evening of the same day; Love-feast services, Friday, Aug. 18. The elders of the District will meet on Tuesday afternoon, Aug. 15. Notice of the time of the Love-feast, where, trains will be met, will be given by the Brethren residing at the place where the meetings are held.—Jesse Ward Jr., Messmer, Lake Odessa, Mich., July 7.

Scottdale.—Our church met on Mount Morris, Ill., was with us on Saturday evening and Sunday. He was here in the interest of Mount Morris College. He gave an excellent address on "Preparing Boys and Girls for Service of Life." He emphasized the points that the best investment a young industrious boy can hope for, young people who listened to him may be inspired to attend Mount Morris College or some other Brethren's school.—Jesse Ward, Scottdale, R. D. 1, Lawton, Minn., July 7.

Pleasant Grove.—Eld. J. A. Miller came into our midst June 25, and preached ten instructive sermons for us. The meetings were well attended and many seem to be deeply interested. Only 1 was baptized at this time. Eleven members sat at the Lord's table. Two visiting brethren were with us from Mineral City, Ohio. Many precious seeds have been sown. We need the prayers of God's people in behalf of the work at this place.—Nannie Bonds, Spring, Texas, July 7.

Beaver Creek.—The Beaver Creek and Montgomery Sunday-schools met in the church to spend the Fourth. The day was a good many present. We had song services, using the old "Harmonia Sacra." This was very much enjoyed, especially by the older people. The children sang some interesting songs and gave a number of recitations. We also had some talks by brethren, which all enjoyed. The What the Fourth Means to Us." We also had several impromptu speeches. We spent the day pleasantly and hope all present will be benefited. We expect our series of meetings to begin July 23. Bro. Eli S. Garber to do the preaching. Our love feast will be Aug. 5.—Nannie J. Miller, R. D. 2, Bridgewater, Va., July 6.

Beaverton.—Our church met in council July 2. Our elder, Bro. Wilbur Neff, presided. Our Sunday-school was reorganized with the writer as superintendent. Bro. Frank Hoover was elected delegate to the District Meeting. Brethren Bro. Alva Spaach, of North Manchester, Ind., was with us last Sunday and Monday evening. Sunday he preached and appreciated his talks very much. July 4 an all-day meeting was held in a grove and everyone was glad to be all. In the afternoon a program was given by the children; also several short addresses.—Sadie Patterson, Beaverton, Mich., July 7.

Notice to the Churches of Idaho.—The first District Meeting of Idaho will be held in the Boise Valley church Aug. 5 to 6 inclusive. Elder Hiram Ikler, at 2 P. M. at the A. F. Brower's residence; District Meeting, Aug. 5; Ministerial Meeting, Aug. 6. Committee will also be represented off at Nampa and take the Boise Valley electric car, one block south of the depot to Modernest Station, one mile east of church and one mile south. Cars will be met Aug. 2. Please notify Bro. I. N. Pausley, Meridian, Idaho, R. R. 1, as to what time you will reach Nampa and how many there will be.—Jennie Brower, Meridian, Idaho, July 6.

Notice to the Churches of Western Pennsylvania.—There will be a special District Meeting held at Scalp Level, Shade Creek congregation, Aug. 16, 1911, at 2 P. M. at that. There is business to attend to that should interest every church in the district. Hoping to see a large delegation represented at this meeting.—Jasper Barnthouse, Moderator, 8 W. Craig Street, Uniontown, Pa., July 7.

THE GOSPEL MESSENGER
AND
OUR SATURDAY NIGHT

For $1.85 we will send you the Messenger for one year and a copy of Our Saturday Night. This is only 35c for the book which contains 192 pages.

The Gospel Messenger

is a religious paper of superior merit. Our Saturday Night is a book that will interest and help you. The Messenger, being the official organ of the Church of the Brethren, is of special value to members of the church, though many not identified with the church find it worth while to read and appreciation. The things of most vital interest to the church are communicated through the columns of this paper only. Its work is being appreciated more and more, as the increase of the list of subscribers indicates. The Messenger is indispensable as a religious educator and spiritual counselor. One brother says: "It has been a forerunner to conversion and church unity in city and rural districts."

Our Saturday Night

is a collection of the ripe fruit of a master mind. Following are a few phrases from those who have read the book: "Interesting and instructive." "Food for various moods." "Good reading and will do good." "Good from beginning to end." "I am charmed with it." "Replete with warnings, citations, examples and good advice." What more need be said? You must read it to learn its real merits. Get it now. It is going rapidly.

But Do Not Forget

it is not for sale. A subscription to the Gospel Messenger is the only means of obtaining this charming little volume.

The Messenger one year, $1.50; the book, 35 cents; both, $1.85.

AROUND THE WORLD

Further Anti-War Efforts.

Under date of July 14 it is announced that France is ready to sign a general arbitration treaty with the United States, similar to the one with Great Britain. Simultaneous with the above, the custodians of the $10,000,000 Carnegie Peace Foundation announce a forthcoming campaign of popular education to establish friendlier relations between the United States and Japan. It is planned "to give to each people better knowledge of the other, and to help build up a public opinion in both countries that will resist all attempts to arouse antagonism." Undoubtedly these campaigns will be productive of much good. We boast about the power of education in all branches of human endeavor; why not educate along the line of "friendlier relations" between nations?

Progress in Japan.

Modern Japan, according to a recent writer, is a land of wonderful opportunities for the earnest mission worker, but he must not expect to gain the people without a strong and determined effort. With the advent of modern progress there is a strange commingling of beliefs and isms. All the various shades of skepticism, agnosticism, materialism and atheism are represented among the people of the island empire, and every step of the way must be stubbornly contested with these forces of darkness. Practically, Christianity has the same struggle in Japan that it has in any European or American city. There is a great future for Japan,—for her people are wide-awake and progressive,—but whether it will be, eventually, a mighty power for righteousness, as revealed by Christ, will depend upon the Christian influences now being exercised.

A Lesson from an Egyptian Mummy.

Only ten grains of wheat, that had reposed for thousands of years with an Egyptian mummy, near Thebes, were sent to a farmer at Greeley, Colo. Carefully he planted them, and was rewarded for his effort when recently eight stalks of wheat grew to maturity, promising a variety of grain vastly superior to any growing in that locality. Possibly it may yet prove to be the standard variety of wheat for the American continent. We marvel at the persistency of life in the tiny seeds, which, after years of repose in the ancient tomb, burst forth into a new life. Can we doubt that the same God who gave life to these grains of wheat, has the power to bring forth these mortal bodies of ours on the resurrection morn? Truly, "It is sown in weakness; it is raised in power. . . . O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?"

Unequal Yoking with Unbelievers.

Paul's exhortation to the Corinthian Christians is in reality of much wider application than is generally given to it. While, in its evident intent, it touches upon the varied relations of believers and unbelievers, and the apostle had in mind the ordinary range of social intercourse, his warning is also directed against the wider association, whether in society or business, with those whose fellowship is not conducive to progress in the Christian life. There are instances again and again where members of the Church of the Brethren have united with societies or movements outside of the body, and of no religious tendency, only to reap the results of such "unequal yoking" in decreased spirituality, if not a total loss of their religious integrity. It is high time to look about us, to see if there is not some "unequal yoking" that is sapping the very strength and vitality of the church.

Missions in the Sunday-School.

The importance of developing a distinctly missionary spirit in the Sunday-school received due attention at the recent International Convention in San Francisco. There is an opportunity in the Sunday-school, not found in any other agency, to impress the great world need upon the plastic mind of the child,—to arouse sentiment for perishing millions that will never fade from the heart and mind of the pupil. From the reports of one of the speakers we might sum up the matter of missionary education in the following: (1) To make the church of the future an intelligent, aggressive church. (2) To develop a broadly benevolent church through the training of the young to work for the best interests of all mankind. (3) To train the church in real beneficence. (4) To grow a praying church in behalf of all mankind everywhere. (5) To create a peace-loving church, and therefore a peace-loving nation. (6) To make a sacrificing church. (7) To make a faith-abiding church. (8) To make a triumphant church. We have here a broad and expansive field of usefulness, and God opens to every Sunday-school worker with the message, "Occupy till I come."

Religious Liberty in Portugal.

The separation of church and state, insisted upon by the people of Portugal, was perhaps one of the main causes that led to the revolution of last year, and ended in the downfall of the monarchy. Under the new order of things, now prevailing, all churches are on an exact equality. No favors will be shown to any, and, on the other hand, no hindrances will bar the progress of any church. This is one of the most radical changes ever made, for a country once distinctively Catholic. It shows that the light of a new day will dawn for Portugal, provided efforts are made to give them the advantages of evangelical Christianity, together with an open Bible. Long since, the Psalmist said, "The entrance of thy Word giveth light." May we not hope that, to the people of Portugal, the opportunity will be given of accepting the gospel message which alone can fill the desire of every sincere heart?

Good Cheer as a Remedy.

Iowa claims the distinction of having originated a new departure in the cure of incipient tuberculosis. The State has secured the services of an eloquent preacher, to travel throughout the State and teach the people to quit worrying, be cheerful and, above all, to stay at home for their cure. It seems that Colorado health resorts, with purest air and best treatment can not eliminate homesickness, and finally the pangs of separation from home may kill where even consumption would not. The Iowa plan is to teach the gospel of rest, right living, outdoor sleeping, and good cheer in general, amid home surroundings. Dr. Kepford, who has been selected as the State Agent, believes that tuberculosis is strictly a "house disease," and can be cured by modern ways of insanitary living, and he avers that recovery depends mainly upon the patients' common sense and determination. They must not only eat right, but they must think right and feel right and live right, thus living a life of cheer, which, as Solomon assures us, means "health to all their flesh."

A Nation Highly Blessed.

Undoubtedly each one of America's citizens has great cause for thankfulness, for the year ending June 30 certainly shows a wonderful prosperity. We have a $33,000,000 surplus in the national treasury, $1,800,000,000 in the treasury vaults, $2,05?,000 in exports, and good prospects for crops. A bulletin from the Department of Agriculture shows that the cotton crop exceeds the average for the past ten years by nearly nine per cent, and wheat, also, is expected to break the record. Although the United States has only about five per cent of the world's population, it produces twenty per cent of its wheat, twenty-two per cent of its gold, thirty-three per cent of its coal, thirty-eight per cent of its silver, seventy per cent of its cotton, and eighty per cent of its corn. Its aggregate wealth, approximately $130,000,000,000, equals the combined resources of Great Britain and France. Considering the manifold blessings lavished upon us by the hand of a Beneficent Creator, who is there that would refuse to praise the Lord, and prove his gratitude by more consecrated living and giving?

Experiences of Baptists in Russia.

Last week we briefly referred to the presence of Russian spies at the Baptist Conference in Philadelphia, and the consequent restraint thrown over the assembly. At a later meeting, however, held in New York, some of the faithful Russian Baptists were given an opportunity to tell of the bitter persecution by the state church which has for years fallen to their lot, and which will, doubtless befall them again on their return. One of them, Vasilia Ivanoff, says in part as follows: "My persecution began when I became a Baptist, but in spite of what I have suffered I am thankful that I have lived to bring the light of religion to hundreds of my fellow-creatures. Twice, because I persisted in preaching when I had been ordered to stop, I was sent to Siberia. There I was chained to criminals,—robbers and worse,—in the chain-gang. I have seen the inside of thirty-three prisons." Another minister, Simon Stephanof, says: "During the first year following my conversion two attempts were made upon my life. For the following ten years I was never given a minute's peace by the police. I was hounded like a criminal from place to place, and no sooner would I start to preach, than the police would be upon me. Five years of my life I spent in Siberia, often amidst criminals of the lowest type. There I knew what real suffering is. Often I was without food for days, and many times I was too weak to eat what they gave me." This is no "sailing to heaven on flowery beds of ease," but a demonstration of the age-old truth that he who dares to stand in defense of Bible truths in the face of a bigoted hierarchy, must pay the penalty,—bitter persecution and suffering!

Improvements in Turkey.

Turkey is awakening to an era of better things. Already we have referred to contemplated educational improvements. Now the Turkish minister of public works is planning the construction of well-built national highways throughout the entire empire. What this will mean to the country in general, and to the traveling public in particular, only those can rightly appreciate who are familiar with the woeful state of the narrow trails that have hitherto answered the purpose of roads. Irrigation, drainage and dike-building are also to receive attention, and will greatly add to the agricultural resources of the land, redeeming the marshy portions and supplying needed moisture to other sections. Several new railroad lines are also being contemplated, which, in connection with the lines already built, will afford ready access to all parts of the empire. With the important concessions recently granted to missionary workers, there is nothing, now, to hinder active work in all parts of the Ottoman Empire. While Moslems are hard to reach, there are signs of encouraging progress, and especially so by means of mission schools.

Christianity in Business.

While shady transactions and even downright dishonesty are regarded by many as indispensable adjuncts to business success, there are many who make their Christian principles the ruling motive in all they do. Many recent evidences of this are a proof of the fact that "goodiness is profitable in all things," for actual experience has shown the truthfulness of the apostolic precept. The proprietor of a large clothing store in New York has made it a fixed rule that no misrepresentation whatever must be made in the sale of his goods, and any discrepancy in the quality of the articles sold is at once rectified and amply compensated. Several stores in Chicago and other cities have placed sums to their clerks to detect any misrepresentation or misleading statements in advertisements or business transactions connected with their establishments. Popular magazines and all the better journals of the day have thrown out questionable advertising, for they have found that the character of the advertising invariably reflects upon the reputation and influence of the journal in question. Men everywhere are more and more realizing the fact that lasting success does not depend upon crooked or questionable methods, and that the surest and most lasting financial success is secured by him who makes Christ the Senior Partner of the firm.

Giving a Man Another Chance.

With the beginning of July the State of Illinois is putting into effect the adult probation law for first offenders. If this law is practically applied, in the spirit of its originators, it will prevent the usual prison contamination of men who are for the first time facing the law's penalties. It is simply giving the man another chance to redeem himself. The judge before whom such a first offender is convicted, may put him on probation, holding over him the certainty of punishment unless he shows signs of genuine reform. Every inducement is held out to him to begin again, and begin right. There is a world of wisdom and sound sense in this provision for first offenders, and even in things spiritual the application of the principle might well be utilized to excellent advantage. Many a time the transgressor of church regulations is frowned upon, and not the least encouragement is given him to turn again to the ways of righteousness. Even inspiration itself says, "If a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual, restore such an one in, the spirit of meekness," many of us are unwilling to extend the helping hand to the erring one. Many of us are reluctant to do as much as is granted by the barren letter of the civil law, forgetting that, by the more abounding and comprehensive helpfulness of the Christian religion, we are bound to give every offending brother or sister again and again, another chance, another opportunity to prove the sincerity of their purpose.

The Old Man's Lament.

BY J. O. BARNHART.

Once they climbed upon my knee,
Smoothed my cheek and kissed my brow;
Once they'd shout my face to see,
But they do not love me now.

Once my arms could scarcely hold
All the wealth of love I claimed;
Now their hand clasp is so cold,
As they scarcely breathe my name.

Once with joyous, bounding feet,
They would cross my threshold o'er;
Now they always shun the street,
And the pathway to my door.

I am weary all the day,
Since "grandma" was taken home,
And I sit alone and pray
For my summons, too, to come.

When in her cold hands they pressed
Roses from earth's fairest bowers,
They within her peaceful breast,
Left my heart beneath the flowers.

But I love the children still,
And I long for their embrace,
Whose smile once like sunshine filled
Every corner of the place.

May the children never know
All the anguish that I've borne,
Nor their children leave them so,
All forgotten and forlorn.

But ere long these clouds shall break,
And the darkness backward roll,
Then one gleam of heaven shall take
All the burden from my soul.

And in him I still shall trust,
Who was loneliest of the lone,
May he count me with the just,
When he comes to claim his own.

Noah.

BY D. C. REBER.

A RIGHTEOUS man's life is always a suitable subject to ponder, even though it was not lived in the modern age nor fashioned according to modern ideals. A life built in a godless age according to Divine direction, and used to glorify God and accomplish his purposes, is never out of date or unworthy of imitation by those who want to please him. In the days before the Flood, God had three faithful witnesses. Only three names out of many thousands are recorded who were essential factors in the Divine plan for about two thousand years. These were Abel, the martyr, Enoch, the seventh from Adam, and Noah, the preacher of righteousness.

The word "Noah" signifies rest or comfort. His great grandfather, a pious man and likewise a preacher for God (Jude 14, 15), was Enoch, who walked with God three hundred years and died about sixty-nine years before Noah was born. Methuselah was his grandfather, of whose character we know little, but whose years excel those of any other man. His father, Lamech, died five years before the Deluge. He was, presumably, a good man,—one who heard his son's preaching, but whom God did not destroy with the wicked. Noah, accordingly, belongs to the tenth generation from Adam. He is the first of whom it is said that he found grace in the eyes of the Lord. The account of his life covers four chapters in the Sacred Writings.

He belongs to the patriarchal age. God had not then, as yet, given man a written law, but appeare to his faithful ones in some manner, and spoke to them in unmistakable terms. Those that were God's people lived by faith and walked close to him who was thus very present to them. Paul says that Noah became "an heir of the righteousness which is according to faith."

"As the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be. They were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage." In Gen. 6, we have a portrayal of the antediluvian world in sin. The people were very corrupt, wild, self-willed, passionate, godless, in continual war and turmoil, and doing what was right in their own sight. Mankind had become so very wicked that it repented the Lord that he had made men on the earth, and he resolved to destroy them. But God usually warns before he strikes, and so in this case. A warning was to be given to the wicked world by preaching, and Noah was chosen by God to do it.

What about this man Noah? What about his fitness to preach? Was he a converted man himself? Did he know the God whom he was to proclaim? What about the people to whom the preacher was sent? Did they want a preacher? How did they receive him?

The Word says that Noah was a just man,—that is, a righteous man. He lived right before God and man. He was perfect in his generations. This does not mean that he was absolutely faultless or sinless, but, rather, that he was upright in his dealings with his fellow-man and that, according to the standard of the times in which he lived, he was, in righteousness, superior to all people then living. He was the best man at God's command to deliver his message to a godless age.

What further is said about his life? "He walked with God." How much is said in a few words! What does walking with God mean? It means constant communion and companionship with God. It means that God was his Guide in all things, and that he submitted to his authority. He had a strong faith and confidence in God's love and favor. He enjoyed continuous fellowship with him. His mind was conformed to God's mind; for how can two walk together unless they be agreed? His delight was in the Lord.

How long did he walk with God? Noah's record is fully equal in this respect to Enoch's, who had a three hundred years' walk with his God. Noah began to preach for God at the age of 480 years and preached for 120 years till the Flood came. We do not read of him preaching after the Flood, but he, no doubt, maintained his integrity to the end of life, which lasted 950 years, so that he walked with God half his life, or about 470 years. What a record of faithfulness!

Again, Noah was a man with a family,—having three sons. When the Flood occurred, these were about a hundred years old. Whether they repented under their father's preaching, we are not told. They were married and, together with their wives, they were saved from destruction through the ark, so that Noah's whole family was saved, which evidences fruits and rewards of his faith.

What did Noah preach? Where did he get his message and training for the work? He had no Bible to study, nor schools in which to receive training for the ministry. Paul says that Noah was warned of God of things not seen as yet, and was moved with godly fear to proclaim to the people God's purpose. Doubtless he preached repentance toward God as a necessary condition of escaping from the promised catastrophe. He likely also preached faith in Christ, who was to come to earth as the tabernacle of God with man. Noah possessed this faith in the Christ, who was to come as the Redeemer of mankind many centuries later, and God imputed to him for righteousness this faith in Christ.

How did Noah show his faith in God and Christ? In his own life he manifested faith by his fearing God and heeding him. His faith in the coming destruction of man from the earth was shown by his building the ark according to the exact specifications given him by God. Here he showed implicit obedience. He manifested marvelous patience by the length of time he preached,—one hundred and twenty years,—to a people that only mocked him and opposed his work. Surely the love for these wicked people, shown by Noah, makes him a type of Christ, who likewise was derided and rejected by the Jews, to whom he preached three years.

What were the results of this Divine patience and love, manifested by Noah? Did the people heed the warning and seek to escape God's wrath according to the appointed means, viz., the ark, provided for that purpose? No, there were no converts to cheer Noah. God's longsuffering was spurned and so God's will was executed at the appointed time.

The central event in the life of Noah was the Deluge, occurring about 1,655 years after Adam's creation and 2,349 years before Christ's birth. The disobedient met death by the floods of the waters that accumulated after it rained for forty days and forty nights.

The obedient,—only eight souls,—were preserved in the ark built by Noah's own hands. Judgment day came to the antediluvians, and found them unprepared to stand. It proved to be a great separation of the righteous from the unrighteous, a marvelous object lesson to the human family today that God is just, as well as merciful, and that he demands obedience and righteousness.

A good man, such as Noah, either converts or condemns wicked people. His faith condemned the unbelief of the antediluvians; his obedience condemned their contempt and rebellion. Noah was saved and his family, and all others were lost,—all this just as God had promised and provided. Did faith or works save Noah? It was neither alone. He had a faith that worked by love. Righteousness was imputed to him because of his faith which he proved by obedience to God's will.

So Noah was used by God as Adam had been. God gave man a fresh start under more favorable circumstances. The earth was repeopled. God made a covenant with Noah that he would not destroy the earth again with water, and as a sign of that promise set his bow in the sky.

In Ezek. 14: 14, 20, Noah is mentioned in another famous trio of God's faithful servants in postdiluvian times. This trio consists of Noah, Daniel and Job. These all were bright lights in a sin-benighted world. To Noah was given the task of connecting the antediluvian and postdiluvian worlds. This was his mission and he fulfilled it well. His life, after leaving the ark, was that of a husbandman, and seemingly not so successful as it had been as a preacher. This teaches that a man sent by God may be able to overcome all the scorn and opposition of a wicked people in God's strength, and not be able to meet successfully the personal temptations of secular pursuits in his own strength.

Peace.

BY CHELSEA BRINKLEY BARNETT.

IF is with the hope that some weary soul,—some one who is struggling with the cares of life,—may be attracted by this one short, but ever soothing, word "peace," and lifted to a higher plane, that these lines are written.

There is something about the word that attracts us. Let us notice the effect of words, as they come to us either by ear or eye. Some words bring to our hearts a feeling of sadness, such as hatred, spite, vice and cruelty, while the heart unconsciously cheers up at such words as love, forgiveness, holiness and kindness.

What is the world seeking for but peace? The man who labors nearly a whole life-time to lay up wealth, has a time in view when he can settle down, and have peace, with nothing to trouble him. The one who is ever seeking his own, thinks that these things will bring peace. But how few realize what real peace means and how it may be obtained!

There is no other way by which we may have this, than by obedience to the laws of the Great Prince of Peace. If we would obey him we would have peace rule everywhere. One of the great causes of trouble and strife is the selfish "seek-your-own" spirit. Let us take a look at the Master.

Have we ever noticed how well his life and his name correspond? He was Prince of Peace on the Sea of Galilee. He had only to speak to the storm and it was still. He was Prince of Peace when he spake through his servant and we are exhorted, in Philpp. 2, to "do nothing through faction or through vainglory but in lowliness of mind each counting other better than himself; not looking each of you to his own things but each of you also to the things of others."

What a happy world we could make if we would just look to the things of others, if we would seek the joy of others and they ours! Do we ever think how selfish we are, sometimes?

To have peace in the nation it must begin in the home and in the church. How it must grieve the Savior to see us seeking our own interests over some trifling things of earth, when he gave up all his glory, and came to the death of the cross, seeking our good. May his great, unselfish heart prompt us to live more for others, and we shall not only be blessed in the thought of serving our Master, but we shall reap joys in this life, for it is more blessed to give than to receive.

When we have obeyed God in bringing peace without, it will bring us peace within our hearts. But there is another side we wish to mention, which, it seems, so few of us have fully learned, and that is, not to worry. No better remedy can be found for this than Isa. 26: 3, "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee, because he trusteth in thee." Are our minds stayed on God? Do we fully trust him? A strict obedience to God and our hearts and motives pure, are the first steps in pursuit of peace. This should bring the desired quiet. But how often we find ourselves fussing and worrying because, perhaps, some one has misunderstood us or we are suffering wrongfully. Perhaps, after we have done our best with a task, and things seemingly are not coming out right, we wear ourselves out in a struggle to bring the desired results, forgetful that we can not do our best by human power, and that we must leave results with God. Supposing we are misunderstood and persecuted. After we have done all that is within our power, can we not leave the rest with God, who exercises such great care over us? "He that spared not his own Son but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not also with him freely give us all things?" His care for us is measured by the value he places on his Son.

Hannah was a woman who was misunderstood when she was in the temple, offering a silent prayer to God. As she was seen moving her lips, she was called a drunken woman. God is on our side and even though the world, for the present, may not understand us, if our hearts and deeds are pure, it will only be a matter of time until the truth shall stand out in all its strength and beauty, and falsehood shall be blown away as chaff before the wind.

Then let us endeavor to have this perfect peace by casting aside all worry and anxiety. Let us not try to move everything by our own puny arm of flesh, but look up to God in full trust, and we can go through life with a calm, sweet joy, leaving everything to the all-knowing, all-powerful and everywhere-present Father.

How to Increase the Membership of the Church.

BY PAUL MOHLER.

A GREAT deal has been said in the MESSENGER about our slow rate of increase. Different reasons are given. Perhaps a number of causes enter in, each hindering to a certain extent, and all together affecting the result a great deal.

I think all agree that the church would be much stronger if all of us had worked more faithfully, if more ministers had been willing to go out into the Lord's harvest-field and if those who were willing had been enabled to go by a more liberal support from the laity; so, when I say that one way to increase the membership of the church is to work harder and to make more sacrifice, no one will disagree.

Those who know the power of prayer will say that we have not prayed enough. Then, even when the minister has gone into the field with a liberal support, the church has not opened the way and held up his hands and brought the power of God to bear upon the sinner by earnest, faithful prayer. This is no small weakness, for we know that prayer was the means by which the apostles, yes even Christ himself, obtained the power to do a mighty work. Again and again Paul asks the church to pray for him and his great work. When we have learned how to pray and have given ourselves to earnest, patient, spiritual prayer, we shall be able to increase the membership of the church amazingly.

Every evangelist that goes forth to sow the seed finds one great obstacle to be, the unfaithful lives of the members. In every congregation there are members that are stumbling-blocks in the way of the outside sinner. Often the half-hearted Christianity of the whole congregation stands in the way. Many and many a fine, clean man would have joined the church if he had not seen the members fuss and quarrel among themselves over trifles. Many a sinner would accept Christianity if he really saw that the church members were vitally interested in it. But when they go to church and see the members coming in late, going to sleep over the sermon and then filling the house of God with clamor of talk and laughter, crop talk and neighborhood gossip, joking and teasing, he can not be expected to care much for that sort of religion.

It does seem to me that a worldly-minded, money-grasping, pleasure-seeking congregation has a good deal of "cheek" to ask a real evangelist to come into its borders to convert the outsiders. What it needs is a revivalist to convert the church-members. When our revivalists learn to begin their work on the members of the church and keep working with them until they are living real earnest Christian lives, the way will open for the salvation of the outsiders in great numbers. I had rather build up the spiritual life of a congregation, where necessary, than baptize new converts, for if the church is right, the converts will come without a revivalist.

There is one thing that is credited with keeping so many out of the church,—the high order of living required of new converts from the start. We expect them to stop short off from drinking, profanity, all immoralities, fashionable dressing, lodges, etc. That looks to so many people as being just a little too much, and so they hang around the door of the church for years, longing to enter in but unwilling to pay the price. Some of us are eager to let those people in and then to bring them into line afterwards. Some of us are satisfied that if the church should do that, our membership would increase quite rapidly, but I am not so sure of it.

I am quite sure that if the door of the church should be opened now to all such people, a lot of them would flock in, but then what? We all agree that one of the greatest obstacles in the way of many sinners is the weak member in the church. Would not our opening the door to so many half-converted people just give us that many more obstacles?

I think the time is at hand when the people who want religion, will want the genuine article, when those who come to Christ will want to join the best church and when those who don't want that will not join any. I, for one, do not believe that to open the doors of the church to the half-converted would materially increase our membership, and I am sure it would lower our spiritual standard so far that we could never hope to be the great body of consecrated, world-saving followers of the Lord that I believe the Lord intends for us to be.

Should we be discouraged because we have grown so slowly while others have grown so fast? I think not. We should probably be ashamed of all that lack of progress that comes from lack of faith and lack of work and sacrifice. But we should not be discouraged. We should rather be encouraged to think that we have done so well in competition with so many churches that offer "salvation" on such easy terms. The fact that other churches have grown to be so great by teaching only a part of the truth and living but a part of the Christian life is no proof that it will always be so. The growth of such churches is being rapidly checked. The folly of half-way Christianity is becoming too evident. People have tired of it and no longer listen to its exponents. Perhaps of the Lord has let them run their course and come to the logical conclusion that the world may learn the lesson, once and for all, that diluted Christianity is like any other adulterated article,—a sham and a humbug.

How shall the Church of the Brethren increase her membership? By living and preaching with might and main the whole Gospel to the whole world, praying in the Holy Spirit.

The Text.

BY NATHAN MARTIN.

THE word text, meaning a portion of literature upon which a discourse is constructed, comes to us from a Latin word meaning "to weave." At least two distinct views obtain as to the method of derivation, and its adoption in its present usage. The one is that the term came figuratively to mean to put together, to construct, to compose. The other is that the Word of God is a woven texture, given to man to unravel, so that he may see its real beauty and deal it out to a lost world.

The practice of taking a text for the groundwork of a sermon is not new. It has the sanction of Jesus Christ himself. In Luke 4: 16-29, we have the account of his first sermon. It was preached in the synagogue at Nazareth, and the text was taken from Isa. 61: 1, 2. In Acts 1: 15-22, we have an account of a sermon preached by Peter, based largely on Psa. 109: 8. Again, in Acts 2: 14-36, Peter uses the familiar passage from Joel 2: 28-32. Coming down to the history of the early church, we find the church fathers habitually speaking on passages of considerable length, devoting themselves largely to exposition. As the church approached the Dark Ages, with their decline and decay, quotations from uninspired literature were often substituted for scripture.

A text, properly handled, will always contain to a greater or lesser extent the kernel or seed-thought of the discourse. The discourse then will be simply a development of the text, explaining it, illustrating it, and applying its teachings. The words of Francis Wayland, "The sermon must be the text expanded, and the text the sermon contracted."

In the selection of a text a number of considerations figure. The preacher must estimate the average mind of his congregation. The occasion and the purpose of the discourse are factors worthy of consideration. In connected work with a congregation, the choosing of texts with reference to recent texts used gives a continuity to the teaching which is both interesting and profitable. The Spirit-filled minister may always depend upon it that the text which impresses him is the text God would have him use. Once impressed with a given line of thought, the text which most plainly and simply incorporates it, is the text for himself and his congregation. Instead of habitually burrowing into the depths of the Word in quest of the odd and the unexpected, much more might be accomplished by emphasizing, as did the apostles in their day, the great fundamental principles of the Christian religion and life. The minister who finds himself constrained to employ themes more adapted to the lecture platform or the theatre, thereby admits that for him the old story of redemption has lost both its interest and its power.

The text selected, a careful examination of the author's evident meaning is sought, with a view of transmitting it to the hearer. This involves not only the grammar and rhetoric of the text, but the setting of the text, which may include a few verses, several chapters, sometimes the entire book or letter in which the text is located. Much light is often found in a study of the manners and customs of peoples and individuals, as taught by the Book itself. Another important help in ascertaining the author's intention is found in the consultation of parallel and illustrative passages, always throwing the light of the Book upon itself and making it its own interpreter. By applying these principles to his study, and consequently with a "thus said the Lord" for every point in his discourse, the preacher feels an authority which makes for power in its delivery.

Many objections have been brought against the use of a text for the basis of a discourse, usually by men who were either ignorant of the riches of the Word or unwilling to be governed by its teachings. The practice has, however, many advantages. In addition to recognizing and honoring the divine Word, it adds a tone of sacredness to the work. The preacher gives the impression that he is not simply ridding himself of some pet theories of his own, but that he has tried carefully to know the mind of the Spirit, and is now trying just as conscientiously to teach that same mind to his dying hearers. By the use of texts, furthermore, the teaching of the Word is perpetuated,—the great hope of men and nations. Instead of forbidding variety, as the objectors propose, a careful use of texts for all occasions and purposes gives the utmost variety possible.

"Speak Not Evil One of Another, Brethren."

BY CHAS. M. YEAROUT.

"Slander, that worst of poisons, ever finds
An easy entrance to ignoble minds."

"Wherefore laying aside all malice, and all guile, and hypocrisies, and envies, and all evil speakings" (1 Peter 2: 1).

MALICE and envy lead to guile and hypocrisy, and these lead to evil speakings,—a clear manifestation of the corruption of the hearts of those filled with these weapons of the devil. "For out of the abundance of the heart, the mouth speaketh." The heart must be filled with evil, before the tongue can speak evil of a brother or sister. "By thy words thou shalt be condemned, and by thy words thou shalt be justified."

Slander is a game of the devil, by which he seeks to destroy the character of his victims. Of all the tricks and deceptions of the wily Satan, none are more ghastly and deadly than circulating slanderous reports against an innocent woman. The slanderer scandalizes and blackens the fairest character. The woman, whose character is besmirched and defamed, has been worse than murdered, and would be better off in her grave, "where the wicked cease to trouble, and the weary are at rest."

No wonder God says: "Whoso privily slandereth his neighbor, him will I cut off" (Psa. 101: 5). "He that uttereth a slander, is a fool" (Prov. 10: 18).

It is very evident from the teachings of God's Word, that the Christian can not and will not speak evil of any one, nor circulate evil reports about any one, but will rather endeavor to help and encourage the oppressed, and try to convert the sinner, whether in the church or out of the church. "He that converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins" (James 5: 20). Upon the other hand, to speak evil of a person, and circulate evil reports about him or her, is to discourage them in their good resolutions and intentions to do right, and arouse the natural inclination to retaliation and evil.

How many good-meaning people, whose intentions were to do right, have been discouraged and destroyed, by the circulation of evil reports against them by slanderous tongues! James says: "The tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity: so is the tongue among our members, that it defileth the whole body, and setteth on fire the course of nature; and it is set on fire of hell" (James 3: 6). A purified heart leads to purity of life, and as a result following, the speech and words will be pure. No character will be tarnished or blackened by a tongue governed by a purified heart in which the Holy Spirit dwells. "An ungodly man diggeth up evil (from his evil heart): and in his lips there is a burning fire." "Frowardness is in his heart, he deviseth mischief continually; he soweth discord" (Prov. 16: 27; 6: 14). "If any man among you SEEM to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain" (James 1: 26).

There are no circumstances or conditions, under which a Christian is justifiable in circulating reports that are damaging to the character of any person, whether in the church or out of it.

It would be a good thing if those inclined to circulate and peddle slanderous reports, would follow and practice the Golden Rule: "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them" (Matt. 7: 12). No man,—if he could avoid it,—would have another to circulate evil reports about himself, wife, or any member of his family, therefore, according to the Golden Rule, he should not, and will not, circulate evil reports about another man or any member of his family.

Lend a helping hand of sympathy and encouragement to those who are laboring under the weight and fire of the slanderous tongue. The fiendish darts of the traducer are piercing them, though the enemy is invisible. He does his work privily; he is a secret agent of the adversary. O my brother, my sister, those poor slandered ones need sympathy and encouragement. You do not know the struggle and fight they are making to ward off and overcome the wounds of the poisoned arrows of the unbridled tongue. I have seen the tears, like great raindrops, fall upon the cheeks. The bosom heaves with untold agony, the flood gates of the soul are opened, and the deep sorrow, like a stream of lava, is flowing out. The blow was too hard, the sorrow inflicted was too great, the heart ceases to beat. Hard-hearted, debased slanderer, look upon that lifeless form! Are you satisfied? O, the depth of thy cruel work!

The above picture is not overdrawn or exaggerated; it has happened thousands of times. The object of the slanderer is destruction. "But the tongue of the wise is health: his discourse is sound and wholesome in itself, and tends to the comfort and benefit of others." Jesus himself set a good example for his followers. When the crowd of scandal-mongers cried out against a helpless woman, Christ stooped down and wrote in the dust, as though he heard them not. He did not even lend an interested ear to their scandal, but finally said to them: "He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her." The conviction of their own corrupt natures was so vividly impressed upon them by the Savior's words, that, commencing at the oldest, they went out one by one, until all were gone. Jesus, being left alone with the woman, said unto her: "Woman, where are those thine accusers? hath no man condemned thee? She said, No man, Lord. And Jesus said unto her, Neither do I condemn thee: go, and sin no more" (John 8: 3-11).

While these men were bent on the destruction of this helpless woman, Jesus gave no encouragement to their wicked design, but put the traducers to flight, and reached forth a helping hand of love and kindness to the helpless one. All those who are maligned and slandered are helpless, because the work is accomplished in a secret, scheming, undermining way, and becomes chronic before the victim hears of it. The design of those who circulate evil reports about another, is to injure and cast down, and destroy their power for usefulness. It is, in fact, worse than murder to the poor traduced ones.

If a report comes to us, that is damaging to the character of a brother or sister, we should strongly urge the one telling us to desist in circulating this evil report. Then the member, alleged to be at fault, should have a brotherly visit, informing him of the report. The object should be to help the member. If the report is found true, "let those who are spiritual restore such one in the spirit of meekness, considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted."

By speaking evil one of another, or circulating evil reports, the world gets hold of it, and uses it against the church and her important work of soul saving. Concerning the failures and mistakes of members, the following is good advice: "Tell it not in Gath, publish it not in the streets of Askelon: lest the daughters of the Philistines rejoice, lest the daughters of the uncircumcised triumph" (2 Sam. 1: 20).

Often the poisoned shafts of shame and defamation have been hurled against members by the tongues of those upon whom they looked and whom they trusted as being intimate friends. "For it was not an enemy that reproached me; then I could have borne it: neither was it he that hated me that did magnify himself against me; then I would have hid myself from him: but it was thou, a man mine equal, my guide, and mine acquaintance; we took sweet counsel together, and walked unto the house of God in company" (Psa. 55: 12-14; 41: 7-9).

Jesus was betrayed by a hypocritical disciple, a companion, one with whom he associated, one that accompanied him in his ministerial labors; but Jesus says of that man: "It had been better for him, if he had never been born." There are still some Judases in the church today. We think it not strange if an enemy hurls the bolts of slander into our backs, but we expect better things of a companion in Christ. We should speak evil of no one, neither in the church nor out of it, but should do good to all men, being true representatives of the heavenly Master. Christ died for all, redeemed all, and all belong to him by right of purchase. To vilify and defame the character of any one is to manifest an unchristian spirit, and to be guilty of defaming the character of those for whom Christ suffered, bled and died. "If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body" (James 3: 2; Psa. 34: 13).

Why?

BY J. C. FLORA.

THERE are a great many things in this life that we cannot understand.

A young man starts out in life with the brightest of prospects and a noble ambition to accomplish something that will be a credit to himself, a benefit to others, and an honor to God. His health fails and his plans are frustrated, while many others, who started out with him in life, but with ambitions to work only for self, go on, accomplish their ends, and are seemingly highly favored by the Hand of Providence. We are made to wonder why this should be so.

Again; a faithful, devoted young minister or missionary, who is giving his life and his all to the service of the Master, is suddenly stricken by death, right in the prime of his usefulness, while many others, who seem very little, if any, benefit to the cause of Christ, are allowed to live to a ripe old age. We wonder why.

A darling babe enters the home and gladdens the hearts of father and mother, and all who come in contact with it, by its innocent little life and its angelic smiles, only to be snatched away in a short time by the cruel hand of death, and again we wonder why.

A true child of God is sick. He has great faith in God's power to heal, and calls for the elders to receive the anointing. He also prays very earnestly for God to heal him, and many other Christians also pray for him, and yet he does not receive the blessing, and we wonder why.

A dear friend or relative is unsaved. We are very anxious to have him come to Christ, and often pray for him. He has many opportunities, but does not improve them, and death finally overtakes him unprepared, and why should it be so?

Yes, there are many things that we can not understand now, but let us hope on and pray on, and trust him who "knoweth all things" and "doeth all things well." Perhaps, when we get to where God and all his holy angels are, we will know and understand why all these things are so. Paul says, "Then we shall know even as we are known."

"We'll trust in him who knoweth best,
Though sorrow's billows o'er us flow,
We'll meekly bow to his behest,
Sometime, sometime, we'll surely know."

The Resurrection.

BY H. A. STAHL.

THE resurrection of our Lord, on Easter morning, is a pledge of our resurrection. It comes to us, in our dread of death and in our hopelessness, as the signs of spring come to winter-enthralled, ice-bound nature. It drives away our gloom. It gives joy and gladness. It fills the despairing heart with hope. It substitutes the certainty of immortality for the paralyzing fear of annihilation.

It is terrible to die. We stand appalled at the thought of bidding farewell to everything that enters into and surrounds our existence. Our ears will be deaf to all sounds. Our eyes will look their last upon the fair face of earth and sky. Our hearts will cease to throb. Our nerves will no longer thrill with pleasure or pain. Understanding and reasoning and recollection will be at an end. Fear and love and hate, the emotions, the sensibilities and the will, have exhausted their powers. Not even in our "ashes will live their wonted fires." The light will go out. The hearthstone of our life will be cold. "He is not," will be said of each one of us.

No wonder men shrink back from this prospect, and shudder, as they stand by the dark river that divides time from eternity. It is not strange that they name the messenger, who summons them hence, the "King of Terror." It was, no doubt, the instinctive dread of death, which led thoughtful men in all ages to give the most favorable interpretation to all the indications of the continued existence of the soul beyond the realms of sense. Homer describes the visit of Ulysses to the place of shades, where he met and talked with his heroic companions who had fallen on the blood-stained banks of the Simois and Scamander, and around the fateful walls of Troy. Socrates said: "I shall fly far away; nothing of me will be left behind, but if you are able to catch up with me, or happen upon me anywhere, bury me as seems good to you." Plato taught the immortality of the soul. The Romans spoke of death as a departing from life. The Old Testament Jews believed that if a man died he should live again. But what proof had these people that they were right? May it not be said of them that "the wish was father to the thought"?

There is a large element of uncertainty in their ideas upon the subject of the future life. They are "blank imaginings of a creature moving about in worlds not realized." High instincts they may be, but they rest upon no foundation of Divine revelation or clearly-ascertained and indisputable fact. They suggest possibilities and faint hopes, but they fall short of producing faith or certain assurance. But Christ, in his doctrine, and afterwards in his resurrection, brought life and immortality to light. He taught with authority. He said: "We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen." His words were clear and distinct about a future life, and they were made indisputable by his showing himself alive after he had been dead (Luke 24: 36-43; John 20: 19; 1 Cor. 15: 5).

We may search the whole mass of ancient and modern poetry and philosophy; and it will not be an unpleasing or altogether profitless task. That pathway is decked with rare flowers. Many an inspiring vista opens to the traveler's view. He even catches a glimpse, here and there, of the reflections cast upon this life by that beyond the grave. But that is all. We must say to Christ, at least, as did the early disciples: "Lord, to whom should we go? Thou only hast words of eternal life."

Christ "overcame death, and him that had the power of death, and delivered them, who through fear of death, were all their lifetime subject to bondage." The risen Christ is the ground of our faith, the foundation of our certainty, and we shall live forever. He is "the resurrection and the life."

There is no death; death has been conquered; and the death of the body now is just an incident in our life itself, which is eternal. The great thing now is to be in Christ, to take him as our Savior, and then we shall never see death. Now, since Jesus died and rose again, we should never think of our departed friends as lying in the grave.

He lives! He lives! That is the truth for you all, through life, in trial and difficulty and peril. He lives! He lives! You can consult him any time; you can have his help and strength at any moment. He is the resurrection and the life. He is in heaven and diligently intercedes for each one.

May we hear, live and prepare to answer his intercession that, when the mortal body lays itself down to rest, the eternal body may take its flight to Jesus in that heavenly paradise and dwell with him in that resurrected state through all the ages of eternity. How man should rejoice, in learning through his blessed Word, that we shall be resurrected and live with him in the prepared mansions of the Father's house, at his right hand, through all the cycles of eternity.

May we see the resurrection more fully in our lives, and so live that we may rejoice in the resurrection!

At St. Peter's on St. Peter's Day.

BY J. E. MILLER.

IT was my second visit to this church of all churches. I had seen it in picture, read of it in books, and heard others tell about it, but it must be seen to be appreciated. I will not tell about its incomparable mosaics, its massive proportions, its numerous altars, its costly decorations. The guide book will give all this, and the guide will tell you all about the wonderful miracles connected with each statue and relic.

A party of ten of us were doing Rome. Among them was one Catholic girl. She alone was granted an audience with the Pope. For this special occasion a prescribed color of dress,—black or white,—was required. That morning the Pope received about one hundred in the party. One woman had the black dress and waist, but it was a lace waist. When she appeared for inspection, she failed to pass "muster" until she changed to a waist that covered her person. It seems that the Pope has a better idea of propriety than some women.

St. Peter's Day is a holiday,—but not fully a holyday,—in Italy. Mass was said in the Cathedral and some of the best music of the year was rendered. Thousands upon thousands of people were coming and going in two great streams. In all that vast multitude I saw not one woman with bare head. Devout Catholics who did not wear their regular head dress had on one of a large variety of veils for that occasion. You know the Catholic Church does not want its sisters to appear in public services with head uncovered, and they have Bible for it, too.

The walls were draped for the occasion. St. Peter was robed in all his glory. His finger sparkled with a million-dollar ring. His entire outfit was the best that money could buy. How different from the time when he had neither silver nor gold to give to a poor beggar. But he gave him more. A dense crowd, old, young, weak, strong, devout, thoughtless, continued to pass before the statue of Peter, each pausing to kiss his toe. This is a special act of piety and cuts purgatory short by four days for each kiss. I noticed that the great majority performed this act with great reverence. It is to be hoped that they were blessed in it.

At the entrances stood men with pouches to receive contributions. That none might forget they kept rattling the money in these bags. Nor were they the only ones looking for money. Pickpockets swarmed and had a rich harvest. One man, bound for Jerusalem, lost all he had. Some had their pockets cut open. Others found their hand-bags cut and valuables removed. But this is the rule everywhere, in a large crowd.

The burning candles glimmered everywhere. The rich music could be heard in all parts of the cathedral. The present Pope does not favor as large a choir as his predecessor, saying that it partakes too much of the theatrical. The reading of mass by the cardinal and the chanting by the priests could be heard near at hand but not understood. If all that is expended in pomp and show at St. Peter's were given to the poor, instead of being taken from them, what a difference there would be in many homes, both in Italy and throughout the world!

But I must not criticise. If what I am spending this summer in travel were given for the spread of the Gospel and the relief of the poor, that, too, might make some small difference.

The Real Purpose of Life.

BY JAS. A. SELL.

MANY of us believe that when the measure of our years is filled up, and we bid a long farewell to this world, there is another state of existence. We indulge the sweet hope that we shall spend eternity in some fairer world, where we shall be forever free from the annoyances that rob the present life of very much of its pleasure.

We know but little of the world to which we are going. It is shrouded behind a veil that only death can part, and those who enter never return to give any information. One thing is very certain,—our virtues only can be taken with us. Our weakness, defects, and all our material developments remain.

We do not know what our condition would have been, had it not been for the fall of man in Eden, but since that occurrence our mission is to subdue the forces of nature and to earn our bread by means of sweat and toil. We have submitted rather gracefully to our fate, and in serving out our penalty, we have turned our punishment into pleasure. We have compelled nature to tell us many of her secrets, and we have tamed, chained and harnessed many of her forces that are extremely destructive in their unrestrained state. We have made them serve us not only in securing our bread, but in giving us such a handsome surplus that we have set our hearts upon it, and have united in a mad rush and scramble to get still more, as though our stay in this world were to be prolonged indefinitely, or as if these material things were to be taken with us, to stand just so much to our credit in that land to which we are going.

We seem to forget that our vital duty deals with the realm of the spiritual, in which the development of the soul and intellect is the main object. These shall qualify the possessor for a life of usefulness here, and secure a passport into that to which we are going, where the material gains of this world will be of no avail, and only the graces of the Spirit shall abide.

The more concerned we are about the material side of life, the more reluctant we feel in approaching that mysterious gateway which we call death. We are thus making our life here below a bondage, and lessening our chances for happiness in that state of existence which is to come.

As we search our hearts, we find many noble impulses that have never been translated into actual deeds, and then, too, many promising lives have been wrecked by moments of folly. So, if we are not careful in making up the book that is a true record of our deeds, there will be but little to our account in securing a right to eternal life.

The Master Teacher compared the reception of truth into the mind to the sowing of seeds. When the cares of this life and the deceitfulness of riches crowd in upon the soul, it has the same effect upon a fruitful life that thorns have upon the growing grain. Christ says plainly, "They choke the word and it becomes unfruitful."

Another great teacher said, "Godliness with contentment is great gain. For we brought nothing into this world and it is certain we can carry nothing out. And having food and raiment let us be therewith content. But they that will be rich fall into temptations and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition. For the love of money is the root of all evil: which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows."

WASHINGTON CITY, D. C.

Our Children's Day program was well rendered. It showed careful and painstaking preparation on the part of the teachers and pupils. The Missionary Society recently gave us a program on "China," in which we had first a talk on "Chinese History and Civilization," followed by a discussion of "The Prevailing Religions." The program was closed with a talk on "China's Needs and Christianity's Opportunity." Our council was held July 3. Bro. W. D. Keller presided at the meeting. Much business was pleasantly disposed of. The parsonage soliciting committee reported pledges amounting to over $450, and we hope to reach the $500 mark before the work is completed in our own congregation, after which we propose soliciting in the Eastern District of Maryland, in pursuance of permission, granted to that end, by the District Meeting. Two vacancies on the board of trustees were filled by the election of Brethren D. V. Shaver and Levi Biser. Bro. D. E. Miller was reelected for three years on the permanent committee; to arrange for the securing of a pastor and other ministerial assistance when necessary. Bro. Ralph Swigart was chosen to fill the unexpired term as assistant secretary. As previously reported, we expect to have Bro. Frantz with us this fall. We also hope to have Bro. J. M. Blough visit us before he leaves for India.

THE ROUND TABLE

Books and Tracts.

BY D. HAYS.

It is to be supposed that every family in the Brotherhood has a library of some sort, and it is to be taken for granted that every Sunday-school has a library, or contemplates the securing of a number of suitable books for a library. To supply these families and these Sunday-schools would require many books. It is not saying too much that a copy of every good book, written and published by the Brethren, should be found in each home and in every Sunday-school library.

The Sunday-school Board, appointed by last Conference, under Article V, Section 1, are required to "observe the needs of the church and the world, and provide plans for the faithful study of God's Word, and the propagation of its doctrines and truth through the Sunday-school work of the church."

Would it not be prudent, as an initial step, to urge the use of the books and tracts that have been permitted to accumulate on the publishers' hands? We certainly have some good books on doctrine, though it is to be confessed that we have not reached the point of perfection in presenting the distinctive doctrines of the church. We trust, however, that, by the use of the means we have at hand now, we shall be able to do more efficient work in the near future.

There is a call for a tract suitable for city mission work. It is felt that on some of the most vital issues of Christian faith we have no tract available to meet the needs of the city fields. We trust that our brethren who see the needs now existing,—and especially those who feel the necessity of tracts true to the distinctive doctrines for which we stand as a church,—will write a tract, or tracts, meeting the requirements of present-day conditions in the cities. Other things being equal, what is good for the cities will be helpful in the country. These facts are gleaned in part from an article in the June Missionary Visitor by Bro. Barnhart.

Then the Peace Committee is called upon to do the very best thing for the cause of peace,—a very precious doctrine of the church indeed. And what better can be done, at this time, than to place copies of our peace books and tracts into the hands of men and women,—thoughtful, open-minded and appreciative?

The Limit Reached.

BY JAMES M. NEFF.

We thought so before we tried it—that ranch life in California would mean more than play and pastime, but I suppose the best way to know a thing is to know it by experience. And now wife and I have had some experience and we know.

No matter how hard we may have worked during the day, in the garden and orchard, when evening comes the cows must be brought from the pasture and milked, the calves and pigs and chickens must be fed and put to bed, and everything on the place, down to the dog and cat, must receive some attention. And night after night we fall into bed, our strength so completely exhausted that there is nothing else we could do.

But then the rest that follows,—O, it is so sweet! The breeze that all day long has been sweeping up from the sea turns at night and comes down the canyons from the snowdrifts that still lie on the mountains higher up. And with nothing but a wire screen between us and out-of-doors we get the full benefit of these delightful nights, and rise in the morning so thoroughly refreshed that the toil of yesterday is entirely forgotten.

And, as applied to Christian service, I have been thinking about this matter of reaching the limit of our strength,—just working till we can not work any more. It was said of Dorcas that she "was full of good works and alms deeds." By that I understand that she often toiled in the service of others till she could not toil any longer,—she just had to stop and rest. Again and again has the true servant of God thrown himself into the work of the Lord and persisted in it till the limit of his strength has been reached. And I wonder if just such service here sometimes is not necessary to the highest enjoyment of the rest of heaven hereafter? Of course, there is much that could be said of your faithfulness in God's service, but did you ever reach the limit of your strength?

Homiletic Hints.

Paul's Earnest Longing to Take the Message of Salvation to Rome (Rom. 1: 11-17).

BY E. B. HOFF.

Paul, as a servant and apostle, set apart unto the Gospel (1: 1).

The gospel message is concerning Jesus the Divine and human (1: 3, 4).

By the grace of Jesus, Paul is saved and appointed an apostle for the salvation of the nations (1: 5; cf. Acts 26: 16-18).

The grace given to Paul has made him exceedingly responsible. In fact, it has put him in great debt and under great obligations (1: 11, 14). So keenly did he feel this that he often attempted to visit Rome but was always hindered by the abundance of his work in the East (1: 13 and 15: 22, 23). Paul is willing to do his best. He will carry the Gospel even to Rome, the great capital of the heathen world (1: 15). This he afterwards did, even though he did it in the chains of a Roman prisoner (Acts 28: 23-31).

What makes Paul so faithful and brave is the fact that the Gospel which he has to carry is the power of God unto salvation to all believing humanity (1: 16). It contains the revelation of the righteousness of God which means wrath to the wicked (1: 18, ff.), and salvation to the faithful (3: 21, ff.).

When we really experience within ourselves the saving power of the Gospel, we want every one else to have it, and we begin to long to carry the message even to the ends of the world. We become brave and will hazard every danger in the face of our God-given duty.

A Moral from the Storm-Tossed Oak.

BY D. H. ZIGLER.

Close by the home where Eld. Peter Nead lived, in Rockingham County, Va., stood for many, many years a very large oak tree. Its majestic stature and symmetrical proportions were the admiration of all who saw it. Hard by its base, beneath its shadowy branches, gushed forth a stream of bright, sparkling water. This was a favorite resort for Eld. Nead when his day's work in his tannery was done.

At that time it was customary for the employer to give, in addition to the wages contracted, a morning or an evening dram. When this was asked of him by those he employed, he said, "Come up beneath my great oak. There is a fountain of the purest and the best."

Years have rolled by and the good man has long since gone to the reward of the faithful. The hand of decay, likewise, has made inroads on the great tree, and recently, before an unusual wind, it toppled and fell. The fountain, in time, may cease to flow, but the lesson so simply, yet so beautifully, taught will be handed from generation to generation, and shall not die.

Temptations.

BY IDA M. HELM.

So long as we live in the world we will meet with temptations. When we have accepted Christ, the presence of sin becomes bitter to us, but we are not exempt from liability to sin, through weakness. "Sin is not dead in us, but we may be dead to sin, so that it shall not bear the deadly fruits of sin." Satan tempted our Lord and he will tempt us. He is ever holding before us glistening baubles to tempt us, as he held before Mother Eve the deceptive fruit. Though we be tempted, we need not sin. Temptation may reveal to us our dependence on God. He is ever near, seeking to help us if we rely on him, and in his strength we can overcome temptation. Paul says: "God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that which ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way of escape, that ye may be able to bear it."

He who brings no friendship, finds no friends, and he who sees no beauty in the world, feels no beauty in his own breast. Misanthropy is madness. Philanthropy is philosophy spelled another way. Pessimism is pestilence. Hopefulness is health and happiness and heaven. What men have they give, and what they sow they reap; the fruit reveals and classifies the tree; the stream declares the fountain. The soul reveals its nature by its intuitive selections and then grows more deeply moulded by the influence of the choice. We smile at the smiling stranger and frown at the frowning one; and enlarge our power to smile or frown by so doing.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS' TOPIC

Paul Lived His Own Precepts.

Acts 20: 17-35; Rom. 12: 2.

For Sunday Evening, July 30, 1911.

I. The World Says: "Work to get;" Paul says, "Work to give" (v. 35; Eph. 4: 28).

II. The World Says: "Look out for self;" Paul says, "Look not . . . on your own" (Philpp. 2: 4).

III. The World Says: "Pay in his own coin;" Paul says, "Overcome . . . with good" (1 Cor. 10: 24).

IV. His Admonition Is, "Take Heed "—(1) "To yourselves"—to your hearts, your lives, and to your example (v. 28; 1 Tim. 4: 12, 16). (2) "To all the flock" (v. 28)—the poorest, the weakest; especially the lambs. Fold them all securely. (3) "Feed the church" (v. 28)— it is very precious; purchased at great cost (v. 28; John 21: 15; 1 Pet. 1: 18, 19).

V. Paul Commends the Brethren—(1) "To God and the word of his grace" (v. 32). (2) "To an inheritance among the sanctified" (v. 32; Eph. 1: 18; Rom. 15: 16; John 17: 17).

Note.—The standard of Paul's ministry was an unwearied service to the Lord and to the people (vs. 20, 27). It was whole-hearted consecration to duty (v. 24; 21: 13; Rom. 8: 35).

Prayer in This Meeting.—Pray for power to do the work that God has given you. If you have no special work that seems God-given, pray him to show you your work. Pray for guidance and wisdom in the decisions of life. Every day is a decision day as to something; pray for the help of God in all your decisions.

PRAYER MEETING

Character and Courtesy.

1 Peter 3: 8-17.

For Week Beginning July 30, 1911.

1. Character Is Power.—Let it be remembered that there is a difference between character and reputation. What man thinks we are is reputation; WHAT WE REALLY ARE IS CHARACTER. Reputation is our standing before the world; character is our true stature in the sight of God. Character, in its most exalted sense, has its foundation in Christ. "As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him: rooted and built up in him, and established in the faith, as ye have been taught, abounding therein with thanksgiving" (Col. 2: 6, 7).

2. The Gentle Art of Christian Courtesy.—Amid the turmoils of the busy arena of life we need the soothing influences of Christian courtesy,—the noblest emanation of a consecrated character. The apostle would have us remember: (1) There must be ONENESS OF MIND, and that must be based upon the mind of Jesus,—like him in humility, self-forgetfulness, and regard for others. (2) There must be COMPASSION, such as was the keynote of Christ's life here below. Such a disciple seeks the alleviation of want and suffering everywhere, for, like his Master, he has a heart of tender pity (Eph. 4: 32).

3. The Glorious Reward.—We have, in 1 Peter 3: 12, the blessed assurance: "For the eyes of the Lord are over the righteous." God takes note of all that we do, and from the judgment seat of Christ we shall receive the final reward. Trifling things, as they appear to us, are great in his sight. Little acts of kindness,—unthought of afterwards,—are remembered in the courts of heaven. Unselfish concern for the welfare of others is the golden key that unlocks the storehouse of heaven's treasure (Matt. 25: 34-40).

HOME AND FAMILY

The Conqueror.

The barkeeper's wife has a sealskin coat,
But mine has an old plaid shawl;
She has jewels for finger and ear and throat,
But mine has none at all.
Her only ring I stole one night
And pawned for a poisoned drink!
Oh, mother of mine! Brink back the light
Of youth and the strength to think!

The barkeepg's child has books and toys,—
My children have want and woe;
They never have dwelt in the world of joys
The barkeeper's child may know.
At a tiny doll my baby's eye
Would dance and her heart would swell,
But I've always taken the price to buy
A cup of the liquid hell.

Oh, the girl I wooed in the good, glad years,—
Whose pure lips touched with mine,—
I swear to banish her bitter tears
In the strength of a love divine!
And hearts so broken and sad, today,
With new-found bliss shall thrill,
For the devil of rum I'll cast away,—
God helping me, I will!

At Nightfall.

BY ELIZABETH D. ROSENBERGER.

"For the shadows of the evening are stretched out" (Jer. 6: 4).

THE day had been hard, filled with heavy tasks that crushed the spirit and left one hopeless and weary. On the morrow the same dreary round of drudgery must be gone over and the day after would find us doing the same duties. The prospect was discouraging. And as the sun was setting, we went out into the country for a walk. We wanted to forget the little things that had vexed us through the day. The outdoor world,—with its dew on the grass, its ships with white sails in the sky of blue, its singing streams,—would bring new thoughts and desires, and help us to regain courage and good cheer.

We read that Isaac "went out in the field to meditate at the eventide," and it seems to us that it is a most helpful thing to do. We need privacy and time to meditate, in order to adjust accounts. Body and soul can rest a bit, and think things out, and perhaps find the key which fits our perplexities, and opens the way to better things. We can say with one of old, "We have left undone the things we should have done, and done those things which we should not have done," and the result is mental confusion and a resolve to reform.

Oh, yes, we've been masquerading a trifle. We've been putting on airs for the benefit of new friends. We have been pretending to be better off than we really are and that has made it hard to balance our domestic accounts. After cleaning house we bought some new furniture and rugs. We did not really need them but our neighbor has been refurnishing, and we were ashamed of our humble household goods. Sitting here, in our old clothes, we see clearly that foolish vanity has been our undoing. We have been fretting and worrying when we should have been glad and happy through these beautiful days of early summer.

No one seems to be passing. We are sitting under a maple tree, a little back from the road, in a meadow which has a narrow valley lying between low hills. The valley slopes down towards a little stream. Buttercups and daisies are blooming on the hillside. The sun is westering fast, the water sings a pleasant song beneath, and nature speaks of peace and rest. Unconsciously our thoughts revert to Gray's "Elegy," and we softly repeat,

"The ploughman homeward plods his weary way,
And leaves the world to darkness and to me."

And as we realize that we are in the old meadow alone, we feel with Gray, how "all the air a solemn stillness holds." Once more we begin to meditate on the days that are past and gone. We wonder whether we are getting all we deserve of good fortune and good times in this world. What a childhood, what dreams, what intuitions we had! Then, later, what initiative, what amazing temptations! Had any one ever the like? Then the lessons of disappointment, when our plans failed and our most anxious efforts resulted only in failure. Then came our final submission and the readjustment to other conditions. Curious where all that remarkable ability went! Odd that no one noticed how extraordinary we were! Strange that we were not called to sit in the seats of the mighty! So we brood while the shadows fall. Then we think of the great Giver of every good and perfect gift. Why should we complain because he finds us in need of discipline? Let us praise him while our days go on and forget our troubles. The egotistical regret,—let it blow down like the brown leaves of autumn. The morbid remorse,—let it be a dead weed, to be raked up in the rubbish. Let the regret go by with the remorse. What grew last year bodes nothing of this year's planting and harvest. At this hour and in this atmosphere sounds carry far, and we listen to the notes of the whip-poor-will. Then the things that have worried us seem far away. The nightfall, with its mysterious influences, is upon us.

In our gallery we once saw a picture which expressed the very spirit of nightfall. On the canvas is a forest,—large and almost impenetrable. In the foreground is a peasant with a load of wood he has just laid down. Sitting under a tree, he is too tired to go farther until he has rested. The twilight gloom is upon the whole scene with all its loneliness and longing. We can see the little cabin, its frugal supper waiting, the children looking for father, and wondering why he is late. When he finally does appear, there is the welcome and the family gathering around the supper table. They seem close to God and things eternal in the forest,—far from the noise and dust of the cities. The earth depends for life, moment by moment, on the light and heat of the sun. So the soul of man depends on the love and guidance of God. The woodcutter in the forest is close to the heart of nature, and it would seem as if trust and faith in God came easily.

There are men and women who are trying to live a life of rectitude and honor without the help of God. They are sincere, and hope to be true to their ideals. But if it were not for the faith upon the earth and the love of God in the hearts of men, such would perish in despair, unlighted and unwarmed from above. The Sun of Righteousness rises with healing upon his wings and brings joy to the race.

The stars are shining now, and the evening winds are rustling, playing through the treetops. We begin to dream of tomorrow, of the opportunities and tasks before us. Tiresome are the days spent in doing or trying to do more than one's "share" of the world's work unless there is a vision of better things to draw one onward. He whose word is as good as his bond, and whose promises are as sure as human strength and promptness can make them, has ever before him the vision of the Son of Man who came not to be ministered unto but to minister to others. Read Luke 4: 40, "Now when the sun was setting, all they that had any sick with divers diseases brought them unto him and he laid his hands on every one of them and healed them all." Can you not see them coming? See the lame and the sick and afflicted of every description as they crowded around him at the eventide! His loving heart responded to every call, and there, at the twilight hour, men and women left him with songs of joy and praise. Still more are coming. He awaits them all with loving patience, and before the curtains of night were drawn, he healed them all.

May the tenderness of Jesus make us more responsive to calls for help and service! As we walk home through the darkness, we think of the evening which shall overtake us all,—the evening of death. We do not know when it will come. We only think of it occasionally, but its approach is one day nearer than it has ever been. One of the sweetest hymns we know speaks of the shadowy valley and our need of a Savior:

"Abide with me! Fast falls the eventide;
The darkness deepens; Lord, with me abide!
When other helpers fail and comfort flee,
Help of the helpless, oh, abide with me.

"Swift to its close ebbs out life's little day;
Earth's joys grow dim, its glories pass away;
Change and decay on all around I see:
O thou who changest not, abide with me!"

In View of Death.

BY IDA M. HELM.

IN this life we are in the midst of death. In the spring and summer we see the grass grow and flourish, clothed in nature's green. The flowers bloom resplendently, in the colors painted by the Master Artist. We see all vegetation grow and thrive, and fill the small niche designed by the Creator. Autumn comes and as the season advances, and the frost does its work, the sear leaves begin to fall, and vegetation withers at its blighting touch. When the winter comes, all vegetation is withered and dead. It has been shorn of its beautiful, magnificent clothing. Grass, flowers and leaves mingle with the earth, and enrich the soil for next year's vegetation.

The Psalmist says: "As for man, his days are as grass: as a flower of the field, so he flourisheth. For the wind passeth over it, and it is gone; and the place thereof shall know it no more." Man, the highest of created earthly beings, has, at the longest, but few years to live, comparatively. Take a book in your hand and let it represent time, and all space to the right and left of the book, eternity; then consider all the ages and years of time since the creation, and you will realize something of the shortness of man's life, though he lives to be three-score years and ten. "For a thousand years in thy sight are but as yesterday when it is past, and as a watch in the night" (Psa. 90: 4). Peter says: "But, beloved, be not ignorant of this one thing, that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day."

In life and health man is prone to put thoughts of death from him. He tries to think of the day of his death as being many years in the future. The carnally-minded man is apt to dread the thought of death, and he will fill his mind with the things of this world, rather than the things that be of God. He will plan for worldly pleasure and worldly gain, thus crowding out all thoughts of death and the realms beyond the grave. "Vanity of vanities, saith the Preacher; vanity of vanities; all is vanity" (Eccles. 1: 2).

Sooner or later the hour for the great change will come for every person. Many are cut down suddenly, in the midst of life. Disease may take hold of man at any time and lay him low, and if he has not made his peace with God, he will be compelled to bid farewell to earthly scenes, shuddering with anguish, like a criminal to his doom, and embark on the dismal waters to meet the awful terrors that inhabit the regions of the lost. "When lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin: and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death" (James 1: 15).

"'Tis not the whole of life to live,
Nor all of death to die."

The Christian need not fear death. He has been obedient to the commands and ordinances given to us by the Savior. He follows Christ in all things and he is saved by his grace. "Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost." "That being justified by his grace we should be made heirs according to the hope of eternal life"

"Jesus can make a dying bed
Feel soft as downy pillows are.
While on his breast I lean my head
And breathe my life out sweetly there."

These bodies of ours will come forth from the dark, cold, moldering grave, and the righteous will be clothed with marvelous beauty. "For our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ: who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working, whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself" (Philpp. 3: 21). "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

BRO. R. H. NICODEMUS, of Chicago, is engaged in a series of meetings at Marilla, Mich.

THE Brethren at Omaha, Nebr., are beginning a tent meeting the last Sunday in this month.

THERE is a move on foot to organize a Second Church of the Brethren in Kansas City, Kans.

A CHURCH is to be built at Raisin City, Cal. We understand that sufficient money has been subscribed for the purpose.

THE revival service at Carrington, N. Dak., conducted by Bro. Paul Mohler, closed with ten baptized and two restored to fellowship.

THE Sunday-school Institute and Ministerial Meeting for the First District of Virginia, to be held in the Peter's Creek church, are announced for Aug. 1, 2 and 3.

BRO. H. N. GLICK, of Bridgewater, Va., spent last Lord's Day in Elgin, and preached both morning and evening. His appropriate addresses were listened to with a good deal of interest.

BRO. DORSEY HODGDEN, of Huntington, Ind., wishes us to announce for him that he is in a position to make a few more engagements for revival meetings during the fall and winter months.

BRO. D. L. MILLER gave the MESSENGER sanctum a brief call a few days ago. He has arranged to spend a few weeks among some of the churches the approaching fall. His plans, we presume, are practically perfected.

THE series of meetings at Afton, Nebr., conducted by Bro. Geo. W. Flory, of Covington, Ohio, began June 10 and lasted two weeks. As the fruits of the efforts put forth, nine confessed Christ and were baptized. One returned to the fold.

BRO. JAMES Q. GOUGHNOUR, of Iowa, has changed his location from Ankeny to Slifer, and should be addressed accordingly, with R. F. D. Gowrie. A movement is on foot to build a meetinghouse there, and in time we hope to have a good congregation at Slifer.

THE members composing the District of Oklahoma, the Panhandle of Texas, and Pecos Valley of New Mexico, will hold their District Meeting at Thomas, Okla., Sept. 1. The Sunday-school, Ministerial, Missionary, Christian Workers' and Child Saving Meetings have been announced for Wednesday and Thursday preceding. The elders are instructed to meet on Tuesday, Aug. 29.

PROBABLY on an average of once a week we receive a letter suggesting that our patrons reread this, that or the other article that has appeared in the MESSENGER. And while we may not publish such requests, still we are certainly pleased to learn that some of the articles published in our columns are so highly appreciated. One writer who calls attention to a fine article that recently appeared, says that the very best preaching that some of our people get is found in the MESSENGER.

BRO. J. G. ROYER, of Mount Morris, gave us a short call on Wednesday of last week. He says the members are making ample preparations to take care of those who may attend the different meetings of the District, to be held at the Mount during the first week of August.

BRO. REUBEN SHROYER, of New Berlin, Ohio, writes that in evangelistic work he has made arrangements for the last months, and also for December, January and February. He can, however, plan for a few other engagements, and should be pleased to confer with those desiring his services.

THE Brethren at Plattsburg, Mo., recently dedicated a new churchhouse on the outskirts of their congregation, and are now looking for an efficient minister to place in charge of the work at that point, they being in a position to look after him financially. Any minister interested can write Bro. O. P. Williams, Jr., Plattsburg, Mo.

FROM week to week we are publishing some very fine Homiletic Hints by Bro. E. B. Hoff. We are certain that they are appreciated, especially by our ministers, and it might be well for a number of them to clip the articles for their sermon scrap book. Most of them may be regarded as well-arranged sermon outlines. See page 454.

A CORRESPONDENT suggests that among the Brethren next Fourth of July be devoted wholly to the interests of peace. It would be an easy matter for a well-informed committee to make out a good program, embodying a number of the topics relating to the peace question. A few good articles on the subject might serve a splendid purpose in the MESSENGER.

BRO. GRANT MAHAN, of Omaja, Cuba, thinks that those who found the heat here in the North exceedingly oppressive during the early part of July, might do well to come to Cuba and enjoy some delightful summer weather. The invitation, we presume, is general, and those of our readers who feel so inclined may sample what the Pearl of the Antilles has in store for them.

REFERRING to a former short article he wrote about a love feast among the Far Western Brethren, Bro. D. B. Gibson says that in his article he did not mean to say that they made use of the salutation between the supper and the communion. They saluted each other at the time of feet-washing only. With them there was nothing between the supper and the breaking of the bread.

WHILE Bro. W. H. Childers, of Crumpler, N. C., may not have accomplished as much as some of our preachers, still he has been doing something, and is not discouraged. He keeps going. Within the last nine months he has preached seventy-five sermons, held a number of prayer services, and baptized two. If all the preachers in the Brotherhood had done as well, it would mean over 6,000 converts. Some have done more than our brother, but hundreds have done less.

WE once knew an earnest Christian man who asked this question, and insisted on an answer: "Have you received the Holy Ghost since you believed?" There were those who evaded the pointed question, but that did not satisfy the questioner. He wanted a direct reply, yes or no. But how is it with our readers? Have you received the Holy Ghost since you believed? What kind of an answer would you give, were you compelled to answer the question? Is it a matter about which one may be uncertain? If not, then we ought to be ready and quite willing to answer the question.

WHILE on the cross Jesus said to John, referring to Mary his mother: "Behold thy mother." It is then recorded that from that hour John took her to his own home (John 17: 27). Bro. Cornelius Kesler, writing from Beatrice, Nebr., says that, while at the St. Joseph Conference, he heard an address on the incident, and, so far as he can remember, it is the first time he ever heard the subject treated by a preacher. The discourse seems to have pleased him, and also to have reminded him of what is said in Mark 14: 9 concerning another incident seldom discoursed upon from the American pulpits.

ONE of our elders, who was active in evangelistic work twenty-five years ago, says that he longs for the simplicity of the past, when a minister, desiring to visit a congregation, could send word what day he might be expected and then, on arriving, would be accorded a hearty welcome. In all probability we are losing some of our time-honored simplicity. We can afford to get rid of some conditions, but this is not the case with simplicity.

THE pastor of one of our large congregations, on learning that over sixty of the members absented themselves from the love feast, immediately took the matter up with them, and gave the kind of admonition that was needed. He felt that he owed it to these people to remind them of their great negligence; not to satisfy his own feeling, but for the good of their souls. It might be well if all of our elders and pastors would give more attention to the members who absent themselves from the Lord's table.

ON page 453, this issue, we have a letter from Bro. J. E. Miller, who writes from Rome, under date of July 1. On account of the health conditions in Southern Italy, his party finds it necessary to cut out Palestine and Egypt on the present trip, and for that reason they will have more time in Europe. While a little disappointed in not being able to visit Palestine, still they are enjoying their trip splendidly, and are getting much good out of what they are permitted to see. They may be addressed at London, England, in care of Thomas Cook and Son.

AT the Elders' Meeting of Northern Illinois and Wisconsin, held in the Hickory Grove house, last year, it was left with the officers of the District Meeting to announce the date of the Elders' Meeting for this year, and we are now instructed by these officers to say, that the elders of Northern Illinois and Wisconsin should meet at Mount Morris on Tuesday, Aug. 1, at 1: 30 P. M., instead of on Wednesday, as previously announced. A good representation is desired from all parts of the District. If possible, the elders in charge of every congregation should be present.

IN the Round Table Department, this week, Bro. D. H. Zigler is saying something about the "Storm-Tossed Oak," that will interest a number of the MESSENGER readers. Known to our people are hundreds of incidents that would make helpful reading, if reduced to writing. We suggest that our patrons make a specialty of such matters for the Round Table. We do not mean to say that the other short articles we publish from week to week are not appreciated, but something like the "Storm-Tossed Oak" adds spice, and makes the rest of the matter only the more entertaining.

WE have a suggestion to make to our young ministers in Indiana, Ohio, and parts of Illinois. Aug. 8 there will be a public debate in Indiana between men representing the Brethren and the Disciples. The discussion is to last several days, and will cover most of the doctrinal points wherein we differ from others. We suggest that as many of our young ministers as possible attend this discussion. They will learn more in defense of our doctrine than they can pick up in a Bible school in half a year, and it will also give them an inspiration for doctrinal study that will remain with them for years. For particulars, and how to reach the place, they are referred to page 443, last issue.

THOSE having charge of the matter ought to be more active about having the Minutes of the Conference more widely circulated among the members of the church. Probably hundreds of church officials do not even so much as see the Minutes from year to year, and for that reason are uninformed regarding the work of Annual Meeting. There ought to be some way of getting all of our people in touch with the General Conference. They ought to know just what is being done, and be ready to fall in line with whatever may be recommended. While the Minutes are widely distributed, still they do not reach all the families in the Brotherhood, and there are probably a number of churches in which they are practically unknown.

Dives and Lazarus.

A WRITER in one of our exchanges takes an unusual view of the Lazarus, who lay at the rich man's gate, desiring to be fed with the crumbs that fell from Dives' table. It is maintained that each morning some unnamed friends placed the beggar at the gate, so he could receive the rich crumbs that fell from the well-furnished table. These crumbs were more nourishing than what might have been picked up on the streets.

It is further stated that Dives must have been friendly to Lazarus, and was quite willing that his servants should supply his needs from what was left over from the meals served in his mansion, otherwise he would not have permitted him to remain at his gate from day to day.

But Dives was not a converted man. He was not a Christian and never stopped to think how a small part of his great wealth might have been made to serve as a blessing to the unfortunate beggar. He lived the selfish life and thought little of the comforts of the needy. It is unfortunate that a man of his wealth, standing and opportunities should so live as to have nothing but a place of intense torment awaiting him at death. But so it was with Dives, and he had no one to blame but himself.

Not so with Lazarus. At one time he may have been a great sinner, but he repented and was converted. True, he had to suffer on account of his poverty and ill health, but when the end came there was a place ready for him among the blessed. Angels were sent to carry him to his celestial home, where we find him in the immediate presence of Abraham, the father of the faithful.

But was Dives a friend to Lazarus? Was the beggar, by his consent, fed on the rich crumbs that fell from his table? Did he think that he was thus doing the poor man a favor? This, of course, is conjecture, but it is something for well-to-do people to think about. They may help the poor, but if they have not accepted Christ, what does it amount to? Had Dives been converted, and had he made a wise use of his great wealth, he, too, might have been, at his death, conveyed to a home among the redeemed.

Honest and Yet Differ.

THE question often arises in some of our minds: Can good men and women be honest and yet differ? That we do differ in many things must be patent to us all. And if this fact precludes the possibility of those differing to be honest, then, indeed, must we conclude that there are very few who are honest. We have before stated that each of us see and understand things from our own personal viewpoints. As long as we are subject to these different viewpoints, it is possible for us to understand things differently and yet be honest.

Because of the position in which we stand religiously, we receive a great many questions about which answers are wanted. As the most of these are of a personal character and would not be of general interest, we dispose of them in a private way. But, occasionally we get a question that may be of general interest, and we therefore answer it in a public way that it may benefit others as well as the querist. Here, is one of this class in two divisions: (1) "Have you received the Holy Ghost since you believed? (2) If so, please name one verse or sentence in the New Testament that favors, or even hints, at the need of a high school or a college education for any one. Or will you dare to say that the Word of God and his Spirit are not sufficient material for all Christian training?"

These questions come from a brother whom we have known for years, and whom we have learned to love and esteem because of his zeal and activity in the church and his untiring service for the Master's cause. We esteem him none the less because of the spirit that prompted him to ask these questions, because we know that there are other very good brethren that hold similar views.

In his mind the answer to the second question is somewhat dependent on the answer to the first. Our answer to the first question is, Yes, because we have tried to comply with the conditions upon which the promise is made. We know that the Father is always ready and willing to give the Holy Spirit to those who ask him for it and make themselves worthy to receive it. On this fact and the many other precious promises made to us, we are willing to rest our answer. As to the second question the answer must necessarily be different, because it touches a point, a condition and a subject on which the New Testament Scriptures are silent.

What kind of an education we are to receive, and how we are to receive it, we are not told. Where we shall get it, when we shall begin, and how far to go,—whether it shall be Hebrew, Greek, Latin or English; reading, writing and arithmetic; the sciences, philosophy, theology or what,—is certainly not taught or named in the New Testament. All we know is that the men of the Bible were sufficiently educated to write and give to the world the finest literary production that has ever come from the pen of men, embracing history, theology, poetry, philosophy, and all the kindred sciences that are engaging the attention of our best and foremost educators of today. Just how and where they got their education we are not informed. Perhaps in the schools of the prophets, or in the synagogical schools, where all Jewish children received their education, as they are doing even down to the present.

When we were in Jerusalem, a few years ago, we visited several such schools, as they were conducted in their synagogues. Just what the children were taught outside of the languages we do not now remember. But their education thus received was considered sufficiently thorough to fit them to fill such positions as were open to them in the countries where they lived, or where they expected to go.

They doubtless had or received the kind of education that the disciples had before they graduated under the tutelage of the greatest of all teachers, Jesus Christ, who had them under his charge during the three best years of his life. They must have made a most wonderful progress, because when the people, the chief priests and scribes, heard them after they had finished their course, they were surprised, and marveled at their wisdom, because they perceived that they belonged to the class of men who were looked upon as being unlearned and ignorant, although they might have been quite equal in scholastic attainments to those of our people today who finish a course in our public, common and high schools of today. For these we have as little sanction in the New Testament as we have for colleges and Bible seminaries.

It was supposed, on the part of Jesus Christ and the New Testament writers and teachers, that it was the duty of all people to so develop their intellectual powers and possibilities that they could hear, learn and understand the laws and commandments that God wished to give to them for their obedience, and enjoy the blessings that were to come to them from such understanding and obeying.

God never does the things for which he has given us the power. He gives us additional wisdom and power only when we have used the power which he has enabled us to get by developing that which we already have. After studying to show ourselves approved of men, and we are still short, then may we get help by asking.

There is a great deal said, these days, about the gift of tongues. And we are quite sure if such tongues were now needed to save souls, and there was no way for us to learn such tongues, God would give them as needed for his purpose. But they would not be tongues that were not understood by those who use them, much less by those who hear. It is not the office of the Holy Spirit to teach us how to read, write and cipher, nor to teach us how to use the different languages without our first studying them.

By taking this position we, by no means, discount the power of God in doing miracles, when it is his will to do so. But when he says to us: "Go ye and teach all nations, teaching them to observe all things," etc., he means that we are first to learn what to teach and what to observe. If, in trying to do this, we lack wisdom, he will give us what we lack and need.

The Development of the Local Churches.

UNDER the plan of organization, followed by the Church of the Brethren, there is first the local church, then the State District, and lastly, the General Conference of the entire Brotherhood. The local church means simply an organization of members, equipped with the necessary officers, without regard to the number of members in the organization. It may be small, very small, or large, larger. After work is opened at a given point, and after a sufficient number of members have been gained to justify it, and other necessary conditions abound, an organization is effected. This is known as a local church. The Brotherhood is made up of such organizations.

These organizations become at once the base of all church operations. All things proceed from them. All purposes and plans are born within them. Every endeavor looks to them for strength and support. It all rests here. If the local churches are weak, weakness will follow in all lines of activity; if the local churches are strong, strength will follow in all lines of activity. It is all determined by the local churches. Let this point be clearly understood. Then the importance of caring well for the local churches will be seen readily by all.

First of all it should be settled that the local churches must grow. Growth is the law of life. Where there is no growth, there is something wrong, fundamentally so. In many cases this law seems not to be understood, and the absence of growth causes no alarm. It is taken as a natural condition, while the same persons are not willing to apply the same rule to other things; for in everything else they will insist on growth. Why should it not be equally insisted on in things spiritual? It should, of course.

A goodly number of the local churches are in pretty fair condition. They are growing. It may not be at a rapid rate; but they are growing. A few are growing rapidly, in fact. The spirit of enterprise is fostered, the future studied, and plans are laid and worked to meet future needs. Large things are expected, are hoped for, prayed for. Unfortunately, some of the churches,—a good many of them,— are at a standstill. Their waters have become somewhat stagnant. Not much is doing within their ranks. Contentment abounds. They embraced so many members years ago, and they have about the same number now. Their Sunday-schools and other organizations were so large in the past, and they are about the same today. They have just held their own. In a few other cases churches have not held their own,—they have declined. Some, in fact, have gone the wrong way, to the extent that their organization has been disbanded, and the places of worship closed. As sad as it is, it is true.

A good many causes enter into these conditions. The greatest of all, probably, is the failure to appreciate the value of the local churches. Their value lies in the fact that all of both a local and general character depends directly upon them. When things fail to go in the local churches, it means not only a local failure, but it means that things of a general character must fail also. The failure is everywhere and in everything. Success, then, in the local churches, means so much that it must be had at any price. It should be the burden of the heart of every member in all the churches. The desire for souls and for power with God and man should cause each one to labor in prayer and agonize in soul, until God manifests his power. Too many are at ease in Zion.

In some of the churches things do not run smoothly among the officials, and when this is the case, it is common for the membership to be divided. Ordinarily, a united official board means a united membership, and vice versa. It seems too bad that Christian men will spend time and strength contending among themselves that should be spent for better things: and it is still worse that small differences are allowed to alienate brotherly love, and to establish conditions that make the church's success impossible. The reorganization of some churches would be their greatest blessing, while relieving some brethren of their office would be the best thing possible in their case. Those who will allow personal interests and preferences to stand in the way of the church's success, are certainly out of place in office in the church, no matter what the office is. Success is more than office, more than officers even. Nothing must be allowed to stand in the way of success. The way must be cleared for it, no matter at what cost. And men who do not see this, should be brought to see it at once.

In a good many of the churches little attention is paid to the Sunday-school and the interest of the young people in general. The older members do not attend Sunday-school; they do not even urge the younger ones to attend; they are without interest in this branch of Christian work. If they reach the church before the Sunday-school hour closes, many of them sit on the outside until the preaching hour begins. And not much interest, of course, can be expected of the young, when the older ones, the fathers and mothers, assume such an attitude. It is too bad, too bad!

The future of the church is with the young; and the Sunday-school is the most powerful agency in operation at present, outside of the home, in the dissemination of Bible knowledge among the masses, and in moulding character. Too much attention, therefore, can not be given to it. It will contribute more to the development of the church in the future than any other one thing, except home influences. These, of course, are strictly fundamental; they are chief. And every member of the church, old and young, in consideration of the place that the Sunday-school occupies in the church work, what it promises for the future, and for his own individual benefit, ought to be an earnest Sunday-school scholar and worker. Certainly, every one must be who desires the growth and development of the local churches. H. C. E.

Our Recreations.

God's people are to be a peculiar people, zealous of good works. As to the meaning of the latter part of the foregoing statement there is no difference of opinion; for good works can have but one meaning. But when it comes to the first part of the statement, men differ very widely in their definitions; for a person or a number of persons may be peculiar in a great many ways. Heretofore we have placed most stress on peculiarity in dress. There can be no doubt that we should differ from the world in our outward appearance; but to what extent and in what way is not so clear.

However, we do not wish to enter into a discussion of that. But there is another part of the subject which is just as important; and that is the way in which we spend our spare time. We are so constituted that we need relaxation, freedom from work and care, at times; and then is when we need to be on our guard. There are a thousand and one ways of seeking pleasure; and a large per cent of them have not been invented by spiritually-minded people. When we are seeking relief from work or worry we are not so likely to think seriously about the effects of certain things upon us; that is, we act first and do our thinking afterward. That is one reason why we sometimes have to repent after our season of enjoyment.

In the beginning things were made good—and in and of themselves they are still good. It is in the wrong use of them that the trouble comes. Some of the most necessary things have been so misused that they are a main source of sin among men. There is no need of going into details; for all of us know things of this kind. Whether it is possible to turn back, is at least doubtful. It is much easier to keep the right road than to scramble back to it through briers and thorns. And just here we may say that it is in coming back that we have the greatest difficulty, are hurt most by the thorns. There is no special hindrance as we turn from the right road; in fact, most persons think they are having the best time of their lives when they are getting out of the way.

We can not tell at first whether a man is really going astray. At the start the degree of divergence between the two roads is not great. But by watching we can tell; and we need to be most watchful of ourselves. Often we jump to a conclusion and condemn a man because of some little thing he does by way of recreation. There are some things so entirely associated with evil that no child of God can afford to indulge in them. But, on the other hand, there are many things that are good or bad, according as we use them. There are tunes, for instance, which have been used to lure the unwary to their ruin; and the same tunes, with sacred words, have been great helps in leading lost souls back into the light of God's love and truth.

We may be too strict or too lenient, especially when we deal with the young. If we seek to deprive them of every form of amusement that has been put to a wrong use, we drive them away and lose our influence over them; if we let them go their own way, without warning them of their danger, they will soon be so far out of the way that it will be difficult to get them back. What are we going to do about it? That is our problem. And we need patience and wisdom from above to solve it.

Take the reading of fiction as an illustration. What are we going to do about that? Do any of us shut fiction out of our homes? We may if we have no young folks about us and have lost the feelings of youth. But even our town and county papers have their pages given up to fiction; and we just cannot keep the young from being interested in the stories. Under the circumstances it would be unwise to lay down a flat prohibition. It seems to me that it is better, wiser, more likely to bring about the desired result, if we stand guard, point out the wrong there is in excess and in evil appearance. This does not mean that we as parents are to fail to exercise authority—not by any means. But it does mean that we are to exercise it with more wisdom than we generally do. There are many occasions when a little judicious leading will accomplish much more good than any amount of injudicious driving.

Other things might be mentioned; but they will occur to the one who thinks. Our aim for ourselves and our children should be, in our recreations, to enjoy ourselves, and to do so without going to excess, avoiding evil. There are the two extremes—both of them wrong, or at least harmful—and there is the golden mean. We ought to have wisdom enough to guide us aright in deciding these matters for ourselves and our families. G. M.

Our New Missionaries.

The late St. Joseph Conference confirmed the appointment of sixteen missionaries who go to the foreign fields this fall. Six of them go to China, six to India, two to Sweden, and two to France.

Bro. B. F. Heckman and wife hail from Cerro Gordo, Ill., and the congregation is arranging for their support on the field. They go to China. Bro. Homer Bright is the son of Bro. J. Calvin Bright, of Dayton, Ohio. He and his wife will also enter the Chinese mission field. Sister Anna Hutchison, of Cordova, Md., the niece of Bro. Andrew Hutchison, is booked for the Chinese work. Sister Winnie Cripe, of Indiana, will be supported, while in China, by the Northern District of her State. She is a sister of the wife of Bro. Lafayette Steele, Chairman of the Sunday-school Advisory Board.

Bro. Paul Mohler, one of our interesting correspondents and a son of Bro. S. S. Mohler, accompanied by his wife and children, will take charge of the work in France and Switzerland. The work in Sweden will be entrusted to Bro. J. F. Graybill and wife, who, for the past year, have been connected with the Hebron School, at Nokesville, Va.

Bro. Quincy A. Holsopple, of Huntingdon, Pa., but now at work in the Brethren Publishing House, Elgin, goes to India. He takes with him as his wife, Sister Kathren Royer, daughter of Bro. Galen B. Royer, Secretary and Treasurer of the General Mission Board. Bro. Grover Wine and Sister Mary Stoner, both students from North Manchester, married just before the Annual Meeting, will also enter the India field. Bro. J. I. Kaylor, of De Graff, Ohio, is under engagement for India. Sister Rose Wagoner, of Pyrmont, Ind., will accompany him as his life helpmeet.

This is the largest number of new missionaries sent out in any one year, and we are sure that they have the prayers and good wishes of all the Messenger readers. They have laid their lives on the altar, having heeded the call, and, with the sanction of heaven and the approval of the Brotherhood, enter upon their important work.

The New Fashion.

The Quaker bonnet, which is to come into fashion again, is making a sensation in Paris. When a sweet-faced girl, hired by the promoters of fashion, appeared at the races, wearing a nice Quaker bonnet, the people almost went wild over the new style of head dress that the girl was employed to introduce. It is now all the talk in fashionable circles, and for a year or two, at least, we are not likely to hear much talk against the lovely bonnet. It makes all the difference in the world as to who demands the wearing of the bonnet. It would seem that Madam Fashion is to have unlimited control, and that what she demands, in this particular, will be respected by both saint and sinner. Commenting on the subject the Baltimore News says: "The only wonder is that the Quaker bonnet has not been revived long ago. Within its oval lines the most rakish countenance becomes demure. The guileless face seems ready to purr for the slightest encouragement. One feels instinctively that the owner of such a face would become an admirable helpmate if she could be coaxed not to become a missionary. The peace and quiet of the Friends' meetinghouse are in her eyes, and grace suffuses her face like an aureole. In its happy ascendant it carried Benedict captive to the altar and kept him at the hearthstone until the style changed. Its return is welcomed many times over."

The Meaning of Baptizo.

Prof. Chas. Anthon, a man of fine scholarship, well acquainted with the ancient languages, and the author of a number of books, including Greek and Latin textbooks for colleges and universities, was asked the meaning of the Greek word baptizo, and gave this answer: "The primary meaning of the word is to dip or immerse, and its secondary meanings, if it ever had any, all refer, in some way or other, to the same leading idea. Sprinkling, etc., are entirely out of the question." Prof. Anthon does not differ from other distinguished scholars, for all of them are united in defining the word as stated.

We further notice that Prof. Chas. A. Briggs, formerly a Presbyterian, but now a Protestant Episcopal minister, Professor of Theology in Union Theological Seminary, New York,—a man of questionable views regarding Higher Criticism, but of rare scholarship,—does not hesitate to say that, according to the meaning of the original Greek text, John performed the rite of baptism in the River Jordan by immersion. Not only so, but he gives immersion as the meaning of baptisma. Since both men figure as Episcopalians, they can not be accused of prejudice in favor of immersion. What they say on the subject must be credited to their scholarship, and not the result of any prejudice.

Going to Paradise.

In these days of unrest, when thousands of people are looking for a better country than the one in which they have lived for years, and when not a few are thinking about emigrating to a milder climate, one would hardly expect to get a letter from an active Christian worker in which he says, that he now feels ready to go to Paradise. We are wondering how many of our readers really have this feeling. Hundreds of them might be induced to go West and locate in some promising section. An equal number would be only too glad to move into a mild climate, but, candidly, how many would consent to go to Paradise, even if they had a good chance? Every steamer going to Europe is loaded to its fullest capacity. Nearly every passenger train crossing the continent is well filled, but what would be the result if a steamer or a train should be fitted out for Paradise? We may be a restless people. We may want to emigrate every time we hear of a better land, but few express a desire to go to Paradise before they are compelled to leave this world.

SHADE CREEK, PENNSYLVANIA.

This congregation met in council in the Berkey house June 20, with our elder, Bro. Peter Knavel, presiding. One letter was received—and two were granted. One sister was restored to fellowship. We held our love feast in the Berkey house on the evening of June 25. Although it was a very wet evening, a large number of members were present. Visiting ministers present were: Brethren L. T. Holsinger, J. B. Miller, N. H. Blough, J. W. Mills and C. W. Blough. Bro. Holsinger officiated. Our series of meetings, conducted by Bro. L. T. Holsinger, of Rossville, Ind., closed July 3. During this meeting our pastor, Bro. D. M. Adams, made a special effort to organize the members into working bands. Bro. Adams believes in an organized and systematized effort on the part of the entire congregation for the salvation of souls. Bro. Holsinger is a preacher of marked ability. While with us he preached twenty-one eloquent and soul-stirring sermons. He entered into mine his every heart and a clear, forceful and logical manner sets forth the truths of the Gospel. As a direct result six have been baptized and many others are near the kingdom. J. H. Lehman.

Scalp Level, Pa., July 6.

CERRO GORDO, ILLINOIS.

Our council was held July 6. As it was in the busy season of harvesting, the attendance was small. Sister Martha Auer, Brethren Harry Leedy, J. C. Miller and P. H. Christner are our delegates to District Meeting. The new song book, "Kingdom Songs," was adopted for our Sunday-school. The writer was chosen Messenger correspondent for the rest of this year.

The joint Fourth of July Meeting for Cerro Gordo, Oakley, Okaw, Decatur and Blue Ridge congregations was held at our house. The attendance and interest were good. Bro. B. Frank Heckman preached the annual missionary sermon. Text, Matt. 9: 37, 38. "The harvest truly is plenteous," etc. After speaking of the needs of various fields, he spoke more especially of conditions and needs in China. We need money, men and prayers. Bro. Moy Way, our Chinese brother from Chicago, gave a talk; also one on the Sunday previous. Though he spoke the English language imperfectly, yet he impressed his audience by his simplicity and evident sincerity and zeal.

July 6 Bro. B. Frank Heckman who, with his family, has been visiting his parents and other relatives here, gave us a final farewell. He goes to Chicago, to get ready for their voyage to China. He and his family will first visit Sister Heckman's relatives in Ohio. A number of the members met at the depot to see them leave. "Blest Be the Tie that Binds" was sung and prayer offered.

AFTER SEVENTY-FIVE YEARS IN SIN.

Fifty years ago, alongside of my father's farm, lived an old settler by the name of Robert Newman. He came to Cass County, Ill., from Virginia, and took up government land. He arrived with only fifty cents in cash, time, by hard work and close economy, became a man of means.

His name, perhaps, will be remembered by Bro. Moore, who once lived near him. In those days Bro. Moore and the writer went to school together in the old log building, where we had to sit on slab benches without backs. Those are the days when Uncle Rufus and Aunt Barbara Gish, with the Gibsons, the Brubakers and the Wolfs visited Cass County, and dealt out the Bread of Life. It was then that this man became impressed with their doctrine. Many times he felt that a change of his life should take place, but, like many others, he put it off.

In time the writer grew to manhood and was elected to the ministry. I preached one of my first sermons in Newman's home in 1880, after which we moved to Kansas. As the years passed by, Mr. Newman felt the weight of the many prayers and songs that he had heard, and longed for the time to come when he could meet again with the people that, by hence the Sidney, Bellefontaine and Logan churches of Ohio decided to hold a joint Sunday-school Convention at the latter place, which proved a decided success.

Sometime later he chanced to visit his only daughter at Riverside, this State, and, learning of my whereabouts, informed me of a proposed visit of himself and daughter.

Recently the train brought them in, and, after brief preliminaries, he stated that he must make a change in his life, and desired to unite with the Church of the Brethren. As he had known me all my life, he desired that I should administer baptism.

Arrangements were made, and as the last rays of the sun were fading away, and the darkness of night was fast closing in upon us, he was gently led down into the South Muscatine River. In presence of a great crowd of spectators and the members of the Muscatine church he was buried with Christ in baptism.

After seventy-five years outside of Christ, our brother greatly rejoiced that God had spared his life to get home safely. He was afraid it might be too late to comply with the terms of salvation, but, praise the Lord, he found a home in the church of his choice, in answer to fifty years of prayers, and was enabled to go on his way rejoicing.

Muscatine, Iowa, July 10. T. A. Robinson.

INDEPENDENCE, KANSAS.

Our church met in council on Saturday evening, with Eld. W. D. Miller presiding. Eld. J. S. Clark, of Parsons, Kans., was with us. One sister was received by letter. Eld. C. A. Miller has been secured to hold a series of meetings, beginning Oct. 29. Our love feast is to be held Nov. 11. Bro. Miller then goes to Liberty, where a few of our members live, to hold a series of meetings there. Sister Mary Crumrine was elected Sunday-school superintendent for the next six months; Sister Hannah Lantz, secretary-treasurer; Sister Cora Norris, president of the Christian Workers' Meeting, and Sister Viola Lantz, secretary-treasurer. Bro. J. M. Parkin was appointed solicitor for the Old Folks' Home. July 4 our Sunday-school enjoyed a program, rendered by the school in a grove near by. The forenoon was pleasantly spent in recitations, essays and songs. A bounteous dinner was served in the grove. At 2 p. m. the meeting was again called to order by the secretary of the program committee, Bro. B. J. Lantz. The afternoon was spent in discussing a number of topics pertaining to Sunday-school work. Our District Secretary, Eld. F. G. Edwards, gave us many helpful suggestions. We feel better equipped for the Master's service by having spent the day in honor of Christ. In the evening we met at the church and were entertained by Bro. Edwards. He gave us a good talk on general Sunday-school work. We are always glad to have visiting members stop with us, and welcome any to our midst. All inquiries will be gladly answered. Pella Carson.

R. D. 2, Box 8.

KANSAS CITY, KANSAS.

Last evening we met in council in the Central Avenue church. We had a most pleasant meeting. Bro. S. P. Haldeman and Sister Viola Cline were placed in charge of our Central Avenue Sunday-school; Brethren Elmer Harmon and D. P. Strole in charge of the Christian Workers' Meeting.

Why is it that so many of the older members do not attend the Christian Workers' Meetings? While the work is more especially to develop the young, yet they need the presence and support of the older members.

We have arranged for Bro. M. S. Frantz, of Hartman, Colo., to hold our fall revival meetings in the Central Avenue church, commencing Sept. 3. Our love feast is to be held Sept. 10. Last evening two sweet mothers were baptized, uniting with the South Side Mission.

Recently we have received some clothing, by means of which we have been enabled to increase the attendance of our Mission Sunday-school. We can use more clothing to very good advantage. Will the churches of our District please remember us with a part of their increase? We have quite a number of destitute members,—in need mostly on account of sickness. In one family a father and mother have both been sick for a long time. The mother is a member, with three dependent children. One brother, with a wife and one child, has been sick since last November. A widowed sister, with four small children, was overcome with the heat while at work. These are a few of the many worthy cases that may have help.

HOW WE SPENT THE FOURTH OF JULY.

How shall we celebrate the Fourth?—is a question that arises in the minds of children, as well as of adults, each year. Ways and means are devised by the world to attract the youth to various boisterous methods, sometimes of a positively harmful nature; sometimes questionable, and then again, fortunately, of a character to educate.

Knowing the tendencies to evil, because of numerous temptations on the part of the young, as well as feeling grateful to our Loving Heavenly Father for our glorious "land of the free," our people feel the need of a celebration of such a nature as to nourish the social, moral and religious life; hence the Sidney, Bellefontaine and Logan churches of Ohio decided to hold a joint Sunday-school Convention at the latter place, which proved a decided success.

The house was filled at each session. About one hundred persons were present from the visiting schools, each place making arrangements to convey their pupils to the place of meeting, by train, automobile or carriage,—whatever way was convenient. The Logan people are very hospitable, and the Joint meeting was enjoyed by all present.

Eld. P. Z. Smith was chosen moderator for the day, and the writer was chosen secretary. A very carefully-arranged program had been prepared by a committee of one from each school and the topics proved intensely interesting. One feature especially pleasing was the originality displayed.

Some special music had been arranged by each school. The children did their part very nicely. Their bright eyes were an index of their interest.

Object lesson talks for the children were also conducted in an able manner, which held the attention of the children, and proved helpful to all workers.

Space forbids an account of the discussions of each topic, though the program was quite varied. Special notice should be given to America's most valuable product, the boys and girls, and how to protect them, as well as instruct them along the lines of social purity, etc. Rich thoughts were presented, and the influence of this service will be lasting.

At noon a basket dinner was served under the large shade trees in the yard, though this was only the secondary thought of the day, as the rich spiritual feast was the main object sought. Though the weather was exceedingly warm, the interest was kept high during the entire day.

Thus July 4, 1911, will be long remembered, and no doubt a similar meeting will be called in 1912.

FORT WAYNE, INDIANA.

Our church met in council July 30. Our elder, Bro. J. W. Kitson, presided. Eld. J. C. Bright, of Dayton, Ohio, and Bro. R. Jacobs, of Goshen, Ind., were with us, for which we were glad. The latter represented the Northern Indiana Mission Board. Much business came before the church. Bro. Lee Cory was elected to the ministry. Bro. Kitson was elected delegate to the Sunday-school Convention, to be held this fall. It was also decided to use the envelope system of collecting the money for the church treasurer.

July 2 we had our Sunday-school Convention here. The Blue River, Pleasant Hill, Cedar Lake and Cedar Creek churches have formed a Sunday-school Association, and a convention is to be held at each of the several churches, in turn, once each quarter. The attendance was large, considering the warm weather, and each church was well represented.

Bro. Lafayette Steele, our District Sunday-school Secretary, was with us and gave us a talk on "The Child Problem." In the evening Bro. Bright gave a talk on his trip to the Annual Meeting, which was very interesting.

July 4 we had our annual Sunday-school outing at Sweeney Park, all the Sunday-schools of this city being there. It was well attended and the children seemed to enjoy it very much.

We have a church membership of about fifty, and a Sunday-school enrollment of about seventy-five. We feel we are doing well here in this wicked city.

THE FOURTH OF JULY PROFITABLY SPENT.

Believing that it is within the province of the church to bless and sanctify our national holiday, the Linville Creek church has arranged for suitable services to be held each succeeding Fourth of July. This duty is assigned to the local Sunday-school Board and therefore, as intended, the interests of the young largely predominate. The supreme effort of the occasion is to teach our youth that true patriotism is to love righteousness and good deeds. As Susan Coolidge wrote:

"He serves his country best,
Who lives a pure life, and does righteous deeds,
And walks straight with God, however others err,
And leaves his son as uttermost bequest,
A stainless record which all men can read;
This is the better way."

This year two meetings of the kind were held within the territory of the aforementioned church, and it was the writer's privilege to attend one of them. At this one two sessions were held. The forenoon was devoted to short addresses on appropriate themes. Our senior elder, Bro. Daniel Hays, was the chief speaker of this period.

The afternoon was largely given over to the three Sunday-schools that attended in a body. Each of them was limited to thirty minutes for the program prepared. The whole of the exercises beautifully blended, and was a powerful teaching on temperance for the really patriotic citizen and an incentive to the spiritual life.

Eld. P. S. Thomas, of Harrisonburg, Va., was present, and contributed much to the interest of the occasion in song and by short addresses. At intermission, lunch, with refreshing lemonade, was free to all.

The meeting was largely attended and thus a glorious day was spent. Temptation was removed from many young lives and a teaching given that must result in great good in the future for the church and the community at large. D. H. Zigler.

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

CALIFORNIA.

Butte Valley—Sunday, July 2, was a busy day for us. Brethren Clarence Overholtzer and D. M. Click were with us. Brother Overholtzer, our District Sunday-school Secretary, conducted the morning services and also a round table service in the afternoon. In the evening we had a very interesting missionary discourse, delivered by Bro. Click, after which a collection of over $8 was taken. Our pulpit Bible study program was well worth hearing, and the attendance was good. Brethren Overholtzer and D. M. Stover told us some interesting things concerning our National Independence Day. The collection for the local mission fund amounted to $12.85. —H. W. Allen, Macdoel, Cal., July 8.

El Centro—At our council we selected Sunday-school officers for the next six months. Bro. Arthur Huffman was reelected as superintendent; Sister Lida Pratt, superintendent of the Primary department; Sister E. E. Platt, superintendent of the cradle roll; Miss Ramona George, secretary. We also selected officers for the Christian Service Meeting, with Sister Rena Van Horn as president. One letter was read. Three have been added to our number. The Christian baptism since our last report, making a total of six baptized and one reclaimed, as the result of Bro. Trostle's evangelistic efforts among us a few weeks ago. Contributions are beginning to come in for our new churchhouse, with the shade of the trees, at which time a program was rendered by the school. It was much enjoyed by all present.—Ella Patton, R. 3, Box 213, Modesto, Cal., July 6.

Fruitvale church met in council June 25, at 2 P. M. Our elder, Bro. Andrew Andreen, presiding. Much business came before the meeting. Sister Maggie Brown was elected Sunday-school secretary, to take Sister Ella Andreen's place, who left for Kansas. One church letter was read and accepted. On the night of July 3, instead of our regular prayer meeting, we enjoyed a very profitable sermon by our District Sunday-school Secretary, Bro. Clarence Overholtzer, of Dinuba visiting the churches of the District. He encouraged the giving of one-tenth of their income for the Lord's cause. On Sunday morning he left for the Live Oak church. We regret his visits here was so short, but with him it is his business before pleasure.—Ella R. Webster, Fruitvale, Cal., July 10.

Patterson—June 18 our little band of members enjoyed our first basket dinner. Eighteen members responded. After our Sunday-school took our lunch baskets and went to the hills to spend the day. A very interesting program was rendered, and at the close a missionary offering of $4.40 was given.—Mrs. Ida Haines, Patterson, Cal., July 8.

Raisin church met in council, with our elder, Bro. Eikenberry, in charge. Seven letters were presented and read. We are in need of a church. The members have decided to build, and a building committee has been elected. The location of the building has been subscribed for. Bro. J. S. Kune donated a lot, worth $1,000, which is appreciated by us all. Our Sunday-school has reorganized with Mabie Eikenberry as superintendent; Sister Lissie Pfleiziger, secretary-treasurer. We are all thrilled at the return of Bro. and wife back again from their eastern trip. Everything is prospering here at Raisin.—Emma Saylor, Raisin, Cal., July 12.

CANADA.

Battle Creek—Our church met in council July 3. Considerable business was pleasantly disposed of. Our offering was $16.70. Our union reorganized and elected officers. The officers chosen by ballot. The same officers were retained. We will have our love feast Nov. 21, at 2 P. M. Our church was recently baptized into the fold of Christ. A few more members have come to us lately, and more are coming soon. Our elder expects to start to North Dakota in a very short time, to attend the District Meeting. He will be gone a few weeks only, though we will feel as if he were without a shepherd, as he is the only minister we have a present. Our recent missionary offering was $11.68, and that is $2.68, as we erroneously stated. Pray for us in this great domain of Canada.—Marla L. Swihart, Kelvinhurst, Sask., Can., July 6.

COLORADO.

Rockyford church met in council July 2. Eld. D. Hamm presided. Sister Ethel Reese baptized last service, our last report. Our Sunday-school held a joint program with the Methodists Sunday evening, on the Pageant of Nations, and afternoon sessions related more or less to the subject of "Peace." A basket dinner and other refreshments were no small part of the occasion. There were over one hundred and eighty present, as guests and home folks. Our elder, directing a class in Bible study. First the study of prayer was taken up. Now the class is following Bro. Young's "Outline of the Old Testament." The class meets once each week.—Grace Miller, Rockyford, Colo., July 6.

Smith Fork church met in council June 28. Not much business came before the meeting. Eld. A. A. Shaw presided over the council. The Sunday-school officers were elected for a term of six months. Sunday-school delegates were also elected. Bro. Geo. A. Dove took charge of the discussions and presented them this morning to our school. Many helpful points were brought out relative to the advancement of the Lord's work.—R. A. Saylor, Crawford, Colo., July 8.

IDAHO.

Boise Valley—We held an enjoyable Fourth of July meeting yesterday. We had a service in the morning, with "The Way We had lunch at the church at noon. In the afternoon Sister Christian "Worker" gave her experiences which were interspersed with songs, etc. We feel that we have great reason to be thankful for such a wonderful government, and take this way to show our appreciation of it.—Jessie Shroyer, Meridian, Idaho, July 6.

Falk—July 2 we held a temperance meeting at the Valley View schoolhouse, near New Plymouth. Some of the brethren are living, who have a union Sunday-school and preaching services every other Sunday. The temperance meeting was well attended, and all felt that it would be well to have considerable talent in our congregation, which was made use of. Elder Jesse Calvert gave short talks, and there were speeches and readings by others, as well as appropriate songs. The church work here is getting along as well as can be expected. Some of our members have left, but others have come to us. Now we have two deacons and about fourteen members near New Plymouth. We suggested to the members of our union Sunday-school, since we are organized, that we have a temperance meeting. So last night wife and I, and some others, listened to four speeches on Payette at "The Business Side of the Temperance Question." It was good to be there. We have no saloons in our county, but the whiskey element is hoping, at the next election, to get saloons again. The county is decidedly in favor of temperance, but it requires all good people to be on the lookout.—D. J. Wampler, Falk, Idaho, July 15.

Nampa—The Nampa church met in council July 7, with our elder, Bro. J. C. Neher, presiding. Two letters were received. Sunday-school officers were elected for six months, with Bro. Wilbur Hamilton as superintendent; Sister Stahl, secretary-treasurer. Our Christian Worker officers are Sister Iva Stahl, president; Bro. Elmer Garber, secretary-treasurer. Our delegates to District Meeting are Brethren G. D. Pike and J. C. Neher.—Mrs. E. E. Swartz, Nampa, July 10.

Meridian—Today the Sunday-school had a day long to be remembered by the little folks as Children's Day. After the regular Sunday-school lesson and the usual opening music, a large audience with a well-prepared program. Recitations were given by appropriately dressed little folks, suited to the different classes. The readiness of the young folks to do the part of the program helped much to entertain and edify the older ones. After the program the little ones were presented with a Bible picture.—Mrs. Lucinda Hamilton H. Lichty, Nampeze, Idaho, July 2.

Payette Valley church met July 4 in Bro. Grant Fisher's grove. At the forenoon the Sunday-school scholars rendered a well-prepared program, consisting of recitations and songs, in honor of Independence Day and also of the flag. In the afternoon we had a short program, followed by a council meeting, at which Bro. Eld Wampler, A. M. Fitzpatrick were chosen to represent this church at the District Meeting in the Boise District of Idaho and Weiser. Brethren Lawrence Shawberger and Wampler are the alternates. A collection of $11.15 was raised for the local mission fund. Several letters and papers were sent to District Meeting.—S. J. Kenepp, Payette, Idaho, July 6.

ILLINOIS.

Batavia—Our congregation met in council July 3. Bro. James M. Hoover, Sunday-school Secretary, Sunday-school spent a very pleasant day in the woods, with the members of the Batavia and New Erie churches. All report a good time very nicely. Our new pastor, Bro. E. E. Eshelman, took charge of the work here July 1. During the month of June we received into the church by baptism Mrs. Ida Hall, Mrs. Williams, J. H. Moore and Quincy Holsopple.—Ruth Habeck-er, 319 Pearl St., Batavia, Ill., July 14.

Franklin Grove—Sunday evening, July 9, we closed a three weeks' series of meetings, which were conducted by Bro. S. S. Blough. Though the weather was very warm, and every one was busy, the interest was very good. Seven were baptized. Truly it was spent in a way similar to that of a year ago, when we had a like number baptized, followed by baptism. Twelve were born into the kingdom.—Anna Stutzman Buck, R. D. 1, Franklin Grove, Ill., July 10.

INDIANA.

Arcadia church met in council July 1. Our love feast was appointed for Oct. 28. Bro. Grover Wine and wife came to our place July 4, and Bro. Wine preached for us that day. He preached eighteen inspiring sermons. Sister Wine assisted with the song services. On account of the busy season of the year, these meetings were not so well attended as if they had been held later. But the Spirit of the Lord was present, and Christ and was baptized. Our Sunday-school is doing nicely.—Mary T. Martin, R. D. 17, Atlanta, Ind., July 9.

Bethel—We have had a fine all-day harvest meeting for July 30, at our Brick house. Bro. T. D. Butterbaugh is to do the preaching. We had a very interesting talk last night by Bro. Level Neher, of Milford, Ind., at our Brick house, and in the evening we had a song service. Bro. Neher gave us an excellent address on "Temperance," which was much appreciated. Bro. Neher is from Milford, Ind., but formerly Mich., to be with us in a series of meetings at our East house, the last of September—Mary E. Miller, North Manchester, Ind., July 14.

Harrison County—Yesterday Bro. Leonard Love preached in our grove. Text, Acts 2:38. Texas and Ohio were represented to the home of Sister Catherine Zimmerman, where they partook of the bountiful dinner spread. The oldest and youngest being sixty-five and the oldest seventy-eight. Brethren Levi and Chas. Rhode were also present. The average age of the six was seventy-one and one-half years. In the day evening, at eight o'clock, after the young people's meeting, Bro. Love preached for us. Text, Matt. 5:16 the people. The community is well supplied with noble young men and women, and we hope that many will be added to our little church each week. Many are members of other churches, but they attend our meetings. Our Sunday-school is moving along nicely. Our primary teacher, Sister Miller, has a class of twelve little folks. Sister Miller is one of the most excellent work with the little folks. She has prepared an outline for the Primary department, which I hope to have Bro. Love with us again next Sunday and explain it.—J. H. Morris, Elizabeth, Ind., July 16.

Lookout—Bro. Geo. L. Studebaker, of North Manchester, Ind., was with us over Sunday and preached a much-appreciated sermon.—Mrs. Ida Studebaker, R. 1, July 10.

North Liberty church met in council July 1 at the town house. Our elder, Bro. Jesse Hoffer, presiding. Four letters were granted. Our Sunday-school superintendent will soon leave, so another was elected in his place. Sister was chosen to fill that offices the remainder of the year. Our harvest meeting will be held July 30, and will begin with us a few weeks ago, and gave us two excellent sermons. Silvie Winkle Crine, who sails for China this fall, also gave us several talks. Our prayer meeting is conducted and attended by the prayers of all.—Dortha D. Foote, North Liberty, Ind., July 10.

Solomon's Creek—On the evenings of May 26 and 27 Bro. Hilton, of Mexico, Ind., favored us by his presence. His interesting talks on "The Chinaman and His Religion." After his talk on the Chinaman and his religion, he left for his home in the Chinese Mission. To this more was added by brethren and sisters who were able to do so. We expect to hear Bro. Hilton until the amount was raised to $70. June 3 our church met in council with Eld. James Neff presiding. One letter of membership was granted. We have no Sunday-school now for a minister and three deacons in the near future. June 10 we had communion. Eld. Jesse Hoffer officiated. Many brethren and sisters were present. Eld. W. R. Deeter officiated. Many were glad to see him with us. Several letters were with us. It was a very spiritual meeting. On Sunday morning the church service was held. Eld. Deeter preached. Brethren Harley Weybright, Bert Neff and Guy Morehouse assisted. Many were glad to be present. It was an impressive scene.—R. R. Neff, New Paris, Ind., July 2.

IOWA.

Des Moines—Yesterday was another day of spiritual feasting for the members of the Des Moines church. Bro. J. Miller was with us both morning and evening, and her descriptive of the work in India, and especially of the work of the people with whom she has labored for the past six years, was intensely interesting. Almost one hundred Sunday-school children remained for the morning lecture. Several came back for the evening service, accompanied by their father or mother. The offering was $16.35.—Virgil C. Finnell, 1442 Cole St., Des Moines, Iowa, July 6.

Fairview—Our church met in council July 1. Our elder, Bro. Orlando Ogden, presided. One letter of membership was granted. Our officers for the next six months or terms were elected, with Bro. John Price as superintendent; Bro. Ross Whigler, secretary. Bro. A. S. Whitsel was chosen delegate to District Meeting. Bro. J. W. Lear will conduct our series of meetings, commencing Sept. 2. Sister Sadie J. Miller, our missionary from India, was with us June 21 and 22. She delivered four excellent discourses on her work in India. June 23 we held an all-day meeting, which we well attended, considering the busy season. A collection of $17.60 was taken. May the Lord bless Sister Miller in her work in the foreign field.—John H. Price, R. D. 3, Unionville, Iowa, July 8.

South Waterloo—Bro. J. H. Flke, of Indiana, closed a two weeks' series of meetings at South Waterloo June 28. Two were received by baptism. A well-attended love feast was held on the evening of the 28th. A number of good sermons was given by Bro. I. H. Miller, of Sunnyside, Wash., followed by a program rendered by the Sunday-school.—S. Switzer, Waterloo, Iowa, July 6.

KANSAS.

Burr Oak church met in council July 5, with Eld. T. E. George presiding. Our elder, Bro. J. H. Brubaker, is at 10 A. M. Our Fourth of July meeting passed off pleasantly. A large crowd was in attendance. The forenoon was devoted to the younger children's exercises. Then a bountiful basket dinner was served, while the older children completed the program. All did well. Most of our young members were present and took part in the exercises. We have learned that it is the desire of the young members to engage in exercises of this kind than to be exposed to the temptations of the dance hall.—J. Bechtelheimer, Burr Oak, Kans., July 10.

Dorrance—July 4 we held an all-day Sunday-school Meeting at the churchhouse. The attendance was good and a number of Sunday-school workers were with us to help us in the work. We met with us. Many interesting and timely topics were considered and helpful discussions presented. How many of us do spend the day in a spirit of peace and Christian development than like the world, with noise and the demonstrations of warfare? Let us not forget our duty to our fellowmen. Next year we expect to plan for a "peace program." Would this not be a day in which we could profitably spend to spend the day? Since our last report one dear sister has put on Christ in baptism. Our Christian Workers' work is progressing nicely, under the leadership of Bro. Heckman and Sister Pearl Bright. Our church is prospering in the far southwest, has a good interest. The school is mostly made up of children. Many of these children have no parents and sisters, when going through Dorrance, to stop and give us a word of encouragement, and we thank those who have been with us during the year.—Ida Shull, R. 1, Box 19, Sunday-school Meeting Aug. 8. Our District Secretary, Sister Anna Kohn, will be with us.—Sunday-school Reporter, Mrs. Nellie Dorrance, Kans, July 12.

Garden City—Met in council June 17, with Eld. J. F. Crist presiding. Sunday-school and Christian Workers' officers were elected. Bro. J. F. Crist, superintendent of the Sunday-school; Bro. E. O. Wampler, president of the Christian Workers. Bro. Wampler is also superintendent. Two letters of church membership were received. We will hold our love Feast Sept. 30, at 6 P. M.—May Goff, Garden City, Kans., July 8.

MARYLAND.

Brownsville—July 4 was an all-day meeting at the Brownsville church. A special program was prepared, and at 11 A. M. an excellent sermon was preached by Eld. D. W. Kring, followed by a basket dinner, served by Sister Wm. V. T. Hoover, of Blue Ridge College, Md. In the afternoon opportunity was given for short addresses and testimonies. The meeting was both interesting and profitable. We also had some singing by the Blue Ridge Quartette. At 8 P. M. Bro. Hoover preached an interesting sermon to a large audience. Owing to the very cold attendance, the collection was thrown in the meeting, notwithstanding the interest was good. Very hearty congregations all day. This is the third similar meeting we have held, and all have been equally satisfactory, and proved a success.—Geo. F. Eshelman, Rt. 1, Box 1, July 8.

Fulton Avenue Church—Thus far this has been the busiest and warmest month of the year. Since our last report we have enjoyed our annual love feast, with Eld. Samuel Bowers, of Mechanicsburg, Pa., officiating. We appreciate both the presence and faithful services of Bro. Bowser. Two letters of membership were granted. Our elder, Bro. Wolfe, by letter. Two letters were granted. Before going into the Hospital, Eld. S. N. McCann preached for us on the morning of June 14. In the evening he preached for the Woodberry church. At this time Bro. McCann is doing very well. The surgeons say that he will be able to return to his home, where his family doctor will continue treatment for about three months. We feel sure that by that time he will be entirely cured. We are doing all we can to make his stay in the Hospital as pleasant as possible. Let the prayers of the righteous go up in his behalf!—J. S. Geiser, 1607 Edmondson Avenue, Baltimore, Md., July 8.

Ridgely church met in council July 12. Our elder, Bro. S. M. Pike, presided. Two letters were granted. A temperance meeting of two hours was appointed, Bro. T. Imler to serve one year, and Bro. M. F. King two years. Bro. Imler presided. Our annual missionary and harvest meeting is to be held Aug. 12, at 10 A. M. The semi-annual missionary offering is to be sent by us to the Middleville Mission Fund; the "monthly Sunday-school missionary collections, Eld. Jesse Calvert, Plymouth, Ind.—Sunday-school Reporter, Ridgely, Md., July 13.

Union Bridge—Bro. Levi S. Mohler, of Elizabethtown, Pa., has promised to come to us July 29, for a series of meetings. We have decided to hold our love feast Oct. 14.—Edna A. Dotterer.—Union Bridge, Md., July 8.

MICHIGAN.

Coleman church met in council June 24. Our elder presided. Eld. Jesse Hoffer was with us. Bro. Arnold was chosen to District Meeting. Bro. Perry Arnold is our delegate to District Meeting, with Bro. Wm. Hollenbaugh alternate. Our love feast was held on the evening of the 24th. A number of visiting brethren and sisters were present. We had a very interesting meeting. Communion and feet washing were held in the barn where our love feast was held. We have an encouraging Sunday-school. Sister Dessie Dreisbach, Sunday-school Secretary was with us June 17 and gave us an interesting talk.—Mrs. Nellie Dorrance, Coleman, July 10.

Lake View—On Sunday morning, July 2, we met for consecration service for the Sunday-school. Our elder, brethren Bro. George E. Deardorff conducted the services. We expect to have a Fourth of July Day program July 30.—Ella Keith, Brethren, Mich., July 5.

New Haven—The New Haven, Vestaburg and Crystal churches met with us June 28. Services were held in a grove. July 4 we had some very inspiring talks along the line of Christian Citizenship. Bro. Deardorff's subject was, "How to Have More Spirituality in the Sunday-school." "Teaching Children to Pray" was the theme of Sister Secretary. Sister Sarah Long, was with us and gave us some very good thoughts along this line. The children were entertained us with songs, recitations and other exercises. A treat of peanuts and candy was distributed to the children. All went home feeling that while the freedom and birth of our nation had been suitably celebrated, we also had glorified God while at it.—Emrick, R. D. 2, Middleton, Mich., July 8.

MINNESOTA.

Deer Park—Our church met in council July 1. Bro. W. H. Eikenberry presided. Deep interest was taken in the welfare of the church.—Mrs. J. T. Reeves, Barnum, Minn., July 8.

Minneapolis Mission—June 27 Bro. Hutchison came to us and remained about ten days. He gave us five sermons, all of which were very helpful to those who heard them. On account of local conditions, a special celebration, held here in the city, beginning July 1 and continuing for a week, it was not advisable to hold services each evening. We wish Bro. Hutchison's visit might have been at a more opportune time. July 9 Dr. S. H. Miller, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and Bro. Hoffman, from North Dakota, were with us. Bro. Miller gave us two instructive and uplifting sermons. Bro. D. D. Culler, of Mount Morris, Ill., stopped with us a few hours on his way home from Wisconsin. Many of our members, though but short, are a great encouragement to the workers in our Sunday-school. To the church at large we say that we need more clothing. We have calls coming to us, but are unable to meet them. All kinds of clothing for girls and boys are needed. Do not forget the work we are doing. Address all: 1210 Twenty-fifth Ave., N., Minneapolis, Minn., July 13.

Worthington.—July 4 the members of this church, with a large number of friends and neighbors, gathered in the grove at the home of Brother and Sister Brubaker, for a Sunday-school picnic. Bro. J. Long addressed the audience at 2:30 P. M. on the subject of "Temperance." Baskets were brought along, and at noon all partook of a bountiful dinner. In the afternoon a Program was given by the Sunday-school. Refreshments were again served in the evening, after which all returned to their homes, pronouncing the day a very pleasant and profitable Fourth of July had been spent. Bro. D. P. Schechter, of Winona, Minn., spent Sunday, July 3, at this place. He gave us two very interesting and instructive discourses, which were greatly appreciated by those present.—Alma L. Schultz, Worthington, Minn., July 11.

MISSOURI.

Deep Water church met in council July 8. Eld. T. J. Simcoxes presided. Very little business came before the meeting. We reorganized our Sunday-school for six months, with Bro. Williams as superintendent and assistants, Bro. Maurice Varser, secretary. Bro. Simmons preached on Saturday night, and on Sunday morning he gave us one of the best talks we ever heard.—Etta M. Fahnestock, R. D. 34, Montrose, Mo., July 11.

Fair View.—Our church met in council July 8. Bro. Geo. Bro. J. R. Thompson presided. Very little business came before the meeting. We decided to hold a series of meetings, beginning July 30, with Bro. G. W. Lentz to do the preaching, at the close of the meetings. A collection of $3.70 was taken.—Maggie Hughes, R. D. 1, Box 107, Hickman Mills, July 11.

Kansas City (First Church of the Brethren).—We met in council July 6. Eld. W. M. Lentz presided. The regular business of importance was before the council, all was transacted in a Christian spirit. Three letters were handed out.—C. Ingler, Kansas City, Mo., July 11.

Mound church met in council July 2, with our elder, Bro. Ira Wineland, presiding. There was not much business on hand. The ones having charge of the painting and papering of the church gave their report. The work will soon be finished. Our series of meetings is to begin Oct. 8, "the Sunday following our District Meeting. Love feast will be held Oct. 29. Bro. G. W. Lentz will conduct our meetings.—Wm. Wineland, Mound City, Kans. Bro. Hamilton Weiker's Meeting each Sunday evening.—Bettie Enos, Adrian, Mo., July 8.

North St. Joseph Mission.—The Annual Meeting had a very helpful influence upon our work, as well as upon the town. We have enjoyed having visitors with us at each one of our devotional services. Last Sunday morning, after services, an applicant was received into the church by baptism. Eld. Hamilton, He has been a close student of the Bible and had been looking for a church which measured up to the Bible standard. His attention was called to our people through the newspaper notices of the Annual Meeting. After investigation he decided we were the people with whom he would cast his lot. May the Lord bless him that he may be a blessing to us all. —J. S. Kline, 2919 St. Joseph Avenue, St. Joseph, Mo., July 11.

NEBRASKA.

Alton.—Bro. Geo. Flory and wife came to us June 10, and held a two weeks' series of meetings. We had very enjoyable meetings. Nine were baptized and one reclaimed. Our work here has been much helped by the consecrated efforts of some of the brethren from the East, and we appreciate what they have done for us. July 4 we had an all-day meeting of a program, and had refreshments. It was somewhat of a neighborhood meeting, and we all had a good time and enjoyed the feast. We have reorganized our Sunday-school, with Sister Edna Correll as superintendent.—Emily D. Moore, Orafino, Nebr., July 11.

Juniata.—Our church met in council June 29. Our elder, Bro. C. W. Hargedine, presided. Some business was transacted. We decided to have a series of meetings as soon as we can procure a minister.—Mary Liverpool, Juniata, Nebr., July 11.

Omaha.—We met in special business meeting July 6. Officers for Christian Workers' Meeting were elected. Two letters of membership were granted. On Sunday we had a special service for children. A good audience was present. Tomorrow we will hold our annual outing at Elmwood Park. We are getting ready for our District Meeting to begin July 20. Bro. Weaver will conduct them. We crave an interest in the prayers in behalf of our meetings.—Alice Garber, 2528 Lake St., Omaha, Nebr., July 11.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Carrington church met in council June 24, with Bro. Wm. McCann presiding. Sunday-school officers were chosen, and all business properly disposed of. Two letters were received. Sister Cora Vess will represent the church at the District Meeting. Bro. Paul Mohler came to us June 15 and has been holding a series of meetings for the past three weeks. The attendance was good, and much interest was manifested throughout the meeting. Four were received into the church by baptism, and two were reclaimed. The church has been greatly strengthened and encouraged by the faithful efforts of our brother. He presented the Word to us most truly, and the lessons taught will not be soon forgotten, we trust, not soon be forgotten. Our communion was held July 1. Bro. Mohler officiated. About eighty surrounded the Lord's table, and many outsiders were present at the service. The church is in a prosperous condition and our Sunday-school is growing nicely.—Edna Mohler, Carrington, N. Dak., July 12.

Englevale.—Our church met in council July 2. Much business came before the meeting in regard to building a church. The work is to start at once. We also elected officers for the coming year, with Bro. C. W. Crill as treasurer; Sister Bessie Smith, clerk; Bro. J. R. Smith, solicitor for church funds; the writer, correspondent. Sister Carrie Crill was chosen to represent us at the District Meeting.—Ladora Smith, Englevale, N. Dak., July 13.

Wells County congregation met in council July 1, at the Roosevelt church, with Bro. Hamilton Weiker in charge. We enjoyed a very pleasant and spiritual meeting and felt that the Lord was with us. Two were received into the church by letter and one was reclaimed. Bro. W. J. McCann was chosen elder for the following year. Bro. Nicum desired to be relieved because of his age, health, and the long distance he lives from us. All the other officers were retained. As the members have all left the vicinity of the Roosevelt church-house, it was decided to move the house to where the Hebron church now stands, or somewhere near there; also to remove the bodies from the cemetery, and place them in the cemetery at Sykeston, providing all friends of the dead are willing. The church has been hindered in her work because the two leaders of meetings, Sunday and prayer-meeting, are so widely separated. A request to allow a division was sent to District Meeting. All felt that this will be for the best interests of the church. It was decided to hold a love feast this fall, the date to be announced later. July 14 food will be received into the church by baptism.—Ruth Wine McCann, Sykeston, N. Dak., July 15.

OHIO.

Beech Grove.—Bro. Stephen Petry, of North Dakota, was with us over Sunday. He gave us two very interesting talks, which were very much appreciated. Our Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meeting are increasing nicely.—E. S. Hollinger, R. D. 1, Hollansburg, Ohio, July 19.

Fostoria.—Our church met in council July 9, with Bro. Hess to do something for the Master. Our Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meeting conditions are good. We have had a few hindrances to block our way, but we feel that the Lord is blessing us and will continue to do so. Since our last report one dear soul was baptized. At a recent council the following officers for the different departments of church work were elected: Bro. Hess, superintendent of the Sunday-school; Sister Mabel Caskie, superintendent of the Christian Workers' Meeting; Sister Caskie, secretary of the treasurer; Bro. J. J. Lindower, president of our Christian Workers' Meeting. Bro. Hess was appointed delegate to the District Meeting. The services of Bro. C. A. Wright and wife have been secured for the pastorate, and they commence their labors with us.—Leah B. Wright, 841 Leonard St., Fostoria, Ohio, July 19.

Garwood.—We met in council and enjoyed a very spiritual meeting. Bro. Hollinger presided. One letter was read. Elders Jesse Stuteman, Samuel Blocher and B. F. Sharp were chosen as delegates to the District Meeting. Granville Minnich and wife were ordained to the eldership, and Sister Minnich and wife were ordained to the second degree of the ministry. The work at this place is progressing nicely. Bro. Hollinger was appointed elder at a previous meeting to solicit funds to enlarge our church building. Bro. Harry Shaffer, Garwood, was appointed treasurer of building committee was appointed. Our church building is too small for our congregation, and we are planning to enlarge our young people to more active service. We have singing one evening each week.—Mrs. Ella Hollinger, Garwood, Ohio, secretary.

Lima.—Sister Bertie Hoffman, wife of Bro. G. A. Snider, our elder, presiding. Our Christian Workers' Meeting was reorganized July 3. Bro. Ira Wineland, Mound City, Kans., from Union Bridge, Md., and he is now our regular pastor. Our Sunday-school picnic on Saturday July 4 in the City Park.

Della Lehman, Lima, Ohio, July 7.

Trotwood church met in council June 28, with Eld. D. M. Garver presiding. Four letters were granted. Sister Elizabeth Flory (nee Garver), who lately married Bro. J. S. Flory, of Virginia, was also granted a letter, and she is a helpmeet to her husband. Her church letter was then granted. Bro. Flory was chosen delegate to the District Meeting, which will begin Aug. 13, to be conducted by Bro. B. F. Heckman, of Virginia. Our Sunday-school picnic will be held Aug. 4, at 6 P. M. Bro. Earl Neff gave us a talk on "The Circleville Mission."—N. A. Conover, R. D. 1, Trotwood, Ohio, July 7.

OKLAHOMA.

Elk City.—Bro. J. F. Wampler held a regular correspondent from this place is sorely afflicted, and we ask the prayers of the saints for her. Sunday, Sept. 1, the writer held a spiritual feast. Nearly seventy surrounded the Lord's table. The visiting brethren were Eld. Jesse Calvert, wife and son, Michigan, Eld. C. S. Pitzer and wife, from Cordell, Okla., also Brother and Sister Nornhold, Brother and Sister Hertzler, and Sister Hoffman, from Cordell, Okla., and Cordell, Okla. The reorganization of our Sunday-school resulted in choosing Bro. W. C. Gingrich superintendent. Sept. 4 was an excellent corps of teachers and a very interesting Sunday-school. Our collection for the day amounted to $6.85. July 4 we took the children to a grove and had preaching and dinner. Bro. Pitzer will please bring "Kingdom Song" directory.—F. B. Hower, Elk City, Okla., July 6.

Fairview.—Our church met in council July 2. Panhandle of Texas and Pecos Valley of New Mexico will convene in Thomas, Okla., Sept. 1. The writer, Superintendent, Christian Workers', Missionary, and the Child Saving Meeting will be held on Tuesday, Aug. 30. Christian Workers' Meeting will be held on Tuesday, Aug. 23. Trains arrive as follows: 8:30 A. M.; from the north, 11:42 A. M.; 2:13 P. M.; from the north, 4:20 P. M.; from the south, 10:15 A. M. Three ministers will please bring "Kingdom Songs" to the Brethren's new song book.—J. C. Nininger, 1219 Vilas Ave., Alva, Okla., July 11.

Washita.—Our church met in council July 1, with Bro. J. R. Fitzgerald presiding. Bro. Fitzgerald, our elder, resigned, was electing new officers for the coming six months. Bro. Hiser to act as superintendent. Sister Ella Hiser, secretary. Bro. Hiser sends one query to the meeting. Bro. Merkey is our superintendent of the Sunday-school, and Sister Merkey, secretary. Any Sunday-school superintendent is also to act as Sunday-school delegate. Bro. O. D. Yoder to act as delegate of Christian Workers' Meeting. Bro. Jonathan J. Yoder, of Canton, Kans., is just beginning a singing-school at this place.—Jonathan J. Yoder, R. D. 4, Cordell, Okla., July 6.

OREGON

Newberg.—Eld. A. L. Gorham and wife, of Payette, Idaho, came to us July 9. Bro. Gorham preached two splendid sermons on the subjects, "Christian Unity" and "Christianity" and "The Awfulness of Sin." Sister Grace Brubaker has been elected secretary of the Christian Workers' Meeting for three months.—Bessie Marie King, Newberg, Oregon, July 10.

PENNSYLVANIA.

George's Creek.—Our church met in council July 1 at the Falrview church, with Bro. Wm. Beachley presiding. Several important matters were considered. Our elder read an explanation of the Annual Conference. The church is in order here. Sister Mary Shickel, our field missionary, has undergone a very dangerous operation, and is lying in the hospital at Somerset, Pa. She called for Eld. A. Dobson and Bro. F. F. Durr, who anointed her just prior to her departure for the hospital. We are glad to say that Sister Shickel is likely get well and resume her duties again. Bro. Francis Brindle has moved to the Falrview church, and will take charge of the work at that place in October. Bro. Brindle has moved into the parsonage, the Shickel house, beginning Oct. 1, to be followed with a love feast.—Minnie M. Durr, R. D. 1, Box 60, Meyersdale, Pa.

Germantown.—Our business meeting was held July 3. Brethren M. C. Swigart and S. P. Kittinger were elected delegates to our District Meeting, to be held in Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 13. On Sunday morning, July 3, Bro. T. T. Myers, of Huntingdon, Pa., preached a very spiritual sermon for us, on "The Straight and Narrow Way."—Anna Swigart, 6611 Germantown Ave., Philadelphia, Pa., July 11.

Huntingdon church met in council June 2. Bro. A. H. Hafer presided. Some business was transacted. Some of you think that the weather is too warm to attend to our religious duties. Our prayer-meeting is well attended and prayer each day. He gave us his favorite text, "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee." Bro. Homer Songer was appointed financial secretary, taking the place of Bro. Jos. Taylor. A few matters of business came before the meeting and were disposed of satisfactorily. We feel that our church meetings are helpful. Each member has a place at church meeting and should try to be there. We are also trying to open our Sunday-school library. We expect to have the Ministerial and Sunday-school Meeting here Aug. 30.—Eleanor J. Brumbaugh, Huntingdon, Pa., July 11.

Pleasant Hill.—We have decided to have our love feast Sept. 30, at 2 P. M. Bro. Caylor Arnold, of Ohio, will also have a series of meetings at this place and the Codorus congregation. Bro. Arnold is a minister.—Amanda K. Miller, R. D. 7, Spring Grove, Pa., July 16.

Red Bank.—Our church met in council July 7, with Bro. H. S. Replogle presiding. Election of officers was the object of the meeting, which resulted in Brethren A. D. Metzler, J. H. Replogle, and S. H. Replogle being elected. These three brethren, with their wives, were installed into office July 10. Bro. Metzler, our newly elected elder, expressed a desire for Christian baptism, which was administered in the afternoon at the close of the love feast. Holy Spirit work mightily in our midst, and cause others to decide who are standing on the fence.—Mrs. R. R. Hollinger, R. No. 1, New Bethlehem, Pa., July 11.

Middlebranch.—Bro. Bro. D. K. Clapper, of Meyersdale, Pa., began a series of meetings, continuing until July 19. The meetings closed with a love feast. Bro. Clapper preached fifteen sermons. He handled the Word as one skilled in the battle for the kingdom of the Lord. Three accepted Christ and were baptized prior to the love feast. The attendance was good, considering the intensely warm weather and busy season. We have not been pastored with a new pastor by Mission Board. Bro. H. R. Helsey has accepted the pastorate and will commence preaching the plain Word.—W. A. Gaunt.—J. H. Cogan, Biddlesburg, Pa., July 19.

Snyder.—We have just closed a series of meetings for us the latter part of May and the beginning of June. He preached fourteen soul-stirring sermons. Two were new accessions to the church, many are counting the cost. The attendance was very good.—A. K. Frederick, Martinsburg, Pa., July 12.

Spring Creek.—Services were held at the Canowago house July 9, when Bro. Jacob Wittmore delivered a good sermon. We were glad to meet Bro. Mohler again, for he has had a good run of success in the meetings he has held. Bro. Mohler is jolly and sunshine throughout his declining years. Elders Daniel Hollinger and Jacob Wittmore were with us over Sunday. A. H. Hoffer, a minister in the first degree, was present also. After the sermon by Bro. Wittmore one was baptized in Canowago Creek by Eld. S. Z. Witmer. Eld. Geo. Miller died in 1733, not in 1833, as was reported in the issue of the Gospel Messenger of July 1.—Edgar M. Hoffer, Elizabethtown, Pa., July 12.

TENNESSEE.

Beaver Creek.—We met in council July 1. Eld. J. Henry Petersheim presided. Bro. Wm. Hutchison and Sister Dulcy were elected as delegates to our District Meeting. Bro. H. F. Bailey and wife, of Greenville, were with us and we report one precious soul came out on the Lord's side. Our Sunday-school and prayer meeting are progressing very nicely.—J. Ella Petersheim, Limestone, Tenn., July 11.

Pleasant View.—We had services at this place June 23, by Bro. J. D. Clark, who preached services on Sunday, when Bro. Samuel Bowman, of Knob Creek, Tenn., preached for the brethren in the forenoon. Owing to the sickness and death of the wife of the writer, I was not able to fill the appointments at either place.—N. T. Larimer, Jonesboro, Tenn., July 7.

TEXAS.

Portland.—Our dear brethren and sisters of Portland, Texas, enjoyed a very spiritual love feast together, on the evening of July 4, with twenty communicants. Bro. J. A. Miller, our traveling evangelist from Manvel, Texas, was with us. He gave us several soul-stirring talks during his stay here. Five of the Bethel church members of Bee County, Texas, came to enjoy the feast with us, and report a good time at their home. Eld. P. R. Strohm, and wife, who also gave us valuable assistance. We met at the public school building for our Sunday-school service, conducted by Bro. J. A. Miller. The feast continued without intermission. Eld. Jacob Wittmore officiated. We are in hopes that he is soon to be working and striving to do that which is right.—Amanda Wittmore, Portland, Texas, July 12.

VIRGINIA.

Fairfax.—Our church met in council July 8, with Eld. J. M. Neff presiding. Elected to hold our District Meeting Aug. 5 at 2 P. M. Brethren L. B. Plum and B. D. Miller are our delegates to District Meeting, with Brethren B. F. Miller

(Concluded on Page 464.)

CORRESPONDENCE

LICK CREEK CHURCH, OHIO.

Saturday, June 10, was a busy day at the Lick Creek church. A communion had been announced for that evening, and other important work was planned for the afternoon. Bro. John Flory preached the morning sermon, and in the afternoon an election was held to call two brethren to the ministry, as had been decided at the spring council. The lot fell on Brethren Arthur Sellers and Clyde St. John, who were duly elected. At the close of the church council Bro. Clyde Miller to the second degree of the ministry, and ordained Bro. D. P. Koch to the eldership.

In the evening probably more than a hundred and fifty persons surrounded the tables of the Lord and took part in a spiritual love feast, led by Bro. D. G. Berkebile. A number of visiting ministers,—Brethren J. W. Keiser, John Flory, D. G. Berkebile, E. M. Rittenhouse, George Throne and George Garner,—were present from adjoining churches. Sister Hannah Hoffer, of Lick Creek, Christian Krabill, who now lives in Maryland, but who was with us at the feast. Bro. Berkebile gave us an excellent sermon on Sunday morning.

Thinking that the best way of keeping our young people (and some of the older ones as well) away from the follies so common on the celebration of our nation's birthday, the church decided to have something better in the nature of a special program for the day, consisting of songs and recitations by the Sunday-school children, and of talks, suitable to the occasion, by some of the older ones. A forenoon and afternoon program was rendered in the grove across from the church. At the noon hour a basket dinner was served in the basement of the church. A number of members from other near-by churches enjoyed the program and Bro. Charles Kintner, of the Maumee church, assisted materially in making it a success. In spite of the oppressive heat all seemed to enjoy themselves, and to consider this an excellent way of celebrating the " Fourth."

Under the efficient leadership of our elder, Bro. G. W. Sellers, the church is in a prosperous condition. A number of improvements have been made in the past year. A new cement retaining wall has been built for the platform in front of the house, a vestibule has been built, and the house has been newly seated. While we are thus looking after the physical things pertaining to the Lord's house, may he give us grace to be equally concerned about the things that are spiritual. Edward Kintner.

WHAT I LEARN FROM DAVID'S LOVE AND INDULGENCE IN HIS SON.

Much has been written and said about mother love,—its power, its influence and its results. Probably father love has been too much overlooked. Let us consider David's unfaltering love for his son Absalom.

When Absalom was in exile, to which he had been driven for killing his brother, Amnon, the king " mourned after him daily." Joab, being one of the first in fact, planned a plausible scheme, whereby he might be able to bring about a reconciliation between King David and his son, Absalom. When, at the end of three years, Absalom was brought back, Joab still refused to see him, but two years later he finally relented.

Absalom greatly desired to see his father, and finally he sent Joab with a message to the king. Then David sent for Absalom, who came to the king, and bowed himself. Lovingly the king kissed Absalom (not discovering his son's rank hypocrisy). He virtually said: "You are pardoned."

It would seem that an observant person could have noticed the discontension of Absalom, and that it was not the sincerity of the heart which prompted his actions. But Absalom was his father's favorite son, and while David had keen perceptions, and could see the evil designs of most other men, he was blind to his son's cupidity. When he came in his artful way, David's heart opened wide. His eyes and judgment were blinded, apparently. Not until a messenger revealed to the king the real situation, did he realize his danger. O how many parents fail to understand their children!

Then the king gave the alarm, and fled with his servants for his life, weeping as they went. When the armies were sent out to quell the rebellion, the king gave his command to the captains, saying: "Deal gently, for my sake, with the young man, even with Absalom." Although the welfare of Israel was at stake, and the capture of the rebellious boy was the only hope for the salvation of both the people and the country,—when David received the dreadful message of Absalom's death, it overwhelmed the controllable sorrow to his heart. In his deep grief he exclaimed: "O my son Absalom, my son, my son Absalom! would God I had died for thee, O Absalom, my son, my son!"

He lamented and refused to be comforted, until Joab gave a much-needed reproof. He said: "Thou hast shamed this day the faces of all thy servants, which this day have saved thy life, and the lives of thy sons and thy daughters, . . . in that thou lovest thine enemies, and hatest thy friends. For thou hast declared this day, that thou regardest neither princes nor servants: for this day I perceive, that if Absalom had lived, and all we had died this day, then it had pleased thee well." Then the king hearkened to Joab. Might it not be that the root of all the trouble experienced by David was the result of overindulgence for his son Absalom? Lucinda Stauffer.

FALLEN ASLEEP

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord"

Rouse, Sister Gallie Caroline, daughter of James and Mary Sadlin, died at her home in the bounds of the Scott Valley church June 28, 1911, aged 63 years, 9 months and 24 days. She was married to John Rouse Sept. 15, 1868. To this union were born four sons and one daughter. She leaves four children. Her husband and one son preceded her. She united with the Church of the Brethren about twenty-five years ago and lived a faithful Christian life until death, which was marked by a strong desire for apology. Services at the Scott Valley church by Bro. C. M. Yearout, assisted by Brethren W. E. Miller and John Sherry. Text, Amos 4: 12.—Purnia Smith, Westphalia, Kans.

Brown, George, son of Geo. W. and Margaret (Brumbaugh) Brown, died at the home of his parents in the Rossville congregation, Noble County, Ind., July 4, 1911, aged 58 years, 2 months and 15 days. He was married to Anna McCoy on March 31, 1878. To them were born six children, three of whom, with the widow, survive. He also leaves his father and mother, both of whom are above four score years of age. He, with his wife, united with the Brethren at this place in February, 1898. Services by Eld. J. A. Long at the Christian chapel, from Job 14: 14. Interment in the Chapel cemetery.—Bro. Brown, while raking hay, was seized with a severe attack of heart trouble, which had been threatening him for some time, and died in about 11 minutes. When the post-mortem examination revealed a growth within the cavity of the heart which caused his sudden death.—Walter Swihart, Clarksburg, Ind.

Brumbaugh, Ora Franklin, born near Bradford, Ohio, Dec. 25, 1877, died at his home near Inglewood, Ohio, June 29, 1911, aged 33 years, 6 months and 4 days. He was married to Catharine Crowell Feb. 5, 1899. Six children were born to them, two of whom preceded him. He leaves a wife, five children, his parents, one brother and one sister. Services near his old home at Harris Creek. Interment in the cemetery near by.—Anna Witwer, Greenville, Ohio.

Coulter, Evan, son of William and Elizabeth (Jenkins) Coulter, died within the bounds of the Big Swatara congregation, Whitley County, Ind., March 17, 1911, aged 61 years, 6 months and 11 days. He was married to Sarah Ann Hoffman, March 6, 1909. He leaves a son, daughter and widow. He united with the Church of the Brethren in May 1909. Services by Bro. Jacob Shippensburg, Pa.

Eller, Sister Hannah, wife of Eld. Henry Etter (deceased), died June 19, 1911, aged 72 years, 8 months and 19 days. She had been ill for a long time, and much of her time was not able to attend services. She was a faithful member and did all she could for the church. She leaves one daughter and five sons. Services by Bro. Casper F. Hoefelt. Text, Prov. 25: 18. Interment in the Silver burying ground.—Joseph Burkhart, Shippensburg, Pa.

Hochstetler, Sister Barbara, in Coshocton County, Ohio, Sept. 7, 1840, died July 3, 1911, in the bounds of the Lick Creek congregation, Ind., at the home of Sister Rebecca Kiefaber (her niece), where she had lived for many years, made her home, aged 70 years, 9 months and 26 days. She united with the Church of the Brethren in 1864, and lived a faithful member until death. She was a daughter of Eld. Moses and Sister Barbara Hochstetler, who lived and died in the Holmes County years ago. Two brothers and two sisters survive her. Services by Eld. Daniel Hochstetler, North Manchester, Ind., assisted by the home ministers. Text, Philpp. 1: 21.—B. F. Goshorn, Clay City, Ind.

Hoffman, Sister Fannie, nee Myers, wife of Isaac Hoffman, born July 9, 1837, died in the bounds of the Back Creek congregation, Pa., June 24, 1911, aged 73 years, 11 months and 11 days. Sister Hoffman was the mother of three sons and seven daughters, one son and a daughter preceding her in death. She was a consistent member of the Church of the Brethren for many years. Services June 24 at the aboutgrove church in the Brethren in Christ by Eld. Elders John Lehner and C. H. Steerman. Interment in the graveyard adjoining.—Wilbur A. Deardorff, Roaring Spring, Pa.

Horner, Bro. Jeremiah, born in Cambria County, Pa., July 16, 1841, died at the hospital in Johnstown, Pa., June 21, 1911, aged 69 years, 11 months and 5 days. The hospital he was taken to his late home in Windber, Pa. Besides his widow, he is survived by three sons and three daughters. Services in the Windber house by Brethren E. B. Essig and D. M. Adams. Interment in the burying ground on the Horner homestead.—J. H. Lehman, Scalp Level, Pa.

Rosfield, Sister Frederick, born in Steinach, Saxe-Meiningen, Germany, April 29, 1831, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Susan Lehman, Ind., from the effects of a stroke of a fall and exhaustion, June 25, 1911, aged 80 years, 1 month and 4 days. She arrived in Mexico, Ind., June 25, 1853, and united in marriage to Caspar Hosfield, Sept. 22, 1853, who preceded her to the world forty-eight years ago. Ten children were born to this union, three of whom died in infancy. She was a faithful member of the Church of the Brethren for many years. It was an inspiration to be in the vicinity of this dear one who, through great suffering of nine weeks, showed such a beautiful example of patient and Christ-like faithful of others. Her desire was to go to be with her Savior. Short services were held at the home after which the body was taken to Shippensburg, Pa., for interment. The sermon was preached by Bro. Brumbaugh, assisted by Casper Hoefelt. She chose for her text Rev. 13: 14. Interment June 24.—Jennie M. Shriver, Huron, Ohio.

Jennings, Bro. Ira O., died in the South Ottumwa congregation, Ottumwa, Iowa, July 8, 1911, aged 59 years, 1 month and 16 days. His wife died in the church a little less than one year ago. He was an earnest worker in Sunday-school and church. He leaves his wife, one son and two daughters. Services by the writer from the church, assisted by Brethren Peter and Henry Brower, of South English, Iowa.—Geo. W. Burgin, Ottumwa, Iowa.

Kob, Eld. L. M., born in Dauphin County, Pa., Dec. 25, 1834, died at his home in Garden Grove, Iowa, June 16, 1911, aged 76 years, 6 months and 22 days. He came with his parents to Henry County, Ind., when he was six years old. Where he now lived when he was united in marriage to Miss Anna Wimmer of that county, March 29, 1857, and they emigrated to Iowa the same year, settling in Adams County June 4, in which county they have ever since resided. Two sons and three daughters were born to this union, two sons preceded him in death. He united with the Church of the Brethren in 1865, and has been for years a very zealous worker in the church, and was soon chosen to the ministry. Owing to the rapid progress made by him he was soon advanced to the second degree of the ministry and then to the eldership. In this capacity he has ever since served his church faithfully and well. His sickness was of long duration, yet he never murmured nor complained, but longed to go home to rest and be relieved of his suffering. His death the church feels a great loss, for his life had been daily consecrated to the Master's service. Services in the Franklin County church by Eld. A. L. Sears. Text, Rev. 22: 14. Interment in the adjoining cemetery.—A. L. Sears, R. D. 1, Garden Grove, Iowa.

Lambert, Bro. Riley, born near Mooreland, Ind., Dec. 15, 1837, died near the same place June 5, 1911. July 16, 1856, Bro. Lambert was married to Mary Ann Kile. To this union were born two sons, who preceded him. Sept. 7, 1887, they moved to Kentucky and remained there until 1904, when they went back to Mooreland, Ind. His health had been failing very rapidly for the last few years, and he knew it would not be long until his Master would call him. He was a member of the Church of the Brethren. Services at his residence in Mooreland by Eld. A. Bowman. Text, Heb. 11: 16.—Chas. W. Miller, New Lisbon, Ind.

Lortsch, Sister Magnolia H., nee May, wife of N. T. Larimer, born May 24, 1858, died July 2, 1911, aged 53 years, 1 month and 8 days. She was married to N. T. Larimer Feb. 20, 1883. To this union twelve children were born, two of whom preceded her. She made a profession at the age of nineteen, and lived a consistent Christian life until death. She was always ready and willing to do her part at any time. She was both a companion and mother in every respect, always ready to make a sacrifice for her family. Psalms 23 and 24 were scriptures to which she always looked for consolation.—N. T. Larimer, Jonesboro, Tenn.

McFadden, Sister Mary, nee Bucher, born in Wayne County, Ohio, Oct. 9, 1844, died in the bounds of the Mohican congregation, June 22, 1911, aged 66 years, 8 months and 16 days. She was married to Robert Taylor McFadden in 1867. To this union were born four sons, all of whom survive her. The husband and father preceded her four years ago. After her marriage she united with the Church of the Brethren, and remained a faithful member until death. Services by Bro. A. I. Heestand. Text, Isa. 38: 1. Interment in the Mohican cemetery.—Lena Leaman, R. D. 5, West Salem, Ohio.

Myers, Bro. Alexander, died of old age at the home of Mr. Sanford, where he had been employed as a gardener this summer, aged 82 years. He came here from Bainbridge, Ohio, and was one of the best Christians I ever knew. He had not heard a sermon preached for ten years till Bro. J. V. Fein, home preached here last March, and then he walked four miles to enjoy the splendid sermon which everybody enjoyed so well. When he was taken sick he sent for me and stated that he had a desire to go to be at rest. He said he wanted to be buried like the Brethren buried—to have a plain funeral. He gave me a twenty-dollar gold piece which he said he had kept for ten years for that purpose. He said he wanted no get out of our brethren to preach his funeral we were not to have a preacher. So we had services and buried him without a minister. The weather was very hot and no regular preacher was fifty miles away.—Isaac Cripe, Herndon, Pla.

Perry, Bro. Amiles, of Waynesboro, Pa., formerly of Carroll County, Md., died June 27, 1911, aged 31 years, 4 months and 7 days. While working on the roof of a house he stepped too near the edge of the roof and fell to the ground, a distance of thirty-six feet. His thigh was broken and he sustained several other bruises, but his condition was not considered serious. Peritonitis developed, and he died three days after the accident. He united with the church several years ago. He had great strength of character, a kind and affectionate disposition, and was ready and willing to help men. He is survived by his wife and two children. Services by Eld. C. H. Oellig. Interment in the Green Hill cemetery.—Sudie M. Wingert, Waynesboro, Pa.

Priser, Louisiana, nee Ross, daughter of George and Hannah Ross, born in Clark County, Ohio, June 24, 1845, died at her home near Sidney, Ind., July 7, 1911, of Bright's disease and cancer, aged 66 years and 11 days. She came with her parents from Ohio to Kosciusko County, Ind., in 1849, where she lived ever since. In her earlier days there were sons and four daughters. The father and three sisters preceded her. She united with the Church of the Brethren in 1874, and lived faithful until death. She was married to John Priser March 2, 1890. Her husband preceded her five years ago. She leaves a stepdaughter, an adopted daughter, brothers and a host of friends. Services at the Spring Creek church by Bro. Henry Neff. Interment in the Spring Creek cemetery.—Nora A. Ross, Sidney, Ind.

Schechter, Pearl, daughter of our elder, Bro. Joshua and Sister Minnie Schechter, born Feb. 1, 1906, near Worthington, Minn., died July 7, 1911, aged 5 years, 5 months and 6 days. She was the last parents. Services at the house. Services in the Worthington church by the writer, assisted by Bro. Chas. Wolf. Text, Mark 10: 14. Interment in Oak Worthington, Minn.

Shidler, Bro. Henry S., died July 4, 1911, of a complication of diseases, aged 66 years, 9 months and 12 days. His wife (a sister in the church) and two sons of his first marriage survive him. Bro. Shelly was baptized April 30, 1906. Services at the Chiques church July 7, by Bro. Hiram Kaylor and Aaron Martin (a minister in the River Brethren) also. Interment in the adjoining cemetery.—Henry S. Zug, R. D. 1, Mount Hope, Pa.

Waltz, Eliza, nee Kelser, born in Madison County, Ind., June 28, 1831, died June 1, 1911, in Henry County, Ind. Jan. 26, 1871, she was united in marriage to Lewis Waltz. To this union were born four sons and three daughters. In 1897 she united with the Christian church, and remained faithful until death. Services by Eld. A. Bowman at the Christian church in Mooreland. Text, Heb. 11: 16.—Chas. W. Miller, New Lisbon, Ind.

Wenger, Sister Elizabeth, nee McAfferty, born near Smithville, Wayne Co., Ohio, May 8, 1843, died June 29, 1911, at her home near South English, Iowa. She has lived in Iowa over forty-three years, aged 68 years, 1 month and 21 days. In 1863 she, with her parents, moved to South English, Iowa, where she grew to womanhood. April 5, 1868, she was united in marriage to Joseph H. Wenger. Four children blessed this union. Three, with the husband, are left to mourn their loss. Oct. 23, 1881, she, with her husband, united with the Church of the Brethren, and lived faithful to the end. Eighteen years ago she was stricken with a severe form of rheumatism, from which she never recovered, but during this time she traveled much with her companion, attending nearly all of our Annual Meetings. Her afflictions caused her much suffering, which, with other complications, caused her death. During all this time she never murmured, but always trusted in her Savior. At one time, when she could not come to the door, she was anointed in harmony with God's Word, and rallied again, seemingly with a new lease of life. Funeral services, by Eld. H. C. N. Coffman, assisted by the brethren. Text, Job 14: 14. Interment in the cemetery near by.—Peter Brower, South English, Iowa.

She united with the church at the age of fifteen years and lived faithful until death. Services by Vernon F. Schwim and the writer. Text, Philip. 1: 21.—H. M. Schwalm, Wakarusa, Ind.

Wolf, Sister Margaret, wife of Bro John W. Wolf (deceased), born Oct. 26, 1838, died June 24, 1911, aged 84 years, 7 months and 29 days. To this union seven children were born, nine of whom survive. Sister Wolf was a consistent member of the Church of the Brethren for more than forty years. Services at the Union church by Elders J. F. Appleman and S. F. Henricks.—A. Laura Appelman, Plymouth, Ind.

Ziegler, Sister Mary, nee Conner, died in the bounds of the Mingo congregation, Pa., June 6, 1911, aged 78 years, 7 months and 15 days. She leaves five sons and five daughters. Her husband and several children preceded her in death. Services by Brethren E. F. Nogle and E. P. Cassel. Interment in the Mingo cemetery. Text, Psa. 116: 15; Num. 23: 10.—Elizabeth B. Hunsberger, Limerick, Pa.

The Olive Branch of Peace and Good Will to :: Men ::

By S. F. SANGER and D. HAYS

¶ The doctrine of nonresistance as taught and practiced by the Church of the Brethren has, at different times, brought her members face to face with severe trials and suffering, and even death. But with all that, it has also been instrumental in preserving that abiding faith in God, that feeling of brotherly love, tha' unyielding fidelity to the teaching of Christ's Gospel, which characterize the true followers of the Prince of Peace. Sustained by the deep convictions as to the right of it, the persecutions and suffering have been endured, and the doctrine remains in the church as one of the fundamentals of true Christianity.

¶ The above named book is a history of the trials and experiences of the Brethren during the War of the Rebellion, together with a brief record of the persecutions of the Brethren in Germany and the early years of the church in America.

¶ The object of the presentation of this history to the public is (1) that it may be a means of increasing the courage, strengthening the faith and deepening the convictions of the Brethren in relation to this doctrine, and (2) that our peace principles, and our relation to the government in maintaining these principles, may be better understood.

¶ In these days, when the subject of international peace is agitating the minds of men in high places in all civilized countries, a book of this kind is a timely one, and will be read with peculiar interest.

Home Department of the Sunday School

The need of the Home Department is not limited to any locality. It is needed in every church no matter where that church may be. It is sadly needed in the great metropolis, with its unchurched millions. It is needed in the towns with their thousands outside of the Sunday-school. It is needed in the village and rural communities, where only a few are indifferent. It is needed in your school. It will work in every community whether city or country, where one or more persons are out of the Sunday-school.

and J. M. Kline as alternates. One paper was sent to District Meeting. We will hold our love feast Oct. 14, at 8 P. M. We expect Eld. D. C. Flory at our meeting. Eld. Flory has a series of meetings for us in November.—Maggie Miller, Oakton, Va., July 5.

Peter's Creek.—We met in council at the Poage's Chapel July 1. Eld. D. C. Naff presided. Considerable business came before the meeting. One letter of membership was received. A volunteer offering was taken to free the church of debt, and $83 was contributed. The communion visit was arranged for. July 4 eight of the nine ministers met at the Peter's Creek house to confer over several subjects relative to their ministerial work. "The Need of More Doctrinal Preaching." "Reverence in the House of God," and "The Importance of Doing More Pastoral Work" received special attention. Such meetings are sure to be productive of good. —Mildred Naff, R. D. 3, Roanoke, Va., July 5.

Pleasant Hill.—We met in council July 8. Our elder, Bro. A. N. Hylton, presided. Two letters of membership were granted. It was decided to have a called meeting Aug. 12, for the purpose of electing two deacons. The Sunday following Bro. Lee Jennings preached for us. Our Sunday-school is progressing nicely, with an average of about 90. Interest is progressing nicely, with the Christian Workers' meeting. Sister Juddie Weddle gave a nice treat to our class of little ones on Sunday morning, which was enjoyed by all of them.—Ruth A. Hylton, R. D. 5, Willis, Va., July 10.

Red Oak Grove.—Our church met in council July 1, at Stonewall, a preaching point in our congregation. Eld. W. H. Spangler presided over the meeting. Very little business came before the meeting. Our church visit was ordered. The visiting ministers were instructed to ask each member concerning the sisters' breaking the head-rule, and report. Also concerning the sisters' attending our next council whether or not the sisters in our congregation will break the bread with the brethren at our communion service. Our elder, Bro. W. H. Naff, preached for us on Saturday evening at 7:30. We also had preaching on Sunday at 11 A. M. One church letter has been granted since our last report.—Ella Bowman, R. D. 5, Mt. Jackson, Va., July 10.

Spottsylvania.—Eld. S. A. Sanger and family, from Fairfax County, Va., moved into the section the latter part of April. They seem to enjoy their new home fine. Bro. Sanger preached a very fine sermon here yesterday. Text, Matt. 13: 24-49. His sermon was inspiring and full of doctrine. I was spell-bound. He will hold a series of meetings here soon, if nothing prevents. Likely he will begin the last week in August. We have also planned to have a love feast during the meetings.—Florence Rodeffer, Holland, Va., July 13.

WASHINGTON.

Olympia.—July 4 we spent the day at one of the many beautiful lakes we have in this western country. At 11 A. M. we had addresses by Brethren Sherman Seaman and Wagner. At the noon hour a bountiful meal was spread in a fir grove on the lake shore. The afternoon was spent in visiting, bathing and boating. We wish to commend our young members and Sunday-school workers for observing the day as they did, instead of going to the city where there are so many temptations for the young. Of the year's appointed council, with our elder, Bro. J. S. Secrist, presiding. Considerable business was brought before the meeting, which was disposed of pleasantly. Two letters were received. Sunday-school officers were elected, with Sister Barbara Secrist as superintendent; Sister Effie Stanley, assistant; and Sister Lehman was chosen president of the Christian Workers' Meeting. We expect to have a singing class in the future, providing the committee can secure a teacher.—Caddie Wagner, Olympia, Wash., July 5.

Omak.—Since our last report three members from Ohio have moved into our midst. July 2, after our Sunday-school and preaching services, we went down the river to a beautiful lake where a young brother was baptized. We are made to rejoice by the addition of these workers. This increases our number to eight. We hope to have a series of meetings before long, if we can secure the services of a minister. We have been here for more than a year, and are well pleased with our country and the surrounding people. Within this is a good place for our Brethren to build up a church, but we need more workers. The field is wide, and white for the harvest. We are praying for laborers, and that the time may come when we can have an organized body of faithful brethren and sisters in this highly-favored and thickly-settled fruit country. Many ministers are living where their services are not specially needed. Brethren, why not come where you can break the Bread of Life to the spiritually starving? We will gladly answer any inquiries.—B. E. Brubaker, Omak, Wash., July 9.

Tekoa.—Our church met in council June 24. Our elder, Bro. A. C. Gunsenheimer, presided. Business was fairly well attended, and as this was the close of the fiscal year, much business came before the meeting. Church officers were elected as follows: Sister Jennie K. Hale, clerk; Bro. A. N. Huffman, treasurer; Bro. R. F. Hiner, correspondent; Sister Cleo Hiner, Messenger agent; Bro. G. S. Hale, re-elected trustee for three years. Our Sunday-school was reorganized for six months, with Brethren Arthur Roper and R. F. Hiner as superintendents; Bro. Carl Luecatt, secretary. Sister Ora Hale is president of the Christian Workers, and Bro. Joseph Huffman, secretary-treasurer. Since Annual Meeting created the District of Western Washington and Idaho the privilege of dividing into three Districts, we elected Sister Sarah Erickson as Bro. A. C. Roper as delegates to the first meeting of the new District, with Brethren H. C. Longanecker and R. F. Hiner as alternates. Since Bro. Longanecker has moved among us and has been chosen to fill his entire time to the work, our services are growing in interest and attendance.—R. F. Hiner, R. D. 1, Tekoa, Wash., July 9.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Allegheny Chapel.—Brethren Abram Thomas and H. G. Miller, of Bridgewater, Va., came to our place. Our church met in council May 13. Bro. H. G. Miller presided. We decided to have our council meeting Sept. 1; our love feast, Sept. 2, at 3 P. M. One letter was received. Unfinished business was deferred until next council.—Chas. E. Wolfe, Arbovale, W. Va., July 11.

Chestnut Grove.—We met in council, July 1, at the Pleasant View church. Bro. J. W. Rogers led in the services. We decided to hold our next council at Round the church. The deacon brethren will make their annual visit and report at the next meeting.—Anna F. Sanger, Box 45, Bragg, W. Va., July 7.

Fairview.—On July 4 we had the children's Day services. The morning was given to recitations by the children. The evening was given to a talk to the children, by Bro. Ezra Fike, of Bolivar, W. Va., and Bro. D. B. Arnold, of near Oakland, Md. Both talks were interesting and much appreciated. The day was very much enjoyed by all. July 8 our congregation met in church council. Our elder, Bro. I. W. Abernathy, presided. Our love feast will be held Sept. 16. Our series of meetings is to be held by Bro. Emra T. Fike, of Elgin, W. Va., beginning Sept. 17, and continuing until the love feast.—Lyla Harvey, Wilson, W. Va., July 10.

Spruce Run.—May 13 we enjoyed a very spiritual love feast. Bro. J. H. Garst officiated, and on Sunday, at eleven o'clock, gave us an excellent sermon. June 11 Eld. Hutchison preached for us. July 8 we met in church council with Bro. C. E. Eller presiding. One was received by letter and one was restored to fellowship. Sunday School is very ably addressed us. He goes from here to Wiki, a mission point seven miles away, to hold a meeting.—Lucinda B. Fleshman, R. D. 1, Box 64, Lindside, W. Va., July 10.

NOTES UNCLASSIFIED.

Baker.—July 14 Sister Mary Cook, our District Sunday-school Secretary, and Sister Bertie Bonsack, of our returned missionaries, gave us excellent talks about their respective fields of work. The naturally close relation of Sunday-school and missionary work was emphasized by Sister Berkebile confining her talk mainly to Sunday-school work in India, while Sister Cook kept to the missionary side. We are planning to hold a series of meetings in September. Bro. G. A. Snider, our elder will have charge. Expect to begin the preaching.—Blanche Lentz, Lafayette, Ohio, July 15.

Johnson City.—We met in council July 8, with Eld. D. C. Naff presiding. A committee consisting of two brethren was appointed in regard to repairing our churchhouse. The following Sunday we listened to a splendid discourse by Bro. Naff. Our Sunday-school at this place is progressing nicely.—Cordelia B. Brant, Box 23, Catawba, Va., July 12.

Sheldon.—Our meetings, conducted by Bro. G. W. Kieffaber, of Mt. Morris, Ill., closed July 2, with one confession to the church. We could not continue our meetings as long as expected, on account of sickness. Our feast was held July 1. Bro. W. R. Deardorff officiated. Bro. Harry Wingert, of Kingsley, Iowa, was with us, and Brethren C. E. Kimmel and Arthur Brallier were advanced to the second degree of the ministry. We also enjoyed the presence of other members. July 4 we had our Christian Workers' Meeting, and greater efforts are being made to improve them.—Annie Gleason, Sheldon, Ill., July 14.

Portland.—Our harvest meeting will be held July 30. All are invited to be with us. Bro. Grover Wine will give an address in the morning, and Bro. Ira Hoover in the afternoon. Program; then Bro. Wine will give an address on missionary work. Our love feast, Sept. 9, at 10 A. M.—Sarah Grafmiller, Portland, Ind., July 16.

NOTICE ABOUT THE DEBATE.

Some are asking for information in regard to the coming debate. I am only answering personally those that are not answered. We would advise to watch the announcements given from time to time in the Messenger.

Orders for the book are coming in rapidly, for the last few days, but so far we have only one hundred. Now, as Bro. Keim says, as well as others, is anxious to have the report of the discussion printed, can not a few brethren or sisters of means back up its publication financially? Can not some one in each congregation, find out how many orders he can get at once, and notify me? If just one hundred congregations would take two books apiece, the book could be printed. Please act at once. Don't send money yet. J. G. Stinebaugh.

THE CURSE OF DRINK

BY ELTON R. SHAW

If you want to see the liquor traffic in its true light, as portrayed in story, incidents, illustrations, pointed paragraphs, poetry and song by more than twenty men and women in various walks and professions in life, read this book. It will make it clear to you, as no other book yet written or compiled could do, the economic, political and social ills growing out of the sale and use of intoxicants. It contains many true stories of drink's awful tragedies and gives in brief and pointed paragraphs the pithy utterances of many men and women who have put their lives into the struggle for the overthrow of a giant wrong. The matter in the book is conveniently classified, making it easy to refer to any phase of the subject desired. It is a book that will appeal to all classes of people. A copy of it should find a place in every home.

The size of the book is 6-1/2x9-1/4 inches. It contains 544 pages besides the halftone illustrations and is printed on good paper.

Price per copy, cloth, $1.75; half morocco, $2.50.

WAR VERSUS PEACE

By Jacob Funk

The subject treated in this book is one which more than any other, vitally concerns the civilized nations of the world, and the interest in it is growing. It is important that the people be intelligent on this subject. All need to know just the things that are herein given. The following subjects are taken up:

The Causes of War. The Evils of War. The Cost of War. A Brief History of the Peace Movement, and Ways of Advancing Peace.

The information concerning each of the above subjects is given in brief form and in a style which makes it interesting reading. It contains the cream of facts gleaned from many historical works, reports of conventions, published articles, etc.

The reading of the book gives one a clear vision of the horrors of war, the enormous cost in money and human life of it, and is sure to inspire greater zeal in the hearts of the people in the peace movement. It deserves a wide circulation.

AROUND THE WORLD

A Kentucky Distiller in Bankruptcy.

Early in July a Kentucky distiller was obliged to go into bankruptcy, assigning the local option laws and a consequent dry territory as the cause of his financial failure. This will, undoubtedly, be a surprise to the "Model License League" and other agencies that are all the while claiming that more liquor is sold in prohibition territory than in places where the saloon flourishes unmolested. But here is the woeful experience of the Kentucky distiller, and that tells its own story, wherever the facts are made known. Prohibition evidently does some real effectual work. By its fruits it is known and always will be.

The Fight for Purity.

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, chief of the Bureau of Chemistry, Department of Agriculture, is the well-known foe of fraudulent manufacturers of food supplies and medicines, and, as may be imagined, has incurred their undying hatred. For some months an association of these implicated firms has been endeavoring to secure some sort of a pretext, upon which the faithful guardian of the nation's health and well-being might be removed. The present investigation of Dr. Wiley's official career, however, bids fair, at this writing, to result in his complete vindication, and the discomfiture of his enemies. It seems to be the inevitable result of all self-sacrificing work for humanity to stir up the forces of darkness, as may be seen daily in civic as well as religious affairs.

The Word Proved Its Value.

Each year the senior class of a Pittsburg, Pa., high school has a special chapel service, preliminary to the customary graduation exercises. This year one of the foremost Jewish young men of the class requested Prof. Riddle, the principal, that the New Testament be not read at the service. In complying with this request, the professor suggested that the young man open the Old Testament at random and that the chapter thus selected be read. The beautiful message of Isa. 53, telling about the One who was "wounded for our transgressions," was providentially brought to view upon opening the Bible, and read with telling and unwonted effect by the professor. Judged by the evident impression made upon the class, God's Word, "sharper than any two-edged sword," undoubtedly touched the hearts of those dear young people, whether Jews or Gentiles.

Religion in Child Life.

When, a few years ago, the French Government decided to prepare a new series of literary textbooks for their public schools, it was determined to cut out all reference to religion, the Deity, and the like. The brightest minds of France gave their most thorough attention to the work, and evolved a series of textbooks hard to excel in literary character and pedagogic value. Now, after several years' trial, the fruits are becoming apparent. A most deplorable pessimism has seized upon the children. Goodness is not worth seeking, nor life worth living. Concise inquiry has led the French Government to the reluctant admission that "however little the grown man may feel the need of any Supreme Being, yet, during the formative period of the child, the ultimate support of morals must be found in God." Now the name of God is no longer to be excluded from their school textbooks on morals. Bitter experience has taught the French people a much-needed lesson.

The Best Possible Defense.

The United States and Canada,—two countries closely united commercially, and separated only by the border line that marks their respective limits,—scarcely need a special defense to protect the one against the other. The editor of the "Toronto Sun," Mr. W. L. Smith, in a recent address voiced the following expressive sentiment in reply to a question: "Against the United States we possess a better defense than a line of fortifications along the border, and fleets of dreadnoughts on the two oceans. This defense is found in a common language, common ideals, family ties, in the presence of a million and a half of Canadians in the United States, and three-quarters of a million Americans in Canada." The view given by the Canadian editor is undoubtedly correct. Common interests and international harmony constitute the proverbial "ounce of prevention" that is worth a "pound" of warlike demonstration, supposed to be a cure. There is not the shadow of a reason for aught but the most friendly feelings between the people of the United States and those of the "Great Dominion," for both are exponents of the great principle that recognizes the brotherhood of man. "Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!"

The White Man's Burden.

Undoubtedly the white race, by generations of well-advised training, possesses advantages,—socially, morally, educationally and even religiously,—that are given to it as a heritage, a sacred trust, not to be selfishly hoarded, but to be shared with the less developed races. Prof. Brooks, of the University of Georgia, has been investigating the condition of the negroes in a number of counties in his State. He finds that in sections chiefly inhabited by negroes, there is but little real advancement. Their condition materially, morally and educationally is at a much lower status than in sections where the white race has been conducive to a higher development in life. It is the opinion of Prof. Brooks that further immigration of whites is needed before the great black belt of the South can be raised to a higher moral and intellectual plane. Dodge it as we may try to do, we are all, in a very real sense, "our brother's keeper," and there is no excuse for neglecting the ones who have been given a skin of darker hue by the Great Creator of the human family.

Guarding Against Disease.

Most rigid precautions are being taken to ward off the threatened invasion of Asiatic cholera, now menacing our ports. At New York, especially, neither money nor efforts are being spared by the Federal authorities to provide for the most comprehensive inspection and quarantine suspect and the thorough quarantining of every steamer from the danger zone. The alarming number of cholera cases and fatal results reported from Italian towns have given rise to considerable apprehension, but it is now thought that the few cases, as yet found in New York, may readily be isolated and a further spread of the disease completely checked. We are not so careful to ward off the contagion of sin. What a wonderful advance against the ravages of sin there might be made, were there an equal readiness to delegate men and means to that important end. As it is, there is a most woeful indifference to spiritual distress. Many a poor wanderer along life's highway, stricken by sin's fatal dart, sadly utters the mournful plaint, "No man cared for my soul."

The Problem of the Immigrant.

While opinions may differ as to the admission of immigrants to our shores, undoubtedly many of those who have come among us have helped essentially in the real development of the country. Consistent with our own history, we should not forbid immigration, and in harmony with the Golden Rule, we have no right to do so. But as the immigrant comes to us, it is the duty of Christians as to his spiritual growth and elevation? Religiously, more than one-half of all that come are Catholics, and fifteen per cent are Jews and Greeks. One-fourth can not read or write. Most of these people must, of necessity, be taught "the way of the Lord more perfectly." Have you ever thought that a foreign mission field of vast dimensions is at our very doors? And has it ever impressed you that the real "problem" in the care of the immigrant is largely found in the indifferent and those who should be ready to teach him the things pertaining to the Kingdom? Too many of us are "at ease in Zion" when we should be wide-awake and alert in the service of the Master.

Military Drill for High School Boys.

Assistant Secretary of War, Gen. Oliver, is making strong efforts to enlist the aid of the governors of the various States of our Union in the promotion of military training for the boys of our high schools. Special attention is being directed by him to the enactment of a law by the California Legislature, which provides for the organization of companies and battalions of high school boys, who are to be armed with rifles and trained by competent instructors, detailed by officers of the regular army. Gen. Oliver makes a strong plea for State legislation which will stipulate such training as a part of the high school curriculum throughout the United States, and his urgent appeal will doubtless meet with a ready response, unless friends of the peace movement enter upon a strong and concerted campaign of remonstrance. This is a case in which it is absolutely necessary that all lovers of peace rally around the banner of King Emmanuel, and protest most emphatically against this infliction of militarism upon our institutions of learning. The representative of any Legislative District will doubtless give respectful attention to any petition to this end that may be presented.

The Cost of Heathenism.

According to Dr. Yates' careful estimate ancestral worship costs the Chinese annually $150,000,000. India has thousands of temples and millions of idle priests and devotees that must be supported by the poverty-stricken masses of India. The same thing is largely true of other heathen colntries. But the cost of heathenism is not summed up in the bare cost of its systems of worship. There are the deplorable results of their most degrading rites and practices, which clearly show themselves in the dissolute lives of their deluded followers,—a most enormous price, indeed! It is the Christian,—and the Christian only,—whose religion is worth what it costs, and infinitely more. God asks only the little within our power to give, that he may give back a hundredfold, and then, beside all else, he adds the most precious gift,—eternal life!

Why Not Pray for Showers of Grace?

A strange scene was witnessed at Marshall, Mo., on the morning of July 19. For one hour every commercial establishment, every factory and shop were closed, and every kind of labor was absolutely refrained from, that the 6,000 people might gather at their respective churches and simultaneously pray for rain. For three months that section of country has been largely deprived of needed moisture, and in some places water has to be hauled for miles. It was in this dire extremity that the people bethought them of praying for relief that might possibly be secured by means of earnest prayer. It is said that people who were never known to pray, earnestly besought the Lord on bended knees to send the refreshing showers so greatly needed. While the earnestness of these petitioners is most commendable, one is made to wonder why there are not more,—even of God's professed followers,—that are anxiously pleading for showers of redeeming grace to revive their drooping souls. This is a matter most important,—far more so than the present failure of the "early and latter rains" to refresh the parched vegetation.

The Needs of China.

When it comes to authoritative statements regarding the needs of the Chinese field, some value should be attached to the opinions of Mr. Liang Tung Yen, who graduated at Yale some years ago, and since then has been an official of high rank in his native country. In his opinion China's destiny depends upon the influence of foreign education, and what it is now doing in that country. He says there is still a great need of foreign-bred teachers to assist in the educational work of the country. Speaking of the critical period through which the empire is passing at present, Mr. Liang said he hoped that there might be at least twenty years of peace within and without, to afford needed time for the working out of various reform measures now being contemplated. The country would then be in a condition far more advanced than at present, and make rapid headway in the onward march of morality, education and progress in general. What advancement Christianity shall make in China during the next two decades, remains to be seen. Much, however, will depend upon the attitude assumed by the so-called Christian nations, in their relations to the empire. A "mere deal," internationally, will go far to make the people amenable to gospel teachings.

An American Railway for Asia Minor.

The Turkish Parliament is favorably considering a proposal submitted by an American syndicate, to construct nearly 2,000 miles of railway in Asiatic Turkey, in consideration of being granted mining privileges along the proposed route. Starting from a Mediterranean port on the Gulf of Iskanderum, some distance east of Tarsus, the proposed route goes northward through one of the valleys of the Taurus Mountains, and turning east traverses the mining region adjacent to Arghana. Here, history assures us, Hiram, King of Tyre, obtained his supply of copper for the manifold requirements of the metal workers' art, attaining a degree of skill that even today is the admiration of the scientific world. The syndicate hopes, by the latest appliances of American inventive genius, to secure a copperious supply of copper from the ancient mines. From Arghana the proposed road is to run southeast to the famous Euphrates Valley. This region, as stated in a previous issue, is to be supplied with extensive irrigation systems, which will restore it to its oldtime fertility, and possibly even surpass it. And may we not hope that, with the blessings of modern development, the people of this historic region will also receive that greatest of treasures which this world can neither give nor take away?

ESSAYS

Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth.

At Eventide.

My heart is weary, for the day has been so long,
And the path so steep;
But now at length 'tis come to evensong,
And the shadows deep
Fall, a soft veil, upon my aching eyes,
To bring me sleep, deep sleep.
O Father, when my heart has grown too weary, when the day has been too long,
And the path too steep;
But when at length has come the final evensong,
And the shadows deep
Fall, for the last time, upon my aching eyes,
Then be thou near, and in thy gently cradling arm, O keep Me ever through my last long sleep.

The Bible Way of Salvation.

BY B. E. KESLER.

In response to the many who have expressed a desire to have the writer's outline of a sermon on the above subject it is hereby submitted.

Before his ascension, Jesus gave to his apostles his last commission in these words: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved" (Mark 16: 15, 16).

This commission is the one under which God's ministers are operating today. "It is the world wide and age-lasting commission." Now, if we can find out how the holy apostles and first ministers of the church operated under this commission, it will make the duty and work of the minister of today very plain, and also make the way of salvation to the honest seeker very clear and easy to see.

From the nine recorded instances of conversion under the ministry of the apostles and first ministers of the Gospel, we have the following outline and method of procedure, as recorded in the Statute Book: First, the persons; second, the conditions; third, the promises.

It must be apparent to all that whatever means God used in the apostolic age, to save people, will be the plan best suited to her conditions.

Persons	Place	Conditions	Promises
Pentecostians,	Acts 2: 37-41	(F.) R. B.R. G. of H-S. (S.)
Samaritans,	Acts 8: 12-17	P. (R.) B.(R.) G. of H-S. (S.)
Eunuch,	Acts 8: 35-38	P. (R.) B.(R. G. of H-S. S.)
Saul,	Acts 9: 17, 18
Centurion,	Acts 22: 12-16	(P. R.) B.R. G. of H-S. (S.)
	Acts 10: 42-48
Lydia,	Acts 16: 13-15	(P. R.) B.(R.) G. of H-S. S.)
Jailer,	Acts 16: 29-34	P. (R.) B.(R. G. of H-S.) S.
Corinthians,	Acts 18: 7, 8	P. (R.) B.(R. G. of H-S. S.)
Stephanas,	1 Cor. 1: 14-16
	1 Cor. 16: 15	(P. R.) B.(R. G. of H-S. S.)

Explanation of Symbols.

In third column F=faith, R=repentance, and B=baptism, are conditions. Fourth column, H-S=conviction, G of H-S=gift of Holy Spirit, S=salvation, are promises obtained on these conditions. Parentheses in columns 3 and 4 enclose conditions or promises which, in certain cases, are not specifically stated, but clearly implied and illustrated. Faith, in third column, is stated four times, and implied five times. Repentance is stated one time, and implied eight times. Baptism is stated each time and in each instance. Remission, in fourth column, is stated two times, and implied seven times. The gift of the Holy Spirit is stated four times and implied five times. Salvation is stated two times and implied seven times.

With this explanation we will now turn to the "Law and to the Testimony." Beginning with the Pentecostians we will examine each case separately.

"Now when they heard this, they were pricked in their heart, and said unto Peter and to the rest of the apostles, Men and brethren, what shall we do? Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. . . . Then they that gladly received his word were baptized: and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls."

Here the conditions were repentance and baptism, with faith implied. The promises were remission and gift of the Holy Spirit, with salvation implied.

"But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women. . . . Now when the apostles which were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John: Who, when they were come down, prayed for them, that they might receive the Holy Ghost: (For as yet he was fallen upon none of them: only they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus.) Then laid they their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost."

Here we have faith and baptism stated and repentance implied. The gift of the Holy Spirit is stated, and remission and salvation are implied.

"And the eunuch answered Philip, and said, I pray thee, of whom speaketh the prophet this? of himself, or of some other man? Then Philip opened his mouth, and began at the same scripture, and preached unto him Jesus. And as they went on their way, they came to a certain water; and the eunuch said, See, here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized? And Philip said, If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest. And he answered and said, I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, and he commanded the chariot to stand still; and they went down both into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and he baptized him."

In this case we have faith and baptism stated, and repentance, implied. Remission, gift of the Holy Spirit and salvation are all implied.

"And Ananias went his way, and entered into the house; and putting his hands on him said, Brother Saul, the Lord, even Jesus, that appeared unto thee in the way as thou camest hath sent me, that thou mightest receive thy sight, and be filled with the Holy Ghost. And immediately there fell from his eyes as it had been scales: and he received sight forthwith, and arose, and was baptized."

"And the same hour I looked up upon him. And he said, The God of our fathers hath chosen thee, that thou shouldest know his will, and see that Just One, and shouldest hear the voice of his mouth. For thou shalt be his witness unto all men of what thou hast seen and heard. And now why tarriest thou? Arise and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord."

Here we have faith and repentance implied, and baptism stated. Remission and gift of the Holy Ghost are stated, with salvation implied.

"While Peter yet spake these words, the Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the word. . . . Then answered Peter, Can any man forbid water, that these should not be baptized, which have received the Holy Ghost as well as we? And he commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord."

"Who shall tell thee words whereby thou and thy house shall be saved."

In this case we have faith and repentance implied, with baptism stated. Remission is implied and the gift of Holy Spirit and salvation are stated.

"And on the Sabbath we went out of the city by a river side, where prayer was wont to be made; and we sat down, and spake unto the women which resorted thither. And a certain woman named Lydia, a seller of purple, of the city of Thyatira, which worshiped God, heard us: whose heart the Lord opened, that she attended unto the things which were spoken of Paul. And when she was baptized, and her household, she besought us, saying, If ye have judged me to be faithful to the Lord, come into my house and abide there."

Here, again, faith and repentance are implied, and baptism is stated. Remission, the gift of the Holy Spirit and salvation are implied.

Again, "Sirs, what must I do to be saved? And they said, Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house. And they spake unto him the word of the Lord, and to all that were in his house. And he took them the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes; and was baptized, he and all his, straightway."

Here, also, faith and baptism are stated, and repentance is implied, with salvation stated, and remission and the gift of the Holy Ghost implied.

"And Crispus, the chief ruler of the synagogue, believed on the Lord with all his house; and many of the Corinthians hearing believed, and were baptized."

Here we have faith and baptism stated and repentance implied, with all the promises,—remission, gift of the Holy Ghost, and salvation,—implied.

"I beseech you, brethren (ye know the house of Stephanas, that it is the first fruits of Achaia)." "And I baptized also the household of Stephanas: besides, I know not whether I baptized any other."

In this case again, faith and repentance are implied, and baptism is stated. All the promises,—remission, gift of the Holy Ghost and salvation,—are implied.

Now, to determine the Bible way of salvation, we have only to develop these cases by way of a few simple questions:

1. Were these people, in each of these cases, told to do anything in order to be saved?
2. If so, what were they told to do?
3. Did they do what they were told to do?
4. If so, were they saved in doing what they were told to do?
5. Has God changed the plan of salvation? If so, when and where?
7. If he has not, has man a right to change it?
8. If not, then, what must the sinner do now to be saved?
9. In brief, will not the conditions that brought salvation to the people in the apostolic age, bring salvation to the people now? Here is salvation or pardon to all who want salvation in the Bible way. Kind reader, will you have it?

The Dispensation of the Holy Spirit.

BY NOAH LONGANECKER.

THE Bible reveals to us three dispensations:

1. The dispensation of the Father.
2. The dispensation of the Son.
3. The dispensation of the Holy Spirit.

The first extends from Gen. 1 to end of Malachi. The second extends from Matt. 1 to Acts 2. The third extends from Acts 2 to the end of Revelation.

We have the third since Acts 2, or Pentecost. "The Father originates all things. The Son executes all things. The Holy Spirit consummates all things."

True, God is a Spirit, and spirit is indivisible, hence Christ truly said, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." And, "I am with you alway, even to the end of the world." It is true there were some "theophanies" in the first dispensation, as there were also strivings of the Spirit, so there were strivings of the Spirit in the second dispensation, or "God manifest in the flesh." "Being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit." "It is the Spirit that quickeneth." Well did Christ say, "Nevertheless I tell you the truth; It is expedient for you that I go away; for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you."

"The Comforter, which is the Holy Spirit," has come. We are now under his dispensation. Remember, he must consummate all things. He must complete and perfect all things. Well did Paul say, "These all, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise: God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect." Christ said, "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life." Again, "When he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth." No man can be guided by the Spirit unless he is "filled with the Spirit." "As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God."

Even those who are not filled with the Spirit can only be convicted by the Comforter. "When he is come, he will reprove,—convince,—the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment." On the day of Pentecost the disciples were "filled with the Spirit," and the Spirit strove with sinners and convinced them of their sins.

"Until ye be endued with power from on high" means much. Were we to write an essay on sanctification we would do more than quote the following: "Sanctification of the Spirit." And "being sanctified by the Holy Ghost." Were we to write an essay on the new birth we would do more than quote the following: "Born of the Spirit," "Renewing of the Holy Ghost."

Much is said about being anointed for "special service." The anointing with the Holy Spirit means much to the Christian church. "But ye have an unction from the Holy One, and ye know all things" (1 John 2: 20; Acts 6: 6; 13: 2, 3). May we not be somewhat indifferent in this line of church work? "God giveth not the Spirit by measure unto him" (John 3: 34). True, this was spoken of Christ. Self-sufficiency is the weakness of God's people. Did Christ need special power for special service, so do we. "Who hath also sealed us and given the earnest of the Spirit in our hearts" (2 Cor. 1: 22).

The Divine assurance that we are God's children is the seal of the Holy Spirit on our hearts. "As he is, so are we in this world." "God is Love." The Holy Spirit imprints his image on our souls. "Grieve not the Holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption." This is our assurance.

Much might be said on all these subjects, but these remarks are general on the subject of the "Dispensation of the Spirit."

"And given us the earnest of the Spirit in our hearts." The word "earnest" here means that which God has given us here as an assurance of "the promised inheritance. The earnest that a seller gives to a buyer is always a very small part of that which he is to receive. A certain writer says, "The earnest was the sample of things sold by the seller to the purchaser. It was the assurance that the bargain was binding on both parties." So Paul says, "Ye were sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise, which is the earnest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession, unto the praise of his glory."

Much might be said about the gifts and fruit of the Holy Spirit, but we forbear. We are living in the dispensation of the Holy Spirit. He is the Official Successor of Christ. He is the greatest need of each individual believer in Christ. The church, with all her talents and knowledge, will not avail where he does not dwell. "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of hosts." "Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed?" Holy Spirit, be thou our abiding Guest! We need thee always!

The Royal Family (Eph. 3: 14, 15).

BY J. H. MILLER.

God had a family in Eden, composed of two persons,—Adam and Eve. This was a happy family. There was no one to disturb their peace for a time. Satan was not satisfied to see this happy family enjoy such great peace in a beautiful garden, so he destroyed their peace by falsehood and deception.

The peace of many homes is blasted by this arch-enemy. This family could not go to a neighbor for advice. There was no one to go to. I imagine how miserable they felt by listening to this deceiver. Their happiness was blighted for life. How sad it was that Satan made such inroads upon the first family! God had created them for a noble purpose.

It is said that in France two things are lost,—the Sabbath and the family ties. I am writing this on the Fourth, with the noise of fire crackers around me, disturbing the peace of loyal citizens. It is to be regretted when anything is allowed to interfere with the best interests of the family, for families are the beginnings of nations. Abraham was the father of a nation called God's people, hence the Israelites were of a royal family. They were a peculiar people. Through Abraham all the families of the earth were to be blessed. God's chosen race is all a royal family. Isaiah speaks of them as a royal race. "Thou shalt also be a crown of glory in the hand of the Lord, and a royal diadem in the hand of thy God" (Isa. 62: 3). In all ages God's chosen people were called a royal family, wearing a diadem;—a golden crown.

The church is a peculiar family,—a unity. They have a strong attachment for each other. The reason for this is that love is the prevailing sentiment among them. This royal family have a King, who leads them to fountains of living waters. This family has a royal law (Jas. 2: 8), which is of the highest type,—"Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." None but children of this royal family can do this. This family belongs to a royal priesthood. "But ye are a chosen generation, an royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should show forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvelous light" (1 Peter 2: 9).

Paul would bow his knees unto the Father of such a family to hear him. "For this cause I bow my knees unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named" (Eph. 3: 14, 15). This is a happy thought. The family in heaven and on earth will have the same name,—a royal family.

Sunday-School Influences.

BY SAMUEL ORR.

The Sunday-school is an evangelizing agency, organized for the express purpose of schooling one along the line of right living, and inculcating into the minds of boys and girls (and older ones, too) a training for future usefulness in the church, as well as elsewhere.

The Sunday-school convenes one day in seven for the purpose of rehearsing and studying the great lessons that were taught by our Master Teacher over 1,900 years ago. The Bible is our chief text book and only infallible rule of faith and practice.

The Sunday-school is an organization effected for both old and young, and as it is an evangelizing agency for the church, and for the extension and cause of the kingdom of Christ it is necessary that we wield a power of influence for good. This is a great subject, since it includes all who attend Sunday-school, the teachers and the scholars, the preacher and the superintendent, the saint as well as the sinner, and does not exclude any.

If there is anything to be gained by attending Sunday-school, the sinner wants to share equally with the righteous, in so far as he can, without accepting the terms of the treaty of peace to his soul,—the cross of Christ.

I will cite you two cases, the facts of which I know personally. These persons were faithful in Sunday-school work, both of them being teachers. One was a public school teacher, and, at the same time, teaching in the Sunday-school. He was a good teacher, too, as the saying goes. He was wielding a power of influence over his fellow-men, but how much more power of influence for good he might have wielded had he been a full-fledged Christian! The other one was a clerk in one of the leading stores of a village. His aim was to get the people to go to Sunday-school on Sunday, and then to get their money on a week day.

In the above we see the power of influence, both inside and outside of the Sunday-school. These men were not Christians, though they were seen carrying their Bibles to Sunday-school as a symbol of righteousness. The Sunday-school badge, methinks, is worn by some as a shield, behind which to hide as a power of influence, to win over to their ranks whomsoever they will.

I will deviate just a little and relate a story which has a very good moral, if we take it in the right way.

As the shades of night were hovering over a cottage, the mother of a little boy informed him that it was time for him to be in bed, as the little chicks had all gone to sleep long ago. "Yes," spoke the little boy, "but you see, mother, the old mother hen went with them."

This illustrates the fact that example is better than precept. Your are being read by people in your daily walk and conversation, and if you do not set a good example outside of the Sunday-school, all the good that you do inside of the Sunday-school will not offset the bad influence you have left with your fellow-men. If your conversation is not chaste and pure, as becometh one who professes godliness, your precepts will not be of lasting impressions, since your example is contrary to the teaching. We want to have such an influence as to draw the people to Sunday-school and then make them feel that it is good for them to be at Sunday-school.

You can exercise a power for good or evil, either in the Sunday-school or out of the Sunday-school, and to wield this power for good it is necessary to live it. If you do not live it, it will count for naught. Do not hinder the cause.

By my attending Sunday-school regularly, having my lessons well committed, and being well versed on any subject for consideration, I may be the means of helping some one who is a little weak along that line to brace up a little and get quite an inspiration out of what seemed to be once a dry, hard lesson to him. The result will be a lasting impression for good. It may also inspire the teacher with increased courage.

If we desire to wield an influence for good, one thought may be the means of causing some poor soul to turn from his sin and waywardness, to seek his God ere it is too late. We should live up to our profession, be constant attendants at Sunday-school, living up to its teachings in full.

The way this statement is put, it embraces two distinctive characteristics of man. The one is power and the other influence. We sometimes say, "We have the power to do things." Well, the power, if exercised rightly, wields a great influence over dying humanity. Can you voice the sentiment of the song: "Can the Lord Depend on You"? Can you truthfully say, "I will go where he wants me to go, and I will say what he wants me to say"?

In all the services of the Sunday-school be ready and willing to help carry on the service of the school,—to lead in prayer or song service, or act in the capacity of a teacher, or to fill the superintendent's place, when he is absent, or to act in whatever capacity you are called.

Can the Lord depend on you? Since the Sunday-school is an evangelizing agency,—a school in which boys and girls are trained for future usefulness in church work,—it is evident that there the church will look for recruits to fill vacancies. There, undoubtedly, they will seek to find a person in whom they can place great confidence, and there they will invariably find the person they are looking for in a faithful Sunday-school worker. Don't hesitate when opportunity affords a chance to invite people to Sunday-school. So much, then, for the power and influence "inside and outside of the Sunday-school."

"Deadheads."

BY FLORA E. TEAGUE.

There are numerous parasites in the land, known as "deadheads." They live on the principle that "the world owes them a living," and by shrewd and easy ways they set about to gain it. This is often done to the annoyance and at the expense of others.

The railroads have their "deadheads" in more than one way. A man of that class goes about the country ragged, unkempt, and filthy, usually with a pack on his back, stealing his way into box cars or riding underneath the coaches. He is known as a "hobo." The other sort of "deadhead" goes about well dressed, is prominent and well respected, but, nevertheless, is known to railroad men as a "deadhead," because he carries a "pass," and thus secures a free ride or the next thing to it. He, most probably, has secured his "pass" honorably. I believe most people do, but occasionally it has been secured by questionable representation.

In society we occasionally meet with deadheads who seek to secure a comfortable stopping place by their wits, their flattery, or some other easy and acceptable plan to themselves. You tolerate them, even though you feel you have permitted yourself to be imposed upon at a very cheap rate.

Again, you will even find "deadheads" in the church. Some representatives of this kind are such that you have to deal with them ever so gently, or they will take offense and pull off. Another form is too weak to stand alone and, unless you are always carrying them on their journey, they would fall by the wayside.

A third representative of "deadheads" poses as a prominent person. He wants to have his say in the business meeting. His children must be pushed to the front to show off the brightness(?) they have inherited, whenever there are any entertainments to be given. But ask him for a contribution, and he will either laugh in your face, or rob you of your valuable time by a long list of excuses why he can not contribute. Such a "deadhead" is, indeed, a pitiable object. He is not only a deadhead in the church, but is trying to "deadhead" his way into heaven as the genus "hobo" deadheads his way from one place to another.

To belong to any one of these classes is no honor, but to earn your own way through life and into eternity by honest effort, helpfulness and God's grace, is far better and much more soul-satisfying.

The King James Version of the Bible and Its Influences.

BY VIRGIL C. HOLSINGER.

THE Bible used by a majority of the English-speaking people of today is called the King James or Authorized Version. It is so called because it was first published under the direction and supervision of King James.

James I. came to the throne in 1603. He was known as one of the best scholars of his day, though in him scholarship often assumed the form of the ridiculous. His early life and training had made him a close student of the Bible. He had even tried his hand at authorship, having written a paraphrase of the Book of Revelation and translated part of the Psalms.

In January of 1604, owing to a number of petitions, filed by the Puritans, King James called together what is known as the Hampton Court Conference. In that noble palace, built nearly a hundred years before, by Cardinal Woolsey, on the banks of the Thames, and presented to Henry VIII., there assembled, in the presence of King James, Archbishop Whitgift, of Canterbury, Bishop Bancroft, of London, the learned Dr. John Reynolds, of Oxford University, seven other bishops, eight deans, and four leaders of the progressive Puritan party.

The King acted both as moderator and judge, and lost no chance to display his wit and learning during the debate. He rudely rejected every petition of the Puritans.

In one point, however, he yielded to the obnoxious Puritans, notwithstanding the protests of the bishops. This was a petition to give the Geneva Bible of 1560, which was the favorite of the common people in their families, preference over both the "Great Bible" and the "Bishops' Bible" which had, from Queen Elizabeth's time, been used in all the churches of England, or else to authorize a new translation of the Scriptures.

This charge of the Puritans, that mistranslations of the Scriptures were found in the Prayer Book was the first definite step towards a revision.

King James was thoroughly in accord with the idea of a new translation, for he himself thought the Genevan to be the worst of all translations. He seemed to regard this as the opportunity of his life to do a popular and permanent piece of work on the Bible. He entered into the plan with energy and enthusiasm, and a determination to carry it through to a successful issue.

Dr. Reynolds, the real mover of the enterprise, is described as a prodigious scholar, who turned over all writers of profane and divine church history. He was commissioned as one of the translators of the company which had in charge the prophetic books of the Old Testament, but he died in 1607, four years before the publication of the work.

So far as is known, the Conference adjourned without taking any definite steps toward meeting the issue of the Puritans. But the strong words of the Oxford president had been sown in fruitful soil. The King was not slow in making preparations. It is not known with whom King James made all the plans, and arranged all the details, but July 22 of the same year he wrote to Bancroft that he had appointed fifty-four learned men for the translation of the Bible, and authorized him to begin the undertaking.

The only prerequisite for the position of translator seems to have been proved efficiency as a Biblical scholar. The list included Anglican churchmen, Puritans, and laymen. Although there were fifty-four men appointed, only forty-seven were actually engaged. This was due to resignations and deaths between the time of appointment and the time when the work really began.

These revisers were organized into six groups, two at Westminster, two at Oxford, and two at Cambridge. Each of the six groups worked on a specified portion of the Scriptures, separately at first and then as a body. The Westminster group revised Genesis to 2 Kings, inclusive, and Romans to Jude, inclusive. The Oxford group took Isaiah to Malachii, inclusive, the Gospels, the Acts, and the Apocalypse, and the Cambridge group revised First Chronicles to Ecclesiastes, inclusive, and the Apocrypha. The competency of the revisers was undoubted. Yet, such an array of scholarship could not do the work harmoniously without stringent rules. To guide them in their work, there were provided fifteen rules, as follows:

1. The ordinary Bible, read in the church, commonly called "The Bishops' Bible," to be followed, and as little altered as the truth of the original will permit.

2. The names of the prophets and the holy writers, with the other names of the text, to be retained as much as possible, as they were vulgarly used.

3. The old ecclesiastical words to be kept, viz., the word church not to be translated congregation.

4. When a word had divers meanings, that to be kept which had been most commonly used by the ancient fathers, being agreeable to the propriety of the place and the analogy of the faith.

5. The division of the chapters be altered either not at all or as little as possible, if necessity so require.

6. No marginal notes at all to be affixed, but only for explanation of the Hebrew or Greek words, which can not, without some circumlocution, be briefly and fitly preserved in the text.

7. Such quotations of places to be originally set down as shall serve for the fit reference of one scripture to another.

8. Every particular man of each company to take the same chapter or chapters; and having translated or amended them severally by himself where he thinks good, all to meet together, discuss what they have done, and agree for their parts what shall stand.

9. As any one company has dispatched any one book in this manner, they shall send to the rest, to be considered seriously and judiciously, for His Majesty is very careful in this point.

10. If any company, upon the review of the book so sent, doubt or differ upon any place, to send them word thereof, note the place, and send the reasons, to which if they consent not, the difference is to be compounded at the general meeting, which is to be of the chief of each group at the end of the work.

11. When any place of special obscurity is doubted, letters to be directed by authority to send to any learned man in the land for his judgment of such a place.

12. Letters to be sent from every bishop to the rest of his clergy, admonishing them of this translation in hand, and to move and charge as many as being skillful in the tongues, and having taken pains in that kind, to send his particular observation to the company either at Westminster, Cambridge, or Oxford.

13. The directors in each company to be the deans of Westminster and Chester for that place, and the King's professors of Hebrew and Greek in either university.

14. These translations: Tyndale's, Matthew's, Coverdale's, Whitchurch's, or the Genevan, to be used when they agree better with the text than the Bishop's Bible.

15. Besides the said directors before mentioned, three or four of the most ancient and grave divines in either of the universities, not employed in translating, to be assigned by the vice chancellor, upon conference with the rest of the heads, to be overseers of the translations, as well of Hebrew as of Greek, for the better observation of the fourth rule above specified.

How closely these rules were followed can not be determined. They used Beza's Greek Testament of 1589 for the New Testament, and the Bishop's Bible formed the English basis, although the Genevan and Douay versions had much influence.

The translators aimed at a comparison of all preceding versions and sought to make a better one than any of the many good ones then in use.

A remark from Selden furnishes all that may be known of "The Private History of our English Bible:" "The translation in King James' time took an excellent way. That part of the Bible was given to him who was most excellent in such a tongue and then they met together and one read the translation, the rest holding in their hands some Bible, either of the learned tongue, French, Spanish, or Italian. If they found any fault, they spoke; if not, he read on."

When the revision was completed, three copies of the whole Bible were sent to London; one from Cambridge, one from Oxford, and one from Westminster, where they were examined by a committee of six persons, two from each company, who revised the whole.

The entire time for carrying out the great enterprise is divided info three periods. The first three years (1604-07) were occupied in perfecting the preliminary arrangements. The next three years (1607-10) were consumed in the individual and coöperative labors of the six groups of revisers. The next nine months were consumed in the final revision by the six.

The proofs were read by Thomas Bilson, Bishop of Winchester, and Dr. Myles Smith, after which the work was given over to Robert Baker to be printed. The first edition of the new revision bore the date of 1611. It had a fulsome dedication to the King and an extensive explanation to the reader, which has, however, disappeared from the Bibles issued from the American press.

The new Bible was in good demand. Five editions were issued within three years. In 1614 another edition was printed, which contained four hundred variations (marginal references) from the first. The so-called final revision of the Authorized Version was published in 1638.

The printing of the Bishop's Bible was stopped. The new version found, however, a formidable rival in the Geneva Bible, yet within fifty years it became the Bible universally used by the English-speaking people.

For almost three centuries the Authorized, or King James' Version has been the Bible of the English-speaking world. Its simple, majestic, Anglo-Saxon tongue, its clear, sparkling style, its directness and force of utterance, have made it the model, in language, style, and dignity, of some of the choicest writers of the last two centuries. No version of private origin, even in the face of advance in scholarship, can compete with it.

The beauty of its style has drawn praise from men of most diverse tastes.

This version has so long held the undisputed sway that most of its common readers can scarcely think of any other as the true Bible.

It is hard to realize, without stopping to reflect, how long the King James Version has been dominant. Its revisers were at their work when Jamestown, which claims the honor of being the oldest English settlement in America, was founded. The complete work was published in full nearly ten years before the Pilgrims landed on Plymouth Rock in Massachusetts. Nearly the whole of American history has been written while the English Bible has remained unchanged.

Shakespeare, Milton, Bacon, Bunyan, and Newton have added imperishable treasures to English literature, but the influence of the King James Version of the Bible on the English language and literature in general can never be estimated.

Sammie J. Thomson Gone Home.

BY J. G. ROYER.

For the information of the hundreds of students who attended Mt. Morris College within the years of 1885 to 1894, I write this.

All who attended the school at any time within the above-named years knew Sammie Thomson. He came to Mt. Morris in September, '85, and united with the Church of the Brethren that same fall. He was twenty years old then.

When a boy, ten years old, he had a severe attack of inflammatory rheumatism, which left him a cripple for life. He moved about by means of two crutches. His room, during the nine years he spent at Mt. Morris, was on the second floor of Old Sandstone. Though badly crippled and deformed, Sammie never lacked for roommates. Every good young man was not only willing, but glad to have Sammie for a roommate.

Yet more. Sammie could go up and down stairs with his crutches, but it was slow and hard work for him. The boys did not fail to make themselves helpful to him in that particular. When the bell rang for breakfast, Sammie at once started to go down. As the other boys came along, two of them would take hold, one at each arm, and carry him to the foot of the stairs and then go on, leaving him to follow by means of his crutches. When he reached the head of the stairs, leading down into the dining hall, some of the later boys would pick him up and carry him down. Again; after meals Sammie was given a lift as the boys came along.

Sammie never asked for help, and never needed to ask. Abundant help came without asking. So in many other things. Whenever Sammie needed help of any kind, the ready help was at hand.

Young reader, would you like to know why this cheerful helpfulness was always at hand for Sammie? It was because of the character of the one that needed the help. In the first place, having become a cripple for life, Sammie's body never fully developed, leaving his weight about one hundred pounds, and hence he was easily carried by two. But the chief source of his helpfulness was his real goodness,—a goodness that shone from his eye, and manifested itself in a broad smile of appreciation for the kindnesses received. Sammie was a really good man. He not only professed religion, but he lived it every day and everywhere. During all the years of his stay at the college, the morning chapel services always found Sammie in his place. So, also, at Sunday-school, at preaching, and at the midweek prayer meeting. And he was there to take part.

It was my privilege to ask him to offer the opening prayer at a Sunday morning meeting in his home church about a month before his death. That prayer was a most touching outpouring of the innermost springs of the soul of a good man.

The week following it was my privilege to accompany Bro. Flora, the elder of his home church, to administer the holy anointing. A few weeks later,—June 26,—Sammie went away to be with the Lord whom he loved, having sojourned here forty-six years.

Was Sammie's life a success? Yes, a success most noble. When he accepted Jesus as his Savior, he came to the realization that the disciples of Christ are to be "the light of the world." His ideal of Christianity was a something that carried with it sunshine and smiles, and he aimed to live his ideal. Eternity alone will reveal the good Sammie Thomson's life of smiles and sunshine accomplished in the lives of the hundreds with whom he came in touch in the years he spent at Mt. Morris.

The Lord bless and comfort his godly aged mother, who so faithfully and devotedly cared for him during his years of affliction.

The Peace Problem.

BY AUGUST BECK.

It is from the individual being that the peace effort must come. It must go from man to man, from community to community, from nation to nation, till it spreads the wide world over like a living fire, and the whole world, like one man, arises and demands: "In the name of Jehovah, let there be peace." When the majority of people have taken Christ as their standard; when they hear his voice tenderly saying: "Little children, love ye one another," then there will be peace, because none will be found to fight the battle.

But thank God that peace and good will are approaching this earth with giant strides. In looking back through the ages, we find the world of today infinitely better than ever before. Even as early as in the time of Abraham people had wandered so far from God as to worship idols. They had fallen so low that the stench of Sodom and Gomorrah reached high heaven. Then God, in his just wrath, utterly destroyed them.

So weak were God's chosen people that when Moses led them out of Egypt, they started worshiping idols as soon as his back was turned. Still later on the world had fallen so low in sin that God, in order to save mankind, had to sacrifice a part of himself, "his only begotten Son." Dark and dismal did it look when the Pope, as the head of the church, spread his false teaching and sold "absolution" all over Europe. Think of it—actually parceling Europe out to his agents, who sold forgiveness for sins committed, and, if the purse was long enough, even forgiveness for sin to be committed in the future.

We seem yet to hear the groans going up from the stake as Roman intolerance burned people right and left for a trifling difference of religious opinion. We see in our mind's eye the pale, tortured faces of those thousands upon thousands who were placed in the chambers of torment, and murdered under all the fiendish cruelties that mind could devise, all because they were accused of not being of the right faith.

But through all this, through all ages, there have always stood out prominently a faithful few. Like beacon lights they pierced the night of sin and ignorance. Before Christ we have Abraham, Moses, David and John the Baptist; after Christ we have his apostles, their immediate successors, and, later on, the men who brought about the religious reform so richly enjoyed by our Brethren. Wherever we go, over the broad land, we find that peace and good will to all mankind are rapidly gaining ground.

Capacity and Conservation of the Forces of the Church.

BY QUINCY LECKRONE.

THE advanced thought of the church of today permits of the adaptation of new methods of work in all its departments.

Not many decades ago, easily within the memory of many who are not yet old in years, it was common among us to hold in suspicion the introduction of any and all new methods, or the working out of new thoughts and theories. We, probably, did not consider quality as we did some other things.

While the church maintained itself for many years working along that line, it did a great and noble work. It laid a foundation deep and permanent, and about it erected barriers protecting it from many winds of doctrine.

But an intellectual awakening came, as it always does at the proper time, to an energetic, industrious, and thriving people. The church awoke to find that it possessed a capacity for aggressive work, and hitherto realized. Many awoke to realize that their first duty was loyalty to God.

Down upon their knees went a host of the church's faithful, in consecration of themselves and their possessions. They arose and came to the church, and are still coming, with hands extended, laden with ample means, pleading that their sacrifice of labor and of wealth be accepted.

Like an army restless for a conflict, they clamored for an outlet for the newly-discovered surplus energy. This necessitated a reorganization of methods, then in use, and the introduction of new methods adequate for the conservation of this rejuvenated force.

Today the church finds itself in possession of an ample force of men and means. It has preachers, teachers, Christian Workers, missionaries, already set apart, in great numbers, and many more who are not yet brought forward. Add to these the men possessing wealth, business men, and men in the professions. View this vast array and its possessions, and we wonder why the earth is not ringing with the sound of victory for the banner of the Lord.

But much of this is only latent force. It must be made kinetic. Methods are channels through which the forces of the church should be set to work. When the methods of the church become capable of containing these forces, and are adaptable to the nature of them, then will these forces flow through these channels into active service. Until adequate methods be secured and employed, these forces will continue to be misemployed. Business men and financiers will continue to employ their energy, and the result of it according to the business ways of the world. Young men, with zeal and force and influence, will continue to seek other fields of activity.

The great problem of today is the conservation of the forces properly belonging to the church. The latent force of the church is abundant. One out of about every fifteen of the men in the church is already installed into the ministry, but this force is not utilized. It is not making full proof of your ministry to preach once in a month, or once in two months, and living all the rest of the time like any other business man.

There are many business men in the church who have organized and are controlling vast business enterprises, and but little, if any, of the result of their ability ever touches the church. They simply continue to reinvest their income in worldly pursuits. Is it not true that, though they are loyal to the church and sound in the faith, they have stepped into these worldly pursuits and remain there, continuing to invest their income, simply because the church has not provided a system by which their energy and ability could be recognized and utilized? What we need is a system that can be applied locally, to bring into activity, in the local congregation, its latent forces.

The church, in its national organization, has shown itself capable of controlling its business in a commendable way, as seen in the conduct of its publishing interests and in the administration of its mission work. But this touches so few of the people of the church,—practically only those who are already active, and does not bring out the great latent force of the church.

In each State District there ought to be found one hundred persons who would contribute $100 per year for ten years toward a church building fund. This, with what others would contribute, would build and support ten churches in towns and cities of the District. This, in the forty-eight Districts of the Brotherhood, would mean 480 new congregations, and would be a wonderful avenue for the utilization of the forces of the church.

Is this asking too much? More than that amount is spent now by our people for automobiles, and twice that much more for telephones. Useful conveniences, surely, they are, but they do not enlarge the church, or bring men to Christ.

One thing is sure, the world will not be brought to Christ until Christian people do the work required of them, and produce the money wherewith to do it. God's temple was not built by Solomon until the people furnished the money.

Joash did not repair the temple until the people furnished the money. The people of the Church of the Brethren are able, they are willing, and they are ready to lay their sacrifices upon the altar. Will not some one, out of the great number of successful business men in the church, come forward with a plan whereby this consecrated, latent power within the church may be led into active service for the glory of the Lord?

THE ROUND TABLE

Homiletic Hints.

BY E. B. HOFF.

The Gentile World Guilty Before God (Rom. 1: 18-32).

GOD has given to men the open book of nature to manifest his everlasting power and divinity (1: 19, 20). In the face of this knowledge they failed to give God the glory. They failed to thank him, but, on the contrary, they kept on reasoning until their hearts became calloused and darkened (1: 21), as rationalism of all ages has done. In their profession to be wise they became idolatrous. Notice their exchange,—the glory of the incorruptible God for the likeness of an image of corruptible man. This change was not great enough for them. They ran their imagery down the scale from man to birds, to beasts, to creeping things (1: 22, 23).

For thus willfully trampling upon the book of nature, and turning God down, they stand condemned (1: 18). God gave them up and allowed them to proceed downward into the licentious habits of idol service (1: 24, 25), and so on, down and down, they went in the awful chasm of sin (1: 26, 27). Still refusing, God gave them up into the reprobacy of every form of evil (1: 28-32).

This was a vivid picture of the Pagan world in the days of Paul. It is also a clear picture of many of the heathen millions today. Should we wonder that Paul could rest neither night nor day until he had carried the saving message of the Gospel to all within his reach! Should we wonder that faithful ones leave home, loved ones, and everything of this world to carry the Gospel of grace to the teeming millions of this present world! Indeed, we do wonder how faithful Christians can be content to idle their time away at little or nothing of the service of God since they, upon their knees, promised, in their baptismal vow, to live faithful in his service until death.

Twenty-Four Years Ago.

BY ALICE STEVENS.

WE have been privileged once more to celebrate the day of our national freedom. A few days before the Fourth of July, twenty-four years ago, a young loyal sister came to Bro. Moses Deardorff, of Yale, Iowa, with a burden on her heart,—that celebrations were to be held all around them, and she felt that it was not a place for our young members to attend. She requested that he hold a religious meeting in his grove, to which he, without hesitation, gladly consented.

Arrangements were accordingly made. Benches were placed in the grove, and on the morning of the Fourth about 500 people assembled for worship. Bro. J. G. Royer, then visiting in the community, conducted the services. In his sermon he made a strong appeal to those present to accept Christ and enjoy blessed freedom from sin. "If Christ shall make you free ye shall be free indeed."

Little did our dear young sister realize what would be the outcome of her request. As a result of that meeting eleven souls gave their lives to Christ. Among them were two of Bro. Deardorff's sons. Since that time our brethren have held meetings on that day at different places. May we continue to do so! As this is the birthday of our nation, may it also be a birthday of new resolutions to use our influence to the utmost, to make this a day of far-reaching possibilities, far too great to be desecrated by revelry and carousing, which is an abomination in the sight of our Lord. Give honor to whom honor is due!

Why Are We Striving for Heaven?

BY D. MANCY QUELLHORST.

WHY are we striving for heaven? Is it because of the fear of punishment, or is it because of the happiness promised, or is it because of our love to Christ who died to save us? Any or all of these reasons might prompt us to strive harder to gain heaven than we sometimes do.

A few Sundays ago I heard a dear brother say, in the Christian Workers' Meeting, that he would not give much for the religion of a person who was trying to get to heaven only to shun perdition. While I always had a great fear of the tortures and horrors awaiting the unsaved, I did not feel like joining in with the people of God, or making any special effort to shun the dark abyss, in order to gain heaven, until, by his grace, my eyes were opened to the blackness of sin. I could then see the ungratefulness of poor, dependent creatures to our Heavenly Father. Then I realized the love of our dear Savior who left all, even the glories and splendor of heaven itself, to rescue fallen humanity.

And I can but believe (as did the brother) that if our only motive for serving our Heavenly Father is merely to shun his just punishment, we are not fit for the society of heaven, "those who have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb," neither do I think we could fully enjoy the fellowship of saints and angels without having first made the acquaintance of our dear Jesus and his disciples here on earth.

A Beautiful Death Scene.

BY MINNIE WILSON.

"Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted" (Matt. 5: 5).

ONE Lord's Day, recently, I attended the funeral service of a dear sister, at the Brethren church here in Des Moines, Iowa. I was deeply affected by the occasion, and an impression was left on my heart never to be erased.

The day was pleasant, the floral tributes were beautiful, the singing was charming, and the services were impressive. Everything was beautiful. That is the way I felt and thought about it. I have often been made to wonder why people look upon death in such a sad and morose way. I am sure that this world, at its best, is not a place so desirable that we would always want to remain here. There is too much sin and suffering, and too many heartaches!

We can never hope to realize, here on this earth, what it is to live the grand and glorious life, in a state of happiness and bliss, which God has promised to those who love and serve him. So, why should we be sad? We should say, with all humility of heart: "Not my will, but thine be done."

2 Tim. 2: 15.

BY ALICE GARBER.

IN May, 1904, I attended a Sunday-school Convention where the story was told how two young men had adopted 2 Tim. 2: 15 as their motto. Instead of saying "good morning" or "good night," they would say "2 Tim. 2: 15." Through their influence many were won for Christ. A good many present resolved to use the same motto when writing, and very few letters have left my hands since that time without "2 Tim. 2: 15" being placed on the envelope.

I have sometimes wondered if it did any good, but I never knew until recently. I received a letter from a young lady that had been in my Sunday-school class but has gone to Chicago. I wrote her a few weeks ago, and, as usual, placed "2 Tim. 2: 15" on the envelope. She said she looked it up, and it helped her through the whole week. That far more than repays the little energy expended in putting it on my letters all these years. Possibly, if I knew the history of the hundreds of others, there might be others of like testimony. Let us not be afraid to use Scripture texts. They may attract some one's eye and lead him to Christ. "My words they are Spirit and they are life," says Christ.

The Finishing Touches.

BY IDA M. HELM.

Two girls were busily sewing. By and by each garment was finished, and one girl hastily tossed her garment on the table, exclaiming: "Our work is finished!" Then she noticed the other girl still working, and she asked, "What are you doing?"

"I am putting the finishing touches on," she replied. "The threads must be tied at the ends, and the seams must be overcast, or our work will not be satisfactory. I want to do my work well."

"What is the use of all that you are doing?" questioned Anna. "You are a church member and attend church regularly. There is no use of doing those little things."

"These are the finishing touches,—marks of love," —replied Grace, as she finished packing the box of good things for her poor neighbors. Then, as she started to carry her gift to the needy ones, she said: "I am going to stop on my way and spend a half hour with Grandma Perkins. She is unable to leave her room, and she is lonely. I am going to try to cheer her up. These little acts of kindness make us happier, and by doing them we obey the command of God, 'Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.'" She paused a moment; then she said: "Our Christian work is not finished until we have put on the finishing touches by performing the little deeds of love."

CHRISTIAN WORKERS' TOPIC

Missionary—"Go" . . . "Give" . . . "Pray."

Isa. 62: 1-3, 10-12.

For Sunday Evening, August 6, 1911.

Our Need Is—

I. Zeal.—(1) "Not slothful . . . fervent in spirit" (Rom. 12: 11). (2) "Yea, I think it meet . . . to stir you up" (2 Pet. 1: 13). (3) "Be zealous, therefore" (Rev. 3: 19).

II. Burden on the Heart.—(1) "For I long to see you," etc. (Rom. 1: 11). (2) "For out of . . . anguish of heart I wrote" (2 Cor. 2: 4). (3) "I have great heaviness" (Rom. 9: 1-3).

III. To See the Dangers of Prosperity.—(1) "Thou art waxed fat" and "after other gods" (Deut. 32: 15; 1 Kings 11: 4). (2) "Thy great Babylon that I have built" (Dan. 4: 30; 5: 20). (3) "Soul, take thine ease" (Luke 12: 16-20).

IV. Righteousness.—(1) "Except your righteousness shall exceed" (Matt. 5: 20). (2) "Awake to righteousness" (1 Cor. 15: 34; Eph. 6: 14). (3) "Be filled with the fruits of" (Philp. 1: 11).

V. To Use the Gospel.—(1) "I will make my words in thy mouth fire, and this people wood" (Jer. 5: 14; 23: 29). (2) "And the word of God prevailed" (Acts 19: 20). (3) "The Gospel of Christ is the power of God" (Rom. 1: 16).

PRAYER MEETING

Our Lives for Others.

1 John 3: 13-17.

For Week Beginning August 6, 1911.

1. The Renewed Life Seeks to Help Others.—We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we have loved the brethren." Our love and concern for others is the absolute proof of our Divine acceptance. If, in our hearts, we feel a drawing to those of like precious faith,—one that we do not feel towards the society of the world,—we may rest assured that "our names are written in heaven" (1 John 4: 7-12).

2. The Renewed Life Looks to Christ as His Example in Helping Others.—While the Gospel of John proclaims to all mankind the glorious fact that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, the Epistle of John comes to us with a revelation of Love Divine, and what it ought to do for us in making our lives tell for others. It sets up a lofty ideal of helpful and gracious interest in the welfare of all mankind. It teaches a tender regard for the humblest disciple of the Master, though he be poor, afflicted and imperfect. At all times "the love of Christ constraineth us" to render the most loving and sincere service to all (1 Peter 1: 22).

3. Real Helpfulness Our Glorious Privilege.—To be benefactors of the human race is a precious boon given to us by our Gracious Father. In all that we do and in all that we say, we can, somehow and in some way, reach out to others, enkindling within their hearts loftier desires and nobler aims. Verse 16 takes us to the sublime height of utter forgetfulness of self and the most exalted service for our brother.—"We ought to lay down our lives for the brethren." Love does not count the cost,—it gives all (John 15: 12, 13).

HOME AND FAMILY

Waiting.

BY ELEANOR J. BRUMBAUGH.

With the Lord, high on Mount Carmel,
Waiting, while the priests of Baal
Build their altar, lay the offering,
And prolong their piteous wail.

From the morning until noonday,
And from noonday until night,
Calling on the sleeping idols
Their spread sacrifice to light.

Waiting, while a second altar
Is prepared, and offering placed.
Water poured in floods upon it,
Trenches filled, and waters waste.

Calling on the Heavenly Father,
That the people may believe;
"Thou art God. There is none other."
May we all this truth receive.

Lo, the fire of God descended!
On the sacrifice it fed,
People watching in amazement,
Cried out, "He, the Lord is God."

We are waiting, hoping, trusting;
Are God's hours ever late?
Never, never! O dear Father,
Teach thy children how to wait.

Little Prayers for Little People.

BY OLIVE MILLER.

CHILDREN should be taught early in life to pray. "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth." There is a significance in the present tense of this admonition. Early impressions are strongest, and habits of devotion to God fixed in childhood, will follow one through life as a blessed benediction.

Children are naturally religious. It is a strong characteristic of their innocent nature, and there is no period psychologically better than the impressionable years of childhood in which to fix an undauntable faith in the God who created us and to whom we should look for every needed blessing.

The child believes in everybody, and he believes in God. Later he will be obliged to lose some of his faith in humanity, but let us see to it that his faith in God is strengthened as the days and the years go by. He can be made to understand that God gives to his children only those things which are best for them. God will not see fit to answer all of our petitions, any more than the wise parent may deem it prudent to give a child everything he asks for. This is a very vital point, for many times childish faith is wrecked by a misunderstanding of the text, "Ask, and it shall be given."

At first children's prayers will be very simple sentence prayers, repeated after the father, mother, or teacher. The favorite "Now I lay me" is rendered no less precious because of its wide-spread familiarity among the children of our land. An aged minister states that he has repeated this prayer every night since his childhood: he never could find a time when he was willing to divorce himself from the precious sentiment of these lines. We give the prayer here, for, like the twenty-third Psalm, the words never grow old:

"Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray thee, Lord, my soul to keep;
If I should die before I wake,
I pray thee, Lord, my soul to take;
And this I ask for Jesus' sake."

Very similar is the morning prayer:

"As now I waken from my sleep,
I thank the Lord who did me keep
Through all last night, and to him pray
That he may bless me all this day."

Two other evening and morning prayers follow:

"Let my sins be all forgiven,
Bless the friends I love so well;
Take me, when I die, to heaven,
Happy there with thee to dwell."

(The other verses of the above prayer may be found in "Brethren Hymnal," No. 642.)

"Father, we thank thee for the night,
And for the pleasant morning light,
For rest and food and loving care,
And all that makes this world so fair.

"Help us to do the things we should,
To be to others kind and good;
In all our work and all our play
To grow more like thee every day."

A song that may precede the bed-time prayer may be sung or repeated with folded hands and bowed head:

"When I run about all day,
When I kneel at night to pray,
God sees, God sees.

"When awake or in the dark,
When I lie awake and hark,
God sees, God sees,

"Need I ever know a fear?
Night and day my Father's near;
God sees, God sees."

The following couplet is repeated by the infant classes of our Sunday-school just before the opening prayer:

"I fold my hands and bow my head,
And close my eyes till the prayer is said."

Two beautiful consecration prayers are the following:

"Just as I am,—young, strong and free,
To be the best that I can be,
For truth and righteousness and thee,
Lord of my life, I come."

"Jesus, I live to thee
The loveliest and best;
My life in thee, thy life in me,
In thy blest love I rest."

It is a beautiful sight to see the little ones about the family board giving thanks for the daily bread. Two forms for this are given:

"Lord, by thy gracious hand I'm fed;
I thank thee for my daily bread."

"Father of all, in heaven above,
We thank thee for thy love;
Our food, our homes and all we wear,
Tell us of thy loving care. Amen."

I was once in a home where the family repeated in concert the familiar lines:

"Be present at this table, Lord;
Be here and everywhere adored;
Thy people bless, and grant that we May feast in Paradise with thee."

The Lord's Prayer in verse may be sung to the tune of "Home, Sweet Home."

"Our Father in heaven,
We hallow thy name;
May thy kingdom holy
On earth be the same.
O give to us daily
Our portion of bread,
It is from thy bounty
That all must be fed.

"Forgive our transgressions
And teach us to know
The humble compassion
That pardons each foe;
Keep us from temptation,
From weakness and sin,
And thine be the glory
Forever, Amen."

The above form would be a very good song for the day-school. Another prayer for day-school in autumn or for harvest praise service is this thanksgiving prayer:

"I thank thee, Father, for the care
Which fills my life and makes it fair,
The sunshine and the pleasant rain,
The seed which grows to golden grain,
The tender love surrounding me;
For all these gifts so sent to me,
I thank thee."

These very precious lines may be taught children who have accepted Christ as their Savior and who understand that through his sacrifice they were brought into favor with God:

"Near, so very near, to God,
Nearer I can not be;
For in the person of his Son
I am as near as he.

"Dear, so very dear, to God,
Dearer I can not be;
For in the person of his Son
I am as dear as he."

A pretty verse for morning worship:

"God make my life a little song
That comforteth the sad,
That helpeth others to be strong,
And makes the singer glad."

Psalm 117 is short and makes a beautiful concert prayer for Sunday-school opening exercises. Portions of Psalm 136 and many others of the praise Psalms may be used in the same way. Sometimes we forget that praise and exaltation of our God should come first in our worship. The grand old hymn, "Nearer, my God, to Thee," is the sweetest of music and brings us very close to God. Likewise, "Break Thou the Bread of Life" is a prayer song and one that the children love. "Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty" is like the breaking of a new day, in the joy and hope and gladness which it brings to the soul. And so we might go on, enumerating many more of the worship hymns, which are, in reality, prayers sung. Children love the sentiment of these worship hymns and the slow measure to which they are written. They love the Psalms, too, and as the Psalms are nearly all devotional, the food for prayer in this book is practically unlimited. It is a blessed thing for children to learn to repeat at least a few of the Psalms. "Thy words have I hid in my heart, that I might not sin against thee."

Gentleness.

BY KATIE FLORY.

THIS word carries with it a combination of qualities of true, genuine Christian character, such as calmness, meekness and a thoughtful care of others.

The wind demonstrates its force and power by tearing objects to pieces,—not so does the sun, but by quiet, silent, hidden forces is its power shown to be the stronger as it is manifested in hundreds of ways all around us. If, then, by the gentler influences in the natural world more good and blessing is brought to humanity, it is equally true in the spiritual world.

We can all think of persons with whom we have been associated in life, who have especially influenced us to be good by the prominent trait of gentleness. How greatly it has affected our lives for good! Just to be in their presence, without scarcely a word from them, has brought over us a feeling of awe, a deep respect.

It is a very wicked heart that can not be touched by a kind, gentle word or look, a warm handshake, or some expression of sympathy. On the other hand, how much farther the sinful can be driven into sin by coldness, scolding, criticism and censorious judgment! More good can be accomplished by gentle persuasion and reasoning than by roughness and hasty words or actions.

Gentleness should be a prominent trait of all Christian leaders. It was a characteristic trait of all God's leaders of old. Study Hosea as a blessed example of this. Look at Paul's way of dealing with the Corinthians and, as he expresses himself to the Thessalonians, "But we were gentle in the midst of you, as when a nurse cherisheth her own children." Abigail, by her gentle way of approaching David, appeased his wrath and much trouble was averted. The gentleness of Christ is often seen in his life among men, but more particularly with the timid, shrinking and the erring ones. See him as he speaks to the trembling one with an issue of blood, the sorrowing woman defiled by the sin of adultery. See the loving Christ as he placed his holy hands on the heads of innocent children.

The Psalmist said, "Thy gentleness hath made me great." It will make us great too if we allow such a spirit to control us. If we lack this spirit, we lack a necessary requisite for true success in dealing with the erring, the timid, sinful and Christ's little ones.

"Speak gently to the erring ones,
Ye know not all the pow'r,
With which the dark temptation came
In some unguarded hour.
Ye may not know how earnestly
They struggled or how well,
Until the hour of weakness came,
And sadly thus they fell."

☞All business and communications intended for the paper should be addressed to the BRETHREN PUBLISHING HOUSE, ELGIN, ILL., and not to any individual connected with it.

BRO. G. W. KIEFFABER and wife, of Mount Morris, Ill., gave the MESSENGER sanction a pleasant call.

THOSE writing Sister Sadie J. Miller, of Waterloo, Iowa, should address her in care of R. F. D. No. 2.

BRO. RUFUS WYATT, of Joplin, Mo., has located at Somerset, Ohio, where he should now be addressed.

CONSIDERABLE of the Missionary Department, page 475, this week, is taken up with reports from our missionaries in India.

BRO. A. LEEDY, of St. Joseph, Mo., changes his place of residence to 409 South Seventeenth Street, Independence, Kans.

OUR correspondent at Panora, Iowa, writes us that five Sunday-school scholars at that place have put on Christ in baptism.

BRO. C. P. ROWLAND, of Lanark, Ill., is engaged in revival work in the Fairview church, Canada. He can be addressed at Osage, Sask., Canada.

THE little band of believers at Aurora, Mo., is now without a shepherd, Bro. A. J. Peebler having arranged to take up work at another point.

ANOTHER good meeting, conducted by Bro. J. H. Cassady, has just been closed at the Pleasant Hill church, Pa. There were twenty-one conversions.

FOR the Middle District of Maryland the Ministerial, Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meetings will be held at the Broadfording church, Aug. 16 and 17.

THE Brethren composing the Northern District of Virginia have a good program for their Ministerial Meeting, to be held in the Green Mount church, Aug. 31 and Sept. 1.

BRO. M. FLORY, of Girard, Ill., begins evangelistic work in the Mount Pleasant house, Ladoga, Ind., July 29. During the approaching fall and winter he is likely to be kept quite busy.

EIGHT applied for membership during a series of meetings held in the Blue Creek congregation, Ohio, by Bro. H. V. Thomas. Six were baptized, one reclaimed and two await baptism.

SISTER OLIVE MILLER'S article, "Little Prayers for Little People," on page 471, will be appreciated by hundreds of mothers, who for years have been looking for information of this sort.

THE repairs on the mission church, Grand Junction, Colo., have been completed, and now the Brethren are said to have the neatest and the most convenient little house of worship in that city.

THE way our patrons are writing about some of the good articles that have recently appeared in the MESSENGER is encouraging. It shows that the paper is read and appreciated. We suggest that those who are helped by an article drop a card to the author and tell him so. It will do him good.

THOSE interested in the Conference paper, in regard to churches supporting pastors, are referred to a statement given out by the committee to whom the paper was submitted. See page 475.

AT Coquille, Oregon, twenty-two were recently added to the church by confession and baptism, and two reclaimed. These were the fruits of revival services conducted by Bro. E. M. Studebaker.

The Gettysburg Times, Pa., of July 18, devotes a half column to the interest of having the Annual Meeting for 1912 located in that city. Some strong inducements will be held out to secure the Conference. York is the other point in view.

BRO. REUBEN SHROYER, of New Berlin, Ohio, is asking us to say, as a matter of correction, that he can serve churches in series of meetings during the months of December, January and February. His time is engaged up to December.

THE members of Northern Missouri will convene in District Meeting in the Rockingham congregation on Friday, Sept. 8. The Sunday-school, Ministerial and Christian Workers' Meetings are announced for the Wednesday and Thursday preceding.

IN the report from Scott Valley, Kans., page 444, it was stated that the church decided to have preaching each Sunday morning for an indefinite time. Our correspondent says the report should have read, "each Sunday evening," the preaching for Sunday morning being a settled matter.

THE members of Northern Illinois and Wisconsin are to convene at Mount Morris next week in meetings beginning on Tuesday evening, Aug. 1. There will be the Educational, Ministerial and Sunday-school Meetings, along with the District Meeting. The elders are instructed to meet on Tuesday at 1:30 P. M.

AT the recent District Meeting of Oregon, Washington and Idaho, held in the Coquille Valley congregation, Oregon, all business pertaining to the dividing of the territory into three Districts was passed on, and now there are three Districts instead of one, viz., Oregon, Washington and Idaho. Western Montana was made a part of the District of Idaho. We have not yet received particulars regarding the proceedings.

AN earnest sister who has much experience with some other people, as well as with our own, is wondering why our sisters often lack the cordiality found in some other churches, when it comes to greeting strangers. A sister who is a stranger, may come into some of our churches, and receive little more than a passing notice. Why do not the sisters make it their business to approach lady visitors, whether they be members or not, give them a cordial greeting and then introduce them to others? This is no more than what ought to be expected of the sisters in any of our congregations.

AN evangelist in one of the denominational papers says that for ten years it has been his custom to have good tracts distributed at the close of his Sunday evening services, and he finds that they have been the means of convincing scores that the doctrine he preaches is in keeping with the demands of the New Testament. He is persuaded that this is one of the very best methods of getting the masses to understand the principles set forth in the Gospel. What this preacher is doing in the interest of his plea, we might be doing in the interest of our claims. We do not use enough tracts.

OUR foreign mission fields are not the only ones that are calling for medical missionaries. The call comes from all directions. The heathen has confidence in the man who can heal his diseases. But the demand for doctors exceeds the supply. There are not half enough in these fields to serve the people. Would it not be a good idea for all of our foreign missionaries to spend at least one year in a medical school? One thing is certain: The man who can employ some simple remedies for the relief of the afflicted, while looking after their souls, has a double hold on the confidence of the heathen.

THE District Meeting of Southern Missouri and Northwestern Arkansas, to be held in the Cabool congregation, Mo., is announced for Oct. 4. The elders are to meet the day before, and the Ministerial Meeting will be held Oct. 5.

BRO. S. N. MCCANN writes, under date of July 16, saying that he is getting along nicely, and will soon be able to return to his home at Bridgewater, Va., where he must live a very quiet life for some months. He can do as much mental work as he sees proper, but is required to abstain from all physical exertions.

Do not set up your opinion against the opinion of Jesus Christ. But that is just what the preacher does, who tells his people that they need not take part in the religious rite of feet-washing as commanded in John 13. Jesus said: "Ye ought to wash one another's feet." The man who seems to know more than the Master says: "Ye need not engage in this service. It is an old custom, not intended for the people of modern times provided with good footwear." Surely, somebody is mistaken. It can not be the Christ, for he knew all things. It must be man, and it remains to be seen whether we will follow the Christ or man.

THE devil certainly has enlisted some preachers in his service, and is making good use of them. Recently a preacher at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., arranged for a Sunday service on the baseball grounds. A large crowd gathered, songs were sung, a prayer was offered, and a sermon preached that was in keeping with the baseball spirit. Within a few minutes after the benediction the game was called, and everybody, preacher and all, became more interested in the Sunday baseball game than they had been in the sermon. Just such work as this prompts most sensible people to think that there is very little in the popular religion of the day.

A CORRESPONDENT thinks that the MESSENGER fails to remember the poor, simply because we refuse to publish the many individual calls made for help. Such, as we understand the situation, is not the case. The poor needing help should make their wants known to the congregation where they hold their membership. If the congregation is not prepared to lend the assistance necessary, it can call on the adjoining congregations, or on the District, for that matter. This is certainly the better method, and enables the donors to know just what they are doing. Were we to publish all the individual calls coming to our desk, their number would soon defeat their purpose.

WRITERS can greatly facilitate matters, here at the House, by always designating the paper for which an essay is intended. If an article is intended for the GOSPEL MESSENGER, write the word "MESSENGER" on the upper left-hand corner of the first page. The same rule will apply when the essay is for any other publication. It also helps when the name of the paper is entered on the envelope. If an essay on a moral question is simply addressed to the House, it often becomes a question as to whether it is intended for the MESSENGER, the Inglenook, or some other publication in the House. These remarks are not intended for those who send obituaries, church news or church correspondence, but for those only, who send essays.

A CORRESPONDENT seems to think that a few elders will now and then take it upon themselves to decide whether or not letters may be granted to members desiring to change location. It may not be amiss to say that the granting of church letters is a matter that belongs to the church and not to a few elders. Elders can give advice and offer suggestions, but when it comes to making the decision, that belongs to the congregation, it being understood, of course, that the proceedings are in keeping with the well-established rules of the church. Prudent elders will never take advantage of the congregation regarding the granting of church letters, or any other kind of business. When the action of the church, or the work of the officials, is not properly understood, it ought to be explained, so as to maintain a good feeling and establish confidence.

Bro. E. P. Trostle, one of the elders of the Mount Morris church, Ill., quite recently had his right eye removed on account of injuries sustained some weeks before. He has been a great sufferer, as a result of the continued irritation which began to affect the other eye, and for that reason the removal became a necessity, in order to prevent a possible total blindness. The accident is a most unfortunate one.

Calling Special District Meetings.

Regarding the calling of special District Meetings we have this request:

"Be kind enough to state the method of calling a special District Meeting. Who makes the call? Must the purpose of the meeting be stated? Have we a minute on this subject?"

We recall no action of the General Conference having a special bearing on the subject, and must therefore be governed by usage in answering the questions submitted.

When a special District Meeting is deemed necessary, to make preparations for an Annual Conference that has been granted, it is understood that the meeting should be called by the officers of the last District Meeting. The date, place and purpose of the meeting should be given in the published call.

But there may be times when special meetings should be called for other purposes. In such cases the officers of the District Meeting should take the matter up with the elders of the District, and if a majority of them favor the calling of the special meeting, the call may then be made by the aforesaid officers, it being understood that they do so by the authority of the elders. In this call the place and date of the meeting should be given, along with the purpose of the Conference. To avoid misunderstanding, it might be well to state in what way the churches are to be represented, whether by the delegates chosen for the former meeting, or by new delegates.

When the members of the District convene, the officers of the former meeting should preside until it is decided whether these officers shall continue in charge, or whether new officers for that special meeting shall be chosen. The purpose of the meeting may then be stated, and no other matter should be considered, unless it comes through the churches in the regular way.

Nov. 12, 1875, a special District Meeting for Northern Illinois was held at the Cherry Grove house, a few miles north of Lanark, for the purpose of considering the call for preaching the Gospel in Denmark. At this meeting a movement was set on foot that led up to our present missionary organization. But the purpose of the meeting was well understood before the call was made, and special officers were chosen to preside, and to take care of the business of the meeting.

The special District Meetings and special Conferences, that have been held in the Brotherhood since the special Annual Conference in the Shenandoah Valley, Va., Oct. 20, 1784, would afford occasion for some intensely interesting articles. Some of these meetings were proper and helpful, but that can not be said of all of them.

Is Right Always Right?

This may seem a strange question to ask and consider, and yet it is one worthy of our careful thought. It was, in a special way, brought to our mind in reading our lately published volume of "Minutes of the Annual Meetings," containing all of the decisions of our Conferences from 1778 to 1909. We have been reading these with a good deal of thought and much interest. In doing so, questions will arise, and conclusions must be drawn. One of them is: "Is right always right?" And, we may add, "Is wrong always wrong?"

The answer to these questions may be, in our estimation, yes and no. If right is always right, then the church has made many mistakes by allowing some of her decisions to become obsolete and she has erred in changing many others.

Another question, right here, forces itself to our attention,—If right is always right, what had the Holy Spirit to do with helping to make the many obsolete and changed decisions? This naturally brings us to the office of the Holy Spirit. What part does he take in our personal lives,—in directing the work of the church? Not, to our knowledge, has the Holy Spirit been revealed to us as a Creator, but as a Leader, Helper and Director. It is not within his province to place into our brains and minds things which we do not care to put there ourselves. So we are quite willing to exonerate the Holy Spirit from any wrong that may have been done at any of our Conferences. Neither does the fact that many of our former decisions have become obsolete, or have been changed, prove that those who made them did wrong, or acted independent of the help and direction of the Holy Spirit. We should not so conclude.

There is a right that is eternally right, because it is the expression of God, who is all-wise and changes not. Whenever God speaks to us, that is right, and we should say Amen. When God says: "Ye must be born again," "Repent and believe" in Jesus, "Be baptized for the remission of sins," "Ye shall receive the Holy Ghost," and when he tells us what we are to do and what we are not to do, we have God's direction, God's truth, which changes not, and will remain as the plan of salvation as long as there are sinners to be saved.

About these things our Conferences have not troubled themselves, because they are fixed. When God speaks we are satisfied and keep quiet. It is the province of our District and Annual Conferences to determine how best to carry out, and make most practical, the fundamental principles, that they may prove most effectual in saving the world for Christ. These, to say the best for them, are largely the outgrowth of human judgment, reason and foresight, which are not infallible, and, because of the change of conditions, may become obsolete or need changing.

This brings us to a "right" that may not always be right, and to a "wrong" that may not always be wrong. There are things that are right because of conditions. These rights and wrongs depend largely upon surrounding conditions, and must be determined by their tendencies and results. If they direct men, women and children in right ways and right doings, they are right and should be encouraged. If, however, they lead in the direction of wrong, they should be dreaded and avoided.

All of us remember very well when hundreds and thousands of our good brethren and sisters used tobacco with a relish and a good conscience. They indulged in the habit on their way to church, and at love feasts during the intermission. And it was not confined to the weaker members alone, but deacons, ministers and elders indulged, and perhaps thanked God for the solid enjoyment which it gave them, because they were men of devotion and prayer, and for all things which they believed to be lawful and good they gave thanks. At the time the conditions and the common conscience were such as to make them feel satisfied and at ease, and smoking was as much a part of their life and privilege as eating meat and drinking coffee and tea.

For years and years our Conferences took no account of it. But as conditions changed and the church conscience became awakened on its tendencies, and the baneful effects it had on the health and morals, the right of using tobacco was changed to that of a wrong, and so Conference decided. As a result, if we were to see brethren or sisters using tobacco while attending a love feast, they would be advised to refrain from participating in the ordinances of the Lord's house.

If not the public conscience, the church conscience has so changed that it would be considered immoral to indulge in,—what we believe to be,—useless and harmful habits.

We now think of a number of other things that were long ago allowed by the church, on the part of our members, that are now looked upon as being wrong and are strongly advised against. On the other hand, we think of a large list of things that Conference decided against, that are now accepted as not only being right, but are considered as being the great essentials in our church activities and progress. The schools, Sunday-schools, series of meetings, and the missionary and temperance efforts, now being encouraged and pushed by the church, were, years ago, made to stand on the wrong side. Now they have been moved over to the right side. How do we account for all this? Are we ready to say that they were all wrong and we are all right? Not at all. They were the creatures of the moral and religious surroundings of that time. They did what they believed was right and best. We are not doing any better. We can not change the past, but we may help to make a better future. It is our privilege and duty to do the very best we know and can. The Sun of Righteousness has arisen and is moving forward. Let us follow our Glorious Leader, and walk and work according to his precepts. Forgetting the things of the past, and reaching forward to the things that are before, let us press forward towards the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

As we look into the years gone by and learn how far short our ancient brethren came in comprehending, in all things, what we believe the best things to be, let us not charge it to their ignorance, nor let us credit the light in which we now see to our wisdom, but let us make due allowance for the change of conditions, environment and development. These changes will continue, and all we have to do is to exercise charity towards each other and make the best possible use of the light we now have, ever believing that, as our problems come, the needed wisdom will be forthcoming.

The Home.

In Three Parts.—Part One.

The address delivered at the St. Joseph Conference on "The Relation of the Home to the Church," brought multiplied requests to have the gist of it reduced to writing, and published in the Gospel Messenger. In answer to these requests, the following is submitted:

The importance of the subject is seen in the fact that it deals with things at first hand. The home is the first institution that God set up in this world. It is the oldest, therefore, and the foundation of all the rest. Everything in this world and in the world to come, so far as men determine things, depends on the home. Society, the goverment, the nation, the church, heaven and hell,—all these are built primarily on the home. They are what the home makes them. As the home is, so are these. If the home is after God's ideal, all, except the last of these, will flourish; if, on the other hand, the home is prostituted, then hell will triumphantly flourish; for there is no condition that yields Satan such harvests as perverted homes.

What a Home Is.—It is the outgrowth of man's social instinct. God made man to make homes. God saw, in the beginning, that it was not good for man to be alone, so he gave him an helpmeet, a companion, in the person of the woman, answering to the instincts of his nature with which he was created, which comprehends the sacrament of marriage and the state of fatherhood and motherhood. A home, then, is a place where parents and children dwell together in love and harmony. Like heaven, it is both a place and a state. It is not merely a place to stay, to eat and sleep, as many seem to believe.

When Adam and Eve were created and mated happily as husband and wife, God blessed them, and said unto them, "Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it." This is the way God started the first home. First, there was the happy mating in marriage, under God's blessing; then children were to be born, and the husband and wife and their offspring were to subdue the earth. These are the conditions that make homes, and in this order: Suitable marriages, children and occupation, not children first and then marriage.

In looking at these conditions, don't overlook occupation, for that is essential, too. Many homes are unhappy for want of it. Many, many places in this world are called homes, but really are not, because they lack these elements. No home, so-called, can reach the intended ends of home without these conditions. People, without these conditions, may live together, and call the place of their abiding, home, but at best it is only a makeshift; it is not a home as God intends. The home, then, as God would have it, is the best, the purest, the happiest, the busiest, the most fruitful place on earth,—the fittest type of the heaven to come.

As a place of discipline and training, the home stands first. As we view man's existence as unending, the importance of discipline and training is readily understood; and as we study the home in the order of its place in the world and its purpose, it, as an institution of discipline and training, is seen at once. The home receives its charge to discipline and train its members in the very nature of its existence. And in the nature of itself, it also affords the finest conditions for the development of these. The working out of the ends of the home is, in itself, the finest schooling; and the maintenance of right relations among its members is discipline and training applied. As a place of training both in the positive and negative graces, the home is without equal.

The Duties of Husband and Wife to Each Other.—The first essential to the marriage state is suitable mating. This lesson is plainly taught in the first marriage, when God himself mated the pair. God said, "I will make him an helpmeet for him" (Gen. 2: 18). Then, after Eve's creation, he presented her to Adam, and she became his wife and the mother of his children. She was a suitable mate,—a helpmeet, one answering to the needs of his nature and mission in life, a suitable woman to become his wife. This is what is meant by "helpmeet," and this is the way God mated Adam and Eve. And this is the first duty that prospective husbands and wives owe to each other. Above all things else, they ought to be happily mated. Each is under obligations to the other to make a wise choice. Each should do his best at this part of the contract; for a blunder here is a blunder for all time. Probably, most of the unhappy marriages trace the foundation of their trouble to unsuitable mating to begin with; and then the rest easily follows, until our courts are filled with divorce suits, the nation is shamed and marriage disgraced.

Now, since God does not mate people today as he did Adam and Eve, the choice of partners is a matter of judgment with the parties concerned. Therefore persons should not enter into marriage, nor the contract of marriage, until the judgment is matured sufficiently to choose wisely. A wise and considerate choice, it seems to me, must consider age, temperament, soundness of body and mind, inherited tendencies to disease, inclination to particular callings in life, attitude of parents, etc., and last but not least, the inclination to things spiritual, respect for religion, etc. It may mean much more; it can not mean less.

While contracting parties should choose wisely, it must not be overlooked that marriage is purely a matter of choice; it is a mutual and voluntary union entered into by one man and one woman, having for its basis not mere personal respect, not merely the interest and convenience of the parties, but mutual love and affection. The element of force must not be exercised. All forced marriages, or marriage on whatever basis other than mutual love and affection, are immoral.

Mutual love, guided by judgment, is the basis of all proper marriage; and it is to be maintained in the marriage state. This obligation substantially embraces all the duties of husbands and wives to each other; its discharge makes all the rest easy and pleasant.

The Word says, "Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it." "So ought men to love their wives as their own bodies. He that loveth his wife loveth himself; for no man ever yet hated his own flesh." "Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord. For the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the church."

Here love is taught, and its measure indicated for both the husband and wife. The husband is to love his wife; he is to love her as Christ loved the church, and as men love their own flesh. This means that the husband is to love his wife, that he would die for her, if need be. And since the husband is, by nature and Scripture, the head of the wife, and since the wife is expected to love her husband as the church loves Jesus, and obeys him, the wife is to submit herself unto her husband, as unto the Lord, even as the church submits to Jesus. And both these laws are easy and natural, where the right conditions exist. It is galling only in their absence. Where the mating is happy, it is easy and natural for the husband to love his wife as his own flesh, and it is easy and natural for the wife to submit to the law of love. The plan is perfect, but it is not always perfectly observed.

This law of love implies absolute fidelity in the marriage state, full coöperation and complete sympathy. These conditions promise the highest happiness and success in the home. Husbands and wives should live together according to knowledge, the husband "giving honor unto the wife, as unto the weaker vessel," and each, above all things else, should "possess his vessel in sanctification and honor." The greatest sin the husband and wife can commit against each other, is looseness in the marriage bond. Adultery is such a great sin that a husband or wife may put the other away for this cause (Matt. 19: 9); and it is the only sin in the world of sufficient weight to dissolve the marriage bond. Then look at Jesus' definition of adultery in Matt. 5: 28, and the whole question is clear.

Ice Cream Festivals.

WOULD it be right to hold an ice cream sociable, or an ice cream supper, in the churchyard for the benefit of the church? This is the question that we are requested to answer. This simply means that if it rains, the ice cream sociable is to be moved into the church, and if it is not taken in this year, it may be found quite easy to bend the consciences of the members just enough to let it in next year, rain or shine. But why go to the church to eat ice cream? What has an ice cream supper to do with the house of God? But, one says, the supper is for the benefit of the church. By this we are to understand that ice cream is to be sold with a view of making money for the church. Now, when a church becomes so unconcerned about the Lord's work that it must resort to suppers and ice cream sociables in order to raise what little money may be needed, it is time for that church to send for a good evangelist to preach a number of sermons on the corruptions and fate of the Seven Churches of Asia. As we view it, ice cream is all right in its place, and even an ice cream supper may be proper; but when we have to go to feeding people ice cream in order to induce them to give a little something for the Lord's work, it must be evident that religion is at a very low ebb. The Lord at one time denounced certain money changers for making the house of prayer a house of merchandise. Were he to come to some of the churches in these days, he might find occasion severely to reprimand some of his followers for attempting to turn a building dedicated to his service into an ice cream parlor.

The Problem Solving Itself.

A SISTER, writing to this office, thinks that if the ministerial question had been discussed at Conference as much as some other questions, the problem would have been solved long ago. Like some others, she does not understand that the problem is solving itself about as fast as it is usual to solve great problems. As regards the free ministry, that can be had wherever desired, Churches can call men to the ministry, and, as a rule, these men will be glad to preach the Gospel without money and without price, if the people will turn out to hear them. Then, on the other hand, if a congregation wishes to employ a minister, and give him a good support, that is her privilege. If she can raise the money and secure the preacher that will answer her purpose, the problem is settled for that church. It is no more a question in the Brotherhood, which plan is right and which one is wrong. Both plans have been endorsed, and as a people we are letting them grow side by side. The future will settle the question as to which one will become the prevailing custom.

Here, in Northern Illinois, both plans are in operation, about half of the churches having the free ministry and the other half the supported ministry. The two plans make no trouble with us, nor can we see that one set of churches prospers any better than the other. It is all a matter of conditions and preferences. The elders and pastors who are supported are fully as loyal, and as sound in the faith, as those who support themselves, and, so far as we can understand, as good preachers and as well educated preachers may be found among the latter as among the former. We are simply letting the problem take care of itself, and we presume other Districts are doing the same. True, we may discuss the question in the MESSENGER, but the rank and file of our people are doing their own thinking, it being quite generally understood that a congregation is at liberty to adopt the plan best suited to her conditions.

Distributing Our Literature.

AN outsider, to whom copies of the MESSENGER are sent now and then, tells us how he appreciates the paper, and then suggests that it might be a good idea to have all unused copies sent to the Salvation Army people, to be distributed among the city people. Since the Salvation Army folks have papers of their own, we do not know just how they would feel about handing out the MESSENGER. But we have this to suggest: Why can not our own people take a more active part in distributing our literature? A committee could be appointed to receive unused papers, and the different members of the committee could take their turn, once a week, placing the papers in families where they would be appreciated. A city congregation might arrange with a few country churches for the papers the members do not care to file. So far as the appearance of our sisters on the street is concerned, they make just as good an impression as it is possible for the Salvation Army women to make. Not only so, but it would seem quite in keeping with the principles of the Brethren church for our sisters to engage in work of this sort. In some instances they could be assisted by young brethren.

Games on the Fourth.

A CORRESPONDENT says that he sees nothing out of the way about our people celebrating the Fourth in a sane and religious manner, but he thinks it is wrong to arrange for games on such occasions, just like the world does. In a particular way he refers to pitching horseshoes, and wishes to know if we think games of this sort are in keeping with the religion we profess. We should hardly think that any of our people would so far forget their holy calling as to take part in games that even the better class of worldly people often feel disposed to condemn. In our Fourth of July celebrations there is danger of us drifting into things of this kind, and if we are not on our guard, we may, inside of a few years, be following right in the footsteps of the world. For quite a while the press of the country has been working for a sane Fourth, and some commendable improvements have been made. Our people are aiming higher. We are working for the sensible religious Fourth, and if we would succeed we must rule out everything not in keeping with this high aim.

The Wrong Spirit.

ONE, not a member of the Brethren church, on renewing his subscription to the MESSENGER, says that before remitting he was told by a spirit that he needed the money worse that he needed the paper. Thinking the matter over, he entered into a self-examination, and soon discovered that he was not listening to the right kind of a spirit. Another spirit said to him (so he writes) that he needed the MESSENGER much more than he needed the money it would cost. Listening to the dictates of the Good Spirit, he renewed his subscription and feels delighted with the contents of the paper, from week to week. If those who are not members of our church should feel impressed in this way, what ought we to expect of those who are members! Are they all impressed with the thought that they need the MESSENGER more than they need the money the paper costs?

PROMPT WORK.

The General Temperance Committee is pleased to announce that the latest District organized in the Brotherhood (not three months old yet) has not only appointed its District Temperance Committee, but that Committee has organized and sent its organization to the General Committee.

For several reasons we appeal to lovers of temperance in all the Districts, to see to it that all the Districts not only appoint Temperance Committees, but that they arrange to have them perpetuated. Will the various Committees that have not yet organized, please do so at once and report the results to the General Committee? This information is needed soon, for the New Almanac for 1912. Please read the plea for help in the Messenger of July 8, and respond. Send all communications to the Secretary. W. M. Howe.

A REQUEST OF THE SISTERS' AID SOCIETIES.

In a very few weeks the outgoing missionaries for India, Denmark and Sweden, and France, together with their friends, will be our guests in the Brooklyn Mission home for several days and nights.

We regard these occasions as special seasons of joy and pleasant service for our Master, and for those whom we love for the Lord. However, at such times we are have from thirty to forty guests, we feel somewhat mortified to tell some of our visitors that we are deficient in bedding. Room we have in abundance. We can easily accommodate sixty people or more; if we had the beds, comforters, quilts sheets etc. The Brooklyn Mission home belongs to the Brotherhood, and every one who desires to see the missionaries sail, is welcome as long as we have a corner to place them.

We anticipate that we need only give a hint to our good Sisters' Aid Societies, as to our need, resting assured that they will gladly do the rest. Will you kindly write me, in case you desire to have a part in supplying our need in some way? Mrs. J. Kurtz Miller.

KARADOHO, INDIA.

Our Mission School.

Our Mission school at the railway station has sixty-three scholars enrolled. These children come from Brahmin, Mohammedan, Varley, Dabla, Dhodia, Barie, Tunkari, Varnia, Kurnbi and Christian homes. In school they sit side by side and sing Christian hymns and join in repeating Bible texts. Surely, education and Christian teaching destroy the caste spirit and foster the spirit of universal brotherhood.

Some Appreciated Visits.

Sister Stover and children, who spent a few weeks with us, have returned to their home at Anklesvar since the refreshing rains have come and the working heat is less. Here, at Dahanu and at Bulsar, the heat is more bearable, because of the sea breezes. All the other stations are farther inland. These days, that missionaries spend together in Christian fellowship, cheer us on our way. Sister Himmelsbaugh also spent a few days here. She made herself useful among the sick and suffering. The field of work for a trained nurse is no small one, especially in this land of disease and suffering. Sister Himmelsbaugh is drawing hearts nearer to the Divine Healer while she ministers to the bodily ills.

Healing the Wounded.

Some days ago a poor Varley came from the jungle with his fingers and hands badly torn and gnawed by a tiger. He had shot a tiger, which, in its last moments, sprang toward him. In order to save his life, the native thrust his hands into the mouth of the infuriated beast. The hands were crushed and several fingers bitten off, but meanwhile the bullet had done its work, and the tiger rolled over dead. Some days later the poor fellow came to the mission house for medicine. His hands were carefully dressed, and after having been given a supply of healing ointment, he returned to his jungle home rejoicing.

A Great Day.

Yesterday, June 22, was a great day in India and in all of Britain's provinces. It was the Coronation Day for the new emperor, King George V. It was a great national holiday and many prayers were offered in behalf of the new king, that his reign might be one of peace and righteousness.

The Funeral Pyre.

The other day we stood on our front veranda, to watch the burning funeral pyre of one of our old friends and neighbors. She was an aged lady, a widow, who often came to hear the words of life, but she waited for the more convenient season which never came. Many, like this poor soul, are standing just outside of the kingdom. May God speed the day when they may be gathered into his kingdom! Alice K. Ebey.

CHURCHES SUPPORTING PASTORS.

As there exists a difference of opinion as to whether the Annual Meeting has granted churches the privilege of electing and properly supporting pastors, so that they may give their entire time "to prayer and the ministry of the Word," and as it is desirable that we have a decision on which there can be no misunderstanding, so as to avoid trouble and the feeling that those who desire to elect a pastor are disregarding and disrespecting our Annual Meeting decisions, we, the Covina Church of the Brethren, petition Annual Meeting, through District Meeting, to grant churches the privilege of so setting apart ministers to give their entire time to prayer and the ministry of the Word (Acts 6:1-4; and 13:2), giving such ministers a proper support (see 1 Cor. 9: 7-14; Matt. 10:10; Luke 10:7; Philip. 4:16-17; 1 Peter 5:2; Acts 6:2-4) during the time for which they have been chosen, so that they may effectually accomplish the work for which they have been set apart.

Sent in to Annual Meeting.

Answer: Referred to J. H. Longanecker, D. H. Zigler, T. C. Denton to report to next Annual Meeting.

With the benediction of Christ upon the ministry "under the sun of the world," it is but fitting that the church should continue to be concerned as to the welfare and efficiency of those called to this sacred office. This continued solicitude is seen in the action of the recent Conference in committing the petition relative to the privilege of churches setting apart pastors, as stated above.

A number of brethren also show an interest in the matter by speaking to the different members of the committee and some of them desire to be heard from. Now, in fairness to us, and in the hope of more good being accomplished, while the committee appointed is engaged in the duties assigned, an opportunity is given all to present such things on the question in hand as seems best for the cause of the Master.

However, in order to be most helpful for the report to next Annual Meeting, such communications should be in the hands of the undersigned by Sept. 1 of the present year.

J. H. Longanecker, D. H. Zigler, T. C. Denton, Committee.

PROGRESS OF THE WORK AT UMALLA, INDIA.

"There is sound of abundance of rain." We never saw the early rains so heavy and continous as they are this year. We had a few sprinkles, several days ago, and we all wondered whether they would not be the forerunner of monsoon. Now we no longer wonder, for we have had almost continuous rain for five days. Sometimes it seems as if the windows of heaven were wide open, and the water falls in sheets instead of drops. According to government measure, eight inches have fallen. Usually the farmers get their seed in the ground after the first few rains, but as yet no seed has been sown, and it does not look favorable for sowing for several days yet. We hope and pray that the rains may continue all through the season, thus insuring a bountiful harvest to these poor people.

Since the coming of the rains, the intense heat has gone, and the air is nice and cool. One feels more like working.

This hot season was a very busy one. There is always a busy time while the farmer is preparing for the rains. This is the farmer's time to clean his fields, ready for another year, to rebuild his house if his old one is bad, re-roof his house with palm leaves, gather his fire wood, and do many other things.

This year our Christian village has grown more than we had expected. Nine new houses were built and only three of these at Mission expense. Five of these houses were built for two families, so you see we are growing. Six of these houses have tile roofs instead of leaf roofs, and this, too, adds to the appearance of the village. We can see a great improvement in the people. They have a desire for better things, which they did not have when they were oppressed financially, and in their old environment. It is the custom to keep the cattle in the living room, but all the Christians who have this year built a separate shed for their live stock, which is, indeed, a great improvement. One family, which lived in the other part of the village, have moved in. They had their ups and downs, so they decided it would be best for them among the Christians. The woman was one of the first women who were baptized in the early years of our mission work, but who had never taken off her leg jewels. She has taken them off now, and is a happy woman.

Bro. D. H. Eby's have been gone this hot season, for a much deserved rest. We look for them home in a few weeks, now since the air is cooler.

We are anxiously awaiting Annual Meeting news, which will come in a few weeks. We are interested in all the church's work, and await anxiously the proceedings of that body.

Last week we had a very enjoyable love feast. None outside of our own congregation were here. It was a feast of good things for the soul.

This morning I was awakened by a messenger who brought the news of the death of a little one who had died a little while before. The little boy was nearly two years old, and had been sick only a few days. Bro. Lichty being gone, the school-teacher took charge of the brief funeral service. We had very well, considering that this was his first experience. We are again reminded that life is fleeting. This little one's life was short, but it has fulfilled its mission and has gone for its reward. The father has been rather wayward, but we hope that the death of his little boy will bring him into the right way again. "A little child shall lead them."

We all praise God for good health and strength to do his work. Nora Lichty.

ANKLESHWER, INDIA.

—It is amusing to have Brethren Berkebile and Blough write and ask for some fresh kindling from the firing line, when it is so wet here that the mention of fire would make a man feel ashamed. But we wanted the wet, and now we have what we all wanted,—floods of waters.

—We have had the experience of having a youth arrested and imprisoned for housebreaking and theft. Believing him not guilty, I did what I could to get him free. Finally he was not only freed from the charge, but, in the trial, the patel of the village was shown by the cross-examination to be of the actuating motives rather questionable. After it was all over, the patel was removed from his patelship. This will have a splendid moral effect on the village, and all the Bhils who hear of it. And they will be many. Sometimes we have to conduct the cross-examination, which was my first experience in this direction.

—Last month, here at Ankleshwer, a little child of three years was found dead on the riverside, and there strangled to death,—apparently that the perpetrator of the crime might get the several rupees' worth of jewelry that were on its arms and legs! It was a gruesome deed, and one thinks of it only with a shudder, but to those who feel bound to put ornaments on their little children, and to whom the teachings of ethics do not appeal, it ought to be a lesson. But what a price to pay for a lesson,—and yet—

—We are all waiting to hear the good news in store for us, as to what the Lord did for us and all his children in the last Annual Conference. The Lord works with his people. He is their Guide and Strength, and what he will do in the Conference, we wait to see. We feel there will be something good, something inspiring, which will to work throughout the whole year, even as there was last year. But supposing there was an eruption, supposing there was a fracas, then we should have to feel that the Lord was not well represented at the Conference, and for the whole year what a prospect there would be! But we look for the best things.

—Last week Sister Kathryn Ziegler received a cable message that her mother had passed away. This puts sadness in our hearts, and makes us all feel the nearness to the other side which sometimes, in the midst of multiplied labor, we are so apt to forget. It brings to most of us the fact that we can not tell whether we shall meet again some of the loved ones in this world to whom we said good-bye some years ago, and whom we hope to meet again soon, if we are spared. There is the point. Our lives are in his hands, and while all may well rejoice that Sister Ziegler is ready to join those in the call comes, all feel it might have been deferred until after a while, and not now.

—About a year ago two certain Bhils stole cotton. One was caught and sent to prison for a year for a month and a half. The other ran away. In the meantime he came into contact with Christian people and Christian teaching, and about two months ago was baptized. But nothing did he tell about the cotton. Last week he came here, and wanted to talk. We talked. He said he was guilty of stealing cotton, and that his partner had been imprisoned, and now he wanted to know what to do. I told him to confess the whole thing before the authorities and surrender himself. We sent him to the Fozdar, who sent him back and said, "Go to the Mamlutdar." We sent him to the Mamlutdar, and he sent him back, saying, "Go to the Fozdar." Again we sent him to the Fozdar, who said, "Come next morning." We sent next morning, and were told to come in the afternoon. We kept sending. It seems they did not know how to deal with a case of that kind. They could catch a thief, but when one came voluntarily, it was a question what to do with him. So, finally, he was imprisoned, and his case is to come up at any time now. I have asked the court to show mercy, considering the fact of his voluntary confession after a year, and trust the moral effect on the community will be exceedingly good. W. B. Stover.

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

ARKANSAS.

Rexie.—Bro. W. L. Woodiel, of Austin, Ark., came to this place July 8 and held a ten days' series of meetings. He preached eleven sermons. Many were made to think on their way. They enjoyed the good sermons and awoke to duty of baptism. A collection of $11.85 was taken for Home Missions.—Caleb Aills, R. D. 1, Box 14, Hoxie, Ark., July 17.

CALIFORNIA.

Butte Valley.—Our church met in special council at 2 P. M., July 16, and held an election for a minister. Bro. C. Ernest Davis was elected and duly installed into office. Eld. J. H. Stover conducted the installation services.—H. W. Allen, Macdoel, Cal., July 16.

Glendora.—We held our business meeting July 1. One letter was received. We reorganized our Sunday-school and re-elected Bro. J. C. Whitmer as our superintendent for another year. There is some uneasiness among our adherents here. We intend to organize a teacher-training class in the near future.—Mary White, Glendora, Cal., July 15.

Redondo Beach Mission.—Since our last report of the work here, three of our Sunday-school scholars have been added to the church by confession and baptism, for which we praise the Lord. We are praying for others who are near the kingdom. Bro. Swihart is assisting in the work here, for which we are grateful.—Oscar Mathias, Redondo Beach, Cal., July 16.

South Los Angeles.—Sunday evening, July 16, during our Christian Workers' Meeting Bro. Wm. Beahm, of Covina, Cal., gave us a very beneficial address on "Peace," or "The Power of Peace." This is a subject that is a great problem to the world, but it still more seriously confronts the Christian people of today. We hope that those who were permitted to hear this earnest address, will be encouraged to hold aloft the banner of peace. Sister Lena Swank, from Grand Junction, Colo., is visiting here, and is giving her time and efforts to the work at the Sixty-first and Wall Street Mission. While the worldly allurements are numerous in this section of the city, we feel that an extra effort must be put forth in order to accomplish more lasting results.—Clara B. Custer, 1236 East Forty-sixth St., Los Angeles, Cal., July 17.

Tropico.—July 2 we listened to a touching sermon by Bro. John M. Snyder. In the afternoon quite a number of members met at the home of Bro. and Sister Edward Shively to have special prayer for the sister who is very ill. She was anointed in the name of the Lord. Bro. Snyder and Wm. Beahm talked on the work of the St. Joseph Conference.—M. M. Behelman, Tropico, Cal., July 16.

COLORADO.

Grand Junction.—Our mission church at this place, which has been struggling some considerable time, is now on a firm basis. Although it is a small building, it is now one of the neatest and most inviting places of worship in the city. We believe the influence of this will be felt by our workers here. In their efforts for the Master. We feel that it will also serve to stimulate greater activity throughout the District in the Home Mission work. Sister Lena Swank, who has been at work here in the Home Mission, has effected the organization of this congregation, a year and a half ago, has been called to Los Angeles, Cal., to labor there, but she will enter a similar field of work there. Brother and Sister A. C. Rose, of Denver, Colo., have taken up the work in her characteristic earnestness. Let every member of this District push forward the work. Remember it is the bounden duty of the church.—W. B. Hornbaker, Dist. Sec'y., R. D. 3, Grand Junction, Colo., July 17.

Grand Valley.—The first annual Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Convention of the Brethren of Western Colorado and Utah was held at this place on July 8. The meeting was organized by electing Bro. A. C. Root, moderator; Bro. Daniel Hummer, secretary. The following topics were called, and reports for the different schools were given. The delegates declared the book reports a great help and benefit to each school, so that more complete and uniform reports may be given at the next meeting. Some of the topics discussed were as follows: "What Is the Greatest Need of the Sunday-school?" "Should the Church Be the Teacher?" "Why Not Have Special Installation Services for Officers and Teachers?" "The Reward of a Faithful Sunday-school Teacher." "Parents' Responsibility to the Sunday-school." and "What Do I Owe to the Sunday-school?" These topics aroused a great deal of interest, and the representatives of the different schools felt well paid for their effort, and better fitted than ever to conduct a successful Sunday-school. The evening Christian Worker topics were discussed, which proved edifying to all. The atmosphere of the whole day's meeting was intensely beneficial.—Daniel Hoenig, Fruita, Colo., July 19.

ILLINOIS.

Lanark church held a business meeting at which Brethren Frank Hook and Elmer Zuck were elected delegates to District Meeting. The writer was also elected as delegate's correspondent. Bro. Boyd Zuck was chosen Publishing House agent. Our Sunday-school is enjoying a healthy growth. The attendance last Sunday was 118 in the forenoon. Our average attendance for the last quarter was 117. The Sunday-school and Christian Workers' meeting were out of the adjoining congregations was held here on Sunday afternoon and evening. We had a good attendance and a good program.—Addie Arnold Zuck, Lanark, Ill., July 17.

Salem church met in council July 15. Our elder, Bro. G. W. Miller, of Corro Gordo, Ill., was present. Mrs. G. W. Coulson was elected elder to the District Meeting delegate. Bro. Miller will serve, alternate. At the Sunday meeting a man and his wife made application for baptism, which caused great rejoicing among our little flock. The administration of the ordinance was witnessed by a large crowd of people on the banks of the stream, about six miles from the meeting-house. Others are almost persuaded.—Jacob Hershberger, Salem, Ill., July 20.

Waddams Grove.—Eld. J. G. Royer, of Mt. Morris, made us his annual Sunday-school visit and preached for us on the Fourth. He preached a very good sermon, and also took the Sunday-school hour in giving us some good instruction concerning Sunday-school work. In the evening he also conducted the Christian Workers' Meeting. July 4 the Yellow Creek church and this church held an all-day Basket-dinner Meeting. In the forenoon Eld. P. R. Keltner gave us an address, and this some subject was discussed in the Sunday-school were discussed. All brought well-filled baskets, and after the dinner very large crowds gathered in the church to hear a very good program, given by over forty of our young people. Sister Maud Hoover, of Oregon, was also with us, looking up places for the "Fresh Air Children."—Albert Myers, Waddams Grove, Ill., July 17.

INDIANA.

Goshen (West Side).—The church at this place will hold an all-day harvest meeting Aug. 13. Bro. Harvey Schrock, of Middlebury, Ind., will speak for us.—Mrs. Osie Brumbaugh, Goshen, Ind., July 17.

Kewanna.—Sister Bixler called for the elders of the church to be anointed prior to a surgical operation, which she will soon undergo. Bro. J. B. Wike administered. Quite a number of members were present. She asks an interest in the prayers of God's people for her recovery.—D. Hendricks, Kewanna, Ind., July 16.

Kewanna (Juniata District).—At our harvest meeting Bro. Puterbaugh preached to the forenoon; Bro. I. B. Wike, our elder, preached a missionary sermon in the afternoon to a well-filled house. We had a fine day and a good meeting. A collection was taken up for mission work. We decided to start a tent for a mission in India, so we will have help coming with our small amount. May it go forth and gather sufficient funds as quickly as possible, to have our wishes materialized, because, according to the reports from India, it is badly needed. The amount is $8.60.—W. Wilfert, R. D. 3, Delong, Ind., July 17.

Lower Fall Creek.—Our church met in council June 24. Eld. Frederick Fike, pastor, presided. We decided to hold a love feast Oct. 14. One letter was called for. July 9 Bro. Kintner, of Peru, Ind., came to this place and began a series of Hoppis, and gave us two well-prepared sermons. As we are few in number we need more ministerial help, and ask you to help in the work.—Wretha Krall, R. D. 42, Pandleton, Ind., July 16.

Maple Corner congregation, five miles north and one mile east of Hartford City, and four miles west and two miles south of Montpelier, Ind., will hold a harvest meeting Aug. 13. Everybody is invited to come and spend the day with us. A special invitation is extended to the Home Mission workers: Mary Ratliff, R. D. 10, Montpelier, Ind., July 19.

Marion.—July 2 Sister Gaither organized a dear mother who longed to take up her cross and follow Jesus. She came through on the last evening of our revival and was last winter, when Bro. Geo. Swihart, of Roann, was with us, but baptism was deferred until last July. She has a faithful companion might go with her. As he still defers coming, she felt like delaying no longer in putting on Christ. Her prayers, as well as those of the church, were answered in her being offered in his behalf, and we trust that ere long we can rejoice to see him also put on the Lord Jesus. We have a few members and friends, with her companion, witnessed the administering of baptism.—Mrs. Ida Gaither, Marion, Ind., July 17.

Mexico.—Bro. Hamilton, assistant secretary of the Anti-saloon League, will be with us in an address next Sunday in the union church. We trust much good may be done. Our revival meetings are now in progress. Bro. Wm. Beahm, of Covington, Ohio, conducting the services. We trust that much good may be accomplished.—Lillian Earhart, Markle, Ind., July 19.

Mount Pleasant church met in council July 16. Bro. S. E. Stoner was elected elder for the coming year. Our series of meetings are now in progress. Bro. Ogo. Our love feast will be held the last Sunday in July. Two letters have been membership were granted.—Lena E. Huffman, New Paris, Ind., July 17.

Rock Run.—We expect to hold a harvest meeting Sept. 2. Our love feast will be held Oct. 7.—Mrs. Jennie Martin Gosheu, Ind., July 19.

Tippecanoe.—We will hold our annual harvest meeting Aug. 13. We will have all-day meetings, preaching services in the morning, then preaching after which lunch will be served, to be followed by another preaching service. We will also have a collection on that day for the mission cause.—Josiah Garner, R. D. 3, Syracuse, Ind., July 20. Cross Plains.

IOWA.

Alba.—We are still holding Sunday-school and preaching services every Sunday evening. Bro. Pouts was with us last Sunday and gave us two good sermons.—Bessie Miller, Alba, Iowa, July 20.

KANSAS.

Kansas City (South Side).—Last evening we had a council meeting more fully to equip the work at our Mission. We have had a Sunday-school since last March. Bro. W. H. Haddix was elected superintendent of the Sunday-school. Sister Hattie Bosworth was elected secretary. Bro. was elected president of the Christian Workers' Meeting. Bro. S. B. Howard was elected to the deacon's office. As he was not present at the time of election, his installation will take place on Sunday evening. The members at the mission are very much encouraged over the action. The Board through District Meeting, to give them the organization of a church. Our work at the mission is prospering. Twenty-seven have been baptized since the last District Meeting.—I. H. Crist, Kansas City, Kans., July 16.

Meade.—The members of this church, living near Galena, Kans., met July 15 for the purpose of holding a Sunday-school after Sunday-school. Our elder, Bro. J. S. Clark, and Brethren E. H. Eisenbise and D. Pyle were present. Sister Harriet Mission Board, were with us. They gave us some excellent talks. We are glad to have Sister Harriet always gives us inspiration when members from adjoining churches meet with us. We are in our second Sunday-school and are growing in number during the last few months. Bro. Lentz preached for us in the evening services and gave us a splendid sermon, for which we were very grateful. We have had some good rains of late, and so have good prospects for a fair crop.—Mrs. Ella Eisenbise, Meade, Kans., July 17.

Osage.—We expect to have our love feast Sept. 23, and our series of meetings will begin Sept. 24. Our Sunday-school is planning for a local convention, to be held July 30.—D. W. Kinsel, R. D. 1, Osage, Kans., July 17.

Prairie View.—We met in council July 1. Our elder, Bro. A. B. Cline, presided. We elected Sunday-school officers for the next six months. Bro. J. Force was reelected to superintendent. We decided to hold a love feast Oct. 21. A series of meetings is to begin Oct. 22, to be held in the church by the home ministers.—Loule Yeagst, Friend, Kans., July 21.

MARYLAND.

Denton congregation held its annual Missionary Meeting June 25. The services were conducted by Eld. J. H. Beery. The collection amounted to $20.—Mrs. Ida V. Lantz. Bro. Hartzog gave a very interesting lecture on his trip to Palestine. We will hold our Sunday-school Rally Day Aug. 13. Sister Anna Hutchison, one of our missionaries to China, is to be with us.—Edna O. Pentz, Tuckahoe, Md., July 20.

MICHIGAN.

Harlan.—June 24 Bro. R. H. Nicodemus, of Bethany Bible School, began a series of meetings for us, continuing until July 8. Bro. Nicodemus preached some excellent, helpful sermons to be very uplifting to our people, and, we trust, will not soon be forgotten. One dear young man has decided to take the fold by baptism. We learn that others are counting the cost.—Rose Miller, Copemish, Mich., July 19.

Long Lake.—We reorganized our Sunday-school at this place June 25. The officers were reelected for one year. Although our Sunday-school is small, the attendance has been fast, the attendance at these services is very good. Several of our members are living in Traverse City, and attend the services every Sunday. This is a very good place for new ones to locate. Pray for Brethren Hoffman and Miller in your prayers! July 4 we went to Lake Michigan.—about six miles from our schoolhouse.—where we all enjoyed dinner together. After dinner was over we listened to a program given by some of the young people of our Sunday-school. This was followed by a temperance lecture by Bro. D. E. Sower, in which he showed up the harmfulness of intoxicating liquor in its true light. We held meeting in the forenoon and after the program. All enjoyed themselves very much, and returned home feeling that we had been well repaid each day. Our Sunday-school decided to send $5 to the Mission at Grand Rapids. Brethren Hoffman and Miller are with us yet. Some of the young people seem to be very near to Christ. May the Lord help them to make an early decision for the right!—William Bittel, Presque Isle, Mich., July 13.

MINNESOTA.

Preston.—We recently closed a two weeks' series of meetings, conducted by Bro. Zimmerman, of Watonwan, Iowa. As a result two young men decided for Christ and were baptized on Saturday afternoon, prior to our love feast in the evening. The weather was especially warm, yet the meetings were well attended.—Ella M. Orr, Preston, Minn., July 15.

MISSOURI.

Aurora.—We are now without any one to break to us the Bread of Life. Bro. Peebler took the train to Oklahoma June 6, saying that he expected to look after his crops. This leaves the little flock without one to lead and direct us. We feel that it is time for us to think of where we must leave the work at this place, as we fully believe that God intended us to another field. It is with much sorrow that we think of leaving this little band of saints, but if only we could see some one else to take charge of the work here before we leave. We have been reading the Sunday-school lessons in Scripture lesson by some of the members immediately following the Sunday-school hour. We have received a call to the late Annual Meeting of the Dress Question, last Sunday, in our Christian Workers' Meeting, and had a very good talk on the subject. Pray for us that God will put it into the heart of some one to minister to the little band of faithful members.—C. L. Peebler, Aurora, Mo., July 18.

Dry Fork.—We are now having revival meetings, conducted by Bro. O. E. Garner, of St. Joseph, Mo., which began July 9. So far none have as yet come out on the Lord's side, but the attendance is good and the church is becoming awakened. The people also are becoming interested. We hope and pray that much good may be accomplished by these meetings.—Ida E. Teeter, Jasper, Mo., July 18.

Kitter.—The meeting of Northern Missouri District met with the Rockingham congregation at 9 A. M. Friday, Sept. 2. The District Sunday-school, Ministerial and Christian Workers' Meeting also met in connection with the Friday preceding, at which time the Elders' Meeting will be announced.—Ella Hutchison, Kitter, Mo., July 17. Route 2, R. D. 1, Polo, Mo., July 22.

South Big Creek.—By urgent request we went to Pattonsburg, Mo., July 5, and baptized a crippled brother who is the mother of a family of children. This is the first baptism in the county is helping him. This seems to be the first baptism ever performed in that locality, and it was witnessed with a great deal of interest. July 8 we had the pleasure of visiting one of telling them of our doctrine at their church, at 8:30 P. M. Bro. Hoff, of Polo, Mo., delivered the sermon. A powerful sister who had just recovered from smallpox. We returned home very tired, but glad to have had the visit. Missouri is a splendid place for mission work. It is a large field, and there is room for a good many consecrated workers. It was well attended, considering so much sickness and so many meetings in the city.—Eld. J. G. Kline officiated. Thirty sisters and nineteen brethren were at the table, seventeen of whom never had such a privilege before.—F. H. Peterson, St. Joseph, Mo., July 18.

Spring Branch church met in council July 8. Eld. L. B. Bosh presided. Our elder, Bro. Cline, was present. Bro. Bro. Chas. A. Lentz is to do the preaching. The meetings are to commence on the second Sunday in June. Sister Bro. Ernest Jones and the writer were chosen delegates to District Meeting, which is in a critical condition. We have had no rain, to speak of, since April 6.—Asro Breshears, Wheatland, Mo., July 17.

MONTANA.

Culbertson.—Having just returned home from our District Meeting of North Dakota, Eastern Montana and Western Canada, the writer will give a few items from the same.—The Messenger. Bro. J. E. Keller and myself went from the Medicine Lake church, and Bro. and Sister Hoffman from Antler, over attended. We met many old acquaintances and formed many new ones. The many inspiring talks and the zeal shown by the speakers showed that the brethren are more firmly established in the faith of the Church of the Brethren than we have ever seen them. We have many faithful members out here on the frontier, but our congregation is growing. Four members were received by letter at Culbertson, but now we have more than fifty. Then we had our meetings in a small way, but now we have a large house and schoolhouses to have meetings in. We have three mission points and are holding meetings at Keller and Antler. At McCune. Several have been added to the church this summer, and there are good prospects for others to unite with us. We crave the prayers of God's people for the entire church and mission prayer, here in this part of Montana. Our prospects are good enough to warrant us in asking the Lord to send to the Lord for what he is giving us.—D. M. Boothart, Culbertson, Mont., July 17.

Medicine Lake.—Our congregation organized a Sunday-school and built a commodious schoolhouse, one of our new preaching points. Bro. David Moothart is the superintendent. We use the Brethren literature. The church elected Eld. J. E. Keller, Bro. Jacob Bruhaker and Bro. Jacob Miller, Nelson, N. Dak. One has been baptized, who lives at the other point where we have services and Sunday-school. Eld. Landis officiated at our love feast. We ask the prayers of the faithful in behalf of those who have not yet obeyed the Lord. Almost every day we are receiving letters of inquiry concerning our country, and we are glad to say. We can welcome nine members—all, we trust, loyal and zealous in the Master's work. We received three more letters of membership. We, as yet, have no churchhouse, but a building fund has been started, and we contemplate to build as soon as we can. Our Sunday-school is growing, and we are beginning to get dry. At this writing there are indications of rain soon.—Katie E. Keller, Medicine Lake, Mont., July 17.

NEBRASKA.

Logan Grove church met in council June 23, at the schoolhouse. Eld. B. F. Heckman presided. Bro. Ira Long, pastor, Bro. N. B. Nelson presided. We decided to hold a series of meetings sometime this fall, and close with a love feast. —Ingeben Andrews, Cozad, Nebr., July 17.

NEW MEXICO

Miami.—Our church met in council July 8, with Bro. Mohler superintendent. Two Sunday-school officers were elected and accepted. Bro. Alpheus Brubaker was advanced to the second degree of the ministry, and he and his wife were duly installed. We decided to have our love feast Oct. 14. Bro. Philip Miller was elected delegate to the District Meeting. Our Sunday-school was reorganized, with Bro. Joseph Lapp as superintendent.—Mollie Bolinger, Miami, N. Mex., July 17.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Ellison.—June 25 the writer ministers began a series of meetings and did the preaching for Bro. J. H. Fike came to take up the work June 30. He continued the meetings until July 9, when we held our love feast. The interest and attendance were good, and the church feels much strengthened. July 4 we had an all-day meeting. In the forenoon a temperance program was rendered, and after an enjoyable picnic dinner a very interesting program was rendered. The crowd numbered about 800, and all could not be accommodated in the house. People were present from a radius of twenty miles. Many who had never attended such a celebration were deeply impressed with the services.—Bro. Moses Dierdorff, of Iowa, Bro. J. H. Fike, of Indiana, and many from adjoining churches, rendered much assistance.—William H. Eller, Elkins, W. Dak., July 19.

Pleasant View.—Bro. Moses Dierdorff, of Iowa, closed a four weeks' series of meetings at this place July 8. He labored earnestly for us, and we feel that God will grant his blessing. Two young men confessed Christ and united with the church. We rejoice to see men and women join their lives to Christ and work in his vineyard. We held our love feast July 1. About sixty-five members surrounded the Lord's tables. Bro. D. F. Landis came to us, at Egeland, July 16, to begin a series of meetings. The interest and attendance are splendid.—Alice Stevens, Egeland, N. Dak., July 20.

Surrey.—Our series of meetings, conducted by Bro. Isaac Frantz, of Ohio, closed last Sunday evening. Two confessions by baptism and one reclaimed, Bro. Geo. Hilton's little son, John, being among the number. As is often the case, our meetings closed too soon. Many others were near the kingdom. Bro. Frantz stayed, did a, was truly a feast to the soul. Bro. Frantz officiated, Bro. A. Hoff, of Williston, N. Dak., Morris, Ill., and Bro. D. F. Landis, of Williston, N. Dak., were with us. Bro. Landis gave us an interesting discourse on Friday morning, July 7. Bro. Geo. Hilton began preaching for us July 14, and will continue through the next week.—Maneva Lambert, Surrey, N. Dak., July 15.

OHIO.

Charleston Mission.—Our church met in council July 8. Our elder, Bro. Barnhart, presided. He remained with us over sunday, and preached both morning and evening. We decided to begin our series of meetings Aug. 1, with Bro. O. P. Haines, of Dayton, Ohio, to conduct the meetings. Sunday-school and preaching services are still well attended.—Mrs. Sallie Bennett Holsey, R. D. 6, Chillicothe, Ohio, July 18.

Dayton.—The children of our Brookville school gave a very interesting program on Sunday evening, July 16, instead of the regular Christian Workers' meeting. Bro. J. H. Crull gave an illustrated "ladder sermon" by our pastor, Bro. J. W. Fidler. We expect to take our Brookville members on on Saturday, July 22, for their annual outing, to which they are all looking for a short yet anxiously awaited. North Grove, 261 Maple St., Dayton, Ohio, July 18.

Fort McKinley church met in council July 13. Our elder, Bro. A. C. Kleppinger, presided. Considerable business came before the meeting. Two letters of membership were granted. Our love feast will be held Oct. 7, at 10 A. M. Two series of meetings will begin about the same date, to be conducted by Bro. David Metzger, of Lordsburg, Ind., and Bro. J. W. Stump, 130 West Third Street, Dayton, Ohio, July 22.

Notice.—The District of the Southeast District of Ohio are announcing special all-day services at the Brethren Home, Greenville, Ohio, July 24. Everybody bring your dinner baskets. The program will be given later.—A. B. Miller, Eldorado, Ohio, July 18.

Notice to the Church of Northwestern Ohio.—At a meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Old Folks' and Orphans' Home the contract was let for the erection of a dormitory building for an orphanage. All persons and churches, who have subscribed for such a building, are urged to see that their subscriptions are paid at once.—G. A. Snider, Treas., R. D. 5, Lima, Ohio, July 18.

Notice to the Churches of Northwestern Ohio.—The State district treasurer seems to be short of funds. As our last District Meeting it was decided that each church should pay for District expenses and the running of the Old Folks' and Orphans' Home, an amount equal to forty cents per capita. This money should be paid at once. The trustees had to borrow money to get the last year's bills paid. Please send money to Bro. F. P. Dukes, R. D., Greensprings, Ohio.—G. A. Snider, Northwestern District Treas., R. D. 5, Lima, Ohio, July 20.

Wyandot.—We will have our love feast Oct. 7, at 10 A. M. We expect Bro. and Sister P. S. Berkebile to be with us, to assist in a local Sunday-school meeting Sept. 3. We are trying to locate a minister among us, but as yet we have been unsuccessful. Who will come?—Laura A. Cook, R. D. 2, Nevada, Ohio, July 20.

OKLAHOMA.

Hoyle.—Our church enjoyed a Sunday-school meeting July 2. Bro. J. Hoyle conducted the meeting. We had a splendid morning and evening. We also held our church meeting May 19. Bro. Grosnickle presided. Our love feast will be held May 20. Fifty members surrounded the Lord's tables. Several visiting brethren were with us. The house was crowded with spectators. On the evening prior to the feast we held an election for a minister, the lot falling on Bro. Oliver Root. He and his wife were installed.—Eliza Morgan, Ames, Okla., July 22.

OREGON

Coquille Valley.—Our church has just enjoyed a feast of good things. June 16 Bro. E. M. Bosserman came to us and gave us about twelve lessons in Bible study, after which he gave us a two weeks' series of meetings. Twenty-two were baptized and two reclaimed as a result of these services. At the close of the meetings the District Meeting convened at this place. All business concerning the District of Oregon, Washington and Idaho, was disposed of, and a final resolution passed, dividing the Districts. The division is on the State line, except Idaho, which includes Western Montana. The next District Meeting convening will belong to a District. Our meeting closed July 15 with a love feast in the evening. One hundred and sixty members surrounded the Lord's tables.—J. F. Stevens, Myrtle Point, Oregon, July 22.

PENNSYLVANIA.

New Enterprise.—The first Sunday-school Teachers' Institute, in the vicinity of the New Enterprise church, was held July 9 and 10. Four very interesting sessions were held. All these sessions were well attended, and were very instructive. Brethren F. F. Holsopple, W. P. Harley and S. M. Detwiler were the instructors. The Pine Hill Sunday-school now has a cradle roll, home department (just started), and two partial-prepared adult classes.—W. H. Mentzer, New Enterprise, Pa., July 16.

Philadelphia (Bethany Mission, 3255 Kensington Avenue).—Since our last report two dear ones have been added to the fold by baptism. Last Saturday our Sunday-school had its outing. Plenty of ice large wagons filled with happy, joyous and smiling children. It is a great treat for them to leave the hot and crowded city streets and take a run in the park. The children in the country can not know what it means to the bread-in city children.—Lecture meeting, 8:00 P. M. Sunday, 1906 Park Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa., July 18.

Philadelphia (First Church of the Brethren, Dauphin Street, above Front).—Sunday-school, July 3 we held our annual meeting. Eld. J. T. Myers and our pastor, Bro. D. Webster Kurtz, presided. Our letter of appointment was read. We extend to our pastor and Sister Eva Groff as delegates to our District Meeting, to be held at Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 28. At the close of the business session both our elder and pastor earnestly exhorted the members to live closer to Christ's principles, not for appearance's sake, but because it is gospel teaching. They also admonished greater spiritual zeal. We had the pleasure of having Eld. T. T. Myers with us at our prayer meeting July 12. He gave us a heart-to-heart talk.—Mrs. Sallie B. Schnell, 1906 North Park Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa., July 19.

Rockton.—Our council will be held in the Rockton house Sept. 2. A series of meetings will begin at the Greenville house Aug. 21, to close with a love feast Sept. 3. These meetings will be in charge of Bro. David Clapper, of Meyersdale, Pa.—Libbie Hollopeter, Rockton, Pa., July 17.

Spring Creek.—We met in council at the Bethel house July 1. Bro. Samuel Wittling presided. We decided to hold our love feast Oct. 3, 6 P. M., at the Steele house. Our harvest meeting will begin July 23 at the Bethel house, and July 16 at the Steele house.—Levi E. Greenawalt, R. D. 7, Everett, Pa., July 18.

TEXAS.

Portland.—July 4 the brethren and sisters of this neighborhood, and as many of the brethren and friends as desired, met together at Gum Hollow Grove to celebrate Independence Day,—not in the usual way, however, but in a quiet way. There we could rest in the cool shade and meditate. We had tables, made with wood-framed tables, covered with tin roofing, but no firecrackers. After dinner Eld. Jacob Witmore gave us a good discourse, appreciated by all present. Thus we spent the Fourth and returned to our homes rested, conscious of having enjoyed a well-spent day.—L. J. Porter, Portland, Texas, July 20.

VIRGINIA.

Buena Vista.—Our council was delayed on account of the illness of our elder, Bro. S. N. McCann. Arrangements had been made for a council July 15, at 8 P. M. Bro. S. I. Flory presided. Our former pastor, Bro. S. G. Breyer, sent us a very encouraging letter, which was read by our experienced body of members. Bro. C. M. Driver was chosen to hold a series of meetings in his near future. Bro. Driver came to us July 16 and preached two very stirring sermons. Seven have applied for baptism and one reclaimed. There are prospects for others to enter the kingdom. Our pastor, Bro. Howard Alley, is sick with fever, but is now improving slightly.—Mrs. Lucinda Alley, Buena Vista, Va., July 20.

Germantown.—Our Sunday-school at the Brick church is progressing nicely, under Bro. J. A. Fisher's superintendence. Sister Rose Wolfe was elected our Sunday-school as delegate to the Sunday-school Institute. We have a Wide-awake, enthusiastic Christian Workers' Meeting, with Bro. J. B. Brower as president.—Ida Brower, Dayton, Va., July 19.

Pleasant Valley.—Our church met in Council July 15. Eld. S. F. Reed presided. One letter of membership was granted. At our business session the following officers were elected: Bro. C. H. Pitt was elected to the deacon's office. He and his wife were duly installed. At 2 P. M. preaching service began, which were led by Bro. Handy, assisted by Brethren Eli Reed and J. A. Miller. Our love feast was largely attended. On Sunday morning two were baptized. At 11 A. M. Bro. Jones preached for us at 11 A. M. At 7 P. M. Bro. Eli Reed preached an excellent sermon. July 8 we had a soul-cheering talk.—Margaret R. Thompson, R. D. 1, Seven Mile Ford, Va., July 19.

Timberville church met in council at Mount Olivet July 1. Our elder, Bro. C. Carter Wilkinson, presided. It was decided to have a love feast Sept. 23, at 3:30 P. M., and a visit planned in the near future. Services closed with a free will collection at each harvest meeting for the support of Bro. Isaac Long. One letter was granted.—A. C. Garber, Timberville, Va., July 18.

WASHINGTON.

Mount Hope church met in council June 25. Bro. J. O. Streeter presided. We decided to be represented at the District Meeting by letter. We organized our Sunday-school with Sister Alice Streeter as superintendent. Sister Lena Bell, secretary.—Pearl Hixson, Chewelah, Wash., July 16.

Seattle church met in council July 14, with Bro. C. Pitz presiding. One letter of membership was granted. Bro. Dickey was sent as delegate to the District Meeting held in the Myrtle Point congregation. Bro. D. Messamer was elected our Sunday-school superintendent, and Sister Nellie Pitz as president of the Christian Workers' Meeting.—Alice Dull, 514 North Eighty-third St., Seattle, Wash., July 19.

HOT WEATHER SERVICES.

It has been my privilege and pleasure, to spend a week with the Brethren in Sidney, Ohio. I began a series of lectures there on Monday evening, July 10, and from the first evening a good interest was manifested, resulting, before the week's end, in more people trying to get into the church than it would hold. I have been thinking that some facts I gathered, while there, would be of interest to the Messenger readers, especially to the workers.

Sidney is a city of some ten thousand population, and quite a manufacturing town. Some thirty-five factories are now in operation. This makes it a city largely made up of factory people. The saddest feature, however, is the seeming utter unconcerning in full of the factory people, but an anti-saloon campaign will soon begin to oust these soul-damning resorts. May every true heart's prayer to God be that they shall succeed!

Bro. S. Z. Smith took the pastorate at Sidney six years ago. Since then the church membership has been built, with a parsonage on the same lot. There is today a membership of 125, a Sunday-school of 225 enrollment, with an average attendance of 100. In these six years 120 have been admitted to the church by confession and baptism. Fifty per cent of these came from the Sunday-school. Twenty-five have been admitted to the church, last year, by conversion, and thirteen of these came from the Sunday-school.

These results show that Bro. Smith and wife have not been idlers, and these results can be duplicated in all our city work, with pastors and consecrated work. Nothing less than this will succeed, for wherever the sons of God come, Satan comes also. He does not allow his territory to be invaded without a struggle, and his most successful opposition is by the evil spirit of envy, jealousy, and the like. It is the same spirit that would have stoned to death the greatest missionary and city worker,—Paul the Apostle,—had it prevailed.

I presume the attitude of our mission workers, and especially those in the cities realize, to a greater or less extent, some of these hindrances obstructing their way, to a wider spread of Christian work. My prayer is that God will abundantly bless the church in Sidney!

Plevna, Ind., July 18. W. R. Miller.

UNION CHURCH, INDIANA.

Yesterday was our harvest meeting. We had two services. In the forenoon Bro. G. L. Studebaker, of North Manchester, gave us an excellent discourse from the text, "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits."

We had dinner in the maple grove in the churchyard. More than 250 people surrounded the well-filled tables, and tarried while Bro. A. L. Maurer, of Tegarden, asked a blessing upon the food. At the close of the meal Bro. S. J. Miller, of Nappanee, gave thanks for the blessings received.

At 2 P. M., promptly, the entire crowd gathered in the church. After a short song service Bro. Studebaker favored us with a stirring missionary sermon, using for his subject the word "Go." These sermons of our brother were very impressive, which fact was demonstrated when the offering was taken for the mission cause, and was found to be more than $25.

We were pleased to have with us brethren and sisters from the Pine Creek, Nappanee, Salem, Yellow River and North Liberty congregations, which gave an inspiration to us all.

One special feature of the day was the sociability of the noon hour, when brethren and sisters, friends and neighbors, and members of other churches, mingled together as one family, which is surely commendable upon such occasions.

As a whole, July 15 will live long in our memory. On Sunday morning, following our Sunday-school, Bro. Studebaker preached to us on "The Gospel"; on Sunday evening his theme was "Love." These services were all well attended and much enjoyed by both young and old.

Plymouth, Ind., July 16. A. Laura Appelman.

SLIFER, IOWA.

For a number of years there has been preaching near this point, and at one time the members here were organized as a church known as the Farnhamville church, but as there was no house of worship, and much of the time no resident minister, the cause suffered and the church here was financially disorganized.

The Mission Board of Northern Iowa looked after the work and arranged with Bro. A. B. Woodard to do some preaching for them. A series of meetings was held last summer by Bro. Zimmerman, of Waterloo, Iowa. The writer came up last March to fill the appointment for Bro. Woodard, and was much pleased to meet an appreciative congregation, and one hungry for the Gospel. Becoming interested in the place as a promising field, and one demanding work, I made bold to suggest that if they would interest a man to build a house for me to rent, at this little station, and would build a churchhouse, I would move up and help them to carry on the work.

I have elected my brother, J. C. Goughnour, of Chicago, in the purchase of a stock of goods here and also have the promise of a young sister to teach the school here, and help in the church work.

While we have not money enough yet subscribed to complete the building, we have enough that we, with the Mission Board, have decided to go ahead with the building, and expect to commence in a few days on the foundation and basement. We want to complete it by Sept. 1.

Any young sister able to teach school and having an aspiration to carry on mission work, can do both here. Any one expecting to make a change of location, and wanting to join a good farming community, and can also do service for the cause of Christ, would do well to investigate here. Any information wanted will be cheerfully given by the writer. Jas. Q. Goughnour.

Slifer, Iowa, R. D. Gowrie.

ONEKAMA, MICHIGAN.

Our church met in council July 1, with Bro. E. C. Riley presiding. The business brought before the meeting was disposed of pleasantly. We decided to have a cement walk constructed in front of the churchhouse. Sunday-school officers were elected, with Bro. E. G. Sellers as superintendent; Bro. Frank Nelson, secretary. Brethren M. F. Buckingham and E. C. Riley were chosen to represent us at the District Meeting. Two letters of membership were received. The committee that had been appointed to secure a minister to hold revival meetings reported that they had secured Bro. D. E. Sowers for the latter part of September. At our late council Brethren E. C. Riley and E. G. Sellers were advanced to the second degree of the ministry. The Sunday-school voted to send the birthday money of the past quarter, amounting to $6, to the Grand Rapids Mission.

Sunday, June 25, completed the first year of our worship in the new churchhouse. Three have been received into the church by confession and baptism, and several more by letter. Bro. J. E. Ulery preached for us that morning. He spoke of our work in Onekama during the past year, and our duties and opportunities in the year that is before us. He brought out plainly the needs of Onekama, and also compared the church at Antioch, where Christ's followers were first called Christians, with the church and Christians of today.

We feel that we have been richly blessed during the past year, and rejoice in the thought that we, as a whole, have been able to work together. We pray God's blessings upon us in the future that we may work more faithfully in his service here. Hattie Hansen.

Box 88, Chief, Mich., July 12.

COME TO THE RESCUE!

My wife and I, and our two daughters, so far as I know, are the only members of the church of the Brethren living in this part of Northeastern Nebraska. We have been living here since March 27, 1911. We are located in Dakota County, eighteen miles south of Sioux City, Iowa.

From what I can learn, so far, there is a tract of about one hundred miles square in which the Brethren church is not represented at all. Why is it so? Why are we striving so hard to send missionaries to foreign lands when thousands are starving for the Bread of Life right here, in our own beloved country?

The Gospel Messenger comes with its good news from a far country to our home, and then goes out among the people living here. All who see the paper praise it, and admire its principles. They want to know whether we can not have some of our people come here and preach for us. Why is this place apparently left without gospel influences?

The Burlington and the Northwestern railroads run right through this country, and hundreds of commissioners pass by here. May the Lord open your eyes and help us to provide a way whereby the people of this place may hear the true Gospel preached, that many may be turned from their downward course into the way of righteousness. D. B. Leslie.

Homer, Nebr., July 11.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL MEETING OF SOUTHWESTERN MISSOURI AND NORTHWESTERN ARKANSAS.

This meeting was held in the Shoal Creek church July 1.

Members present from other congregations were Brethren R. F. Bowman and W. P. Burress; also our District Sunday-school Secretary, Sister Emma Wine. Bro. R. F. Bowman presided over the meeting. Two congregations were represented by delegates, Joplin and Nevada. The subjects discussed were interesting to all. On the topic, "How to Attain to a Higher Spirituality in the Sunday-school," it was suggested that the officers of the school should set the Spirit themselves. The topic "Hold and Interest the Young People" was also ably discussed. Give the young something that they can do! Train them to be workers for the Lord! We also had some recitations by the young folks. The round table talks were conducted by Sister Emma Wine. We closed the first Sunday-school Meeting held in the Shoal Creek church, which is one of the oldest churches in the District. E. J. Reece.

Fairview, Mo., July 11.

AMONG THE ISOLATED.

Today I drove fourteen miles to the farthest corner of our territory to get acquainted with a brother and sister, who, I learned, had recently moved there. Then I called on three aged sisters whose husbands do not belong to the church and who, because of the distance to our church and other environments, have not attended even one service here during the sixteen months we have been laboring here. They all seemed to enjoy the visit very much, were anxious to talk about the welfare of the church, and expressed a desire to attend services.

While returning home I thought of the different desires of men and women, here and there, who wish to attend church and assist in the work of the Master, but can not. On the other hand, within sight of the churchhouse are those who could go and who could work, but do not.

Let us pray the good Father that he may bless those who will to do good, and awake those who are slumbering in indifference to a realization of their opportunities.

Akron, Ind., July 13. J. G. Stinebaugh.

CHILDREN'S DAY SERVICES AT WEST POINT, MD.

Sunday, June 25, the Brethren at West Point, near Reisterstown, Md., held their children's day services. It was my pleasure to accompany my father there. They have possibly fifty or more children in their Sunday-school. The program was opened by singing, in which the entire school took part, Scripture reading by a young sister, and the Lord's Prayer in concert. Recitations then followed. These were interspersed by singing, either by the whole school or in the form of duets. Bro. J. S. Weybright gave a short talk at the close. The spiritual part was not forgotten through the entire services. These exercises were to have been held one week earlier, when Eld. W. P. Englar, their former pastor and District Sunday-school Secretary, was present, but, owing to the condition of the weather, the services were delayed one week. Bro. Englar preached two able sermons, which were appreciated by all. D. S. Weybright.

FALLEN ASLEEP

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord"

Bolinger, Sister Sophia M., nee Corbin, wife of John B. Bolinger, born on the Raystown Branch, near the Junction of the Juniata, 70 miles from Huntingdon, Pa., Jan. 13, 1834, died July 4, 1911, at Redfield, Kans., in the bounds of the Paint Creek church, aged 77 years, 5 months and 21 days. She was one of a family of fourteen children. Her parents were pioneers in this part of Pennsylvania. Immediately after their marriage she and her husband moved west to Mount Carroll, Ill., then a new country, but soon moved to a small farm of thirty acres, near Georgetown, same county, where six children were born to them. Then they decided to move farther west, where cheaper land could be secured. The little farm was sold and late in the fall of 1864 the whole family moved to Bourbon, Kans. The greater part of the first year was spent by Sister Bolinger and her six children alone in a log cabin of one small room on Paint Creek. There were no near neighbors, but plenty of prairie and all sorts of wild game. Sister Bolinger was permitted to see this wilderness become one of the best parts of our great country. A fine large Brethren church was built on the homestead, and a cemetery was added. The securing of these was largely due to their efforts. After residing in Kansas forty-two more children, nine in whom survive. Her husband and two children preceded her. She had been afflicted with rheumatism for a long time when she died. Services by the undersigned at the Paint Creek churchhouse.—Eld. Jesse Ruff, Redfield, Kans.

Booth, Elizabeth, died July 9, 1911, at the home of her son-in-law, Edward Landenbaugh, 427 Market St., Lancaster, Pa. The cause of her death was paralysis. She was in her eighteenth year. Services at the above-named place by her ministers, Eld. H. B. Yoder and Brethren Woodward and Hershey.—H. B. Yoder, 243 Charlotte St., Lancaster, Pa.

Boyer, Susanna Emma Amanda, wife of Peter Timothy Boyer, born May 21, 1828, died July 6, 1911, aged 83 years, 1 month and 15 days. She was married to Mr. Boyer in 1847, to whom her union was blessed with eleven children, nine of whom survive. Her husband and two children preceded her. She had been afflicted with rheumatism for a long time. Services in the Fraternity congregation, N. C., about 1861, of which she has been a member for over sixty years. Recently she has been an invalid for a number of years, yet she bore her suffering patiently. Services at the residence, July 8, 1911, by Eld. J. F. Robertson.—Emma A. Spaugh, R. D. 1, Winston-Salem, N. C.

Brumbaugh, Ora Franklin, youngest son of Bro. Abraham and Sister Susie Brumbaugh, born in Adams township, Darke Co., Ohio, June 26, 1891, died at his home near Arcanum, Ohio, June 26, 1911, aged 24 years, 6 months and 1 day. Feb. 14, 1895, he was baptized by Brethren Sherfick and Ross. This union were born three sons and three daughters. He leaves his wife, Mrs. Ethel Brumbaugh, his parents, two sisters and one sister. One son preceded him in infancy. He spent nearly all his life, except the last two years, in the neighborhood where he was born, and because of his kindly disposition made many friends. Services at the Upper Stillwater church, Darke Co., Ohio, July 1, 1911, by Brethren Sherfick, church, and Bro. Boyer, of the River Brethren church. Interment in Greenmount cemetery near by.—Mary Ellen Brudford, Ohio.

Cable, William H., son of Sister Anna B. Coble, of Altoona, Pa., aged 22 years and 10 months. Deceased was visiting in Maywood, N. Y., and while bathing in a lake he met death by drowning. A DIPLOMA OF VALUE

A diploma of value is one which is granted by a school of merit. Students should select a school of recognized standing, good equipment and reputation as teaching body. School days cannot be lived over and the selection of the last school is very important. Some colleges are like business houses of questionable financial rating—they enjoy temporary prosperity but their educational standing is always uncertain.

MOUNT MORRIS COLLEGE has enjoyed steady growth and is now a permanent factor in the educational system of this country. Her faculty is composed of trained teachers most of whom are quite permanently associated with the school.

Students who select this school make no mistake.

Mr. World and Miss Church-Member

A Twentieth Century Allegory.

By Rev. W. S. Harris.

It is a forcible allegory, somewhat after the style of Pilgrim's Progress, but in no sense an imitation of it. Publishers and authors, it is the book that you should get for your son and daughter, and at the same time read it yourself. You will be a stronger for the church after having read it. It illustrates vividly how Satan lures the church member, step by step, from the pure Gospel, till finally he is lost forever.

Illustrated by 18 full-page drawings, the work of Paul J. Krafft.

NOTES NOT CLASSIFIED

Harman church met in council June 10. Our elder, Bro. Jonas Pike, presided. Our temperance committee, consisting of Sisters Hattie and Myrtle Garber and Brethren Jacob Clatterbuck and Jesse Harman, met and organized, appointing solicitors and a secretary. We held a Sunday-school Meeting July 4. Our elder, Bro. Jonas Pike, and our District Sunday-school secretary, Bro. Seymour Hamilton, were with us and gave us some very helpful talks. We feel that the day was both pleasantly and profitably spent. Bro. Pike in attendance especially the children. Bro. S. F. Harman's essay on "Strong Drink" was excellent. We have a good Sunday-school.—Cora A. Harman, Harman, W. Va., July 10.

Notice to the Churches of Northwestern Arkansas and Southern Missouri.—The District Meeting of this district will be held in the Cabool congregation at the Greenwood house Oct. 4. The Elders' Meeting is to be held Oct. 3, and the Ministerial Meeting Oct. 5. Let all the congregations notice the third query of last year's Minutes, or the meeting held in St. Clair County, before electing delegates to the District Meeting. Then we urge all the delegates to see that they have an itemized statement of their congregation before coming to District Meeting. Those not representing by delegates should send in a statement to some one that will represent it for them.—F. L. Fike, Clerk of last District Meeting, R. D. 1, Box 69, White Church, Mo., July 10.

Panora.—Bro. John Robinson, District Secretary of Middle Iowa, came to us July 17, and delivered a Sunday-school talk at Bagley that evening, and one at the Panora house the next evening. He then preached three sermons at Yale and the Panora house. Though it is a busy season all these meetings were well attended with good interest. There were five more applicants to be baptized July 23, all from Sunday-school pupils. Among them were two orphan granddaughters of the writer. Brethren and Sisters, pray for the lambs of the fold and also for those who have the care of them. Bro. Robinson goes from here to Nevada, where he will spend most of his vacation in the interest of the Sunday-schools of the district. A number of appointments are arranging to attend Bethany Bible School.—J. D. Haughtelin, Panora, Iowa, July 22.

Elk City church and Sunday-school is moving along nicely. We have been blessed with an abundance of rain, which insures us of good crops, and the hearts of the people are truly thankful. Feeling the need of more workers, we called Brethren J. McVey and A. H. Coover to the office of deacon. The Brethren of the Washita church have agreed to meet with us Aug. 6 in a joint basket-dinner meeting. We will have an all-day meeting, with children's exercises in the forenoon, and the discussion of Sunday-school topics in the afternoon. Our series of meetings will begin Aug. 13 to be conducted by Bro. N. S. Gripe. We have ordered the new song book, "Kingdom Songs." We think every church should use this book.—E. J. Smith, R. D. 1, Elk City, Okla., July 21.

Fairview church met in council July 15, our elder, David Dilling, presiding. Owing to the intense heat, only a small number of members was present. A committee of three was appointed to secure a minister and set the date for the Harvest Meeting. Bro. Galen B. Royer has been secured to conduct the services, and the date is set for Aug. 13. There will be no program this year. Bro. David Dilling was again chosen as our presiding elder. Committees were also appointed to secure all the necessary equipments for a teacher-training class, which is to be started sometime this fall. Bro. Dilling preached for us on Saturday night and also on Sunday morning, at which service two persons were received back into the church. July 4 we met at the church and spent the day in giving the lunch on the lawn a thorough cleaning. At noon dinner was spread on the tables in the basement, and enjoyed by all. Bro. Dilling left home to return home, we felt that the day had been well spent. On Sunday, July 16, one was received into the kingdom at this place. As the heavy raindrops fell, he was led into the flowing stream and buried with Christ in baptism.—Bessie Guinn, R. D. 51, Buck Creek, Ind., July 22.

Jonathan Creek.—Our council was held July 22. Our elder, Bro. Sandy Shepherd, was present. Considerable business came before the meeting. Two letters were received. The ministerial committee, appointed previously, secured Eld. Rufus Wyatt, of Joplin, Mo., to do our preaching for the coming year. He also presented to us the White Cottage and Goshen churches. Eld. Wyatt's family will be here in the very near future. Sister Hetta Cox was called on and we give us Bible talks and lectures Aug. 5 to 13, inclusive. Arrangements are being made for a joint Sunday-school Convention by the Jonathan Creek and the Bremen churches, commencing on the 3rd. Eld. Wyatt was chosen as delegate to our District Meeting, with Bro. J. S. Flora as alternate. We will have an all-day meeting at the church, at which time adjoining churches are invited to be with us.—S. Leckrone, Somerset, Ohio, July 24.

COVINGTON, OHIO.

We have been much interested in the late Conference at St. Joseph. Our brethren from this place who attended the meeting gave the church a report of the proceedings. They felt that much good was accomplished by the consideration of various questions which vitally concern the Brethren church. They urged upon our members at this place the utmost loyalty to our Conference decisions. As many of our members are but young and untried in the Master's service, having joined our church during the past year, they listened with eager interest. The brethren urged them willingly to obey the final decision of our Conference, as given in the report of the Dress Committee. We are glad to see a spirit of growing fellowship among us, tending towards unity of sentiment and a delight in worshiping together. Our uniformly large congregations are a visible testimony to the power of the Holy Spirit making for peace among us.

Last Sunday we were glad to record an attendance of 200 in our Sunday-school. When we have four Bible classes, each one numbering over fifty members, it is easy to work up an interest among the children. We believe that every child remained yesterday for an illustrated talk by Bro. Geo. W. Flory, our pastor, on the power of temptation. None of the children present will ever forget the lesson taught. Our evening service was of peculiar interest. Our pastor preached on the "Beautiful Life" to a crowded house. At the close of the service, two precious souls came forward for baptism, Brother Flory and her helpers have been at work in the home department of our Sunday-school. This department now numbers over one hundred. Our members who can not get out to church, greatly appreciate the home department and have asked that classes for the teaching of the Sunday-school lesson be held in their homes. Elizabeth D. Rosenberger.

FLASHLIGHTS FROM REAL LIFE

BY JOHN T. DALE.

Those who have read any of the author's other books will want to read this one. The sketches and incidents given are real flashlights thrown upon things which are worth revealing. The author in his preface says: "Some of the sketches are based on facts which have come within the personal knowledge of the author, others are founded on incidents which have come under the observation of others, but they are all typical of the ever-changing experiences and mutations of life, as the grand panorama of existence moves onward."

Following are a few subjects taken from the table of contents:

Advice to Young Men
The Boy Hero
Dangers of City Life
The Father's Example
The Gullible Girl
The Professor's Advice
Single and Married
The Smoker's Peril
The Young Lawyer's Downfall

The Book contains 205 pages. Bound in cloth.

Modern Fables and Parables
—OR—
Moral Truth in a Nutshell

This book contains 352 pages and more than 100 fables and parables. The great majority of these are new. Some are old fables and parables recast and covered in modern dress. They present truth in a forcible style, which is also striking, and makes it easily understood and remembered. The application may be made spiritually as well as morally in most instances. In the variety of subjects almost every phase of human life is touched. The illustrations, 75 in number, by Paul Kraft and others, add greatly to the interest and help wonderfully in making clear the meaning. A careful study of these fables and parables will help one to see himself and others in a new light and enable him to live a nobler and happier life.

AROUND THE WORLD

Freemasonry in India.

Like a giant octopus, Masonry is endeavoring to secure a strong hold on the people of India, and already its blighting influence is becoming apparent. Hindus and Mohammedans in large numbers are being initiated into the mysteries (?) of the Lodge, and,—sad to relate,—when once entangled in the enticements of the order, they need not be expected ever to become interested in Christianity. The common people of India look upon the building in which a Masonic Lodge is enthroned, with something akin to superstitious awe, and call it "The Home of Sorcery." Is it possible that this new hindrance to missionary effort is to obstruct the progress of the Truth in India?

Help for Dependent Ones.

The old-age pension system, so successfully being maintained in Germany under Government auspices, has served as an incentive to other countries to make provision along similar lines. The first attempt by a State of our Union, to provide annuity and support for dependent ones, is being made by Wisconsin,—a bill to that effect having recently been passed by its Legislature, and approved by Governor McGovern. The minimum expense will be only about $2 for each $1,000 of death benefit, but no larger certificates than $3,000 will be written. Annuities are to range from $100 to $300. It will be observed that the amounts are arranged especially for those of limited means,—the very ones to avail themselves of its provisions,—thus securing either a small annuity for their declining days or providing a moderate sum for their families after their departure.

Islam Not Dead Yet.

Those who have thought that Mohammedanism is slowly disintegrating, must remember that its present activity in all parts of central and northern Africa is still indicative of most wonderful virility. Full of shrewdness, positive in their faith, and without scruples as to the methods of religious propaganda, they are garnering their thousands today, where Christian missionaries, with the self-denying religion of Jesus Christ, can but hope for an ingathering of a few. Undoubtedly Mohammedanism is one of the greatest hindrances to Christian mission work today, and there must needs be intelligent efforts put forth to meet the issue. Mission workers of Germany are finding that their special school, preparatory to work among the Moslems, is of great value. Only the well-equipped worker can hope to succeed in the struggle. "Study to show thyself approved."

Religion and the Stage.

The State of New York has recently passed an enactment which forbids the introduction of religious rites or the representation of the "Deity as worshiped, reverenced, adored or venerated by any religious denomination, sect, or class of people." This ruling is regarded as unfair by many of the theatrical people and not without a reason. Hitherto the semi-religious play has been a strong drawing-card to lure the unsuspecting church member to the theater, under the specious promise that nothing would be presented in any way objectionable. Thousands have been led astray by the apparently plausible plea. Weaned away from the church, they became confirmed theatergoers, to their great and irremediable spiritual loss. The action of New York Legislature is commendable. It separates two things that do not, possibly, belong together. The theater "is of the earth, earthy."

Christianity and Business.

The Society of Friends, at the last "Yearly Meeting," recently held in London, has been seriously inquiring into best methods of "conducting business along Christian principles, at least so far as their corporate action is concerned." The fact that this large body of believers thought the question of sufficient moment to give a large portion of their time to its discussion, would seem to indicate that it is of vital import, not only to them but to all who claim to profess the holy name of Christ. One of their speakers referred to the fact that the Golden Rule is acknowledged by many as the one infallible rule of business regulation, and he maintained that the earnest exponent of that rule must preach all that Christ stood for, lived for, and died for. Though there be eloquent preaching of Christ in our meetings, there must be consistent and exemplary living of Christ in our business; otherwise our profession is but a hollow mockery.

Russia Favors Arbitration.

Russian journals are enthusiastically urging the Government to join the ranks of the arbitration promoters. Referring to the recently-completed treaty between Japan and Great Britain, especially because of the clause bearing upon arbitration, they urge the adoption of a similar treaty between Great Britain and Russia. The new Anglo-Japanese treaty especially stipulates that "no aid shall be given by either party to the other, in case either is involved with a nation that has concluded a general treaty of arbitration with Great Britain or Japan." The attitude of Russia on this question would seem to promise much for the future. Let us hope that the desire for arbitration will become world-wide and insistent!

France Swept by a Wave of Anarchism.

Under date of July 28 France is reported as struggling with vandalism and riots,—apparently an outgrowth of the recent railway strike. Revolutionary labor newspapers and anarchistic agitators are doing their best to foment still further trouble, and there is every likelihood that the scenes of violence and destruction, already experienced, will be augmented in the near future. France, undoubtedly, is facing a labor crisis of unusual significance, and much will depend upon the tactfulness of those who must deal with the situation. Most of the blame,—and rightfully too,—is placed on the inflammatory utterances of the newspapers. People, in general, are very much like the literature they read,—a fact often lost sight of, but well worth our attention.

Fleeing from Duty.

A daily paper reports that the pastor of a prominent church in New York recently resigned from his charge and went west, alleging that the eastern city is utterly lost to all that is good. Like a fool he told he would rather flee to other regions than help perishing souls. Unfortunately, this is not an isolated case. Too often the one in charge of a mission point consults his own personal comfort rather than the importance of his calling. As a result he goes where he is not needed, perhaps; certainly he is remiss in his duty to those who needed him most. The daily paper, above referred to, gives the fleeing pastor the fitting advice that the real gospel worker does not seek the city in which there is little or no gold dust, but the one where its very aggressiveness taxes his ability to reform it.

A Grand Jury's Indictment.

The grand jury of Dallas County, Texas, at the close of its recent session made a report to Judge R. B. Seay which has created a most intense sensation. The report states that, during the seventy-three days they served, they investigated one hundred sixty-eight cases and returned seventy-eight indictments. Fully seventy-five per cent of the crimes investigated were committed as the direct result of the sales of whiskey, and they declare that the saloon, as a promoter of crime, stands without a parallel in the varied agencies of evil. The jury severely criticises the prevailing method of criminal procedure, alleging that it belongs to the Dark Ages, and, while recognizing the rights of the criminal, fails to sustain the rights of society, the private citizen and the taxpayer. "So long as saloons are run by low white men, and still lower negroes, there will always be hundreds of court cases and crowded jails and prisons. Let the State give us fewer schools of vice and crime, instead of more courts to dispose of criminals."

Militarism in Australasia.

The folly of introducing military drill in the high schools of our country, was pointed out in our last. Here in our countries have already entered upon a plan of that kind,—deplorable as it may seem to a lover of peace. Under the Australian Act, in force since July 1, all boys between twelve and fourteen are to receive military drill in conformity with the specified terms, and those above fourteen are to be trained on the Government drill grounds by specially-appointed officers. As there are many members of the Society of Friends in Australia who conscientiously object to such training for their sons, they are placed in a peculiar attitude. It means either the violation of a principle sacred to them as a people, or fines and imprisonments. New Zealand, also, has similar military drill for boys, though provision is made that conscientious objectors in that country may serve in the ambulance corps, which, while not requiring the bearing of arms, is nevertheless a part of military activity. That these young nations of Australasia should be so ready to fasten upon themselves the burdens of militarism, right at a time when arbitration treaties are being perfected, seems strange indeed. The grievous burdens, now being borne throughout Europe, because of compulsory military training and armaments, should supposedly have been a lesson to these islanders, but apparently they are determined to do "like other nations,"—a policy not conducive to the best results.

The Whole Land for Jesus.

Last year the campaign of evangelism in Korea was launched with the watchword "A million souls for Jesus," but this year the earnest workers are starting out with a more exalted vision of possible achievements, as shown by their motto, "Not only a million souls for Jesus, but the whole land for Jesus." Commendable, indeed, is their systematized plan of work, which, from a central base at Seoul, sends out workers,—two in each "team,"—to do house-to-house visiting, Bible distribution and personal work. Nearly four hundred such "teams" are already at work, and more will be added until the entire country is thoroughly covered. In many ways the Korean workers far excel the churches of our own country in real zeal and effective propagation of the Word. May they be led to an acceptance of the whole truth as it is in Christ Jesus!

Hindu Girls Rising to Their Opportunity.

While education in India is now available to girls as well as boys, for years the old-time Oriental prejudice against the intellectual advancement of women has served as an almost insurmountable barrier. With the advent of the Christian missionary, the old-time restrictions have fallen and the women of India are coming into their own. Many of the higher institutions of learning now have a fair attendance of women, and, considering the disadvantages under which they have been laboring in past years, they are not a whit behind their sisters of favor than in western lands. For the first time in the history of the Punjab University, two girls, one belonging to an orthodox Hindu family, and one a Mohammedan, have passed the matriculation examination. This means much for the future training of women in India. It means that no longer is woman to be the downtrodden creature and slave of man, but, rising in the strength of a new and nobler womanhood, she is to take her place as a helper in the redemption of India to a better and,—let us hope,—a Christian life.

Why People Do Not Attend Church.

The various denominations are seriously inquiring into the reason for dwindling congregations, and one of our exchanges tells of a pastor who asked his members to state, on a post card, their candid opinion "why people do not attend church." Here is the substance of the reasons assigned: "(1) Lack of suitable training during early life. The children are not taught to love the church. (2) The preponderance of other interests,—chief of these being business interests, pleasure, and the claims of outside organizations. (3) The desecration of the Sabbath, arising from laziness, the giving of one's self to pleasure, and to uncalled-for work. (4) The unattractive sermons preached from many pulpits, showing lack of preparation by the preacher." While, perhaps, the Church of the Brethren does not have to contend with a falling off in church attendance as serious as that experienced by others, there is, nevertheless, great need of "stirring up our pure minds by way of remembrance." Some of the reasons assigned are well worth our serious and prayerful attention.

Gambling in China.

With a courage most commendable the Chinese Government is determined to stamp out gambling, but there are hindrances hard to overcome. The practice is part and parcel of the Chinese character, and so prevalent, in every rank and condition of life, that years of careful teaching will be required to win them to better things. Then, too, it is unfortunate indeed that lotteries are given legal protection, some of the provinces depending upon them for a part of their revenue. Greatest of all reasons for the prevalence of gambling in China is the barrenness of their social life, the want of suitable literature, and all else to make life really pleasant and cheering. It is right here that the remedy must be found and, to some extent, is already being put into effect. New ideas, as to a more profitable way of spending their time than in gambling, are gaining ground among the people, and there is an active demand that the world's best literature be given them in the Chinese language. Last year nearly a half million Bibles found a ready sale, and it is hoped that, with the further distribution of the Scriptures and other good books, the most effectual remedy against gambling will be in practical operation.

Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth

The Valley of Silence.

I walk down the Valley of Silence,
Down the dim, voiceless valley alone;
And I hear not the fall of the footstep
Around me, but God's and my own;
And the hush of my heart is as holy
As bowers where angels have flown.

Long ago I was weary of voices
Whose music my soul could not win;
Long ago I was weary of noises
That fretted my soul with their din;
Long ago I was weary of places
Where I met but the human and sin.

I walked in the world with the worldly,
Yet I craved what the world never gave;
And I said, "In the world, each ideal—
That shines like a star on life's wave—
Is tossed on the shores of the real,
And sleeps like a dream in the grave."

And still did I pine for the perfect,
And still found the false with the true;
I sought, 'mid the human, for heaven,
And caught a mere glimpse of its blue;
And I sighed when the clouds of the mortal
Veiled even that glimpse from my view.

And I toiled on, heart-tired of the human,
And groaned 'mid the masses of men;
Till I knelt, long ago, at the altar,
And heard a voice call me. Since then
I walked down the Valley of Silence
That lies far beyond human ken.

Do you ask what I find in the Valley?
'Tis my trysting-place with the Divine!
And I fell at the feet of the Holy,
And around me a voice said, "Be mine."
And then rose from the depths of my spirit
An echo, "My heart shall be thine."

Do you ask how I live in the Valley?
I weep, and I dream, and I pray;
But my tears are as sweet as the dew-drops
That fall on the roses in May;
And my prayer, like a perfume from censer,
Ascendeth to God night and day.

In the hush of the Valley of Silence
I hear all the songs that I sing,
And the notes float down the dim valley
Till each finds a word for a wing,
That to men, like the dove of the deluge,
The message of peace they may bring.

But far on the deep there are billows
That never shall break on the beach;
And I have heard songs in the silence
That never shall float into speech;
And I have had dreams in the Valley
Too lofty for language to reach.

And I have seen thoughts in the Valley—
Ah, me! how my spirit was stirred—
They wear holy veils on their faces,
Their footsteps can scarcely be heard;
They pass down the Valley like virgins—
Too pure for the touch of a word.

Do you ask me the place of this Valley?
To hearts that are harrowed by care,
It lieth afar between mountains,
And God and his angels are there—
One is the dark Mountain of Sorrow
And one the bright Mountain of Prayer.

The Eucharist or Communion.

BY S. N. M'CANN.

"The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ?" "The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ" (1 Cor. 10: 16)? "The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not a participation in the blood of Christ?" "The bread which we break, is it not a participation in the body of Christ" (1 Cor. 10: 16)?

This being the formula which we always use in passing the cup and breaking the bread, it becomes important to determine what we mean, and what we understand Christ to mean when he took bread and said to the disciples: "Take, eat; this is my body;" and of the cup, "Drink ye all of it, for this is my blood of the covenant, which is poured out for many unto remission of sins" (Matt. 26: 26-28).

Paul, in commenting on the bread and the cup in 1 Cor. 11: 24, 25, quotes Jesus' saying: "This is my body, which is broken for you; this do in remembrance of me;" and of the cup, "This cup is the new covenant in my blood: this do, as often as ye drink it, in remembrance of me." "Take eat; this is my body;" "Drink, . . . this is my blood," is explained, to some extent, by Paul when he says: "Whosoever shall eat the bread or drink the cup of the Lord in an unworthy manner, shall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord" (1 Cor. 11: 27).

There must be, in taking the bread and the cup aright, some vital, spiritual communion or participation in the body and blood of Christ, which gives strength, health, and discrimination or discernment in spiritual things. There is some such vital touch that the guilt of Christ's body and blood falls upon the man who takes the bread and cup unworthily.

What does Christ mean when he says: "This is my body," "This is my blood"? The bread was before the disciples, and Jesus looking at it said: "This is my body." Of the fruit of the vine, looking into the cup, he said: "This is my blood." Does Jesus mean to teach that the bread and the cup are transformed into his real flesh and blood; that the child of God actually and literally partakes of the real body and blood of Jesus? This is the doctrine of the Roman Catholic church, called transubstantiation. They believe that, when the priest prays over the emblems, they are changed into the real body and blood of Jesus.

Luther planted himself firmly upon the words of Christ, "This is my body," but rejected the thought of the bread and cup becoming literally changed into the body and blood of Jesus. He taught that the real body and blood of Jesus was partaken of by every communicant who took the bread and cup. His doctrine is called consubstantiation or the ubiquitarian theory of the Eucharist.

Calvin and the Anglican church hold that the real body and blood of Jesus are in no real sense spoken of by Jesus. They affirm a real, though purely spiritual reception of Christ by believers alone. Through this mysterious, spiritual reception of Christ by believers, a vitalizing power is communicated to them, even from his body. Zwingli and the Swiss reformers held that the bread and cup were only emblems or mementos of Christ's death and blood. They, however, united with Calvin in a spiritual reception of the body of Christ.

These positions, in reference to the bread and the cup, have been bitterly debated and fought over by learned men, whose honesty we can not question,—men who were willing to burn at the stake for what they believed and taught.

Now the question is, What do we believe and teach in reference to this most vital church doctrine? We must, in the light of Paul's treatment of the bread and cup, reject both the Roman Catholic and the Lutheran theory, of the real body and blood of Jesus being partaken of by the communicants. Jesus' own words make our best commentary for rejecting the literal interpretation of the words, "This is my body" (John 6: 48-63). "The bread which I will give is my flesh, for the life of the world. . . . He that eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood hath eternal life; . . . for my flesh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed. He that eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood abideth in me, and I in him. . . . It is the spirit that giveth life; the flesh profiteth nothing: the words that I have spoken unto you are spirit, and are life." These literal views are apt to lead to a dead formalism.

The doctrine of Zwingli is too cold and lifeless, and falls too far to the opposite extreme of a literal interpretation of the words of Jesus. The teaching of Paul could not be explained when the bread and wine are made to be mementos or emblems of Christ's body and blood only. They are emblems and mementos, but they are more. Through the proper participation in the Eucharist the Christian is put in very close touch with the body and blood of Christ, spiritually. The spiritual, or mystical, body is clearly discerned because of the vital touch imparted in proper communion. The Christian has a real spiritual communion of the blood of Christ, and of the body of Christ. He really becomes a participant in the blood and in the spiritual body of Christ. His spiritual life is vitalized and energized when he takes the body and blood of Christ according to the word and spirit of the Gospel.

If there is a failure here, the church is not discerned from the world. The mystical body of Christ (the church) loses her Head, Christ. If there is a failure here, the communicant becomes a dead member of the body, because Paul says he is weak and sickly. "Take eat: this is my body;" "Drink, . . . this is my blood" means, when taken with the other passages bearing on the Eucharist, that, in taking the literal bread and cup of the communion, a real, though purely spiritual, reception of Christ and his presence in heart and life has taken place. These emblems become God's means of spiritually vitalizing and energizing the believer and the church, when taken worthily.

A Temperance Call.

BY TOLMAN H. FERNALD.

While we, who are today engaged in the great cause of temperance, may not witness the vast amount of good that may be accomplished by the churches along this line, we are led to a comparison of all other great, good and holy works, the seeds of which have been sown long years before the time of harvest appeared.

We hope to reform many from the terrible habit of intemperance, and while we are indulging in this hope, we know that a good impression is being made upon the young and rising generation who are soon to follow us in this work for the betterment and uplift of humanity, and who, no doubt, will point to you, who are today engaged in the work, as having helped to place their feet upon a firm foundation and inspired their hearts to a work that is worthy to be called "good and holy."

We are surrounded by the enemy,—intemperance,—and I trust this may make us all the more vigilant in our work and actions. Let our churches instil new life and energy into this work of temperance, and may we be mutually benefited thereby!

The sisters are ever foremost in every good and great work of the church for the betterment of those about them. They are never tiring in their efforts to advance the interests of the temperance cause, and they are doing noble work along these lines. When the wives, the mothers, the sisters, and the sweethearts are interested in any cause, what should we expect but success! Mothers, teach your children that temperance is one of the greatest virtues, and is to be practiced by all. Wives, remind your husbands that if they desire to be all that a man can and should be to a wife and family, they must be temperance men. Sisters, use your influence for good over that brother. Sweethearts, if you desire to be happy wives and mothers, look well to your choice. Think well before you decide.

To a sober, candid, and thinking mind, it would appear that the good people in many instances pride themselves on being interested in the welfare of others with whom they are daily associated and, viewing matters from their standpoint, would feel that there devolved upon them a duty in which they had been negligent, but which should demand their attention.

There are also people who are interested in the cause of temperance who are not connected with any church, and who feel that there is no call for them to unite, heart and hand, and work together. But how much more could be accomplished, did they but feel to give their hearts to God, and unite their efforts with others—in the church! I will simply say to such, Give up all to Christ, join his church, and join in the great work of saving the lost.

There are sluggish and inactive persons in and out of the church, who say, "I have no appetite for strong drink; I have no children to save from the demon; and, furthermore, I have no personal interest in the matter, whatever." I would to God that I had the power to stir a quickening spirit within all such that would make them know and feel fully and truly that this life is not for self alone, but that the great Creator has placed us here, and demands that we help each other; that we "do unto others as we would that they should do unto us" or ours. None of us is able to live for himself alone, and our all-wise, heavenly Father has so arranged the human family that the best harmony prevails, and the most good is done where there is the least selfishness.

I wish to appeal to that class of men and women who occupy high social positions in life,—those who stand high in the community upon matters of importance, of means, and of influence, and who have it within their power to aid those who are today suffering from the great evil of intemperance,—whether they are in the church or not. The community holds all such responsible for the conduct of its people. No person is justified in saying, "I live in a good community," unless he himself helps to make and keep it good.

Let us all mutually pledge ourselves that wherever we may find ourselves, whatever may be our social position, here and elsewhere, and whatever the popular opinion may be, the cause of temperance should be a part of our work for Christ and humanity.

"Oh, vanished majesty of days, raise type and mould today—
Teach thou our sons to follow on where duty leads the way;
And whatsoever trials come, defying doubt and fear,
They in the thickest of the fight shall proudly answer "Here.'"

What Shall I Do to Inherit Eternal Life?

Luke 10: 25.

BY J. EDWIN JONES.

BECOMING conscious of life, men naturally cling to it. This characteristic is emphasized in the beasts, among which the law of the survival of the fittest finds its clearest expression. As reasoning beings, to whom the thought and reality of eternal life has been revealed, while still retaining the natural instinct, we are more concerned about that life which has here but its dawning.

No picture of God the Father is at all worthy that does not both make us feel unworthy and also long for likeness to him. These two things, in some measure, underlie every emotion that, under varying circumstances, prompts this question. Most persons, at some time in their experience, ask it.

A careful study of the circumstances attending each occasion when it was asked of Christ and the apostles, and some meditation upon their answers, will doubtless be of benefit to us in discovering a solution to our anxious query.

John 17: 3, A. R. V., "And this is life eternal, that they should know thee, the only true God, and him whom thou didst send, even Jesus Christ." John 3: 15, "That whosoever believeth, may in him have eternal life." John 20: 31b, "And that believing ye may have life in his name." These scriptures show how vital is the connection between the eternal life we covet and the Lord Christ, who came to manifest and bring to us the more abundant life.

Perhaps no key will more quickly and effectively disclose to us the true situation, and modify our investigation than John 2: 5, "Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it."

Not every questioner of Christ was sincere, and we are led to believe that not all who ask that question now seek truly the path of life. Both Christ and the apostles, however, were sincere and definite in their answers and, when properly viewed, they are found to teach one thing.

To the ruler of Matt. 19: 16-22 Jesus, in the light of the law under which they lived said, "Keep the commandments," and with a skill born of his ability to read men's thoughts and characters, he asked the lawyer of Luke 10: 25-37, to answer the question in the light of what he already knew. And when he had answered, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbor as thyself," Jesus said, "This do, and thou shalt live." Also, when the scribe of Mark 12: 28-34 agreed with Jesus that these commandments were more than whole burnt offerings and sacrifice, Jesus told him he was not far from the kingdom of God.

These men were living under the dispensation of "Law," and the answer of our Lord to their inquiry was in effect the counterpart of Mary's injunction to the waiters at the wedding at Cana, "Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it." It being true that "Jesus Christ is the same, yesterday, today and forever," it may be accepted without question, that without prejudice he asks of every one, coming to him, the same thing. Whether the Gentiles of Nineveh, or Abraham, the father of the Hebrews, or the humblest man to whom the Gospel invitation comes is the subject of God's instruction, these great commands, upon which "hang all the law and the prophets," are the foundation from which emanate all means of grace. And in every dispensation they lead to the one inevitable conclusion, "Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it."

As illustrating this fundamental principle, the circumstances recorded in the Acts are clear and forceful. In Acts 16 the Philippian jailer, stirred by the marvelous demonstrations of the power of God, cried out, "What must I do to be saved?" To this heathen jailer the answer was, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." Then "he spake the Word of the Lord unto him," after which we discover that he and the believers of his house were baptized.

On the Day of Pentecost, as Peter rehearsed to the people the tremendous facts of the humble and submissive Lord, betrayed and crucified by them, yet risen and glorified; and as these facts burned into their consciousness, they cried out, "What shall we do?" Peter did not ask them to believe. They already knew and believed. He said, "Repent and be baptized, every one of you, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." And three thousand were baptized.

So Paul, on the way to Damascus, breathing threats of slaughter against the Christians, was stricken to the ground by the brightness of the presence of Christ, and was made to cry out, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" "Rise and enter into the city and it shall be told thee what thou must do," said Jesus. And, having heard in Damascus the challenge of Ananias, "Why tarriest thou? Arise and be baptized and wash away thy sins," he arose and was baptized.

Cornelius, devout and sincere, sent for Peter according to instructions from God, to hear from him "words, whereby thou shalt be saved, thou and all thy house." And when the Holy Spirit had fallen upon them, convincing Peter of God's mercy and love to the Gentile, they were baptized who believed.

These circumstances, leading each of them to the same conclusion, are illustrations of the axiomatic conclusion that the requirements for the salvation of every soul are in principle identical. In whatever dispensation, from Adam's day unto the present, the requirement has been to "love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbor as thyself." And this, properly understood, leads to heeding Mary's words, "Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it." The teaching of the Spirit of God, concerning salvation, is a unit. May we, in this dispensation of grace, "hear him" and "live by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God."

Making Home a School.

BY JAS. A. SELL.

IT is the duty of parents to feed, clothe and shelter their children, but it does not stop here. They owe them as liberal an education as their circumstances will permit. It is unjust to a boy or girl to send them forth into the world to contend with its competition in business and opposition in morals without being equipped to meet such things on an equal footing.

Fortunately, in our country, we have the common schools. Comfortable rooms, competent teachers, good textbooks, and other necessaries, are made accessible to all.

In the church we have quite a number of schools of a higher grade, where the very best of work is being done. It is sometimes suggested that the church has a few too many schools. It is, however, evident to the most ordinary observer that if all our people who are abundantly able would send their children, the number of schools could be doubled, and still there would not be room enough for all. Many of our children are not in our schools because their parents do not possess the means to send them. Others are out through indifference. Downright opposition to schools has about disappeared.

Back of all schools is the home. Here the education should begin. Here the desire for it may be formed. And this is worth more than money. Experience has amply taught that a young man or woman with a desire for education and no money, will get much farther on than a young man or woman with plenty of money and not caring very much for education. In the one there is unbounded ambition that is bound to succeed, in spite of adverse circumstances, and in the other there is an indifference that does not foster the pluck and plod that plants the banner of success on the other side of life's rough and tumble battlefield. When people have a desire for something they will seek for it and our Savior said if we "seek we shall find." Children of poor parents often outstrip their associates of wealth because the struggle to reach the goal was worth more to them than money.

The home is a school within the reach of all. Here the taste for learning may at least be formed. It will cost a little something,—a little thought, a little preparation, a little money,—only a little. It will cost much more to neglect it. Children should be provided with a table, well lighted, furnished with needful supplies, such as books, tablets, pencils of different colors, drawing designs, and such other things as the different branches in which they are interested may require. Here, without restraint or compulsion, they should spend their unoccupied time, and especially their evenings.

Parents who can not afford to do this much can not afford to have children. Think what an immense value this will be to the moral and mental development of the children! It will keep them out of evil company and keep them from acquiring many bad and hurtful habits that may cling to them throughout life. They will learn to love their home and acquire habits of order and system, and become interested in some line of work that will give the parents an opportunity to know what the talents of the children are. The true end and aim of education is to find out what are the natural endowments of the child and develop them. Many people spend one-half their life in trying to find their place, and it seems as though some of us never find it.

If parents begin in the early years of their children to furnish them with the means of culture, it will save them many an hour or night of anxiety or worry in later years, besides furnishing them with a fund of information that has come to them more in the form of play than study. Try it, parents, even if you have to make a school-room of the parlor. The boys and girls are worth more than fine carpets and drapery, that is only to be looked upon by strangers.

Witnessing for Christ.

BY JOHN ZUCK.

THESE are days of testimony and testimonies. Upon almost every subject in nature or science, carnal or spiritual, things present or things to come, man has been a witness in some way. The Almighty has never been without a witness. "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament sheweth his handiwork."

When Jesus Christ came into the world, to establish the new covenant with man, it was the purpose of the Holy Trinity that there should be faithful witnesses to testify of Christ as "the Son of God." Prophets had foretold of his coming, and it was repeated from time to time, through many hundreds of years, until the fullness of time had come, when Jesus was to be born in Bethlehem. Angels of glory were the first to testify to mankind of a newborn King,—the Savior of the world.

John the Baptist, a man sent of God, as the messenger of the Lord of hosts, came to bear witness of the "Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world." Jesus, even, refrained upon one occasion, from testifying of himself (John 5: 31) that no reflection might be cast upon him from the demands of the law of Moses, as to the number of witnesses required, though he clears this up in John 8: 14, 17, 18. Going back to John 5: 32-39, we find a chain of evidence so complete that, to our mind, it forms the true basis for our testimony in behalf of Christ today. This chain contains the gist of this subject,—that to which our mind naturally reverts, when the subject of witnessing for Christ is presented.

Christians should witness for Christ, rather than for themselves. They should let their works speak, rather than their words. They should so live and do the will of God, that they may be "living epistles, known and read of all men." When men and women have nothing better to justify their claims of being sons and daughters of God, than their presence in the sanctuary, their feelings, their name on the church record, or if their life is such that the way-faring man would not know they were Christians unless they told it, we are afraid that when such are placed in the balance of God's reckoning, they will be found wanting. "For if ye love them which love you, what reward have ye? do not even the publicans the same?"

There is a little incident that illustrates what we mean. Minister A, from the North, went south to spend his vacation, and was in appearance a stylish man. One of our much loved ministers, who can always be recognized by his badge, also went south. We shall call him Bro. H. On the train Bro. H was approached by Bro. A, and asked if he were a minister of the Gospel. To this Bro. H. replied in the affirmative. Bro. A then said, in rather insulting spirit, that he "would hate to advertise his religion by his clothes." To cap it all he said that he had been down South, spending the winter, and he supposed that no one found out that he was a minister. To this Bro. H quaintly remarked, "What a friend of Jesus!"

We have heard some very strong testimonies offered, that to us sounded more like the proud Pharisee than the humble, penitent publican. For ourself, we have felt not to boast of what we are, would or would not do, but rather this,—pray God for Christ's sake, and in his dear name, to grant his grace, and the gift of his Holy Spirit, commensurate to the temptation and trials to be borne, that we might be a faithful and true witness for him. It is only in extreme conditions that the pure gold is freed from all alloy. The Lord said to Paul, "My grace is sufficient for thee," and we believe that the Lord will so sustain us. He gives us many precious promises that he will strengthen us, and not suffer us to be tempted above that which we are able to bear.

When we look back over the long list of ancient worthies, who were such faithful witnesses for God, under the most adverse conditions in life, we are encouraged. "They are written for our admonition." God cared for and preserved Noah. He delivered righteous Lot. He freed Joseph in Egypt, from a most audacious and malicious woman. David was spared in a king's palace, and Daniel was justified in the king's court, though he would not defile himself with the king's meat. So God has ever had his faithful witnesses in ages past, and he has them still.

Jesus refers to John the Baptist as a true witness. A true witness is not one that is faithful amidst the flowers alone, but the thorns as well. It is easy to be a friend of Jesus when all our environments are friendly. It may be quite easy and even helpful for us to testify for Christ in the congregation of the righteous; but to do so amid the opposing influences of sin and corruption, requires to be a true witness, in every sense of the term. Such a man John the Baptist was. But then man is not the best witness, though he may be a "burning and shining light." Jesus says, "I have greater witness than that of John: for the works which the Father hath given me to finish, the same works that I do, bear witness of me, that the Father hath sent me. The Father himself, which hath sent me, hath borne witness of me."

While those critical, stiff-necked Pharisees might reject all this, Jesus calls their attention to the fact that they had not the Word of God "abiding in them," and that is the great trouble with the world today. There was one resort still open to them, which would prove an unfailing source of evidence that Christ was the promised Messiah. Jesus says to them, "Search the scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me." Here we have the crown of all testimony: "Thy word is truth."

Early in the history of the Son of Man, that devout and just man, Simeon, "waiting for the consolation of Israel," took up the child Jesus in his arms, "and blessed God and said, Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace according to thy word: for mine eyes have seen thy salvation."

In the beginning of the ministry of Christ, Jesus called unto himself twelve apostles that should take part in witnessing for him to all the world. After his resurrection, he "opened their understanding, that they might understand the scriptures." After referring to his suffering, death and resurrection he said, "And ye are witnesses of these things." Now hear these witnesses for Christ on the day of Pentecost. After being endued with power from on high, they testified with all holy boldness what the prophets, Isaiah, Ezekiel, Joel and David had said of Christ. They said, "Ye men of Israel, hear these words; Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God among you by miracles and wonders and signs, which God did by him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves also know. Him . . . ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain: whom God hath raised up, having loosed the pains of death."

Thus we might take up those apostles, with Paul and Barnabas, Philip, Stephen and all those holy men and women who have declared their faith in Christ, and many who sealed that faith with their own blood, along with the early church fathers, and we might get some idea of what constitutes a true witness of Jesus Christ.

The primary meaning of a witness for Christ, as taken from the Greek, is a martyr,—one who testifies to the truth at the expense of his life. Stephen, the first Christian martyr, was stoned to death for testifying for Jesus. James was slain with the sword, for the same reason. Peter and Paul died at the hands of wicked tyrants, and are resting with them, "that were slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held."

But we think that the scope of the meaning of witnessing for Christ, as presented in the Scriptures, includes every true believer in Christ. Indeed we think we are justified in accepting testimony outside of church relationship. We call attention to a few instances that support this view.

When Jesus was preaching at Jerusalem, many believed on him, but for fear of the Jews did not confess him. Some also said, "Do the rulers know indeed that this is the very Christ?"

Again, while some said, "Of a truth this is the prophet," others said, "This is the Christ." When officers were sent to arrest the Lord, he preached unto them with such directness of truth and oratorical power that they failed in their purpose, and returned with this testimony as an excuse, "Never man spake like this man." Even the demon of Gadara testified, "What have I to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of God most high?" Pilate confessed, "I find no fault in him." The cock testified with such force that "Peter wept bitterly" and repented of his sin. Judas, though a traitor, became a witness for Christ, when he returned the thirty pieces of silver, saying, "I have sinned in that I have betrayed innocent blood." So also did one of the thieves on the cross confess, "We receive the due reward of our deeds, but this man hath done nothing amiss." And he said unto Jesus, "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom."

After Jesus had commended his spirit into the hands of the Father, and had given up the ghost, the centurion, standing by, saw what was done. Glorifying God, he said, "Certainly this was a righteous man."

Thus testimony from the Acts and from the epistolary writings might be greatly multiplied. But what of our testimony for Christ, and how are we witnessing for him? That should be the burning question with us. Are we saying, "Lord, Lord," and not doing what he says? Are we demonstrating our love for him by keeping his commandments? Are we laboring with might and power to obey from the heart all things whatsoever he has commanded us? Or do we do only those things that are most convenient to the flesh, and require but little self-denial or sacrifice? Are we drifting with the current of the world in its fashions and vanities and worldly pleasures and amusements? Or are we "living epistles" of Christ, "known and read of all men," and abstaining from "all appearance of evil"?

Let us not be false witnesses,—those who have vowed unto the Lord and have not fulfilled, or having begun, and then turned back. Of such Peter says, "The latter end is worse with them than the beginning." "For it had been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness, than, after they have known it, to turn from the holy commandment delivered unto them. But it is happened unto them according to the true proverb, The dog is turned to his own vomit again; and the sow that was washed to her wallowing in the mire" (2 Peter 2: 21, 22).

In conclusion we call attention to the better way of witnessing for Christ,—one that is faithful unto the end! We should be like the Apostle Paul who was willing to "die daily" to sin, having the old man crucified, "that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin." "But I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection." Thus we understand that Paul was "crucified with Christ," that sin should not reign in his mortal body. To the Galatian brethren Paul said, "They that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts." In this sense we can all be martyrs, and true witnesses for Christ.

Two Classes of Compulsion.

BY OMA KARN.

THE "musts!" How often are they acknowledged in our life, and how hard it is to submit to their irresistible compulsion! Shrinking and faltering, we face some hard, disagreeable duty, some heart-breaking experiences, or forces of circumstances that place us under their submission, despite our own unwillingness or our own dislike.

This class of "musts" are not pleasant associates. We do not enjoy working under their direction. We experience a feeling of relief and gladness when their time of directing is past, and their presence, with their "Thou shalt," and "Thou shalt not," has departed from our life.

But while such people are unpleasant to live with, and their departure not regretted, there is another class which is of exactly opposite character. Rare, indeed, it is to find a person who does not welcome into his life, the "musts" belonging to this class. For who is it that shrinks from the compulsion that love places upon us,—the "must" that grows out of the desire to do, to dare, to bear and bitterly to suffer, if need be, for those who are bound to us by the close ties of kindred affection!

The "must" shone out prominently in the earthly life of our Savior, as he went about, concerned in his Father's high interest and important affairs. "I must be about my Father's business; I must work the works of him that sent me; I must preach the good tidings to other cities also," he tells us. Then comes that sad, sad "must." "The Son of man must suffer many things and die."

We do not rebel when asked to submit to these "musts." Very often it is necessary to go forward along difficult ways. Sometimes we must bear heavy burdens, and we must yield up much we hold dear for the sake of those we love, but the force that demands this, while it is compulsory, is not felt as such. It is more in the nature of enthusiasm and affection,—the natural attendants of purest faith and the most sincere devotion. Such compulsion neither frets nor worries, but rather satisfies the heart. We love those whose need compels our action, and nothing that need may require is too great or too hard to win from us a loving, willing, cheerful response.

Viewed in this light, how great is the compulsion that God's love places upon us! As Christians, we are bound "to do and to die," for the sake of Christ and his kingdom. All of us are children of the great All-Father, bound together by the strong ties of fraternal affection. Why do we rebel and complain, and refuse to see the necessity of more lovingly serving one another, or more willingly giving up our own way for the sake of another's good? So often this service and this sacrifice are performed more in the spirit of that hard "must," described in the first class, than of the willing, loving "must" described in the second.

When we become children of God, we place ourselves under obligations to serve his other children, wherever, whenever, and in whatsoever way we can.

God's love, so freely lavished upon us in the sacrifice of his Son, makes this "must" binding. We dare not shirk it. Suffering as great as that which comes to a little child whose mother refuses to acknowledge the "must" its care demands of her, comes to some child of God, if we do. Pain, keener even than that which smites the heart of an earthly parent, when a child will serve in filial duty only under force, falls upon the heart of the Heavenly Father when he beholds this spirit. Fear, also, stirs his heart. Fear for our good,—the fear that moves him to send some of the hard "musts" into our life, that "through their presence" we may be made to see and to fulfill the duty he has made compulsory.

Superstition in the South.

BY A. G. CROSSWHITE.

THE negroes are much more impressionable than the whites, and speak of matters of superstition as being "hones' fac's." There are no "spook" or "witch" tales that seem unreasonable to the most illiterate among them, nor are there any that they can not fully duplicate, and "then some."

A railroad conductor has only to carry a rabbit's foot in his vest pocket, occasionally, to secure the best of order on his train. The colored people fear that rabbit's foot more than a revolver or even a hoot owl on the roof, in the night time. If a rabbit crosses the road in front of them it is "bad luck," and they must immediately stop, make a cross in the road, or go around the track; but if a squirrel should cross the road in front of them they go on their way rejoicing.

Turning back is hardly the thing to do, for it brings them trouble, even though they make a cross and spit in the center of it. The horseshoe above the door is not to them an omen of "good luck," but a warning to witches to "keep out."

A total eclipse of the sun usually catches them napping, and of all the praying, yelling and exhorting that one ever heard, this is the limit, and the worst of it is that they expect a daily recurrence of this strange phenomenon until they gradually forget all about it.

A Strange Occurrence.

A family by the name of Ramsey lived near us about the close of the Civil War. This family consisted of a widowed mother and two daughters. They ranked among the poorer classes of the whites. Though respectable, yet they were very ignorant and superstitious people. One day my father was sent for, to come and see the older daughter, who had been suddenly stricken down by a rolling ball of fire. When he arrived she was prostrate on the bed, but quite able to explain the occurrence.

While sitting on the porch she saw a huge ball of fire rolling along the ground from the East, and knew at once that she was doomed. A small calf was grazing in the field near by and the ball was rapidly bearing down upon it. To put it in her own words, "I rose up at once and tried to show it to mother and sister, but before they could see it, it had struck an object and split in two or three pieces. One piece struck the calf, and another one struck me. Here I am and I will soon be as dead as the calf."

As far as the other two knew there had been no complaint on the part of either, yet father soon verified her statement that the calf was stone dead and the girl beyond the reach of medical treatment.

Finally a "witch" doctor was called, who could get there without crossing a stream of water. He went through some strange nocturnal performances, with the aid of a "black cat," and the girl recovered. One thing that I remember is that a large Bible was opened at a certain marked passage of Scripture and placed under her head. She did not know what the hard pillow was, but earnestly plead that it be removed. This, however, was a part of the treatment and the Bible was allowed to remain until she was able to sit up.

It must not be understood that such things were common, among the whites, at least, and none of the more intelligent people took stock in such ignorance, but, ever since the days of Roger Williams and Anne Hutchinson, every section of country has had a little sprinkle of superstition, either in unlucky days, unlucky numbers, signs, omens or something else, that can not be scientifically explained.

Burials and Baptisms.

A "burying" and a "baptizing" were somewhat similar among the negroes. In both cases they dressed in white, and, forming in line, two by two, they marched along very solemnly, singing all the way, pausing only long enough to immerse the candidate, or to deposit the dead in "de col', col' ground."

Old-time Traditions.

It may be interesting to note a few more old-time traditions and superstitious ideas that have taken a firm hold upon these poor people. The purpose is to contrast their sad plight with the more favorable position that we occupy under the blazing light of the twentieth century.

For instance, if a whip-poor-will comes near the house in time of sickness, it is an omen of death, and the sufferer's shoes must be turned round. If one finds himself boasting, he must stop short and touch wood or keep his hand on some, while continuing his story.

It is "bad luck" with them to begin a job of work on Saturday, for they say it will never be finished. Friday is unlucky in every way. To comb one's hair after dark is to make him forgetful, and to sneeze at the table is a sure sign that you will hear of a death soon. When one dies, the mirrors must all be veiled and the clock stopped until after the funeral. If a cabbage stalk runs to seed or a row of anything be missed in planting, one of the family will surely die that season.

To kill a toad makes the cows give bloody milk and to put the hand in a bird's nest on Friday will cause the bird to leave her nest.

If a funeral procession should stop, one of the family will soon follow, and the last look at the living, or the last word spoken to him, are a summons to that one to follow. Aside from these superstitious ideas, regarding the living, there are numerous "signs" for planting, building, finding water, telling what the weather will be, etc., quite enough to fill a volume, and yet no such book was ever printed.

The Dawn of a Better Day.

But the light of reformation began to dawn the very moment that the shackles of slavery were stricken from the slave, and constitutional rights and privileges were established. It was proven by actual test that "all men were created equal." The rapid progress and development of the Southland has come about under the benign influences of a free ballot, an untrammeled constituency, a free public school system, and a free Gospel.

The negro is no more a slave now than the white man, unless he chooses to be, and all these educational forces, as they are brought to bear upon the illiteracy of both races, have had a salutary influence upon them during the past four decades. But in the more favored sections, is there boasting of our superior advantages? Instead of touching wood, may the Holy Spirit touch our hearts and cause us, in turn, to touch our pieces, and help our colored people to rise.

Spiritual Growth.

BY REUBEN SHROYER.

GROWTH in righteousness and in vital godliness is everywhere touched upon in God's Word, with greatest delight and supreme interest. The spiritual life of the true believer is represented by the path of light progressing from the morning glow to the full blaze of noonday. The Christian life is a progressive life. When the inspired writer says: "Let us go on unto perfection," we have the finger board that points the way and names the goal which every worthy Christian is earnestly striving to reach.

The work of religion is soul-unfolding, soul-developing, and soul-building, to the comfort and encouragement of many sincere but perplexed Christians. Be it known that the attainment of this highest spiritual condition is not the only credential of true discipleship. The babe in the cradle is no less a child than the son in the full stature and likeness of the father. There are graduations in the spiritual life as there are in the physical. No true child will desire to remain in the cradle but, craving the fuller life, will eagerly appropriate the means of development and growth from strength to strength, until it arrives at the full stature of manhood in Christ Jesus.

It is very evident that if man would come into possession of these highest and richest experiences he must move toward them. There certainly must be a start toward the goal, if it is ever to be reached. Faith in the Son of God will open the way to immeasurable possessions and unspeakable experiences. The start may be a very feeble one. It is difficult to discern how little a man may know to begin to know his God. If he has the knowledge of a mere desire and will put that into action, he will be brought to the light that "shineth brighter and brighter unto the perfect day."

Having once begun the Christian's course, the longing of the soul is to go on unto perfection. God's call is to go on, grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth. The Holy Spirit impels us to go forward. Progress is the law of life; from the little germ in the egg to the soaring eagle there is progress. From the acorn to the giant oak; from the seed to the waving harvest, there is progress. We can keep converting grace only by keeping it growing. Unless we add fruit to faith, virtue, it will die out. To falter is to weaken, to halt is to recede, to rest is to retrograde. Onward, onward, at once, unto the highest altitudes of religious life and experiences, where the soul is made one with God in the strength of him by whom all things are possible.

How eager should we be to turn this stream of spiritual life into the tides that drift towards God! Let us go on unto perfection! Progress is the spiritual law of the Christian religion. We might as well talk of a waning God as of a waning religion. Progress is the very breath of its life. Progress is the fundamental condition of usefulness.

The true disciple is aflame with the Christ Spirit that converts his whole being into an energy that is omnipotent and untiring in its activities. If the church of Christ would fulfill its God-given mission, it must quicken its steps in following the Lamb of Calvary in his onward march through the world. As the church advances, the kingdom of God increases. As the individual progresses, the church advances.

The Book of Job has long been the marvel of the scientist, because of the remarkable revelations of astronomical lore which it contains. Here we have the striking statement that God "hangeth the earth upon nothing," —a fact that is one of the greatest truths of modern astronomy. In connection with that sublime statement the Book of Job also says that God "stretcheth out the north over the empty place." While this theory has, at times, been seriously questioned, we herewith give the following interesting confirmation by an astronomer of note, whose investigations are well worth our attention: "Recently, by the use of the largest telescope in the northern hemisphere, a great vacuum has been discovered in the depths of the northern heavens." Critics may boldly challenge the accuracy of Bible statements, but after the conflict of the battle has passed away, the good old Bible shines out victorious every time, while its antagonists have been discomfited and demoralized.

THE ROUND TABLE

Homiletic Hints.

BY E. B. HOFF.

God and Not Man the Judge of the World (Rom. 2: 1-16.)

MAN is too sinful himself to be able to judge his fellow-man. When he attempts it he fails (2: 1), and falls under the condemnation of God (2: 2, 3). To do so is to despise the goodness and long-suffering of God, which was intended to lead men to repentance (2: 4).

If, however, they despise the goodness of God and determine to continue, they are themselves laying up treasures of wrath against themselves (2: 4, 5 and 2: 8, 9).

But, on the other hand, for those who yield to his goodness and long-suffering he has a blessing in store (2: 7, 10). Thus God proves himself an impartial judge, well able to judge correctly (2: 6, 11).

God has given some men more light than others. Some have the Law of Revelation, while others have only the law of nature and conscience. Notwithstanding this he has given all sufficient to become responsible before him and he will judge them accordingly (Rom. 2: 12-16).

The Jews were much in the habit of condemning their Gentile neighbors who had less light than they, but Paul plainly told them that they were unfit thus to judge, for they were only condemning themselves while doing it.

The Jews condemned Jesus throughout his entire life. They condemned him at Nazareth, his own home, condemned him for his alleged Sabbath violation, his fasting, his associating with those needing a Savior, and condemned him for everything. In fact, they never ceased condemning him until they had him nailed to the cross, and even then maligned him. They have kept it up until this present day. They have been putting themselves into the range of 2: 4, 5, 8, 9, while they should have put themselves into the context of 2: 7, 10.

The Lord had given the Jew a wonderful opportunity as we see in 2: 17-20. But he sadly misused his opportunity (2: 21-23). By making such a loud profession and yet living such an inconsistent life, he was causing the Gentile neighbor to blaspheme the God, whom he should have been taught to love and obey (2: 24, 25).

In turn the Gentile who does the best he can, by his very obedience judges or condemns the Jew, who, with more light, yet fails to live a consistent life (2: 26, 27).

God intended that the inward life should tally with the outward life in profession. Yes, more than this, the outward should spring from the heart-life (2: 28, 29).

Our conclusion is that sinful man is unfit to judge, but that it is God's prerogative to judge.

Criticism.

BY J. H. MILLER.

SOMETIMES preachers and writers are criticised. I presume if it is done with good intentions, it is all right. Not long since a good brother wrote me a letter concerning the article I wrote on the contrast between Moses and Stephen. He wanted to know where in the Bible it is stated that Elijah went to heaven in a fiery chariot. It is found in 2 Kings 2: 11, 12: "And it came to pass, as they still went on, and talked, that, behold, there appeared a chariot of fire, and horses of fire, and parted them both asunder; and Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven. And Elisha saw it, and he cried, My father, my father, the chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof. And he saw him no more: and he took hold of his own clothes, and rent them in two pieces."

Elisha saw the chariot. His evidence is that of an eye-witness. In verse eleven we read that there appeared a chariot and horses of fire. Elisha was separated from Elijah by a strange vehicle of horses, a chariot and a whirlwind. Matthew Henry says on verse eleven that "Elijah was carried up into heaven on a fiery chariot."

We have three persons mentioned in the Bible that went to heaven: (1) Enoch, who walked with God 365 years, after which God took him to the glory world (Gen. 5: 23, 24); (2) Elijah (2 Kings 2: 11, 12); (3) Jesus who went to heaven in a fiery cloud (Acts 1: 9, 10, 11). All these scenes must have been a wonder to the beholders.

Enoch walked with God as a faithful servant, so God took him home as a true worker. Elijah, on his fiery carriage, had God to direct him to heaven. Jesus was taken in a cloud (Acts 1: 9). Paul speaks of the faithful who "shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord" (1 Thess. 4: 17). When Jesus makes his second visit to this earth he will come in the clouds (Matt. 24: 30). He went to heaven in a cloud so he will come in the "clouds with power and great glory." When Elijah went to heaven in a whirlwind that had the appearance of horses and a chariot of fire, it must have been a wonderful sight to Elisha.

Watchfulness.

BY DORA CLARK.

DURING the time of a drought the grass along the railroad often catches fire from the sparks thrown out by the engine, and so the people keep close watch, after the passing of each train, to put out any fire that may have started, thus keeping it from spreading. In that way no harm can come to the houses or other buildings, and do serious damage. During a wet season when the grass is kept green by the refreshing rains, there is no danger whatever of fire getting out,—not because the sparks do not fall, but because the grass along the roadside can readily reject the inflammable power of the sparks, so that they soon vanish.

The devil is busy at work, scattering sparks of evil all around us. The hearts that are not filled with Jesus and his love are easily set on fire with evil things which every wind of evil passions fans into a larger and larger flame until it gets beyond all human power to control. Then only the refreshing showers of heavenly grace can quench the raging flame.

But how different are those who have the love of God shed abroad in their hearts! Evil winds can do them no harm, for they enjoy "peace which passeth understanding."

Let us daily draw near to God by reading and meditating on his Holy Word, and communing with him in prayer, thus ever keeping our hearts watered with dews of heavenly love, so that no sparks of evil can find room or lodgment in our lives.

Our Behavior.

BY J. S. MOHLER.

THE writer was seated at a table in a large city restaurant in St. Joseph, Mo., recently, with many of our members, all waiting to be served. The waiters were doing their very best to serve them all as quickly and politely as possible. While thus awaiting my turn, I overheard one of the waiters say, "These are the best people I ever waited on. They are so kind and patient."

Here was true light glimmering from that vast throng of members, patiently waiting their turn to be served. That impressed at least one soul,—and possibly many others,—with the excellency of the Christ-life.

This favorable influence of our behavior at home and abroad reminds us forcibly of the words of Paul, "Ye are our epistles, known and read of all men." May God help us to make good reading!

A Young Victim of Strong Drink.

BY CALEB LONG.

A FEW days ago, not far from my home, a little girl of seven summers came staggering to the house and told her mother she was drunk. Investigation proved her words to be true. She had taken from the cupboard the whiskey bottle, used to treat the hands in harvest, poured four ounces into a smaller bottle, and, going to a shed near by, did what she saw others do. She drank the contents of the bottle, and, in her childish way, reported the results. Possibly she had caught the idea that it looked big to get drunk, like older folks do. Had this been all, my story would not be so sad. In a short time she was taken with convulsions, and died in a few hours.

What a vivid object lesson! Thousands of the young,—the hope of the future,—are acting like the poor, innocent little girl. They are led to drink through the example and influence of others, and thus become saloon victims and fill untimely graves. May God help us to unite our powers against this nefarious rum traffic, and drive it far from our fair land, thus saving our boys and girls from its blighting curse.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS' TOPIC

"The Soul of the Indian."

Acts 17: 22-28.

For Sunday Evening, August 13, 1911.

I. The Human Family Has Descended: (a) From a single pair; (b) "was made of one blood" (Acts 17: 26); hence, the "brotherhood of man."

II. Man Was Created "in the Image of God" (Gen. 1: 26, 27).—(1) On the one hand, he was to enjoy communion with God (Psa. 8: 1-5; Matt. 11: 25; 1 Cor. 1: 27). (2) On the other hand, he was to exercise dominion (Psa. 8: 6-9; Gen. 1: 26, 28).

III. In the New Testament Man Is Recognized: (1) As still possessing the "image of God" (Luke 3: 38; 1 Cor. 11: 7; Jas. 3: 9). (2) Yet he is urged to "put on the new man" (Eph. 4: 24; Col. 3: 10). (3) Christ is the "image of the invisible God" (2 Cor. 4: 4; Col. 1: 15). (4) We become renewed after the image of God, when we become "conformed to the image of Christ" (Rom. 8: 29).

Note.—(1) What is true of you and me is true of the Indian—of all. Therefore the Indian is my brother—my neighbor (Gal. 5: 14; Rom. 13: 8). (2) In the closing prayers think of the Indian of our country (Psa. 2: 8; Matt. 21: 22; John 15: 7). (3) Let several young Workers tell short Indian stories. Some boy or girl should tell the story of David Brainerd, the missionary. (4) The story in "Our Young People" about Crow Dog, a Sioux Indian, who killed Spotted Tail in 1881.

PRAYER MEETING

Longing for the Things Worth While.

Psalm 63.

For Week Beginning August 13, 1911.

1. Our Longings.—David uses quite freely the personal and possessive pronouns. In the Psalms he records God's dealings with him as an individual, and so clearly has he learned the lesson of walking with God that he claims him as his daily portion. To speak of him as "God" is an inspiration, for he is the Creator and the Ruler of the Universe, but to think of him as "MY GOD," links all his greatness and all his goodness to our own lives, and makes him THE GREAT RESERVOIR from which we can draw all needed supplies of comfort and strength (Isa. 40: 29-31).

2. God's Power and Glory.—David longs not only for an exhibition of the power of God (verse 2),—doubtless he had seen that,—but his heart's desire is for a vision of the glory of God. God's power is in his works, his glory is in his grace. God's power is in creation, his glory is in redemption. God's power formed the world, holds the sea in the hollow of his hands, and controls the fiercest storms, but his glory is shown in the Babe of Bethlehem, the Boy of Galilee, the Preacher at Nazareth, the Sufferer in Gethsemane, and the dying Savior upon the cross (Eph. 3: 14-21).

3. "I Shall Be Satisfied."—David exclaims: "My lips shall praise thee." When we burst out in praise, we forget ourselves, and, forgetting ourselves, we are unmindful of our surroundings and circumstances, and are content to walk with him whom we praise. Thus praise is one of the secrets of victory over a selfish life. "My soul shall be satisfied,"—literally "satiated" or "filled." (verse 5). We were made for God. There is power only in fullness, and many a life is barren because there is no fullness. David finds meditation a satisfaction. "My meditation of him shall be sweet," so writes this man of God. So, if our thoughts are to control us, let God control our thoughts, and he will thus assume the direction of our living. He is the Great Pilot who knows the dangers, and will direct aright (Psalm 84).

HOME AND FAMILY

We're Growing Old.

The tallest lilies droop at eventide,
The sweetest roses fall from off the stem;
The rarest things on earth can not abide,
And we are passing, too, away like them;
We're growing old.

We had our dreams, those rosy dreams of youth!
They faded and 'twas well. This after-prime
Hath brought us fuller hopes; and yet, forsooth,
We drop a tear now in this later time,
To think we're old!

We smile at those poor fancies of the past—
A saddened smile, also akin to pain;
Those high desires, those purposes so vast.
Ah, our poor heart! They can not come again!
We're growing old!

Old? Well, the heavens are old; the earth is, too;
Old wine is best, maturest fruit most sweet!
Much have we lost, more gained, although 'tis true
We tread life's way with most uncertain feet;
We're growing old!

We move along and scatter as we pass
Soft graces, tender hopes on every hand,
At last, with gray-streaked hair and hollow face,
We step across the boundary of the land
Where none is old!

Staying in a Corner.

BY ELIZABETH D. ROSENBERGER.

If you remember it was little Jack Horner who sat in a corner, eating a Christmas pie. He was alone, for only one person can get into a corner, and he was eating the pie and enjoying it all by himself. We are sorry that he could enjoy it, for it was intended that this pie should be shared with others. Then, too, he felt pleased and proud, for as he put in his thumb and pulled out a plum, he said, "What a brave boy am I." Of course, he seemed great and brave, sitting alone there, with no one to dispute his claim. The pie was good and he was satisfied; he had all he wanted; he was content.

"Well, what of it?" you ask. And we reply that we should like to ask Jack Horner to get out of his corner and eat at the family table and help provide the pie, and compete with his fellows, and then we shall hear no more of his being a brave boy. He will have so much to do that he will quit thinking about himself and he will be so busy doing things that he will forget to boast and brag. Nothing takes the conceit out of people sooner than actually keeping step in the march. The one in the corner is likely to think that his opinions are of more value than the opinions of others who are sitting at the ordinary table. He is congratulating himself on being just what he should be. He has the thing he wants, and now he is satisfied; he is happy in thinking of his own perfections. He is like the man who says,

> "That I am right, and always right, I know,
> Because my own convictions tell me so;
> And to be right is simply this to be > Entirely and in all respects like me."

But the time comes when the self-satisfaction gives way to disappointment keen and bitter, for it is inevitable that he who lives for himself, secure in his own convictions, should become lonely, and find himself unappreciated. In a corner there is but little opportunity for growth, and without growth our natures shrivel and become paralyzed.

There is a woman whose forehead is knotted with little fretful wrinkles and whose eyes have a faded, careworn look. She has been occupying her corner for so long, that the results of it are seen in her face. She has worried over the thought that she is not getting as much out of life as she deserves, until she is nervous and unhappy. Her friends are glad to leave her in her corner, because she has but little to impart when they do see her. Often she is brooding over her wrongs,—fancied or real,—and she expects sympathy and help from each one who comes near. So it is no wonder that she is left more and more to herself, as she has no interest in the things of others. The great world, with its freight of human interests, sympathies and hopes, sweeps by her unseeing eyes, and she pays no heed.

We know a woman who saw that her life was gradually being circumscribed, and she determined to break away from her corner. It was hard to do, but she began by forgetting her own self and thinking of others. She had thought people tiresome; now she began to study them to see if there were not something fine in their natures. So she divined the kindly motive, which lay back of an act, the sacrifice which was not revealed, because the individual was really trying to please Christ and not himself, and the sincere desire to do better, though perhaps the deed may not have indicated this. She has learned to appreciate the best in others, and that is worth a great deal. She helps others to do better. Your "corner people" are so taken up with their own exploits that they have no eyes for the efforts of others, but this woman helped by her words of praise and commendation. This means so much. No one can live and labor without encouragement. There are few who reach the heights without it. Many a one who is doing well stumbles, falters and turns back because no one seems to appreciate what he is trying to do. He is weak and no one seems to realize his need of encouragement, and so he loses heart.

Of course it is love that is at the bottom of this true appreciation of what others are doing. Love helps one to discover true values, and so to discriminate, that those needing courage are given praise and appreciation. Downright sincerity is a grace, and it lies at the root of everything. This honest effort to help people does not mean that we flatter those who are about us,—far from it.

If you are in a corner and so occupied with your own pie, that you can think and talk only of yourself, we are sorry for you. There is no shorter road to a physical and nervous breakdown than this. The woman who has many children and is poor,—so poor that her daily bread is a matter of question, has a better chance for happiness than you have. You may think that your plans and hopes are the most important things in the world, but the woman next door is just as anxious to have her wishes come true as you are. People may come to you in your corner and talk a little while, but they will excuse themselves and leave, and they may not soon wander your way again. They are likely to avoid you. Sanatoriums are full of people who could see nothing outside of their little corner, and who cared only for their own pie; they could not forget themselves, nor get away from themselves.

Men sometimes get into a corner and shut out everything but the desire to make money and get on in the world. If they only knew it, there are finer plums than those they are pulling out all by themselves. Selfish pleasure is always a disappointment. No matter how large the plums, they lack in flavor when eaten alone. It is the province of a man to be able to abstain from burdening another life with one's own grief; to find comfort in the beauty of the sunrise and the shining of the stars. The brave man shall realize, though his heart be sad and full of desperate, futile longing, that God's world has, still its measure of joy and gladness.

"The joy that you give to others is the joy that comes back to you;
And the more you spend in blessing the poor and lonely and sad,
The more of your heart's possessing returns to make you glad."

Bad Literature.

BY LEANDER SMITH.

Two city boys, after saturating their minds with the poison of a dime novel, decided to devote their lives to adventures. Their first adventure resulted in a conviction for shoplifting. Thus two lives are marred, if not wrecked, by bad literature. It is a sad fact that many parents seem to concern themselves but little as to the character of the literature that comes into the hands of their children. This does not arise from an indifference to the welfare of the child, but rather from underestimating the influence of bad books.

We call to mind a young ladies' school in one of our Eastern States which was completely wrecked by one book that was smuggled into the institution. We should remember that the characters in a book, though they be fictitious, are quite real to those who read them. The very fact that one reads a book at least suggests the fact that he is interested in the book, and that there is something about the character that appears real to him.

We believe that it is true that our lives may be more completely influenced by a vile book than by a vile life. Many people who will not knowingly associate with a vile person, will not hesitate to read about them. It well behooves the fathers and mothers of our country, therefore, to know what their children are reading. Nor is it less the duty of the parent to provide suitable literature for the child than to prevent the pernicious literature from entering the home. If we do not provide our children with the good, they will likely furnish themselves with the bad. It is lamentably true that not near all the families of the Brethren reads the GOSPEL MESSENGER. In my judgment the most pernicious parsimony possible is that which prevents our members from taking the church paper. Such economy offers a premium on spiritual ignorance and fosters religious indifference.

A Dozen Don'ts.

Don't lose your interest in fallen men if you wish to continue standing.

Don't argue that the Bible means whisky and tobacco when it says that the body is not defiled by what goes into it.

Don't pray for riches for God's glory unless you have honored him with your moderate wealth.

Don't try to climb to heaven over the characters you have pulled down for stepping-stones.

Don't snap up every advertised opportunity to make a fortune quickly.

Don't cultivate fellowship with sin unless you desire to become a fellow in sin.

Don't undermine your character by refusing to have convictions at right and wrong.

Don't permit the condition of the weather to determine your state of mind and heart.

Don't refuse to travel the path of suffering which made the Captain of your salvation perfect.

Don't sing too lustily with closed eyes and upturned countenance when the collection-plate is passing.

Don't forget that the heart is fertile soil for the planting either of good or evil.

Don't fear that your spiritual house will settle out of shape if it is built on the Rock.—Religious Telescope.

SISTERS' AID SOCIETIES

WENACHTEE, WASH.—The Sisters' Aid Society of East Wenatchee, Wash., met June 29, for the purpose of reorganizing the society. C. W. Buntain was elected as president, and the writer secretary. During the past six months the society made thirty-five garments, nine comforters and two comforter tops. We received, during this time, $46.95, and expended $36.81, leaving $11.14 in the treasury. The average attendance for the quarter was eight. We donated a cap and bonnet goods to two sisters. We hope to do more work and accomplish more. We have a balance in the treasury. Including monthly dues, of $36.57; also $8 worth of goods on hand. We reorganized for the coming year with Sister Lavina Dombach as president; Sister Emma Young, vice-president; Sister Mary Bassler, treasurer; Sister Elizabeth Young, secretary. May God help us to do more and better work this coming year!—Emma Heimesderfer, East Petersburg, Pa., July 11.

NAMPA, IDAHO.—Our Sisters' Aid Society met and re-elected its former officers for the latter half of this year. If we have plenty of work to do we meet every week. When we are not busy we meet every two weeks. Our average attendance for the past six months was six. We have an assistant who is not able to meet with us, but she writes to us for special work, the making of prayer coverings. During the last few months she has made more than sixty coverings. No sister need feel ashamed to wear the neat and well-made coverings which this sister makes. The Aid Society also gives to every sister that is baptized here her first covering. Our work consists in quilting for others, making aprons and caps, and doing such work as comes to us. We had the audience room and half of the church papered, costing us $42. We were much encouraged when the church, at our members' meeting, gave to the Aid Society a vote of thanks. We felt that our efforts, though weak, were valued.—Amanda Garber, Nampa, Idaho, July 17.

Last week Bro. W. R. Miller was at Elkhart, Ind., where he reports the very best of interest in his illustrated Bible Land talks.

The District Meeting for the State of Washington is to be held in Yakima, Sept. 21 and 22. This will be the first meeting for the new District.

The first series of meetings held at the Hylton schoolhouse, near Glace, W. Va., by Bro. J. H. Wimmer, resulted in eight accessions to the fold.

We close our work on this issue in time to reach Mount Morris on Tuesday afternoon. Next week we hope to have something to say about the District Meeting.

We are requested to announce that the Ministerial Meeting of the Second District of Virginia will be held at the Sangerville church, Aug. 17 and 18. The program will appear soon.

The Ministerial Meeting and Sunday-school Convention for Western Pennsylvania, to be held in the Scalp Level church, Shade Creek congregation, are announced for Aug. 22 and 23.

At the late District Meeting of North Dakota, Eastern Montana and Western Canada, Bro. D. F. Landis was chosen a member of the Standing Committee for 1912. No papers go to the Annual Meeting.

July 18, Bro. J. F. Neher, one of the faithful and earnest ministers of Oklahoma, passed to his reward. As a preacher of the Gospel he was widely and favorably known in the West, and will be greatly missed in the mission field.

In this issue we are publishing the program for the Sunday-school Convention of Southeastern Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Eastern New York, to be held at Denton, Md., Aug. 12 and 13. Denton is on the Eastern Shore of Maryland.

While in the Salem congregation, N. Dak., Bro. John Heckman, of Polo, Ill., delivered a number of evangelistic discourses that were listened to with much interest. There were ten applicants for membership, and two restored to the fold.

Bro. Chas. M. Yearout, of Morrill, Kans., writes us that he is now free from pastoral work, and can therefore devote considerable time to revival meetings. Those desiring his services can communicate with him.

Bro. J. F. Appleman, of Plymouth, Ind., has become traveling secretary for the General Mission Board. He entered upon his duties Aug. 1, and will visit many parts of the Brotherhood in the interest of the work of the Board.

We received the program for the Sunday-school Normal, Ministerial, Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meetings of Northwestern Ohio, to be held in the Black Swamp church, Aug. 29 to 31. The program is published on page 493.

Bro. John E. Metzger, field worker for the House, is now at work in the First District of Virginia, where he may remain a month or two. He is planning to attend the Sunday-school and Ministerial Meetings, to be held in the Peter's Creek congregation.

On account of the breaking out of cholera in some of the Italian ports, Bro. W. R. Miller, of Nappanee, Ind., finds it necessary to postpone his contemplated trip to Palestine. He had planned to conduct another party through the Bible Lands the coming fall. See his notice on page 496.

Another edition of "Our Saturday Night" has been printed. This makes the fifth edition. The book is not sold, but is furnished as a premium with the Messenger. The price for the paper one year, and the book, is $1.85. The demand for the work continues to be good right along during the dull season.

Under date of July 26 Bro. J. S. Geiser, of Baltimore, Md., writes us from Cleveland, Ohio, where he was at the time attending the National Dental Association Meeting. It may not be known to many of our readers that Bro. Geiser is not only an earnest preacher of the Gospel, but he is also a skilled dentist and a regular lecturer in the Dental College of his city. His profession makes of him a busy man, but this is not allowed to interfere with his work in the church or the Sunday-school.

The Lordsburg College Educator, for June, is the Catalogue number, containing the announcement for 1911-1912. We notice that Bro. Edward Frantz, of McPherson, Kans., has been chosen president of the institution. We are told that the outlook for the school, the approaching fall and winter, is good. Bro. Galen B. Royer has promised to be present and assist in the special Bible term. Those interested in the work of education on the Pacific Slope will do well to send for the June issue of the Educator. Address: Lordsburg College, Lordsburg, Cal.

We can not understand why the programs for the Sunday-school Meetings, in some of the State Districts, should contain advertisements of the Sunday-school supplies furnished by publishing houses aside from our own. We should think that those entrusted with the preparation of programs would prefer to introduce the Brethren Sunday-school literature into our own schools. This is what ought to be expected, at least, and it is no more than reasonable that it should be done. We certainly ought to stand by, and help to support, that which is to our own interest.

The Gospel Herald, Scottdale, Pa., organ of the Mennonites, publishes the report on the dress question, adopted by our late Conference, and highly commends the wise policy of the church, in her efforts to maintain New Testament simplicity. Referring further to the action of the Conference, the Herald says, editorially: "As a people we are interested in the same question, and our prayers ascend that the Brethren church may succeed in fully indoctrinating and holding all its membership solid on this question. The Bible is emphatic on the question of simplicity, modesty and nonconformity in dress and other things. This Bible doctrine should be loyally defended and put into practice, not only by members of churches known as 'plain churches' but by every one professing reverence for God's Word."

Bro. G. E. Yoder, of Elk Lick, Pa., we learn, is delivering a series of discourses on the Book of Revelation, and what he is saying, especially on the Seven Churches of Asia, is proving both interesting and instructive to his people. He finds it convenient to make many applications that suit the present-day conditions.

Sister Nora E. Berkebile writes that, in company with Sister Cook, District Sunday-school Secretary, she is visiting the different Sunday-schools in Northwestern Ohio. She adds: "We are looking forward with pleasure to the time when we can be on the mission field at work, instead of being here talking about it."

Bro. Jas. A. Sell, of Hollidaysburg, Pa., writes us that for some months he has been greatly handicapped by failing eyesight. He does not suffer, but the loss of vision prevents him from doing the reading and writing he would like to do. The trouble was brought on by overwork at his desk, but after a rest of a few months he realizes that there is some improvement in his eyes and he is hoping for a return of his vision.

Bro. J. F. Graybill and wife, of Nokesville, Va., will sail from New York for Sweden Sept. 7. While in the Old World their address will be Malmö, Sweden (Poste Restante). As missionaries they were approved by the late Annual Conference, and go to Europe to take charge of the churches in Sweden. Their work is an important one, and while absent from their friends in America they ask an interest in their prayers.

Bro. Daniel Hays, of Broadway, Va., is asking us to publish the following: On page 61 of the Full Report, ninth line from the beginning of paragraph, it reads, "'As,' following 'and' is a contradiction of 'also.'" It should be "'As,' following 'and' is a contraction of 'also.'" Then, in the seventh line from the bottom of the same page, it should read, "So it was not during the time of supper, or the eating of the supper by the disciples," etc.

Bro. J. H. Miller, of Goshen, Ind., writes us that, so far as fruit can make it so, the people in his part of the State are living in a land of plenty. There is fruit of all kinds in abundance. Apples have not been so plentiful in twenty years. The peach trees are loaded. He never saw such a crop of cherries. Some of them are still hanging on the trees and can not be given away. Then, he adds, that health is good and the church work is moving along smoothly.

Some one on the Pacific Slope, who signs herself "Mother," writes a letter to her daughter and places it in an envelope addressed to the House. Since no name is given, nothing can be done with the letter. The daughter, of course, will be disappointed because she does not hear from mother. Then, on the other hand, mother will wonder why she can not hear from her dear daughter. Many a one is sadly disappointed because something goes wrong with a letter.

On Sunday, July 23, Bro. Wm. A. Anthony, of Shady Grove, Pa., closed his earthly labors. He had been at church, only two doors from his home, and had taken an active part in both the Sunday-school and church services. Immediately after the morning services he went home, and was soon found by his wife on the floor, near a sofa, in a helpless condition suffering from a paralytic stroke. He died at 4 P. M. Bro. Anthony was one of the prominent elders of Southern Pennsylvania and represented his District on the Standing Committee at the St. Joseph Conference. He was a successful evangelist, an elder who will be greatly missed in the East, and impressed us as a fine Christian man. The news of his departure will be received with sadness in many parts of the Brotherhood, for he had a number of friends, and hundreds who knew him had expected to have the pleasure of meeting him at the Annual Meeting of 1912. The Waynesboro Daily Record speaks very highly of him as a teacher, preacher and citizen. For a later issue we are promised a much fuller account of his life and labors.

The Frequentative Verb.

SOME of the papers that stand for single immersion seem to be considerably interested in trine immersion. Especially is this the case with the Christian Standard, published in the interest of the Disciple church, from which we take the following:

Albert R. H. Miller sends us a clipping from the Herald and Presbyter, and asks us for our opinion on the subject treated. The article was written in reply to some remarks made by the Journal and Messenger in answer to a query as to whether baptizo is a frequentative verb, expressive of repeated action. The Journal and Messenger's querist cites the definition of baptizo as given in what is known as "Thayer-Grimm's Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament," which is regarded as the standard work of its kind. In this dictionary baptizo is defined "to dip repeatedly," and the question involved is: Ought not immersionists who take this lexicon as standard in practice trine-immerse? In considering this question it should be remembered that Grimm wrote at an early day when Greek scholars generally were under the impression that baptizo is a frequentative verb, being led to this conclusion by the termination izo, which generally indicates repeated action. As Thayer translated Grimm, he had to give a faithful translation, but Thayer himself never said that that was a correct meaning, and no modern independent lexicographer so says. Neither Liddell and Scott, nor Cremer, nor Schroeder gives this definition, for the reason that modern investigation has shown that this verb, while frequentative in form, is not so in fact, Greek literature furnishing no instances of its use in this sense, and usage is the final arbiter as to the meaning of words. All modern lexicons define baptizo "to dip," in common with the ancient ones, but none of the moderns follows the ancient in defining it "to dip repeatedly." Of course, one wants the results of the best modern scholarship and research.

In support of triple immersion our people have not found it necessary to make much use of the argument drawn from baptizo, as a frequentative verb, and yet we do not care to see the public misled regarding the facts in the case. Referring to the extract it will be observed that the editor himself admits that Greek verbs ending in izo "generally indicate repeated action." Since the word for baptism, in Greek, ends in this manner, it would follow, according to this admission, that baptism, when used in the New Testament, generally indicates repeated action. An admission of this sort comes wonderfully near settling the question in dispute.

The editor is right in stating that some lexicographers do not give baptizo as a frequentative verb, but it should be remembered that there is a long list of them who do. His own favorite lexicographer, C. L. Wilibald Grimm, who published his lexicon in 1851, says that baptizo means "to dip repeatedly." Prof. J. H. Thayer, one of the finest Greek scholars in this country, translated, enlarged and improved the work, and he fully endorses Prof. Grimm's definition in his "Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament," published in 1889. It is begging the question to claim that Thayer does not say that baptizo means to dip repeatedly, for he does so say in the words he translated and has published over his signature. Prof. Thayer lived until 1901, and at no time did he deny baptizo being a frequentative verb.

It is not true that modern investigation has shown that baptizo, while frequentative in form, is not so in fact. About the latest work of real scholarship out is Hastings' Bible Dictionary, bearing date of 1907, which says that baptizo is the intensive or frequentative form of bapto, to dip, and denotes immersion. The "Encyclopedia Britannica" also gives baptizo as the frequentative form of bapto.

In addition to the four authorities cited let us glance at a few others: Liddell and Scott, American Edition, "Baptizo, to dip, to dip repeatedly, to baptize." Robinson, "To immerse, to sink, a frequentative." Donegan, "To immerse repeatedly into a liquid." Wilke, "To immerse repeatedly, to bathe, to baptize." Green, "Baptize, a frequentative of bapto, to immerse." The Classic Greek-English Dictionary, "Baptizo, to dip repeatedly." Bretschneider, "Properly, often to dip." Kamma, "To immerse, to dip repeatedly into a liquid." Gaza, "To dip repeatedly." Richardson's English Dictionary, referring to baptizo, says it means "To dip or merge repeatedly." Robson is the one scholar, out of the whole list, who says that baptizo is frequentative in form but not in fact. But the citations, so far given, show that there is quite an array of scholarship on the side of baptizo being a frequentative, and that it means to dip repeatedly.

But there is another consideration to which we invite attention. The New Testament was first written in Greek, and it so happens that all the nations, ancient and modern, that used the Greek language, observed trine immersion, thus showing by their practice that they regarded baptizo as a frequentative verb, meaning to dip repeatedly. The churches that continue the use of the Greek language also continue, to this day, the use of the repeated action in baptism. They certainly ought to understand their own language best, and since millions of them, for nearly 2,000 years, have thought of no other form of immersion, in connection with the meaning of the word baptizo, it would seem to us that we here have an argument in support of trine immersion that is unanswerable.

Not only so, but it incidentally harmonizes with everything that has been said by the scholars, who maintain that baptizo is a frequentative verb, and means to dip repeatedly. With some of the best scholars on both continents affirming that baptizo is a frequentative verb, and means to dip repeatedly, and with all those, using the Greek as their mother tongue, practicing that way, it strikes us that there is hardly enough evidence on the other side to make it a debatable question. If the people who make use of the language as their mother tongue, for thousands of years, do not understand the meaning of their own words, then, pray, tell us who does.

Referred to the General Mission Board.

AT our last Annual Meeting two unanswered queries, referring to advertisements in our periodicals, came before the Standing Committee and were answered by appending the caption at the head of this article. The Conference passed the answers, and the General Mission Board will have the question of advertising, in our papers, to go over again, as it has done before, a number of times.

The writer, without presuming to dictate what action the Board shall take, submits the following to our readers, hoping for a better understanding of the question and its relation to our publishing interests.

In 1899 Conference decided "that advertisements in the GOSPEL MESSENGER be limited to books and papers of a moral and religious character, and to such other notices as shall be necessary in carrying forward the interests of the church."

This query was interpreted to mean that the interests of the church demand that school and railway advertisements appear in the MESSENGER. Members could thus select the best and cheapest routes to Conference. This on the principle that such things as are right for Christians to purchase and use may, without injury, be known of morals or ethics, be advertised in religious papers. The sound logic of this proposition is self-apparent.

Conference in 1903 allowed placing appropriate advertisements in our enlarged Sunday-school paper. Here the foregoing rule is applied and is found to work well.

At the Des Moines Conference (1908), the Brethren Publishing House was instructed to eliminate all medical advertisements from its various publications. This most sweeping decision makes no difference between the good and the bad, and sets aside the rule referred to. It forbids the notices of an old family medicine, based on the formula of an eminent physician and an honored member of the church,—a remedy in use among our people for more than a century, and advertised in our publications for more than half that length of time, even when our sainted Brother Quinter was in charge of our publications.

Thus far the General Mission Board will have the decision of Conference as a guide in dealing with the papers referred to it. One of these asks for a decision "preventing any real estate advertising from appearing in the literature of the Church of the Brethren." It was explained that the Standing Committee felt that such a decision would be too sweeping, hence it was referred to the Mission Board.

The other query touched the propriety of advertising certain Sunday-school supplies and might have been sent direct to our Sunday-school Editor or to the Board, without burdening the Conference.

If it be right to advertise right things, then it is presumed that if a brother has a farm to sell and it is right for him to sell it, and for some one else to buy, no principle of right is violated in making that fact known through our publications. And if an honest man, engaged in selling real estate, has good land to sell, it is also right for him to advertise the fact. This same principle runs through every phase of business. It is not a violation of God's law honestly to describe good things in an advertisement in our church papers. For such advertising all our publications are open at the present time except the GOSPEL MESSENGER. This is closed to all save religious books and papers, our schools, and railway advertisements for our Conference.

There seems to be a tendency to pass judgment on all land advertisers because some are dishonest. This is unjust and unscriptural. "Judge not, that ye be not judged," said the Master. We shall be judged with the same kind of judgment we render. If you taste the fruit of a tree and it is sour, you may know the tree. This is not judging; it has passed into the realm of knowledge and fact. But if you should taste the fruit of one tree in a five-acre orchard, and, finding it sour and unpalatable, declare all the orchard sour apple trees, you would be judging and you might be wrong. So, if a man proves dishonest, you may know it. But don't condemn others in the same line of endeavor. Because some men prove unfaithful to Christ and the church, is no reason why all should be condemned and be refused recognition as honest men.

When the query, eliminating medical advertisements from our publications was being discussed, the writer said if the query passed Annual Meeting, it would involve a loss of several thousand dollars to the Publishing House. The loss has come and is larger than was then anticipated. The profits of the House have been growing less for several years, due, in part, to loss of advertising. Increased cost of living necessitated increase in the wage scale, which, in some cases, has more than doubled, and higher prices paid for paper and supplies and for machinery all enter into the problem as important factors. While wages have doubled, and the price of materials advanced, our publications have been held down to the old price, and this at an actual loss on some of them. The Almanac has been sent out free, postage prepaid, and this was only made possible by admitting suitable advertisements.

The Board has to face the problem from a business standpoint. It is not desirable to advance the price of the papers, but if the legitimate sources of income are interfered with, the price must be increased or a deficit faced. It is not to be imagined, for a moment, that the plea is to advertise wrong things for the sake of income. It took years and years of self-sacrifice, and the expenditure of much money to build up the publishing interest of the church and place it on a paying basis. This was done, and then it was turned over to the church. It has been paying the church well. It will continue to do so, if properly managed, and if too many cooks do not spoil the broth.

Some years ago I visited the Studebaker wagon works at South Bend, Ind. After going over the grounds, I met Mr. Clem. Studebaker, the president of the company, and said to him: "You have an immense establishment here. It must have taken much hard work to build it up." "Yes!" was the quick reply, "but it takes a good deal more to keep it up." The truth and wisdom of that statement have never been forgotten and it is applicable to our publishing business today.

If the writer had control of the publishing business today, he would add a four-page cover to the GOSPEL MESSENGER and use three pages for clean, safe advertisements. He would admit no advertisement without careful investigation, and then guarantee everything advertised to be as represented. This would bring a handsome and honest income to the House, would arrest the downward tendency of the income and would be helpful to the readers of the MESSENces in calling their attention to the best and cheapest articles they must purchase. Others do not see this, perhaps, as I do, but all are invited to look at this question fairly, and lay aside preconceived notions. Where, in the realm of religion, morals or ethics, would you find ground for condemning such a project?

The Home.

In Three Parts.—Part Two.

The Duty of Parents to Their Children.—These duties may be grouped under three heads: First, love; second, training; third, control, or government.

First of all, it is the duty of parents to love their children. As parental affection is the foundation and measure of care for the children, and, at the same time, the most powerful influence over them for good, it becomes the duty of parents to love their children in the purest, most unselfish manner. Its origin and growth are found in the nature and constitution of the family itself. It springs from the mutual love and affection of the parents. It is full as this is full; It is wanting as this is wanting. It springs also from the relation of children to their parents. The one is the offspring of the other,—"bone of their bone and flesh of their flesh," as the Word puts it. And Paul declares that "no man ever yet hated his own flesh." The love of parent to offspring, within the entire animal kingdom, is a universal law. But it must be confessed, with shame, that it is more perfectly developed in some brutes than in some people. Again, it springs from the innocent helplessness of children. Of all living things, there is none so helpless at birth. This makes the parent its natural refuge, and this condition is probably the strongest influence to engender parental affection. The parents, then, who fail to love their children, fail in the first and greatest duty they owe them.

On this principle, parents owe their children birth under the most favorable conditions possible, and a welcome advent into the world. This means, first of all, a state of willingness, on the part of husbands and wives, to become real parents. The propagation of the race is one of the prime purposes of marriage; and unwillingness to endure the suffering and bear the cares and responsibilities, incident to the state of parentage, should be sufficient reason to live unmarried. And yet this is not after God's purpose, for he intends all who are of normal condition, to marry.

In the olden time, before society became so perverted, childlessness was considered a reproach to the married. To be childless was the source of the greatest grief; and, on the other hand, the promise of children was the greatest joy. They prayed for children; barren wives prayed for children. Hannah, that queen of mothers, agonized in prayer that the Lord would give her a man child, and the Lord heard her and gave her Samuel. What would you expect in such a case? What would you expect of the child? Hannah's silent, quivering lips, in agonizing prayer before the throne of God, discloses her character as a mother; and the explanation of Samuel's goodness and greatness is found in the great heart that made her lips tremble. Here is a typical mother, and here is a typical child.

How is it now? Wives have not ceased to pray, but, unfortunately, they pray on the wrong side of the question. And this purpose, not to be a mother, has led to all devices of mischief,—high crimes and misdemeanors. All sorts of foul play to thwart nature are resorted to. There is no let up, this side of murder. Infanticide is the monster sin of the age. France, it is said, leads the world, and the other nations are following in hot haste. No wonder the hospitals are flooded with sickly women, and graves are multiplied by their death at middle age. And what can be expected of children born under such conditions? If a child comes into the world against all sorts of contriving by its parents, to prevent its coming,—against all manner of opposition by those who should be first to welcome it and bid it God speed, —what are the chances of such a child? Is not its life half blighted before it begins? The mother of Jesse James said that for months before the boy was born, she thirsted for blood. Jesse is the result. He shows how the conditions of the mother during pregnancy affects the child.

Wives are mostly to blame for this unfortunate condition, because they must bear heavier burdens than men in parentage; but too many husbands sympathize and coöperate fully with this foul business, and thus help to push it on.

It is the duty of parents to train their children. Since the work of life demands training and preparation, and since the highest character is reached under the most careful training, it is the duty of parents to train up their children in the ways of the best manhood and womanhood; and since the powers with which man is endowed are many, the training of the child should be such as will best develop its powers,—physical and intellectual, moral and spiritual. Parents, then, after they have done their best for their children in birth, are under obligations to do all in their power for their development in body and mind and heart.

It is to be definitely pointed out that to parents belong chiefly the duty and responsibility of caring for and the training of their children. This duty can not be transferred to maids and nurses, or teachers even. It is a duty that God has put upon parents. The Word speaks to parents, not to the parents' hirelings and servants, saying, "Bring up your children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord," and it is a violation of the higher instincts of fatherhood and motherhood to attempt to shift the care of the children to irresponsible parties, in order that the parents may spend their time in idleness and pleasure, or in fondling birds and dogs and so forth. It is well to be kind to the birds, the dogs, the cats, etc., but children, I insist, are of more value than these. They demand our attention and love, first of all.

These words are not to imply that teachers are not to be employed. Teachers should be employed. It is doubtful whether any parents are sufficient unto all the requirements of training. But the thought that teachers, or others, shall be expected to do the duty of parents to their children, must not be entertained for a moment.

What is training? Is it merely to teach, to impart knowledge? Not so. It is not enough to show children the right and wrong of things. They must have this, of course. It is the first principle of training. But it, of itself, is not training. Training involves also the idea of the principles taught being applied to the character of the one taught. For instance, one trained in politeness, not only knows what it is to be polite, but be practices what he knows. One trained in honesty, not only knows the rules of honesty, but he exemplifies them. So in general. The trained child first knows, then it builds its knowledge into character and conduct. This is training.

The purpose of training is to throw around the child a wall of protection to strengthen the right and to suppress the evil,—to eradicate it, in fact. It is to give the child the greatest strength to live the right, and the greatest power to resist the evil. The test of training is right conduct by the child, when it is out of the sight of its parents. The first essential to parents, to train their children, is to be trained themselves.

Right here is one of the most alarming conditions in society today. Untrained, ungodly men and women plunge recklessly into marriage, and from marriage into fatherhood and motherhood, when they, in many cases, have no higher idea of marriage than lust, and no higher idea of children than that they are the necessary burdens of lives of lust; and what, I say, may be expected as results? The cry ought to be raised in tones of thunder, all over the land, for holiness in marriage and consecrated fatherhood and motherhood. Here is the foundation of all reforms. So long as society is corrupt in its foundation, how is it to be reformed without correcting the seat of the trouble? How is the church to be purged of its greed of gain, excesses and pleasure, passion and appetite, if the home, which makes the church, is not purged?

All proper government is the union of love and authority. Love alone will not do. Authority alone will not do. They must be blended, so that love tempers authority, and authority stiffens love. The rod is the symbol of authority (Prov. 13: 24). He who uses it, loves his child. Here are love and authority, and the good judgment of parents is expected to combine them in the right proportion. It is bad not to use the rod; it is dreadful to use it alone, without love to soften and sweeten it. These elements, combined in the proper proportion, make the perfect family government. The rarest wisdom is needed in framing it, and the greatest grace in administering it.

Church Federation Tested.

A minister of one of the denominations—a man of fine ability—undertook to test the church federation theory in a town where there are four churches. He started a revival, preaching on themes that appealed to the members of all churches alike. The whole town became interested. All the preachers dismissed their own services, attended, and pronounced the preaching splendid. After the evangelist got his work well under way, he began delivering some carefully-prepared addresses on New Testament doctrines. Then you ought to have seen how the other preachers got busy. They not only quit coming, but they went from house to house, persuading their members to refuse to listen to such misleading preaching. This shows about how much there is in the popular plea for federation. So long as the preacher will steer clear of doctrine it is all right, but the moment he begins talking about the divinity of Christ, the union of all churches on the Gospel, faith, repentance and baptism, as conditions of pardon, the New Testament form of baptism, or the New Testament ordinances, he can look for the leaders in other churches to withdraw from his services. They want federation, but they do not want it on Gospel grounds. All the preaching must be gauged by those who believe and practice the least, and not by those who work up to the highest standard in their plea and practice. Observation, so far, shows that in the federation movement there is nothing whatever for the Brethren.

Preaching in Cities.

The tent meetings in Lincoln, Nebr., conducted by Bro. S. E. Thompson, have created considerable interest. He delivered an address on baptism that was listened to with marked attention. To many of the people trine immersion is new, but they see that it is in perfect accord with the formula given in Matt. 28: 19. At first it is hard for them to understand that triple immersion is the oldest form of baptism known to the Christian church, and that of each one hundred persons immersed, the world over, at least ninety of them are dipped three times. To most people in the cities these facts are simply startling. The man who is dipped but once at his baptism does not know that single immersion, as a practice in the church, can not be traced any farther than A. D. 360. Such information, along with the importance of obeying the whole Gospel, puts honest men and women to thinking. It is unfortunate that we do not have enough active agencies to reach the people all over this country with our New Testament plea.

Isolated Members.

To isolated members, who wonder why the Gospel is not preached by the Brethren in their community, we should like to suggest, that possibly they may not be doing their part in the interest of spreading the truth. They should write the District Mission Board of their territory, stating where they are located, and their desire to have a preacher sent. Then they should talk to their neighbors, distribute literature, make arrangements for meetings and help to pay at least a part of the expenses. Not only so, but their lives should be such as to commend the doctrine they teach. As representatives of the Church of the Brethren they should be living epistles, read and known of all men, women and children in the community. They should make of themselves intelligent, active, devout and consistent representatives. Where this is done it will not be found difficult to build up a congregation.

LOGAN GROVE, NEBR.

We are still trying to hold the fort as best we can. While we are few in number, yet we have an interesting Sunday-school each Sunday, with Sister Andrews as superintendent. We have also preaching services. While our congregations are not large, yet we feel encouraged, and are determined to press onward. The country is thinly settled and there is room for many more who may want cheap homes here. This is a splendid stock country, a healthful climate, and better water can hardly be found. Considering the dry season, our crops are very good. We should be glad to have members come and settle among us, as we need reinforcement. We wish to take this country for the Lord and the church. Once a month we have services west of Cody Lake, where we have some members. Here is a splendid interest, and the hope for good results. We have also promised to preach in the Henninger neighborhood once a month, where we have several members. There are several other calls for services and only one to fill the appointments. Who will come to our assistance? Let us hear from some.

HOW WE SPENT THE FOURTH.

A few of us, brethren and sisters, wended our way to a beautiful grove near a flowing spring, close to the grand old Des Moines River. Brethren B. F. Buckingham, Earl Brubaker and Elrod were our committee on program. It being almost noon by the time we arrived there, we had lunch and ice cream.

Our program was rendered in the afternoon. Bro. Earl Brubaker was moderator. After songs and prayer, Eld. W. I. Buckingham gave us a good talk. Then we had a few recitations and songs. One recitation by Bro. J. Brubaker, "Boys, We Want You," could not help but impress every one present with the great need of boys in the Master's service.

There were three men tenting at that place, who work in the timber. They were very kind, and showed us every courtesy possible. At noon we invited them to our feast of good things. They came and ate with us, and then returned to enjoy the program. At the close of our exercises we sang, "God be with you till we meet again," bade the tenters good-bye and turned our faces homeward.

Sister Miller, of India, was here July 6 and 7, and gave us two good talks, which were interesting and instructive. We surely appreciated her coming. At the close a collection of $13.77 was taken. We were glad to have Brethren Homer Caskey and Fred McLellan, of Bethany, with us too. We will have our Sunday-school Secretary with us Aug. 4. We expect Bro. Galen B. Royer to be with us the week before District Meeting. Jennie Alexander.

THE TWIN DISTRICTS.

More than a half century ago the consecrated members on the great Pacific Coast were organized into the "State District of Oregon." Many and extreme were the inconveniences and hardships endured by these pioneers in their faithful efforts to "lead the flock of God."

In the process of years, by the marvelous generalship of the Holy Spirit, the work grew to remarkable proportions, developing into the great District of the Northwest. Which, we are told, has no peer among the church Districts of America, surpassing many others not only in vastness of territory, but, particularly, in effectual mission work.

So marvelous has been the growth that it seemed good to direct a division of the old District, and organize, separately, the three States, Oregon, Washington, and Idaho (with a part of Montana), into separate working forces. The chief aim of this division was that more thorough and effectual work might be accomplished.

July 12, 1911, a joint Conference was very fittingly held, in Oregon, the mother District on the coast, in the Coquille church, to complete the division of the District; also to direct the segregation of properties. This was effectually accomplished.

Thus twin Districts were born to the mother District, and now Washington and Idaho launch out upon the functions of early childhood. The exact data are not at hand, but we believe that we are safe in stating that either of the new Districts has now a stronger working force than had the original District of Oregon at its organization.

Two days later the delegates from the Oregon churches assembled at the same place, to organize as the "District of Oregon." There was great unanimity of sentiment and oneness of purpose. A spirit of forbearance and manifest Christian affection showed itself in fruits of righteousness from the regenerate heart.

Our Mission Board is made up as follows: Eld. Henry Brubaker, Newburg, Oregon, Chairman; Eld. Thomas Barklow, Myrtle Point, Oregon, Secretary; M. C. Lininger, Ashland, Oregon, Treasurer. All are live-wires, and fully deserve the effectual prayer of the churches.

The District of Oregon, comprising an area of 94,460 square miles with a population of nearly 500,000 souls, has now a working force of 356 members, including nine elders. It is organized into nine churches, well distributed along the coast side of the territory, leaving the eastern part of the State entirely unoccupied. Though this District has long been established it is, as yet, but a mission field. It is a very promising field, however, and fully merits the fostering care of the General Mission Board and the prayers and aid of the church at large.

Ashland, Oregon, July 20. J. G. Miller.

THE GREAT QUESTION.

What will you do with Christ? He is now on trial in your soul. The final judgment of his case rests with you alone. Whether that I might say some one in the scale of your judgment in his favor! I have tried this Christ, and know him to be true. I have found his promises more than fulfilled. His sufficiency has been greater than my needs. The Word of Life I bring you is what I have handled, and I know it is able to make the humblest life of sternest toil a song of God.

What will you do with Christ? This is the question that is affecting every being in the world today. It is the question I hear when I place my ear upon the earth, and hear the steady march of coming revolution. It is a question which will answer every problem of your life. It is a question I bring you from the Blessed Word of God. It is the question that is borne to you with every call of himself, and every cry of the suffering. It is the question that your science is writing on your brains, and that stares at you from every printed page, and leaps in every pulse-beat and appeals-to every instinct of human nobility. It is a question that gathers an eternity into every moment, and invests the smallest deed and idlest word with an infinite significance. It is the question you will decide today, whether you would or not. You can not escape the question nor avoid the answer. Before the night enfolds you in its rest, you will have either crucified or enthroned the Christ.

What will you do with him? O, brother, come and clasp hands with me and let us follow this slain yet living Christ in the faith that is coming to the earth for God, making it new for man. There will be conflicts and sorrows, and as you come to know Christ, you will be dumb before the visions you get of your uncleanness of heart and selfishness of action. You will sometimes cry in anguish that it is not meet that Christ's holy name be on your lips; and nothing will so stagger your understanding as his willingness to use you. But when the day of battle is done, and the night of rest comes on, we shall fall into the sweet sleep of victors who were of good cheer amidst life's tribulations, who scorned the world's defeats, beat down its demons of doubt, trampled upon its dragons of lust, made servants of its sorrows, and pressed on through the illusions of prosperity up the heights of faith, where the Son of God broke the day. And when the morning breaks over our souls, we shall awake, satisfied in Christ's likeness, crowned with his righteousness! Then the heat of the conflict will be cooled in the dew of the morning, our scars touched with a sacred glory, and our heartaches healed forever! From the throne that rules the deathless land shall come forth the Lamb of God to feed us with the heavenly manna and lead soul to soul by the still waters of an untroubled life.

MINISTERIAL MEETING REPORT.

The regular Ministerial Meeting of the Brethren church of North Dakota and Canada met in the Salem house, Newville, N. Dak., July 12. A large delegation was in attendance, nearly all the churches of the District being represented. Never was the Ministerial Meeting more enthusiastically attended than this year. The activities of the day opened early and in dead earnest, with Eld. D. F. Landis in the chair.

Each speaker responded, and acted well his part. Addresses were made on various phases of the ministerial problem. Some of these are: "Best Reason Non-church Goer?" "Pastoral Visit a Factor in Church Discipline," "Factors That Lead to a Prosperous Church" and kindred topics were discussed, bringing much blessing to us all. The entire forenoon and afternoon sessions were filled with good things, which were an uplift in every respect.

Able and timely speeches were made by Bro. A. Hutchison, of Kansas, Brethren J. Heckman and D. D. Culler, of Illinois, and Brethren S. B. Miller and M. Beardorff, of Iowa. Others from a distance also gave very appropriate and helpful addresses. To them and all visitors we extend our right hand of fellowship across the plains and say, "Come again," for they were all an inspiration to us by their lively and impressive talks.

The many good speeches were interspersed by stirring songs of praise to God, who, we believe, was with us, bringing cheer and comfort to all. May our Eternal Father help us to go forward on the way that grows brighter!

Minot, N. Dak., July 20. J. M. Myers, Clerk.

TO THE CHURCHES OF NEBRASKA.

The work at our mission points is going forward, and the membership generally is growing in the spiritual life.

In Logan County, near Gandy, where a church was organized about a year ago, we have now located a minister. This is a new country. The members are homesteaders. With time, toil and patience, and the Lord's blessings, we believe a good work can be done at this place.

In Omaha the workers are very busy, and with a growing membership are pressing forward in the Lord's work. They have arranged for holding tent meetings daily, during the month of August, in a campaign against sin and for the saving of souls. The workers desire that the membership, especially in Nebraska, remember them daily at the throne of grace, during these meetings.

Turkey Creek, a mission point, northeast of Edison, has a little band of members who are laboring for the faith of the Gospel, with the prospects of a promising future ahead. They are planning to build a meetinghouse in the near future. Their greatest need now is a resident minister who, with his family, would live on a farm among them, and help to build up the work. They are willing to give some help to such a man.

The Pioneer church, in the west end of the State, has an active, growing membership. They have built a meetinghouse in the new town of Enders. At their recent communion they elected an energetic young brother to the ministry.

The Father's blessings upon faithful, persistent labor are strongly in evidence in this congregation, and your assistance, given here in this part is well accounted for. They expect to carry forward the work of the church without any further financial help from the Mission Board, providing we pay the balance due them from last year.

To the churches that are in arrears to the Mission Board, on the pledge given at last District Meeting, we would say, We are needing the money for the support of our workers who are making sacrifices and laboring so faithfully for the Lord and the church in helping to gain souls for the kingdom. Please let there be a quick and liberal response all along the line!

Kearney, Nebr., July 17. A. J. Nickey, Chairman.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL CONVENTION.

Tuesday morning, July 4, the Brethren of the Ray, N. Dak., Medicine Lake, Mont., and Williston, N. Dak., churches met at the Williston churchhouse, ten miles west of the city, for a joint Sunday-school Convention.

These three congregations join together and each Fourth of July meet at one of the three places and hold their Convention. I hope I can live to see the day when all churches will have something along this line on the Fourth, to keep our young people away from the cities and towns. How much better we can show our patriotism in this way than by following the many worldly pleasures that are so much in vogue on this great day!

Bro. O. A. Myer was elected as moderator for the day, and the writer as clerk. After the organization Bro. Myer gave an address of welcome and Bro. E. S. Petry, of Berthold, gave a response. Some very interesting features were brought out on different subjects, as "Every Church Member a Sunday-school Worker," "Possibilities of the Temperance Movement through the Sunday-school," "For Whom Is the Sunday-school?" "It Is Said, Any Man Can Find Time or Can Take Time for Whatsoever He Feels He Must Do in This World. How Can We Get This Feeling as Regards Our Sunday-school?"

These subjects were very ably talked on. Some of the speakers were not present but their places were well filled by others. The Children's Hour was conducted by Sisters Keltner and Myer, and deserves honorable mention. Some very good songs, readings, recitations and exercises were rendered. How appropriate if every church of the Brotherhood would have a children's program on the Fourth of July! I am sure it would be a great influence and help in keeping the children to think more of their dear Master, and less of the many earthly pleasures.

The Round Table was conducted by Bro. E. S. Petry, our State Sunday-school Secretary. Many helpful thoughts were given on this part of the meeting. As our meeting closed, many were made to say that they enjoyed the services.

It is not known as yet at which place our Convention will be held next year. May God's blessing rest on all his dear people!

Harvine R. Cookson.

These talks are being given in a good spirit and are very kindly received. This was an important meeting and was well attended. Much business was transacted. The church will not hold an Aug. meeting as was received. Our harvest meeting of will be held at Troutville Aug. 5. A business meeting of the Botetourt Missionary and Sunday-school Circle was held the close of the council. We are glad to have letters read from our missionaries, Sister Ella Kinsel and Sister Ida Miller, members—Jennie Crumpacker, Roanoke, Va., July 27.

Christiansburg.—Our church met in council with Bro. W. H. Ralf our elder, presiding. Very little business came before the meeting. Our council visit was opened. The visiting brethren were instructed to ask each member concerning the reading of the bread and passing of the cup, so that we can decide at our next meeting whether or not the sisters in our congregation are to break the bread as do our brethren. Bro. W. H. Naff preached for us Sunday at 11 A. M. Our church met in council again Sept. 16, at 2:30 P. M. We are re-preaching here every Sunday except the 4th Sunday, by some of the brethren. One dear brother has accepted Christ as his Savior. Bro. C. D. Naff expects to preach for us the first Saturday evening in August, and on Sunday at 11 A. M.—W. L. Spangler, Dayton, Va., July 24.

Mine Run.—By vote of Eld. I. A. Miller and wife came to us and filled the regular preaching appointment. Bro. G. W. Chambers preached on Monday and Tuesday nights.—On Wednesday Eld. I. N. H. Beahm and Sister Pearl Shaffer, of Belleville, Va., came in our midst and conducted a very spiritual revival meeting. The meeting closed with a love feast July 25. Thirty-four surrounded the Lord's tables. Eld. S. A. Garver officiated. Several visiting brethren were present. One brother was restored to fellowship, and four young brethren were baptized. One awaits the call and others near the fold.—R. A. Arnna Britton, R. D. 1, Rhoadesville, Va., July 27.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Shiloh.—Our church met in council June 17. In the absence of our elder, Bro. W. Quilter, of Chicago, presided. Brethren J. E. Shaffer and Noah Fike were elected delegates to District Meeting; Bro. John Hovatter and Sister Lizzie Shaffer, alternates. Meeting on 22 in 3 is called council. Our elder, Bro. Oded Hamstead, presided. Considerable business came before the council and was disposed of. The trustees are to repair the church roof, and a collection of $8.55 was taken up for the same. We decided to call for the visiting brethren that were present. We have an interesting Sunday-school, although our membership is small.—Dora Auvil, Valley Furnace, W. Va., July 28.

FINAL NOTICE REGARDING THE DEBATE.

The arrangements for the debate are now about completed. The prospect is for a large attendance. The place of the debate being in the country, the lodging committee will be taxed to its utmost. I therefore ask that those coming from the near by congregations bring some comforters. We can furnish plenty of room in which to arrange additional beds.

Those coming by rail will follow the directions given on page 443 of Gospel Messenger issue of July 15.

There will be a sermon each forenoon by visiting ministers.

LORDSBURG COLLEGE, CALIFORNIA.

While the schools of the church in the East are accomplishing much for the cause of the Master, in preparing young men and women for lives of usefulness, we want it known that Lordsburg College, the most western school of the church, is doing her part in training our young people and preparing them for the conquest of right against wrong.

During the past three years the school has grown in number of students, in equipment and in efficiency. It has advanced in educational standing to such an extent that now the school is doing accredited work. All students finishing the regular Academic or Preparatory Courses at Lordsburg College may enter the State University or any of the State schools upon recommendation.

The Bible work at Lordsburg is especially strong, helpful, and practical. The moral influence is good, much above the average, because of the town being kept clean, and free from the evil influences of the saloon, the pool-room and the saloon, neither of which is tolerated in Lordsburg. We also feel that the strong, loyal membership of the Lordsburg church, numbering over three hundred, is a means of helpfulness that ought to be considered a drawing card. Such it is considered by the student and parent who desires an environment that tends to righteousness.

Three years ago the enrollment was sixty-six. Two years ago it was eighty-eight and last year it increased to one hundred and fourteen,—a gain of almost 80 per cent in two years. The present outlook is that the per cent of gain will be greater for the coming year. Like all other schools, we have our hindrances, and the enemy is at work, sometimes even using church members to advance his cause as he has always done. Only recently a report was circulated that Lordsburg College would not open this year. Indeed, it is beyond our comprehension how the devil can secure the active agency of professed Christians.

PANTHER, IOWA.

Sister Sadie Miller recently gave us two instructive discourses on India, which were much enjoyed by all. At the close of the second service a collection of over $35 was taken for the work in India.

July 16 Bro. John A. Robinson, of Muscatine, Iowa, preached an acceptable sermon in the morning. He is visiting the churches in the interest of the Colored Mission, near Denver, Colo., and is also acting as District

Sunday-school Secretary. At 2 P. M. our Sunday-school rendered an interesting program pertaining to our work. In the evening we had a Christian Workers' program, followed by an able discourse by Bro. D. D. Culler, of Mt. Morris, Ill. We are always glad to have our ministering brethren call on us, and inspire us to do greater things for the Lord. A. M. Stine.

Adel, Iowa, July 16.

A FOURTH OF JULY ADDRESS.

July-'4 the following address was given by the writer:

When I think of the wonderful cost of this day to us, in the sacrifice of human lives, and the millions of dollars it has cost our American people, to purchase this great boon of American Independence, I think we should honor it with a godly reverence. But while we have been considering the cost in the sacrifice of human lives and money, shall we forget the widows and orphans, in their deep bereavement, that were made such by this hard-fought battle for liberty? Nay, verily!

How shall we best express our appreciation for the great value of this day? Shall we celebrate the achievements of our forefathers with the toy pistol, which is only paving the way for the revolver and its deadly missiles? Shall we make use of the toy firecracker, which naturally leads to the large cannon cracker, that will continue to maim and wound? Shall we rob the eye of its vision, leaving the unhappy victims in physical darkness, to grope their way, unguided by the light of the eye? Shall we not today, as a Christian people, rise up with one voice against the senseless method of celebrating this glorious day of liberty by the use of firecrackers, sham battles and cannons, which will but create the spirit of war in the rising generation, and which are in direct opposition to the great peace movement now on to among the nations?

How about our prayers for universal peace, while we go right on spending millions of dollars in building great warships, mounted with the deadly cannon? Which shall we do,—change our prayers or change our actions? Let us live according to our prayers, and take the money that is being put into warships and the maintaining of armies, and use it in the saving of souls, thus taking the world for Christ. Then we will have no further need of this useless expenditure in our nations. In 1908-1909 the United States spent $124,794,798 for military purposes. By teaching the doctrine of peace, as taught by Christ and the apostles in the New Testament, in our homes and in all of the churches, war would soon be a thing of the past. The home is God's first institution on earth. It is the foundation of all society, church and State, and upon the love and peace in the home depends the peace and welfare of our nation. Christ says: "I am the light of the world" (John 8: 12). Then we, Christians, are to be representatives of Christ in reflecting his life and light. We may be compared to candles, which are of various sizes and colors. They have no light of themselves. They must be lighted before they can be of any service in the way of giving light. One of these small candles would not make much of a show in a dark room, but a number of them would make a great deal of light, and help us through the dark places in life.

The small candles may represent the children. A child has been the means of converting the father. The larger the candle the greater the capacity, and the more light will be expected. As the children grow, we expect the light to be developed with the proper training and teaching.

As already referred to, there are candles of different colors,—some red, some green, and some blue. Now, these red, blue and green candles do not give any more light than a plain white one of the same size. Some people, especially children and youths, think because they can not afford to dress as fine as some others that they can not shine in society as well. That is all a mistake. Mr. A. W. Beecher said: "Man is rich or poor according to what he is; not according to what he has."

Did you ever see, in a costly home, on the mantel shelves, some nice large colored candles? They never give any light, for they never have been touched with fire. They are like some church people with their fine clothes and jewelry,—they go to church only when the weather suits them, when it is not too far, not too hot, not too cold, and not rainy. They are like the candle on the mantel,—just to look at. They appear beautiful painted and powdered as they are,—but, like the ornamental candle,—they give no light for Christ, for they have not been touched as yet with the fire of the Holy Ghost.

May the Lord speed the day when Micah 4: 3 shall literally be fulfilled, "They shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks: nation shall not lift up a sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." Jacob Witmore.

Portland, Texas, July 20.

FAREWELL.

The word "farewell" means much to every follower of Christ. It is a word used thousands of times every hour, and it will continue to be used to the end of time. It has been said: "The air is full of farewells to the dying, and mournings for the dead."

Recently we were seriously impressed, when, upon our arrival in a certain city, we were greeted by a tolling bell in some church tower. Surely, this is a world of changes! Friends love to meet each other, but they soon say farewell again, not knowing whether they will again clasp hands on this side of the river of death. Every year, at our Annual Meeting, many say farewell to one and dear ones, never to meet again. Even when a series of meetings is closed, how sad we feel to say farewell to the evangelist, not knowing whether we shall behold his face again.

We often think of our beloved missionaries who say farewell to their native country, and all their dear ones, and leave for a far-off country, across the deep, blue sea, to preach the Gospel's joyful sound, not knowing if they will ever meet again on earth. Such is this world. I am one of our faithful workers died in India, and went to his reward. There was a day when he said farewell to his dear ones, and to his native land. We all hoped that he would be spared to see his native land again, but God called him. The children of God, when leaving their friends, say farewell here below, but they hope to be reunited in a better world above.

Often children say farewell when they leave the parental home, and brothers and sisters, and also father or mother out of that home. On the other hand, friends have said farewell, and forty years thereafter have met again. What a glad meeting that was, after the long separation!

Many farewells have been spoken just as some dear one laid his head upon the pillow. How sad Christians feel when saying farewell to those who die in sin! That is a long farewell, for they will never meet again! How different with the true believer! As the weary pilgrim leaves this world, and says "farewell," he realizes that, after all, it is only a short farewell, for each child of God's children will meet again. Sometimes aged pilgrims have said, when they reached the eve of life:

"Farewell, vain world, I'm going home.
For Christ has called me, I must come."

What a glory it will be when we can leave this world in peace! We live in a world of sin and death. Many sad farewells are spoken here below! Let us look higher! There will be no sorrow in heaven. There will be no farewells spoken there. No parting song will be used there, and no death nor sorrow will ever enter there. When we say farewell, brethren and sisters, to our dear ones, let us remember that if we never meet again on the shores of mortality, we can surely meet in heaven where we will never have to speak the word, "farewell." Always put your trust in God! Edgar M. Hoffer.

Va., died in the bounds of the Lower East River congregation, July 18, 1911, aged 60 years, 4 months and 28 days. She was a consistent member of the Mennonite church. She leaves a kind husband and four children. She was a kind and loving mother and leaves many friends who mourn her departure. Services by Elders H. F. Caldwell and Henry Moyers. Interment in the Kimses Run churchyard.—Hattie B. Moyers, Dovesville, Va.

Neher, Bro. Noah G., born in Clark County, Ohio, in 1849, died at Lordsburg, Cal., June 22, 1911, aged 62 years. In 1864 he moved with his parents to Iowa, where he married Mary Blickenstaff in 1870. Twelve children were born to this union, six of whom preceded him. In 1880 he moved with his family to Nebraska, and in 1899 to McPherson, Kans. In 1904 they came to Lordsburg, Cal. His aged father, John Neher (now residing in Illinois), his wife, and six daughters survive him. Bro. Neher was a faithful and consistent member of the Church of the Brethren since 1871, and for many years was an active deacon. He was always ready and willing to do a large share of the Lord's work. Services in the Lordsburg church June 25, by Bro. E. Frantz, assisted by Bro. E. Murray. Interment in the Lordsburg Evergreen cemetery.—Grace H. Miller, Lordsburg, Cal.

Netzley, Bro. Henry, died at his home in Glendora, Cal., July 19, 1911, aged 74 years, 8 months and 28 days. In March, 1856, he was married to Catherine Brosaman, with whom he lived for fifty-five years. Seven children were born to this union. Five of them preceded him in death.—Mary White, Glendora, Cal.

Parsons, Bro. Thomas Frank, born in Morrow County, Ohio, May 25, 1885, died of tuberculosis, in the bounds of the Wenatchee congregation, Wash., July 18, 1911. March 28, 1904, he was married to Sister Florence Brown, at Stark, western Pa. She leaves a wife, one son and one daughter. Services by Bro. J. E. Smith, assisted by Bro. A. B. Peters. Interment in the Sunny Slope cemetery.—Pearl Smith, Wenatchee, Wash.

Peters, Thomas Sherron, infant son of Brother and Sister J. B. Peters, died near Wirtz, Va., June 19, 1911, aged June 19, 1911, aged 1 year, 6 months and 3 days. Services at the Brick church by Bro. J. W. Barnhart. Interment in the church cemetery.—Mae Barnhart, Wirtz, Va.

Ritenour, Bro. Benjamin, died in the bounds of the Hickory Grove congregation, Carroll Co., Ind., July 20, 1911, aged 70 years, 6 months and 22 days. His death was caused by an accident. He fell from the hay mow to the floor, which penetrated his bowels. He united with the Church of the Brethren two years ago. He was a faithful member. He leaves a wife, one little son, a father, six brothers and five sisters to mourn their loss. Services conducted in the Hickory Grove church. It was the largest funeral ever held here.—W. H. Eisenbise, Mount Carroll, Ill.

Shank, Bro. Noah, son of Daniel and Rebecca Shank, born in Rockingham County, Va., March 30, 1863, died July 12, 1911, aged 48 years, 3 months and 12 days. He leaves a wife, three sons, two daughters and his parents. He was a member of the Church of the Brethren about thirty years and was loved by all who knew him.—Services by Bro. D. F. Honeyman and the writer.—J. W. Fidler, Brookville, Ohio.

Steinbaker, Bro. John A., born in Muncie, Ind., Aug. 19, 1848, died July 23, 1911, aged 62 years, 11 months and 17 days. He united with the Church of the Brethren in the age of nineteen years. After four weeks of suffering he fell peacefully asleep. He leaves a wife, an aged mother and six children. One child preceded him. He served the church as deacon for thirty-seven years. Services by Bro. R. F. McCune, assisted by Bro. Reece Hillary.—Lizzie Steinbaker, Kans.

Wheeler, Martha Arustena, nee Shepful, born at Mühlhausen, Germany, Feb. 10, 1852, died March 20, 1911, aged 59 years, 1 month and 10 days. She came to America Sept. 3, 1871, and in 1873 married one brother Wheeler. In 1875, she was married to Ezra Wheeler. She leaves a husband, one brother, two sons and three daughters.—Services by Bro. She leaves her husband, daughter-in-law, father and mother, two brothers and two sisters. Services at Oakland church by Bro. T. H. Christian. Interment in Harris Creek cemetery.—Maria Miller, Bradford, Ohio.

WAR VERSUS PEACE

By Jacob Funk

The subject treated in this book is one which, more than any other, vitally concerns the civilized nations of the world, and the interest in it is growing. It is important that the people be intelligent on this subject. All need to know just the things that are herein given. The following subjects are taken up:

The Causes of War, The Evils of War, The Cost of War, A Brief History of the Peace Movement, and Ways of Advancing Peace.

The information concerning each of the above subjects is given in brief form and in a style which makes it interesting reading. It contains the cream of facts gleaned from many historical works, reports of conventions, published articles, etc.

The reading of the book gives one a clear vision of the horrors of war, the enormous cost in money and human life of it, and is sure to inspire greater zeal in the hearts of the people in the peace movement. It deserves a wide circulation.

GREAT EPOCHS of SACRED HISTORY

AND THE SHADOWS THEY CAST

By James M. Gray

Popular Bible studies on the first twelve chapters of Genesis, showing the Primeval History to present and coming events. The book is composed of lectures, originally spoken to large audiences in New York, Chicago and Grand Rapids and subsequently in Glasgow and Edinburgh. Following are the subjects of the six lectures:

1. When the World Was Made.
2. When Sin Entered the World.
3. When the First City Was Built.
4. When the Flood Came and Swept Them All Away.
5. When the First World-Monarchy Began.
6. When the Last World-Monarchy Shall Appear.

The content of the book is both historic and prophetic. Dr. Gray judges the future by the past. His lectures are based upon a thorough study of the Bible History and its obvious lessons for future generations. The pernicious teachings of the destructive critics and the fallacies of Darwinian evolution are unmercifully exposed. If you are a Bible reader you will appreciate this book; if you have not been interested in the Book of books, this will create a desire in your heart to read it.

Traits of Character

by

H. F. Kletting, A. M.
Author of "Progress of a Race"
and
E. L. Kletting, A. M.
Principal in Chicago Public Schools.

The book is divided into four parts: Part 1. Traits of Character Illustrated; Part 2. Married Manhood and Womanhood; Part 3. Married Manhood and Womanhood; Part 4. Sidelights.

In Part 1, the truths intended to be taught on the printed page by figure or anecdote, are rendered doubly impressive by the apt illustration appearing in connection therewith.

Part 2, in connection with their portraits, gives brief sketches of the lives of men and women who, by means of great and noble things accomplished, sometimes by making good use of high birth, wealth, good fortune, etc., and again in spite of adverse circumstances, stand out as beacon lights to those who follow them in life's pathway.

Part 3, in a similar way, shows how men and women of bright intellect and strong personality, but lacking in character, have marred their lives by yielding to temptation.

In Part 4, the truths are mostly illustrated in lighter vein, but none the less forcibly brought to the mind of the reader.

Character may be defined as that sum of qualities, which distinguishes one person from another. Some of these qualities, primarily, are doubtless hereditary, but all these qualities are susceptible of development and training. The influences which surround men's lives are character builders. Next to the influence of a living personage over the life of another is that of the books he reads.

The reader of this book will be sure to find it full of helpful material in the way of incident, biography and illustration.

The volume contains 363 pages neatly bound in cloth.

TWO CENTURIES OF THE CHURCH OF THE BRETHREN

No Brethren home library is complete without a copy of this book. Another book of equal value and interest to the present and future members of the church will not soon be published. In the twenty-five addresses delivered at the Bicentennial Conference, Des Moines, Iowa, 1908, are admirably portrayed the beginnings, persecutions, struggles, growth and development of the church in the Fatherland, Colonial America and the United States; what the church stands for, her higher spiritual life, her relation to the great moral issues of civilization; the work of women in the church; the Sunday school, missionary and educational work; her publications; the noble deeds and sacrifices of the pioneer preachers.

The book is printed in large type and contains 409 pages. The frontispiece shows the portraits of the five Brethren who were chosen by the Annual Conference of 1907 as the Bicentennial Program Committee, and the portraits of the brethren and sisters on the program are found in connection with their addresses, respectively.

A more fitting souvenir gift book from parents to child, or from friend to friend, would be hard to find.

DAYBREAK IN THE DARK CONTINENT

By WILSON S. HAYNOR

As a mission field, ripe for the harvest, Africa is now attracting unusual attention. This fact makes this book a timely one. Every one is better fitted than the author of this volume to furnish a correct estimate of the theme. His travels in Africa have been quite extensive. His book is a book for mission study classes. It contains many illustrations, pen sketches, chronological and statistical tables, charts and suggestions, two page map, with key and a concise index. It will do any one good to read it. We all ought to know more about the conditions of our fellow beings in heathen lands. This book is a great eye opener. 260 pages, cloth $7c.

NOTES NOT CLASSIFIED

Dry Fork.—Bro. C. S. Garber, of St. Joseph, Mo., closed a three weeks' series of meetings at this place July 28. He labored earnestly for us, and gave us excellent sermons. As a result thirteen were buried with Christ in baptism. Among the thirteen were five heads of families and workers, from sixty-seven to seventy-eight years of age. Others are near the kingdom.—Ida B. Wetzler, Jasper, Mo., July 31.

Big Creek.—July 23 Bro. Howard Michael, a student of Bethany Bible School, Chicago, Ill., came to our church and preached two sermons for us, which were much appreciated. Bro. Michael is a young minister. He and his wife oth attended school at Bethany.—George Ebbs, 713 East Main St., Olney, Ill., July 31.

Olympia.—Last Sunday morning Bro. W. Winder, of Covert, Kans., who is soliciting some of the western churches in behalf of the Colored School at Denver, was with us. In the evening Eld. A. L. Gorham, of Payette, Idaho, gave us a soul-stirring sermon. On the evening of the 25th we convened in monthly council. We reelected Bro. Secrist as our elder for another year.—Caddie Wagner, Olympia, Wash., July 27.

Motion.—The Sunday-school, Ministerial and District Meeting of Michigan will be held in the Motion church August 16 and 17. All parties going to said meeting will go to Harlan, locate on the main line of the Ann Arbor Railway. Trains going north arrive in Harlan 6:18 A. M., 12:09 P. M., and 4:32 P. M. Trains going south arrive at 10:15 A. M., 4:32 P. M. and 9:15 P. M. All parties going via Pere Marquette Railway, will change at Owosso Junction. Those going via Manistee and Northeastern Railway will change at Copemish. Those going via Grand Rapids and Indiana Railway will change at Cadillac. The churchhouse is nearly one-half mile from the depot. There will be teams and wagons to convey persons and baggage to the church. Bring your Hymnal along.—C. H. Beardorff, R. D. 2, Copemish, Mich., July 31.

Wikel.—Bro. C. E. Eller, of Salem, Va., came to our place July 8. He delivered ten able sermons. The congregations were broad and deep, and touched the hearts of many that came to hear him. One was restored, and we hope that others are counting the cost. We feel much encouraged and built up much good can be done at this place in the near future.—Ellen M. Wikel, Wiker, W. Va., July 23.

Hylton.—The first revival services held at this place, near Glade, W. Va., were conducted by Bro. Miller, of Salem, Va., proved to be a fruitful series of meetings for a new point. Eight were brought into the fold by confession and baptism. There are now sixteen members at this place, and we hope that some of the Brethren may come to our help in the work here. The outlook for a revival seems to be quite encouraging.—Martha A. Hylton, Glade, W. Va., July 24.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

Owing to the breaking out of cholera in Italian ports, it will be necessary to abandon our proposed trip to Palestine this fall, and those contemplating the trip will probably feel like giving up the trip until a year later, as the cholera is so bad that Bro. J. E. Miller, President of Mt. Morris College, has not ventured to go further south than Naples, giving up the Palestine and Egyptian part of his tour. Already several cases of cholera have occurred at both Boston and New York, these being cases where persons were exposed at some of the Italian ports, or on ships from those ports.

ROOT RIVER CHURCH, MINNESOTA.

July 23 the Lord sent us two showers. For weeks the earth had been parched and dry. The growing crops gave signs that unless the windows of heaven were opened soon they could not repay the farmer for his toil. This made some of the people murmur and complain. Others said, We don't have rain. So, while both the complainers and the trustful were sleeping, the growing crops watered by this refreshing shower, and to the pleasure of those of them were awakened. As they awoke and saw the sunlight of a new Sabbath Day, they discovered that God had heard them all. Some sat down and wept for joy, and gave its value to their growing fields, and did not get through until after church time. Others said: "Let us go up to the house of the Lord and there pay our vows." Which one was I?

The other shower was one of spiritual blessing in Christ Jesus, for at the close of our evening services six were baptized into Christ,—a father and mother, a young man and three young ladies. This shower, like the other one, came gently and quietly, for there was no revival service in progress. It will be a good day for all our churches when we shall get more apostolic, for we read that at that time "the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved." This latter shower brought joy to many hearts. It gave new courage and strength to the busy toiler in Christ's service.

Several weeks ago Bro. Zimmerman, of Waterloo, Iowa, was with us in revival meetings and encouraged us greatly by his well-chosen words. At that time two young men were baptized. These recent converts, along with the seven young men and women that united with the church at the beginning of the year, make the work at Root River look very promising.

I am planning to give some Bible work during the coming fall and winter, both at home and elsewhere. May the Lord continue to do for us exceedingly abundant, above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us, unto whom be glory in the church by Christ Jesus! J. F. Souders.

Preston, Minn., July 24.

DISTRICT MEETING OF NORTH DAKOTA, EASTERN MONTANA AND WESTERN CANADA.

The fifteenth meeting of this District was held in the Salem congregation July 11 to 13. In connection with it were the Ministerial, Sunday-school and various other meetings. The organization of the District Meeting was effected by the retiring officers, resulting in the selection of Bro. D. F. Landis as Moderator and Bro. D. M. Shorb as Reading Clerk. Quite a number of papers, queries, reports, resolutions and items of general interest came to the meeting. No papers were sent to Annual Meeting. Bro. D. F. Landis represents the District on Standing Committee of 1912.

A query looking toward the advisability of establishing, in the District, a home for the infirm and poor aged members, was passed, and a committee was appointed to comply with the purport of the paper.

The reports of the Treasurer and officers of other Boards were encouraging and show that careful and persistent work is being done. These reports were approved and appreciated. At the Mission Band Meeting, held on the evening of July 12, Bro. Geo. W. Hilton gave a splendid address. An offering amounting to $87.02 was taken.

In connection with this meeting it was also decided to support Bro. Paul Mohler and family on the mission field of France. Much interest was taken in this, and it is looked upon as a gracious privilege by the District to support them.

The report of the Secretary of "Ministers' Reading Circle" showed work being done. This should serve as an inspiration to all of the ministers to do more reading in the year to follow.

A splendid spirit prevailed during the entire meeting. It was one of the very best yet held in the District.

The precious and valuable aid rendered by visiting brethren, Andrew Hutchison, Moses Dreyfuss, D. D. Culler, John Heckman, S. B. Miller, and Paul Mohler, was very much enjoyed and helped much in the meetings.

The District Meeting for 1912 is to be held in the Surrey congregation. J. H. Brubaker, Clerk.

Ellison, N. Dak.

Finger Posts on Life's Highway

Showing How to Succeed in Life

By JOHN T. DALE

A new book, full of pointers which point in the right direction. A book for the young, the middle aged and the old.

The purpose of the author, in gathering the material, during many years, was to assist those who are striving to gain character, intellectual power, business success, and merited esteem of their fellowmen. Out of a long and varied experience he has been able to collect into this volume more than one hundred articles on that many different subjects, touching human life from almost every possible angle. It is not a novel nor a story, nor yet a long and dry treatise upon abstract subject, but a collection of articles on everyday topics, written in language and style easy to be understood, making the points so clear that the way of a truly successful and happy life is more easily found. The book abounds in words of wisdom, caution and warning.

We have great hopes for the sale of this book, knowing that it will appeal to all classes with equal force, and be the means of accomplishing good wherever it goes. Should any of our readers be interested in taking an agency for it, write us at once. We can offer liberal commission. The book contains 620 pages, bound in cloth. Illustrated. Will be sent to any address, postpaid, for $1.50.

THE GOSPEL MESSENGER

"SET FOR THE DEFENSE OF THE GOSPEL."—Phil. 1: 17.

Vol. 50. (Old Series Vol. 89.) Elgin, Ill., August 12, 1911. No. 32.

AROUND THE WORLD

The Laity Aroused in Germany.

Germany, the fountainhead of Materialism, Rationalism, and Liberalism, is now facing an uprising of far-reaching and important dimensions. Many of the so-called religious leaders have gone so far in preaching their loose religious views as to arouse the laity as they have not been stirred since the days of Luther. A laymen's association has been formed which aims, by every means possible, to curb the pernicious tendencies of the liberalists, and to promote, in every way, the inviolability of the Holy Scriptures. When the leaders of religious thought so far depart from the faith that the laity is compelled to take the stand assumed by the people above referred to, the case is sad indeed, and yet it is gratifying that there is still a small remnant that contends for the truth as it is revealed to them in the Blessed Book.

Some Results of the Plague in China.

When the historian of the future shall record the sad incidents of the awful plague that counted its victims by the thousand, he will also chronicle the brave and self-sacrificing labors of the missionaries. Be it said to the honor of all Christian missionaries in China that they remained at their posts in spite of the peril it involved to themselves and their loved ones. It was the Christian physician from the ranks of the medical missionaries that did most valiant service in the battle with the plague. These noble souls counted not their life dear to themselves but were willing to brave dire danger. Such devotion has made a profound impression upon the people of China,—more profound than years of mere teaching. After all it is love, practically exemplified,—not merely taught,—that proves the vital power of Christianity.

The Arbitration Treaties.

Aug. 3 is likely to be a date of some significance in the annals of history, since it is the day on which three great nations signed arbitration treaties of unusual importance. Just how far the real cause of peace will be materially enhanced by the treaties now signed by the United States and France, and the United States and Great Britain, only the future can tell. Competent diplomats agree, however, that the treaties are the most important single move, in the direction of universal peace, so far promulgated in the history of the world. It is an assured fact that the treaties will at least prevent an accumulation of grievances that in the aggregate might cause serious friction. Under the terms of the treaty "the soft answer that turneth away wrath," will hereafter be in order, in the adjustment of pending differences.

Native Americans Ordained as Buddhist Priests.

While it may be humiliating to chronicle the fact, it is true, nevertheless, that for the first time in the history of the United States three native Americans were ordained as Buddhist priests. The ordination was held, with the usual Oriental ceremonies, at San Francisco, Cal., July 25, and marks the beginning of a fully-organized effort for a Buddhist propaganda in the United States. One is made to wonder what the end of this movement will be. Has evangelical Christianity become so lax, so unsatisfying, that even the barren cult of Buddha is more attractive? Might it not be well, for the Christian people of the United States, to take a searching look at themselves, to discover their shortcomings and make needed improvement? "Enlarge the place of thy tent, and let them stretch forth the curtains of thine habitations: spare not, lengthen thy cords and strengthen thy stakes."

A Church Built in a Day.

We are living in an age of marvelous achievements, and yet it would hardly seem possible that a church seating several hundred people could be built and painted in one day, so that the dedication services could be held on the evening of the same day. And yet this was actually done, recently, by the Disciples of Peoria, Ill., when they built a church in one of the suburbs of the city as a mission branch of the main organization in that place. The foundation of the house having been laid in advance by the pastor of one of their churches in the city,—an expert along that line,—the various committees perfected their plans, so that on the appointed day, promptly at seven o'clock, the entire working force got busy. A total of 125 men worked on the building, but all the various details of construction were so thoroughly systematized that everything went along smoothly. By nine o'clock the framework was completed, by noon the roof was on. By six o'clock the church stood complete, with brick walk in front, as well as steps and a platform. The total cost of this one-day church was only $525. The same building, under ordinary conditions, would have cost four or five times as much, but in this case, of course, most of the material as well as the labor was donated, which reduced the cost quite materially. The originator of the plan is now to extend its operation to other points, having solved, as he thinks, the question of erecting mission point church buildings at minimum cost. It occurs to us that the Peoria plan might be given a trial at many mission points under the control of our various District Boards. Systematic effort wins.

A Lamentable Loss.

Why is it that the Sunday-schools everywhere must sustain the serious losses they do, as their pupils reach a certain age? The trouble is not confined to this country, for a writer in the London "Methodist Times" gives the following: "None of the churches here are prosperous. What is wrong? More than one thing is wrong, but I will name only one. We have blundered with the children, and this is a blunder so grave that nothing can redeem it. Look at the people outside the church! Who are they? They are our old Sunday-school scholars. These crowds of 'outsiders' have been through our Sunday-schools. We had them once, but we did not know what to do with them. Like prodigals we squandered our wealth." Here is food for grave thought in these remarks, and each member of the Church of the Brethren may do well to ponder them, for they apply to us also.

A Medical School for China.

Once more America is coming to the aid of China, supplying, in a very substantial way, the needed medical training for the physicians of the Celestial Empire. A great medical school is to be established in Shanghai, which will train the Chinese in western systems of medicine and hygiene, and next February the doors of the big college will be thrown open. The project is one which is being fostered more especially by the professors of the Harvard Medical School, one of whom, Dr. Martin Russ Edwards, will head the new school, and a corps of fifteen Harvard assistants. It is confidently expected that the proposed school will be the means of materially checking,—if not entirely eliminating,—the dreaded bubonic plague as well as cholera. How much better, to lend a helping hand to our neighbors in the Orient than to threaten their peace and happiness by war-like demonstrations!

The Moroccan Difficulty.

For some time the horizon of the diplomatic world has been darkened by threatening clouds, portending serious troubles for the two principal parties, France and Germany, and possibly Great Britain, the ally of France. Increased control of Moroccan affairs on the part of France was resented by Germany and emphasized by the sending of a warship to Agadir, Morocco, an Atlantic seaport. For a time the situation was decidedly threatening, especially because of Great Britain's somewhat unwarranted attitude. Latest advices indicate that Russia has stepped into the breach as a mediator, having induced the powers at London and Paris to "take the rough edge" off the English demands, thus paving the way for a mutually agreeable understanding. Deliberations by the representatives of France and Germany are now proceeding as rapidly as possible, and at present writing the prospects look favorable for an early settlement.

Doing the Little Things.

Most people never do the little things well within their reach, longing rather to achieve the great things which the world applauds. Not so are the world's real benefactors. Judge Lindsey, the world-famous judge of the juvenile court in Denver, emphasized, in a recent interview, the importance of doing well apparently little things. Describing his work, as it comes to him from day to day, he unconsciously revealed his infinite patience and resourcefulness in reforming the erring waifs as they are brought before him. Many a judge would barely see the possibilities for reform in a dirty, ragged urchin, but Judge Lindsey appeals to the best in that boy and seeks to direct him aright. That, in a large percentage of cases, he nobly succeeds, is no surprise. What an inspiration to the humblest worker, to cultivate his own little corner! That neighbor of yours,—is he better because of your influence? Is your light really shining? If not, there is a reason. Search for it!

Better than Rules.

We are told that a manufactory in the Middle West, employing thousands of hands, found considerable difficulty in securing harmonious action by its small army of workers. Even stringent rules, posted everywhere, failed to avoid friction. A new manager, blessed with an inborn, happy faculty of readily controlling large bodies of workers, and conserving their good will and best energies, was placed in charge. He discarded previous restrictions and, in a brief address to the workers, announced that, expecting all to do what was right, he had but one suggestion to offer for the promotion of harmony throughout the works. Smilingly he pointed to a large motto, conspicuously displayed on the wall, and read the words, "A pleasant smile fits any face." Before many weeks a new spirit pervaded the factory. Old grudges disappeared as if by magic. Few of the workers could withstand the persistent charm of a smile where hitherto there had been scowls. The smile triumphed.

Vice as a Business.

Some of the Chicago papers have looked into the conditions that are responsible for the deplorable increase of vice in our western metropolis. It has been shown that some of the houses, given over to prostitution, are owned by the most "respectable" citizens of Chicago,—some of them even professors of religion(?). It has further developed that those in authority are often in secret collusion with vice, that they graft large sums of money from the unfortunate victims of the dissolute district, and that, in spite of strongest legislation, the unholy "White Slave Traffic" flourishes largely undisturbed. It is unprejudiced observer it would seem that there is need of radical action,—a concerted move,—to bring about a new order of things. Christianity, we fear, has not succeeded in making itself felt as it should. Certain it is that no Christian has a right to rent his premises to keepers of disorderly resorts. Just as certain it is that the combined efforts of the Christian churches of Chicago, wisely applied, might do much in the alleviation of prevailing conditions in the vice district.

Corrupt Conditions in Jerusalem.

A recent writer draws a sad picture of the deplorable conditions tolerated by the Greek Church in Jerusalem,—one that reminds us strongly of the worldliness of the Pharisees in the time of Christ, when the criticism of the Master laid bare their corrupt practices. The writer alleges that the Greek clergy and the monks of Jerusalem are increasingly corrupt, making use of their holy office as a means of personal gain. The pilgrims who by the thousand throng the streets of Jerusalem, annually, have been induced to give a large part of their meager possessions to the church, which in this case means the clergy. Priests and monks, by this means, have gradually absorbed the wealth of the membership. As the ecclesiastical rules allow the personal use of donated funds to priests and monks, without accounting for the same, these church dignitaries live at ease, and are able to help even their relatives, at times. Surely, the scriptural allusions to unfaithful shepherds could find no better or more striking illustration than in the lives of the priests and monks above referred to.

The Country Church.

We have referred several times to the decline of the country church, and also touched upon the efforts being made to stem the ebb tide of decadence. It is now well nigh sealed its fate. A recent writer, who has given the subject some study, declares that "10,000 rural churches are already closed and that 10,000 more are on the thin razor edge between life and death." While many of the brightest minds in the various denominations have wrestled with the problem of the declining country church, they do not seem to have arrived at any plan that will successfully overcome existing difficulties. The Church of the Brethren is facing a similar problem. In nearly every one of our church Districts there is at least one house, if not more, standing empty, which once was the center of promising church activity. Why should not the sacrificial fires be lighted anew upon the forsaken altars? That something might be accomplished at all these neglected and forsaken points by the proper effort, is admitted by all who are in touch with the facts. If it is not done, the responsibility rests upon some one. We will not be held guiltless. The Lord has richly blessed us with the necessary means, as well as with earnest workers. Are we willing to "make full proof" of consecrated stewardship in the extension of the Lord's work?

Stand by Your Profession.

"I have opened my mouth to the Lord and I can not go back."

Back to the world with its silly, weak ways,
Back to the world for the rest of my days,
Back to all that has merely a name,
To all the fashion, the pomp and fame,
Away from the path my Savior trod?
Away from my Father, and my God?

Ah, no! To the Highest I've pledged my word,
I've opened my mouth to the Most High Lord
I have sat for awhile by Jesus' side,
And promised to love him whate'er betide.
Love him because he first loved me,
And died for sin on Calvary's tree.

Died to save from Satan and sin,
Died to purchase an entrance in
To heaven above, so bright and fair,
No anxious thoughts or troubles there.
A place where all our sorrows cease,
A place of bliss, a place of peace.

How small earth's joys compared with this,
How small the world and all that is Opposed to heaven and Jesus' name.
Not gold, or honor, pomp, or fame,
Can e'er give peace like Christ's love,
I'll keep even this all else above.

Read the Church Paper.

BY JAS. A. SELL.

I HAVE been a reader of the church paper ever since I could read. Commencing with the monthly Gospel Visitor, in my father's home, the paper has been followed through all its changes and consolidations up to the present. For a time I assisted in its publication, when we gave to the Brotherhood its first experience with a weekly paper.

When I started to make a home for myself and the one who agreed to share my fate, together with the little ones who came to us, the first thing to provide was the flour to feed the physical bodies, and the next, to provide for our mental and spiritual food, was the church paper. This has been continued for half a century. During all these years, at the appointed time, it made its appearance with but very few exceptions, and was always hailed with delight. My life has been a busy one, but I always found time to read. The paper was read,—simply read,—all of it. Of course it was not all remembered. However, the salient points were. All revolutionary movements, or backward tendencies, and all things that were approaching points of transition, were noted and watched with unusual interest and were remembered.

Certain writers became favorites and their productions claimed first attention. As time advanced and the mellowing power of experience and advancing years cast their influence, the poetical became the sweetest, and, charmed by its magic spirit, there was a longing,—an unsatisfied yearning,—that the paper did not always quite fill. This is one part of the paper that will admit of improvement yet.

But we do not seem to have time to muse and dream over poetry. It belonged seemingly, to another day. We are now on a rush and hurry. We are looking to the practical. In contemplating the beautiful and sublime we are losing money, but in not contemplating them we are losing something that money can not buy.

Bro. C. H. Balsbaugh's productions in his earlier years were greatly admired because of his clear logic and incontrovertible arguments in defense of Bible doctrine. He surely was a prodigy. He had no peer in his day. He was prepared and ready for any emergency, and was always kind and courteous. He kept close to his Master and walked in his very footsteps.

Bro. Quinter was a conspicuous figure in our paper for many years. He, perhaps, did more than any other one in his day to elevate and develop the tone and literary talent of the church. His greatest power was in his preaching, but his editorials were appreciated because of his clear analysis and application of scriptural texts.

The editorials always claim first attention, and in the selection of subjects and manner of treating them we are always well served. They are always interesting, helpful and uplifting. When we consider what it means to fill sixteen pages with interesting reading matter, week after week, year in and year out, and give only what is pure and clean, the effort is not appreciated as it should be. Still one is made to wonder, sometimes, why special thought is not more frequently directed to Bible subjects.

The spiritual tone of our church literature has always been of a high order, and the literary merit has steadily increased, till today it ranks among the best of its class. In its practical application of truth it stands as a power for the church. The Gospel Messenger, as the acknowledged organ of the church, and as a messenger for the church, is the "voice of one crying in the wilderness." When given an opportunity, it goes out as a pioneer, blazing its way through the unexplored frontier, making converts to its faith by its wise and powerful teaching. It is the advance guard, running ahead of the heavier machinery of evangelization. Experience has abundantly taught that it is not only safe but profitable to send it out into regions yet untrodden by the home missionary.

We have reason to be grateful that we have always had good, pious, judicious, patient and reasonable men as editors. Under their wise management of the paper the church has steadily advanced, dropping methods of a by-gone day, and adopting those more in keeping with present-day needs. This has been accomplished more through the influence of the press, by instructing the mind of the Brotherhood, than by its Conferences.

Some of us thought that more liberty should be given to discuss some of our differences through the paper, to the end that we might understand each other better. This liberty is denied and it may be all the better that it is. It is not given to all to keep sweet while discussing differences. Some of us are not yet broad-minded enough to disagree on matters of policy and belief, and keep our temper. Few of us are quite willing to admit that we are in error and that our brother is a wiser person. It is not always an easy thing to keep sweet when we fancy we see so many reasons for soumess. So it is not difficult to see how a free rostrum for open discussion under circumstances of passion and prejudice could result in evil instead of good.

But we are wonderfully improving along this line. We are seeing that no one knows it all, and even the church may make mistakes, or find it necessary to change its methods. It is a becoming modesty to concede to others the same right we claim for ourselves. A brother is not necessarily a bad or a dangerous man because he holds or advocates ideas different from those held by the church.

If we desire to make strong men and strong women of the coming generation for the church, they must be kept in close touch with our church literature from childhood. It is a costly economy to reject our own for others, even though, by so doing, we can save a few pennies.

The agent for our publications, if he be active and diligent in his business, holds in his grasp a power and influence in a congregation equaled by none. People are led,—perhaps unconsciously or imperceptibly,—but none the less effectually by what they read. The reading people are the working people.

The wide range of subjects and the able manner in which they are treated in the Gospel Messenger makes it a wise counselor and a good instructor for both old and young. Here we are instructed in church government, the doings of councils, the work of missionaries and evangelists, and the exegesis of Scriptures. We are informed of the work of the temperance crusade, the Sunday-school movements and the work of the mission bands and Christian Workers, and are having the hidden wonders of oriental lands laid open to us by living explorers of our own people and day. All this is well calculated to take away some of the narrowness of mind, and help us to see the great want of more and better work for our Divine Master. A reading people are the working people, and as there is a veritable flood of literature issuing from the press in our day, and much of it light and trashy, much of it too injurious to both mind and morals, all of it cheap, and some of it as free as the air we breathe, it becomes all the more important that the good and pure should be freely used to counteract the bad. "Till I come give attendance to reading," says Paul to Timothy. "Reading maketh a full man."

"God Bless You."

BY NETTIE C. WEYBRIGHT.

I SHALL never forget a little visit I made one day in September, a few years ago, just before leaving for school. It was in the home of a dear old brother, —a true friend of ours almost ever since I can remember. The burden of his conversation was the good of the church, the welfare of the young people, and the church's need of them. As he said, "Goodbye," he added fervently, "God bless you, and all through your year's school work remember that we are praying for you."

How much good that did me, I never can tell, and no one but the Omniscient God himself knows how often I was blessed, not only that year, but ever since, because that beloved minister of God, a man mighty in prayer, has been praying for me.

How often young people are saved from dangerous pit-falls by remembering that a faithful brother or sister, somewhere, is praying for them! Just a short letter, laden with Christian counsel and love, closed with the prayer, "The Lord bless you," or the blest promise, "I'm praying for you," has helped at least one weak child of the Father over many a difficult path or discouraging hour. So often hard tasks and grave responsibilities suddenly loom up before us,—what better hope or encouragement have we then, than to rely, in faith, on the assurance of one of Christ's own, "We remember you in our prayers"?

Much good might be done if more would make use of this opportunity of doing good. It is only a word in passing but of vastly more worth than a frivolous remark, or foolish teasing, which is all too common. Young people expect more than that from older soldiers of the cross, and they have a right to. An old person,—a Christian in particular,—trying to make himself entertaining to the young by silly, unbecoming talk, is decidedly disgusting to the most sensible young people. It would be far better for such to follow the example of this dear aged brother.

A Christian's wish is his prayer. A thousand times rather breathe this blessing upon the young than to let them wander away into sin, and then find fault with their conduct, and speak unkindly of them.

In this twentieth century of worldly thought and constant hurry, there is a growing lack of these heavenly benedictions pronounced in parting. Years ago we were blessed with a saintly, aged brother living near us. No matter how small his errand, or how short his time, he always inquired into our health or general welfare, and he gave a fatherly "Bare you well," left us with kind thoughts of him. "The effectual, fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much."

Real Bible Study.

BY PAUL MOHLER.

THE Bible is such a wonderful book! It is so beautifully written and it contains such marvelous truths. It can not be compared to any other book, but it is not always easy to understand. Some truths are plain, lying right on top of the ground, like placer gold, just waiting to be scooped up and washed out and carried away. But the mother lode lies deep. If we want the great wealth of the mine, we must dig.

I am glad for the diggers. I am glad that there are so many that are earnestly searching the Scriptures for the hidden treasurers. May God bless every one of them! But I feel sure that much time is wasted by those who do not know how to study. I wish that might not be so common. We are learning the best methods of doing everything else, why should we not seek the best methods of Bible study?

There are two ways of getting at what the Bible teaches of which I wish to say something,—the theoretical method and the exegetical. The one following the first tries to interpret the Scriptures by framing a theory to fit the passage under consideration. In other words, he lets each scriptural passage suggest a train of thought that looks as if it might be right. Then a search begins for other passages of scripture that seem to establish the theory. Such texts can always be found, no matter what the-theory may be. This is undoubtedly the most general method in use by theologians, great and small. It accounts, to some extent, for the great number of sects in the Christian world today.

And, indeed, some of these theories are very beautiful, and it is surprising how strong a hold some of them have taken on the Christian people generally. To doubt some of them would mark you as a heretic or at least a "higher critic" in the minds of many earnest Christian people. And it is very hard to keep one's self free from their influence, especially if they have been presented to us by some able man. Have you never heard a perfectly beautiful and apparently certain interpretation on the twenty-third Psalm, the parables of our Lord, or the Book of Revelation? Are you sure it was not pure theory? If only one theory were ever formed, and that the right one, the theoretical method would be just right and the one to learn, but, unfortunately, theories are plentiful and cheap, and they can not all be right.

The other method, by careful exegesis, is an entirely different matter. It is a much harder process, harder to learn and to use, but it is much more certain in its results. It corresponds to the laboratory method of present day scientific investigation. The exegete tries to find out what the author meant to say by exceedingly careful examination of both text and context. He not only does not try to form a theory, but tries very hard indeed to keep from forming any theory. And that is not an easy thing to do; for before investigation of any text has gone very far, it will seem to "open up beautifully," and two or three other texts will suggest themselves that seem to teach a very beautiful and wonderful new truth, or to establish an old one. Then, if the exegete does not watch out, he will turn theorist, hunt up a few more supporting texts, and give out a beautiful interpretation of the text, and think he has gotten it by "exegesis."

But the real exegete fights off conclusions to the very last. He knows that if he is to get the real sum of the truth, he must not add up his figures too soon, he must be sure to get them all in. Really, the exegete may examine exactly the same associate texts that the theorist does, but he will examine them from an entirely different standpoint, for while the theorist is looking at them to see if they support his theory, the exegete is trying to find out what they really do say on the subject, without caring how many theories are toppled over or what conclusion is finally reached. I do not mean by this that he is necessarily more pure in his motive than the other; he is just more wise, careful, and free from prejudice.

How can we learn to be exegetes? I wish I could tell everybody, but I can't. It is like learning to be a surgeon, I think. You need to watch a master at work, to work with him, and under his advice and criticism. At first it will seem impossible. You will go with him into the study of a book. If he is a good leader, he will make you do all you can from the start, merely guiding your attack, holding back your hasty conclusions, and suggesting rather than explaining anything. His purpose will be to teach you how to study rather than what to remember. He knows that if you once know how to study you can get the rest for yourself. This is hard, of course, and it is slow, but it is worth while. I do not know any price too high to pay for a true understanding of God's Word.

I have just said that I cannot tell anyone how to be an exegete, but there are some rules of interpretation that anyone can use. It is important to know all you can about the author of a book, the circumstances under which he wrote, and the people to whom he wrote. Much of this information can often be found in the book itself, and some from other books of the Bible. The book of Acts gives the setting of a number of the Epistles. One cannot afford to interpret the epistles without knowing Acts. Sometimes the very first words of a book give its setting. Do not neglect this point.

Get the very best translation of the Bible. If you have learned to love the King James translation, use that for your devotion, but if you use that for study, you will be heavily handicapped, for both the meanings of the English words and the forms of expression have changed so much since that translation was made that you will not understand what the translators meant to say. Moreover, a number of older manuscript copies of the New Testament have been discovered since that translation was made. This makes it possible for later translators to correct errors of the old. The best translation I have ever seen is the American Standard Revision.

Be sure of Holy Spirit guidance. Paul says in First Corinthians 2: 10, "But unto us God revealed (his wisdom, see v. 7) through the Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God. For who among men knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man, which is in him? Even so the things of God none knoweth, save the Spirit of God. But we received, not the spirit of the world, but the spirit which is from God; that we might know the things that were freely given to us of God." It is clear from this that he who undertakes to study the Bible without the Spirit of God, is undertaking the impossible. Is it any wonder that so many "eminent" scholars who do not believe in the Spirit of God should reject the Bible as "foolishness"? An effort at exegesis without the guidance of the Holy Spirit is almost sure to run into destructive criticism. It is at least sure to fail of its purpose.

Carefully divide the passage you are studying according to the thoughts expressed. You cannot depend on the verse or paragraph divisions of your translation. The original manuscripts were not divided into verses and chapters. In fact, even the words were not separated, nor were there any punctuation marks. Now study each section by itself carefully and see what it means by itself, whether it be a verse, a half a verse or a paragraph, each section that expresses a thought should be studied first without any regard to any other section, so that you may know what it says. When you have studied each section separately, then see what relation each has to the other sections, that is, study it in its context. This must be done always.

Now study the whole passage and see if you can state, in a single brief sentence, the gist of the passage. When you are satisfied that you have done this, study the next passage in like manner and the next, and so on through the book. It is a good thing to state the gist of several passages or even of the entire book in a sentence. The more you do of this the better.

Of course, in making up your final conclusions on any passage of scripture, you must be sure that your interpretation harmonizes with the general Bible teaching on that subject. Failure to do this has led to the formation of many sects.

Now just a word as to the need for language study. To do the most thorough work, you should know Hebrew for Old Testament study and New Testament Greek for the New Testament. But a mere smattering of it will not do. It is true that with but little Greek one can run the words back through New Testament Greek to classical Greek if he has plenty of lexicons and concordances. And one must do that too, but that is not near all. He must know New Testament Greek Grammar, especially the moods and tenses of the Greek verb. No amount of classical Greek grammar will avail here, for the usage of the language had changed much by the time the New Testament was written, and in many respects the language had become more fixed and certain.

However, if you use the best English translation and get all the language help you can from a Young's or Strong's concordance, you can do quite good work indeed. Don't hesitate to study the Bible because you do not know the original languages.

But perhaps you don't have much education. Well, don't stop for that either. If you have a dictionary, you can find out what the words mean, and if you can understand plain everyday English, you can study the American Revised Bible intelligently. The main advantage of a college education in the study of the Bible is, that education gives you the power to dig, but you can learn to dig in the Bible. In fact I sometimes think that the best preparation there is for studying the deep things of the Bible is the study of the easier things. Study Mark and Luke before Matthew and John. Study Acts and the shorter, simpler epistles before Romans and Ephesians. Study everything else before you try Revelation. Study simple Christian duty before you undertake the greater Bible doctrines, and DO the things you find to do. For after all it is the doing the Word that counts for the glory of God and the salvation of souls.

May God bless every true student of the Word, and help us all to abide in the words of our Lord which make us free.

Homiletic Hints.

BY E. B. HOPE.

The Temptation of Jesus (Matt. 4: 1-11; Mark 1: 12, 13; Luke 4: 1-13).

Jesus came into the world to reveal the Father's will, and thus to save the world from the merciless onslaught of Satan. Satan had very largely been having his own way ever since the beginning. Jesus, on this occasion, gave him such a tremendous blow as to cripple him in his rampant reign of sin.

The conflict began in real earnest when Jesus opened his life ministry. It was a great attempt of Satan not to stop the ministry, but to direct and control it as he does with other men. It was probably on this account that the temptation comes immediately in connection with the baptismal scene of consecration.

Jesus had just been approved by the Father as a loving, obedient Son. His Divinity seems beyond question. How will he, then, conflict himself in his human sphere? Will he use his Divine power for his own convenience and thus save himself from the brunt of the toil and burden of life, and thus place a gulf between humanity and himself, or will he set his foot down firmly upon the earth and walk in the path of common life?

Jesus' quotation from Deut. 8: 3 plainly tells that he intended to live as others do, trusting the Heavenly Father for sustaining grace. Had he yielded to this temptation he would have taken himself out of the range of human necessities beyond the limit of appeal to our human infirmities. Notwithstanding he was Divine, he came to live a human life, thus to touch the feelings of our infirmity. A human prodigy could not have laid a hand of sympathy into ours as Jesus succored us in times of trouble (Heb. 2: 18; 4: 15). Nevertheless did Jesus selfishly work miracles for his own convenience, but his life was sacrifice upon sacrifice, even up to the very end. No privation was too great; no burden too heavy.

When he refused to throw himself from the temple, he failed to make a sensational display before a curious, sign-loving people. To have obeyed would have been to intrude upon the prerogative of God, as again and again the Israelites did when they censured God for not responding to their idle whims and appetites. Jesus did not command a palanquin, carried by the angels. Fond submission, even unto death, was Jesus' continual choosing. Not for a moment did he yield to intrude upon the Father's ground (John 5: 19; Philpp. 2: 7, 8).

Satan's application of Psa. 91: 11, 12 was not fair. Of course, the promise of this Psalm was sure when properly applied, but the moment it was quoted out of context, it, like all other Scriptures, thus treated, failed and fell to the ground. It was on this account that Jesus could call in another Scripture to offset the strength of this. The Bible must harmonize. Entirely too much Scripture is thus misapplied, even today.

The view of the kingdoms of the world from the mountain top is a temptation well chosen for the occasion. In this case Satan comes fair and square up against the live issue. Jesus had come into the world to take the kingdom of the world, in harmony with Dan. 2: 44. That was his mission, but he would not do it by worshiping Satan in carnal warfare. He came to establish a spiritual kingdom by serving God in the power of love.

When you examine closely these temptations, you will see that they are all Jewish—a strong appeal for Jesus to do his work according to Jewish ideals, rather than God's. He came to his own, but his own received him not, because he would not establish an earthly kingdom with Jerusalem as its capital, Judah as its people, and the sword as its weapon.

Christ met each temptation by applying God's Word to his own life. His only question was: What is the Father's plan for my life and work? Even in this he did not select great Messianic texts, but just such texts as were spoken and written to the common class of humanity. He kept himself under the control of the Holy Spirit (Luke 4: 1), and thus he could well appropriate that which had been given him through the adminstration of the Spirit.

This is not the last time he was tempted, nor probably the severest. He was tempted all along the way, even up to the very cross itself. Each temptation had its own peculiar setting in his life, just as this one did at the beginning.

If, in the choice of our life service, and in the manner of this service, the Heavenly Father were consulted, and if he were given the full response of our lives, what a glory would our lives render to his worthy name and cause? It is thus that we, too, can overcome temptations as they come to us. If we, like Jesus, learn to know God's will as it is revealed in his Word, and then faithfully keep ourselves under the control of the Holy Spirit, Satan could have little or no power over us. Let us faithfully walk with our Lord in the light of his grace!

Death of Eld. W. A. Anthony.

BY F. D. ANTHONY.

UNEXPECTED, indeed, it is to me to sit at my desk this evening, and to record the death of my beloved brother, William A. Anthony, who died from a stroke of paralysis at his home in Shady Grove, Pa., on Sunday, July 23, 1911.

Bro. William lived just two doors from the Brethren church, where he worshiped with the saints for a period of more than twenty years. On the morning of July 23 he attended the Sunday-school session and also the preaching service that followed, and, as usual, took an active part, and apparently was in good health. He conducted the opening devotion of the Sunday-school and led in the reading of the lesson, and in both the Sunday-school and church services had charge of the singing, which feature of public worship was always a holy joy and delight to him.

Immediately after dismissal of the second service, he did not tarry to enjoy sweet intercourse with the saints, as was his usual custom, but walked a few yards away to his home, where his wife, arriving a few minutes later from the morning services, found him in a prostrate condition on the floor, near a sofa in the room. To her he spoke a few words concerning a severe pain in his head, when the stroke came and he passed into unconsciousness from which he never recovered.

A telephone message soon reached me at my home in Waynesboro, six miles away, and one hour and a half later I was by his bedside, and assisted Eld. Wm. C. Koontz in anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord. There, with his sorrow-stricken companion and older son, Edgar, and his companion and quite a number of his brethren and sisters with whom he had worshiped just a short time before, in the church near by, we stood with bowed heads and sobbing hearts, as we saw the spirit slowly but surely seeking absence from the body, to be present with the Lord. The end came at 4: 30 P. M., and having in mind the comfort of Psa. 46: 1 and Lam. 3: 32, 33, we knelt in worship by his lifeless form, Bro. Koontz offering a fervent prayer.

Eld. Wm. Albert Anthony was born three miles east of Hagerstown, Md., in the Beaver Creek congregation, Feb. 10, 1857, and died in the Falling Spring congregation, Pa., July 23, 1911, aged fifty-four years, five months and thirteen days. He was the son of David and Nancy Anne Anthony, both members of the Church of the Brethren, and was the second of a family of ten children,—six sons and four daughters. All his brothers and sisters, and also a half-sister, survive.

He received his education in the public schools of Washington County, Md., and later taught school, continuing in that profession almost without interruption from early manhood until the time of his death.

He united with the Church of the Brethren Nov. 2, 1879, was called to the ministry May 19, 1883, advanced to the second degree May 23, 1886, and ordained bishop May 10, 1902.

In the fall of 1884 he was united in marriage to Sister Anna Friedly. To this union were born two sons, who, with their devoted mother, survive to mourn their loss.

In the death of my brother and colaborer in the ministry, and also the death of Eld. E. W. Stoner, a great loss has been sustained. They were two of the most widely-known and active elders of the Brotherhood in the East. In the early years of my brother's ministry he was much in company with Bro. Stoner, and the latter soon became an admirer of him on account of his growing ability as a preacher, and his loving devotion to the church of his choice. It is, therefore, a significant coincidence that these two servants of God and special friends of each other, should pass to their reward less than three weeks apart, and in the same month and year.

By virtue of being reared together in the same home, where we shared each other's joys and sorrows, and singularly possessed traits of character and ambitions common to each other, I am naturally qualified, beyond many others, who knew him, to testify that surely in him was exemplified a holy, self-sacrificing and serviceable life. He was a close student of the Word, a man of settled convictions of right, a ready defender of the truth, a lover of his church and her doctrines, and a forceful and influential preacher of the Gospel. I feel that the readers of this article, who knew him personally, will acquiesce with me in the statement that he was always solicitous for the best interests of the church, and sought opportunity, to do with pleasure and might what his hands found to do.

He served the Annual Conference on the Standing Committee three times, having served the last time in this capacity at the Conference of St. Joseph, Mo., in June, 1911. At the time of his death he was the faithful and efficient elder of the Chambersburg congregation, and was secretary of the Mission Board of the Southern District of Pennsylvania. To this office he had been reelected for the sixth consecutive term and had already served fifteen years. He was a staunch advocate of missionary activities at home and abroad, did much acceptable work as an evangelist, and led many souls to Christ.

It is considered a conservative estimate that from one thousand to twelve hundred people, or more, including a wide relationship, were in attendance at the Price church, where services and interment were held. Eld. Wm. C. Koontz, his long-time associate, was in charge of the services, assisted by Elders Peter S. Lehman, J. A. Long, C. L. Baker and Henry Beelman. Six ministers reverently and tenderly bore him to his last earthly resting place. Including the writer and two brothers-in-law, there were thirty ministers of the Church of the Brethren in attendance, and also a minister of the River Brethren church. Text, Rev. 22: 12.

In Exile.

BY JAMES M. NEFF.

I AM alone in the mountains. Alone in the sense that I am exiled from home and loved ones. The mountain brook that runs near by sings to me day and night. As I lie on my bed, the squirrels approach cautiously and look inquiringly, as if they would do me some kindly service. The birds hop from limb to limb in the great live oaks above me, and cheerily chirp and sing. Now and again I hear the happy voices of children who, with their parents, are camping not far away. But as a discord in all this music there comes to my ear the moanful sighing of the wind among the giant pines that stand just across the brook, and this discord, it seems to me, I would not hear if my own little ones were laughing and prattling about me.

Ever since we came to make our home among the foothills of these mighty Sierras, we have been enjoying, by anticipation, the romance of a camping trip up into the grandeur and silence of the mountains; but now the circumstances of my coming are robbing the trip of some of its anticipated pleasures. My strength has become so reduced that work is out of the question. It is no small trial for wife to be left alone with the little ones, but in the hope that the more invigorating atmosphere of the higher slopes would be a benefit to me, and since it seemed impossible for us to arrange that all might be away from home any length of time, she urged that I go alone.

So, acting on the suggestion, I wrapped my bed in the wagon which, having had this, my lunch box and a frying pan stowed away into the inside little wagon of a mountain man, I bade the folks good-bye and got in. The man gave the word to the two tiny donkeys that drew the wagon and up we came. Slowly, very slowly, we came up the steep, rough road. It was a hard pull for the faithful little animals, but they are used to hard pulls and they expect them, and they just keep coming right on up the road, though it is steep and rough. There are a few people in the church that way,—used to hard pulls and expect them,—and no matter how steep and rough, they just keep coming right on up the road. And how indispensable such Christians are!

And now I am here. The wagon sheet is stretched over my bed between two spreading live oaks. Here I lounge and sleep, and cook my meals over a camp fire on the ground. From here I take short walks, hang on the ragged edge of nature, breathe this bracing mountain air, and thank God who manifests himself so abundantly everywhere.

But exile! I wonder if Napoleon on St. Helena or John on Patmos ever sat down and pitied himself. I have barely strength enough to avoid doing such a foolish thing now and then. I am only nine miles from home, but it is up, up, and the road so steep and rough that it seems like twenty-nine. But other people exile themselves. Why shouldn't I? Some men make a business of conveying pack trains over these mountains, leaving their homes and families for weeks at a time, and traveling many miles with slow, heavy-laden donkeys over these steep, rugged trails. In the commercial world men chose work which takes them from their homes and families for weeks and months at a time. Why should not missionaries go into exile for Christ's sake, and invalids for health's sake, without complaining? "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me."

Prayer.

BY L. L. ALGER.

WHY should we pray? We love to be with our earthly fathers, and talk with them about the affairs of this life, and receive instruction for doing certain work. How much more should we love to come to our Heavenly Father and talk to him about spiritual things? He is always ready to help us and give us instruction by which to attain to a better, nobler life.

Our Savior has told us to ask, "And I say unto you, Ask," etc. (Luke 11: 9). Here we see that he requires us to do something. He knows what we need, but he wants us to have a part in getting the things we need. Why should we hesitate a moment to come to him? He knows what is best for us. Why should we not ask him for the best plan to do his work? He knows the beginning and end of any course we might take. If we come and ask in the right manner we shall receive. "Ask, and ye shall receive, that your joy may be full" (John 16: 24). We must ask, thus doing as Christ has told us to do. But we must not forget the conditions to be complied with, in order to get what we ask for.

We should pray that we may be able to see ourselves just as we are, and, by the power of God resting upon us, strive to perfect that which is lacking in our lives. We should "pray without ceasing" (1 Thess. 5: 11). That is, we should be in the spirit of prayer all the time. In this way we may draw close to our Heavenly Father, and be better fitted and qualified for his service.

We must be in connection with the dynamo of heaven, to have power among sinful people and still keep our lives up to the standard set for us by our Savior. We are like a knife blade rubbed over with a magnet and magnetized. By being used, the blade loses its magnetic power, and so we, by prayer, must keep intact the live wire from heaven, or we will lose, and be unsuccessful workers for the Lord. We should be like the disciples spoken of in Acts. They prayed for the Holy Spirit and for boldness of speech, and they received these blessings. As they went about, doing the Master's will, they were continually being filled with the Holy Spirit. We must remember that they prayed for it.

Christ did not pray a few minutes and then quit, but we find that he "continued all night in prayer to God" (Luke 6: 12, 13). He would get up early in the morning and go out into the mountain to pray. Then, when he had received of the Father that for which he had asked, he did not forget to thank him for what he had done. When he had a hard task before him he knew the best way to get it settled. He went to the Father for strength. We should pray most earnestly when we have hard problems to solve; then we can solve them easier and better.

What would we think of a person who went out to work without any tools? Yet how much greater is the value of one soul than our work in the field? Do we always stop to pray before going to the Master's work in the field? Do we always stop to pray before going to the Master's work, and take the Lord with us? If Christ prayed so much, how much more do we need to pray to be guided aright? Are we so good that we do not need to pray? Christ did not seem to think so, for he said there is none good but the Father.

It was while Christ was praying that the Spirit came upon him as a dove (Luke 3: 21, 22); and it was while praying that he was filled with the Holy Spirit. He gave us a form of prayer. In this way he has taught us how to pray. Why should we neglect what he has given us? We should fully yield ourselves to the service of prayer.

Why should we pray? We should pray, believing that we shall receive, and our requests will be granted (Mark 11: 24). If we do not believe that God will grant our petitions, there is no use of our asking for things. We are to pray without ceasing, having our hearts right with God, and not be ashamed of his presence. We are to pray in faith: "But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering. For he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea driven with the wind and tossed" (James 1: 6). Here we see that he wants us to ask, but not to doubt what he has promised. On the other hand, if we do not do this, we will not receive according to verse 7.

It is necessary for us to pray in the Holy Spirit (Jude 20). We know not how to pray. "The Spirit also helpeth our infirmities: for we know not what we should pray for as we ought; but the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us with groanings which can not be uttered" (Rom. 8: 26). We ought to be thankful that we have the Spirit to help us in our weakness.

Christ has given us a perfect prayer, and he has told us to pray after the manner indicated in the Lord's Prayer (Matt. 6: 9; Luke 11: 2). We find that he told his disciples to use this prayer. But we must be careful how we use it, or we will make it a vain repetition. We should not merely say it, but pray it most sincerely.

It is not the number of words we use in a prayer that makes it a good prayer. It must be the expression of the heart. Then it will not be a formal affair,—simply to be heard of men. If we pray to be heard of God, and not of man, we are able to pray aright.

Start Out Right.

BY NANCY D. UNDERHILL.

WE are all travelers toward a certain goal, heaven being the ultimate goal desired by every rational being. Every traveler desires to take the right road, not only at the very beginning of his journey, but at every change of cars or at every turn or stopping place. Should we start in the right direction for New York, but, while stopping over at Chicago for a few hours, take a westbound train on resuming our journey, it would cause us much trouble and delay. When we ascertain the real direction, would we be wise to keep on going westward, even to San Francisco, just because we were reluctant to confess we were mistaken? Would we be slow to turn about to the right course? Surely, we would stop traveling in the wrong direction just as quickly as we learned of our mistake, and at once turn about to the right way.

On our journey heavenward we usually pause every night for rest,—just as we used to camp over night when traveling in covered wagons. In the morning, then, it is very important to start out right. To make a wrong start is apt to cause the loss of a whole day,—yes, and place us twice as far from our desired destination as we were before. Our Loving Master, whose superior wisdom even his enemies admit,—used to find it very important to begin the day with prayer (Mark 1: 35). Jesus was going to a country where he had been before. He knew the way. How much more important is it, then, for us, who have never been there, to begin the day with prayer, seeking heavenly care and the guidance of our Allwise Leader?

I have noticed, in my own experience, that when the day's journey began right, the whole day was much pleasanter and more satisfactory than otherwise. The road is so much more plain and smooth. But when circumstances (some of Satan's devices) have prevented the early morning season of worship, the road has been stony, and hedged about with thorns. It was because we did not start out right.

Christian or nonprofessor; we all need our Savior's loving guidance and care. We need to pray. Let us gather our families about us as early in the morning as we can. If we have no families, let us go to the mount of blessing alone, and seek our Heavenly Father's presence. If we have little ones, it is very important to train them up aright. Let us lead them to the altar each morning, and teach them to trust in God by our own example of trust. If we are obliged to go to work or business early, before the children are up, let us at least kneel beside their bed and pray for them, even though it be but a moment. Our influence is going to count for something with our children, and all our descendants, down through the ages to the end of time and through eternity. Shall our influence be for good? Shall our children and grandchildren and great-grandchildren be started on the road leading to everlasting honor and happiness? Do we care enough for their everlasting welfare, to direct them by a right example? Perhaps that little son or daughter does not amount to much in our estimation. Maybe we do not care whether the soul of our children gets to the destination for which we are aiming. How is it, you fathers, you mothers, do we care?

If we do, and have not begun the practice of starting out right each morning, why not begin it now? Why travel any longer in the wrong direction? Think of the precious young souls that are going to be influenced for eternity by our example. Parents, how can you neglect to lead them in the right way? Let us start out in the right way ourselves, and do not put it off any longer. Now is the time. Whether the parents who read this are professors of Christianity or not—let me implore you to begin now. The safe and right way surely leads to happiness and success. Be sure to begin each day with prayer, and lead the children in the safe way by setting the right kind of an example before them. You will be so very glad, after you have established this rule, and begun its practice. It can not, under any circumstances, do any harm; while it is sure to accomplish much good.

THE MOUNT MORRIS MEETING.

mently located. The committee consists of Brethren I. B. Trout, D. D. Culler and John Heckman.

Another paper asks that the second Tuesday of June in each year be fixed as the day for opening the Annual Conference. A protest goes up against holding our Conferences on fair grounds and other undesirable places, and it was further recommended that they be held on grounds dedicated to religious assemblies, or in cities where auditoriums with good acoustic properties may be had. Another paper calls for a plan that will enable members of the Standing Committee to serve three years, it being understood that one-third of those first chosen under the plan, serve three years, one-third two years, and the other third one year.

The meeting entered her protest against excluding Bible reading and sacred songs from the public schools of Illinois. The elders had done the same in their meeting. Bro. D. D. Culler was appointed to represent the District, for five years, on the Board of Directors of the Anti-Saloon League of Illinois. Hereafter our District Meeting will be held on the third Thursday of August, and the other meetings, in their order, on the Tuesday and Wednesday previous. The Mission Board was instructed to look after the needs of the Mount Carroll and Arnold's Grove churches, and place them in good working condition. The Board was also authorized to make a levy of 125 per cent on the State tax of the members, for funds to carry forward their work. By another year we are likely to have an improved plan of assessment, a paper to that effect being referred to the Board.

Bro. I. B. Trout was chosen to represent the District on the Standing Committee of 1912, with Bro. John Heckman alternate. Bro. James M. Moore becomes a member of the Mission Board. Bro. O. L. Shaw was chosen a member of the Board of Trustees of Mount Morris College. Bro. J. M. Price is to serve in like capacity for the Old People's and Orphans' Home.

With the very best of feelings the meeting, after transacting an unusual amount of business, closed at 4: 25 P. M., with the understanding that we meet at Naperville Aug. 15, 1912. It afforded all of us pleasure to have present Brethren H. C. Early, L. W. Teeter, Chas. D. Bonsack, J. J. Yoder, and J. F. Appleman. To all of them was extended the courtesy of the meeting.

At 7: 30 in the evening Bro. H. C. Early preached a splendid sermon on the "Value of Intelligent and Well-directed Zeal in Carrying Forward the Lord's Work." He felt quite sure that we have made on account of a lack of concerted action, and he urged the study and application of successful methods, especially upon the part of all leaders in church and benevolent work.

The members at the Mount entertained us royally, and seemed to take pleasure in serving their guests. They have splendid homes, good accommodations and fine Christian hearts. The congregation here is a large one, numbering hundreds of members. It is more than amply supplied with an efficient ministerial force, with Bro. J. G. Royer, past seventy-one years old, as elder in charge. He is rather old to have charge of an active, growing congregation, but at the meeting he seemed about as thoroughly alive as the best of them. In fact, he does more preaching and other church work than most of the preachers of only half his years.

For three days we were kindly cared for in the interesting home of Bro. D. L. Miller and wife. Here they live and entertain their friends, surrounded by books and relics gathered from many lands. Bro. Miller whiles away many an hour in his garden, where fruit, flowers and vegetables, during the summer months, may be found in abundance. He takes delight in the birds, has erected for them a number of bird houses, and welcomes them to his premises.

We left on Friday morning, regretting that we could not remain for the meeting of the General Mission Board. Concerning the work transacted Bro. D. L. Miller, our Senior Editor, will have something to say next week.

THE ROUND TABLE

Eternal Monuments.

BY EDGAR M. HOFFER.

We are all cognizant of the fact that we live in a world of strife, in a world of events, in a world of changes, in a world of many transitory scenes, and in a world of death. Because of this we see many monuments that have been erected as a memorial of some event or person. Monuments have been erected in memory of our presidents, our generals, and our brave patriots who gave their lives in defense of their country. Their motto was, "Give me liberty, or give me death," and they acted accordingly.

We see monuments erected in honor of the world's heroes, and its prominent and honorable men, but then, too, there are thousands of monuments erected in memory of some loved ones. In every cemetery we can notice this. But all these earthly monuments will finally crumble to dust. When the Judge of all the earth comes again, he will usher in the great resurrection day.

But we wish to speak of eternal monuments which are still more beautiful than those of marble or granite. There are, in the world today, many humble followers of Jesus Christ, who, though despised by a careless world, are doing many noble deeds for fallen humanity. Many a weary pilgrim has done much good, though his worth was not recognized by the world. Many of God's children have bloomed in the wilderness without being noticed by any man. Many saints live and die without worldly honor. Many faithful men and women have lived and done a noble work for humanity without the world's renown. Though sleeping in unmarked or unknown graves, there is One that knows all things. We may carve our names on a tree, but it will decay. We may engrave our names on a granite stone, but it will crumble to dust. If, however, we do a noble deed, or lead a sinner to the cross of Christ, it will be an eternal monument.

It is not best to be attached to this world so much; rather let us glorify the Lord Jesus Christ. After every monument in this wide, wide world has crumbled to dust, God's work will still go on; we can sing God's praise forever and forever. It matters not whether we sleep in an unknown grave, like Moses, or whether we have a costly monument,—God looks on the heart, and will reward accordingly. Let us bear in mind that all things change here below, and if we want to have eternal monuments, we must follow the meek and lowly Lamb of God, for without his aid we are nothing.

The Mysteries and Wonders of Providence.

BY JAS. A. SELL.

A few years ago some members of the Church of the Brethren located in Hollidaysburg, the county-seat of Blair County, Pa. They soon after started a Mission, which has been attended with fair success and has been, from the start, self-supporting. A sister formerly lived there, who, for some years, has suffered from an aberration of mind, and is now confined in an asylum provided for such unfortunates. When she heard of the Mission, she conceived at once the idea of erecting a house. Her friends gave her some stamps to write such letters for pastime, as the vagaries of her mind might dictate. She wrote to the writer, inclosing two of these stamps to start a building fund.

The matter was taken up and a lot secured. Around the two stamps, as a nucleus, a fund has now grown to almost one thousand dollars. The house is needed and will be built. Of course more funds are needed, that are not yet in sight, but it is encouraging to know that we are under the notice and care of One whose power is omnipotent and whose resources are unlimited. In the wonder-working and sovereign power of his providences he can bring things to pass that are mysterious and marvelous to us.

The mention of this very interesting transaction, attended with its sad circumstances, acts as a powerful stimulus to give for this noble work.

If this poor sister, who is wandering in the doleful ways of a darkened life, is willing, when the cloud is lifted for a few lucid moments, to give all she has in this world for the interests of the Redeemer's kingdom, what should we do who have all the enjoyments that life can give? When we come to realize what all this means, no good cause will suffer for support as long as we have it in our power to give.

Personal Work.

BY ESTELLA B. M. ERB.

We hear considerable regarding personal work with the non-Christian. This is as it should be, but how about personal work with the Christians, with the weak ones who, perhaps, are trying to live a consistent life, but, on account of nature, environment, and lack of a strong will power, at times stumble by the wayside?

Those two blessed passages of scripture, i. e., "Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of love," and "Not looking each of you to his own things, but each of you also to the things of others," are rapidly being given a backseat in our lives, when, instead, they should be a bond uniting us in one strong body.

Oh, how much we, as weak ones, need the strong arm of a spiritual adviser to lean upon! We have legal and medical advisers to go to when in trouble, but how often do we go to our pastor (our spiritual adviser on earth) for encouragement and help to overcome our obstacles, or, better still, how often does a pastor call on the members of his flock and have a heart-to-heart talk with them about their difficulties? How often does he devise some way or means to overcome perplexities and assist his members in leading better lives? In this way a pastor can win the confidence and love of his people, when he could not win them in any other way.

How much can any one expect to accomplish in this world unless he has the respect and confidence of the people?

As a last plea, Can we not have more personal work more striving to help one another in troubles or weaknesses which we encounter in our spiritual life? Rest assured that in helping to bear one another's burdens we fulfill the law of love.

Whiskey and Snake Poison.

BY LEANDER SMITH.

It has been thought that even if whiskey were discarded as a beverage, it would still be necessary for the cure of snake-bites. An authority on serpent poison says that many men, thoroughly inebriated with whiskey, have been killed by the bite of a snake. So, after all, its vaunted efficacy along this line is not really a fact.

It has taken many years to learn the true relation between the venom of the serpent and alcohol. A serpent was instrumental in the fall of Adam, our first parent, and alcohol proved the downfall of Noah, our second.

Alcohol first and most fiercely attacks the white corpuscles of the blood, which are aptly termed the "soldiers" of the blood. These are our safeguards against disease germs, but alcohol weakens and destroys them.

Alcohol attacks man's moral and intellectual stature, because its first attack is made against his inhibition,—the finer and more delicate organism of his brain. These are the last developed, and measure the intellectual capacity of man.

Reminiscences.

BY C. G. WINEY.

I should like to have a postal card from all who attended the Annual Meeting of 1862, embodying in a short sketch what they remember about the meeting. It was held ten miles west of Dayton, Ohio, on the old "Hay" farm. I was a young man at that time, but, as far as I know, that meeting, with two exceptions, Harrisburg, Pa., and Winona Lake, Ind., was the largest Annual Conference held in the Brotherhood. The crowd on Sunday was estimated by the Dayton people at sixty thousand. The meeting was unique in several ways. More than one-fourth of the people drove to the meeting on Sunday in buggies, in carriages and in farm wagons.

If I remember correctly, the meeting was held in a canvas tent in the orchard. It was the first time the church was represented by delegates west of the Mississippi River. The meeting was presided over by Bro. John Kline, of Virginia, who, a few years later, was so cruelly murdered.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS' TOPIC

A Temperance Meeting.

Psa. 14: 1-7.

For Sunday Evening, August 20, 1911.

I. Restoration from Evil Is Promised (Isa. 1: 26; 11: 12; 27: 13; Mal. 3: 4).

II. Some are Evils (Gen. 6: 12; Isa. 1: 6; Ezra 9: 10, 11; Job 15: 16).

III. What Drink Makes Man.—(1) The saloonkeeper, "lieth in wait to catch the poor" (Psa. 10: 9, 10); "Greedy of his prey" (Psa. 17: 12; Micah 7: 3). (2) The drinker's "mouth is full of cursing . . . He sitteth in the lurking places of the villages; in the secret places doth he murder the innocent" (Psa. 10: 7, 8; Rom. 3: 14); "Wickedness is sweet in his mouth" (Job 20: 12-14).

IV. The Cleansing Is—(1) By regeneration (John 3: 3; 1: 13; 1 Cor. 6: 11; Titus 3: 5; James 1: 18). (2) By abstinence (Dan. 1: 8; Lev. 10: 9, 10). (3) By family pledges. "Drink no wine; neither ye nor your sons" (Jer. 35: 6); but "be filled with the Holy Ghost" (Luke 1: 15); "Purge out the old leaven" (1 Cor. 5: 7).

For This Meeting.—(1) Quote the opinion of one great man about the liquor evil. (Give this to many.) (2) What is "local option," and what has it accomplished? (3) Why does prohibition not prohibit perfectly? How remedy this defect? (4) Is it wrong to license a saloon? Why? (5) How can your society help temperance?

Prayer in This Meeting.—Ask God for a willingness to put out of your own life anything that may hinder; and pray for courage to face your own Christian task. Pray for a larger dependence on God for the things you cannot do for yourself. Ask for his help and presence with you in the cause of temperance, and all in Jesus' name.

PRAYER MEETING

The Tactful Use of Our Influence.

Eccl. 4: 9, 10; Prov. 27: 6, 9, 10, 17, 19.

For Week Beginning August 20, 1911.

1. Our Influence a Power for Good or Ill.—Influence issues forth from each one of us, whether we are conscious of it or not, at times when we least expect it. Years afterwards we may become aware of the fact that we have either helped or hindered some one whom we scarcely knew. We dare not treat this grave responsibility either carelessly or indifferently, for there is coming a day in which not only the secrets of men shall be made plain but we shall be called to an account for the wise or unwise way we have exerted our influence (1 Tim. 4: 15, 16).

2. Mutual Helpfulness.—"Two are better than one." But weakness of one is offset by the strength of the other; the faithlessness of one is overcome by the faith of the other; the gloom of one by the joy of the other. We need not walk alone, for Christ walks with us, and to our own natural influence is added his supreme power, with thus we are able to influence mightily for good all with whom we come in contact (Col. 1: 10-14; Eph. 4: 1-3).

3. We Are Held Accountable.—From Eccl. 4: 10 we learn that if we started alone and therefore failed, we are responsible not only for failure, but for our responsible for the fact that we might have succeeded and with God's grace gained the victory. We are held accountable, therefore, not only for wrongs committed, but for the neglect of the good we failed to do. Worse than all is the deplorable delinquency that we turned away from the world's Greatest Help (2 Cor. 5: 10, 11).

4. The Value of Christian Friendship.—It has been said: "A friend is one who knows all about you and loves you just the same," but the writer of Proverbs would have us learn that a true friend, while knowing all about you, and loving you all the same, seeks in every way to strengthen you. There is nothing sweeter or better than friendship, but there is no such thing as perfect and lasting friendship outside of Christian bonds (Philpp. 2: 1-11).

HOME AND FAMILY

Night and Morning.

SELECTED BY LYDIA LESH.

Sorrow and storm upon the deep,
Wild light, and thunder-roar!
The good ship labored heavily
A mile away from shore.
"Ah me, what will the morning bring?"
I heard a woman cry;
"The waves are strong, the night is long,
No helping hands are nigh!"
Oh, bitter, bitter was the wail
Of wives upon the beach;
Love wrestled there in fervent prayer
For those it could not reach.

Sorrow and sighing in the room
Where lights were burning low;
A soul was called away from earth,
And longed, yet feared to go,
For thoughts of bygone doubt and sin
O'erwhelmed it like a tide,
And darkness lay across the way
That leads to life untried;
"Ah me, what will the morning bring?"
I heard the watchers cry;
Love wrestled there in fervent prayer,
But death was drawing nigh.

The day broke slowly, cool and grey
And calm from east to west;
The ship was safe within the bay,
The soul had gone to rest;
For God was greater than the wave,
And stronger than the blast;
Oh, soul and bark, through storm and dark
Ye came to peace at last!

Fashions.

BY IDA M. HELM.

WHERE do the fashions of the world come from? We know they do not come from the meek and lowly Son of God. He practiced and taught humility during the whole period of his ministry. The tenor of the whole Gospel and all of the epistolary writings teach plainness and humility. Some one has said, "The world gets its fashions from Paris, and Paris gets them from the devil."

Satan exults over the fact that some professed Christians study the fashion plates so much as to neglect studying the Bible. I am satisfied that if church members would study the Bible and get it instilled into their hearts till obeying its teaching becomes a part of themselves, the fashion makers would be compelled to go out of business. "That which is highly esteemed among men is abomination in the sight of God" (Luke 16: 15).

The world esteems the fashions received from Paris, "gold and pearls as ornaments and costly array," very highly. They may serve as a passport through the gate leading to a social position with the devotees of worldlyism, but the way of the world is the broad way that leads to death and destruction. It never can lead one soul through the strait gate that leads to immortal life. Oh, how lamentable it is that fallen men, chosen to become heirs of salvation, should esteem so lightly the Holy Scriptures, which are able to make us wise unto salvation!

"I will pray with the spirit, and I will pray with the understanding also: I will sing with the spirit and I will sing with the understanding also" (1 Cor. 14: 15). How can a professed Christian, with his mind absorbed with dress and worldly fashion, pray and sing with the spirit and with the understanding? Means, health, and even life itself, have been squandered on the altar of fashion. The rich squander means on expensive array, and the poor strain every muscle and every nerve to ape the follies of the rich. Debts are incurred, and when they are due they can not be met. Then lying and deceit ride on the back of debt.

Fashion is a galling yoke to many people for whom Christ died. Jesus says, "My yoke is easy and my burden is light." If we take Christ's yoke, we shall find rest and sweet peace. People will go out and expose themselves to the coldest weather with not half enough wraps to keep themselves warm, because fashion says so. Foolish fashion conceals the sting of death. Well might the angels weep over the sight.

"Ye are our epistles written in our hearts, known and read of all men," says Paul. If we are in possession of the light, we should put it on a candlestick where others may see it, and we should not put it under a bushel. The divine standard of human excellency is far above the adornment of our bodies for the pleasure of the age. "I will therefore that men pray everywhere, lifting up holy hands, without wrath and doubting. In like manner also, that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with broidered hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array" (1 Tim. 2: 8, 9). "But let it be the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price" (1 Peter 3: 4).

These words were given by the Holy Spirit, and they are so plain that a child can understand them; and God intends that Christians shall be obedient to them as long as the world stands. It is sad to know that some who profess to know God and keep his commandments, follow the world in dress as much as they possibly can and still retain the Christian name. But the Bible nowhere gives the Christian permission to pattern after the world. Christ will have the whole heart, mind and soul.

The Boys.

BY LILLIAN FARHART.

READING the different articles in the GOSPEL MESSENGER on the subject of boys, I feel to send the poem entitled, "We Want the Boys," which I wrote for the benefit of the boys of our Sunday-school. It seems to be somewhat of a task to keep the boys in regular attendance at Sunday-school and church services,—really more so than the girls. Our hearts go out in sympathy for the boys. Not only does this apply to the Markle congregation, but elsewhere among the Brethren, and even to other denominations. It seems we can see Jesus looking down from his home in heaven with an eye of love and pity upon the poor and misguided children of today.

The verses below were written in sympathy for the boys of today. They were very impressively spoken at our Children's Meeting by Cora Garber, a little girl who, by her heartfelt sympathy, left a profound impression upon the hearts and minds of the people.

We Want the Boys.

We've often heard the beautiful song,
"Oh, Where Is My Boy Tonight?"
But, listen, the story for today
Is, Where are the boys for right?

'Tis the dear boys we're talking of now,
'Tis the boys we have in our mind.
If we'd make a search for the scattered boys,
I wonder how many we'd find.

No matter what kind of lives they live,
No matter how sunken in sin,
A heart of love will bring them to Christ.
For prayer is sure to win.

It may be boys, low down in sin,
It may be boys good at the start.
It makes no difference,—good or bad,—
All boys are dear to our heart.

We need the boys both large and small,
And we must give them our care.
We need them,—larger and smaller ones,—
And teach them the cross to bear.

They have a soul to be saved or lost,
They've a mind that's bright and clear,
The narrow road they must travel each day,
If they would reach heaven, so dear!

Just think of the mother that's dead and gone,
Just think of her dear, darling boy.
She thought of him still as she passed away,
His mem'ry was all her joy.

How earnest a godly mother's prayer!
How loving a mother's heart!
How freely oft flows the unbidden tear,
When mourning sin's fatal dart.

With answered prayers we'll then go home
To the beautiful, golden shore,
We want our boys, yes, all of them,
Where sorrow shall reign no more.

Most truly we should be concerned about the boys of today. Since these verses were written, two distressing accidents have befallen two young men of our little town of Markle. Both met death by drowning, passing away only three days apart. The first one, at the age of twenty-five, died on a Sunday morning while bathing. He was a good young man in every respect. The other died July 4, at the age of thirty-four, while swimming. He had been drinking heavily just before entering the water.

In the case of the first young man it seemed sad to the entire body of people that he should be so quickly called away from time to eternity. And yet, how much worse it was for the man who went down to his grave with the weight of sin resting upon him!

We want the boys to be what God himself intended them to be,—followers of Jesus Christ. Let us all, with prayerful hearts, do our whole duty, and much good shall be accomplished to God's honor and glory.

The Name on the Glass.

A BUSINESS establishment in a down-town district had changed hands, a different firm had taken it, and a new sign appeared above the door and new names on the letter heads.

"Only one trace of the former management left," laughed an old employé, "and that's the big front window. There's something queer about that window. The old firm name was painted clear across it in large letters, and, of course, one of the first things the new people did was to get rid of that. A man came and took it off with soapstone and acid—or whatever they use—and the plate glass was soon left as bright and clear as you please, without a spot or line on it. But let there come a frosty night or a day when the window is covered with dew, and the old firm name shows up again so plainly that anyone can read it. I suppose there was something in the paint that so penetrated the glass that frost or mist won't cling where it has been. At any rate, the old words stand out when the rest is covered."

Princess Miahesca, of Bucharest, is said to be possessed of the most expensive hat now in existence, the finest creation of a London milliner's art, and made at a cost of $1,000. Incredible though it is, as this large expenditure may seem, the great cost is not wholly unexplainable. Costly fabrics were used,—the choicest white ospreys procurable being its chief ornamentation. It is said that hundreds of the bird's had to be ruthlessly slaughtered, in order that the choicest part of their plumage might deck the headgear of this lady of fashion. Great is the power of "Madam Fashion." How any one, blessed with an average amount of common sense,—saying nothing of religious principle,—can be so fully ensnared by fashion's folly as may be seen daily on our streets, is hard to comprehend, but people will do almost anything to be in the mad whirl, and, if possible, outshine all the rest.

SISTERS' AID SOCIETIES

GREENVILLE, OHIO.—July 20 eighteen members of the Sisters' Aid Society of Panther Creek, Ohio (in the Ludlow congregation), met with us at the Brethren's Home for an all-day meet. They brought a bountiful dinner for all the members of the Home and themselves, donated their time, some cotton thread, stitching and apples. They made a number of garments for the children, some sheets, towels, prayer cloths and finished some comforts. This was their third annual visit to the Home. The old people look forward to those visits with pleasure, and wish they would come oftener. May the Lord bless all his willing workers!—Sarah E. Mumbly, Greenville, July 24.

DIXON, ILL.—From Jan. 5 to July 6, 1911, we held thirteen meetings, with an average attendance of seven members present. Jan. 5 we had $7.41 in the treasury; received for work done, $5.75; expenses, $3.65; collection, $3.04, leaving a balance in the treasury of $10.55. Our work consists mostly of mending, piecing quilts, quilting quilts and comforters and sewing in the homes, when called for, at fifty cents an afternoon, from two to four o'clock. Sewing for the poor is donated, July 4 we held an election for officers for the next six months, with Sister Emma Berg as president; Sister Emma Boyd, vice-president; Sister Hattie Hults, secretary-treasurer. May our work be prospered.—Mrs. Bessie C. Dickey, Rolling Secretary-treasurer, Dixon, Ill., July 27.

CHICO, CAL.—We reorganized our Sisters' Aid Society April 27, electing the following officers: Sister S. A. Ullery, president; Sister Ella Rothrock, vice-president; the writer, secretary-treasurer. Although we are few in number, we are doing what we can. We met each week for work since we organized. Our average attendance is about six. Our work has been mostly making coverings and sewing quilt patches for making comforts. Last week we took our work and went for an outing to a beautiful grove beside a quiet brook. There, under the shade of the grape vines, entertained by the sturdy oaks, we worked, and offered our devotions to God for his loving kindness to us. We had the pleasure of having most of our young sisters with us. May the Lord help us to do more and better work for him, here as well as elsewhere!—Anna Kline, Box 503, Chico, Cal., July 24.

THE Brethren in Southern Illinois are to hold their District Meeting at Girard, Oct. 4.

BRO. W. M. HOWE is booked for a series of meetings in Hooversville, Pa., beginning Oct. 22.

BRO. GEORGE C. CARL, Portland, Oregon, is to represent the District of Oregon on the Standing Committee of 1912.

BRO. GEORGE W. FLORY, of Covington, Ohio, is to be with the Springfield church, Ind., at their harvest meeting, Sept. 3.

BRO. JOHN HECKMAN, of Polo, Ill., is to assist the members at Des Moines, Iowa, in a series of meetings, beginning Oct. 25.

DURING the late series of meetings at Sams Creek, Md., conducted by Bro. Geo. Rairigh, of Denton, five applied for membership.

SEPT. 28 is the date announced for the District Meeting of Southeastern Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York, to be held in the First Brethren Church, Brooklyn, N. Y.

NEXT week we are to publish the program for the Ministerial Meeting of Southeastern Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York, to be held in Brooklyn, N. Y., beginning at 1 P. M., Sept. 27.

WE notice that liberal collections are being taken at the various harvest meetings now being held. It shows that the work of the Lord is being remembered by those who have been so richly blest at his hands.

SOME one has said that "the hypocrite in the church is the devil's imitation of a Christian." True enough; but it is deplorable that Satan should be thus represented among those who claim to be the Lord's people.

THE Ministerial and Sunday-school Meetings of the Southern District of Pennsylvania are to be held in the First Church of the Brethren, York, Pa., Aug. 17 and 18. The program will be found in another column.

THE Sunday-school Board of the Brotherhood, consisting of Brethren Lafayette Steele, Levi Minnich, D. H. Zigler, H. K. Ober and James M. Mohler, with I. B. Trout, Secretary, is holding a meeting in Elgin this week.

THOUSANDS of our readers will regret to learn of the death of Sister Geiser, wife of Bro. J. S. Geiser, Baltimore, Md. She passed to her reward on Tuesday morning, Aug. 1, and was laid to rest Aug. 4. She will be remembered by many as the sister who sustained painful injuries in a fall during the Conference at Springfield, Ill., in 1906.

THE District Meeting of Middle Iowa is to convene in the Prairie City church at 8 A. M., Wednesday, Sept. 27. The Elders' Meeting is Sept. 26, at 2: 30 P. M. A Temperance and Child Rescue Meeting is to be held on the evening of Sept. 26. The Ministerial and Sunday-school Meetings will begin at 8 A. M., Sept. 28.

THE Ministerial and Sunday-school Meetings of Southern Ohio, to be held in the Poplar Grove congregation, are announced for Aug. 14 and 15. Bro. Moy Wing, our first Chinese convert, is to take part in these meetings.

ON page 510 we publish the latest financial report of the General Mission Board. Owing to a lack of room, the report of the special Annual Meeting Collection can not be given this week, but will be published in our next issue.

WE are requested to announce the District Meeting for Northeastern Kansas, to be held at the Washington Creek church, Douglas County, for Oct. 3. The Sunday-school and Ministerial Meetings, at the same place, will be held Oct. 1 and 2.

ONE of our exchanges says, "There is not much use wasting sympathy on the woman who nearly kills herself washing and ironing fancy clothes for her children, for the youngsters would be a lot better off with less flummery, and so would she."

A BROTHER suggests that the test of "pure and undefiled religion" is seen in the way we conduct ourselves on our summer vacations. What we do while away from home influences and church restrictions is a true index of the genuineness of our religion.

WE are living so fast, in this age of fretful haste and strenuous endeavor, that we scarce "take time to be holy." Why not, at times, withdraw from earth's jangles and heed the loving entreaty of Christ, "Come ye yourselves apart, and rest a while"?

AN exchange cautions its readers, "Don't warp the truth for personal expediency." Looking at the actions of some who claim to have put on the "new man," one might readily conclude that the truth has not only been "warped," but that it has been lost sight of entirely.

UNDER date of July 25 Bro. J. E. Miller writes us from Zürich, Switzerland, the home of the noted reformer, Zwingli. He and his party are delighted with their visit among the historic scenes of Europe. They started to Germany the next day, and by this time may be in England.

MANY of our mission points have a long, hard struggle to gain a foothold, but while it may be for them a day of small beginnings, let them remember that the weakest and most insignificant start of any good work is sure, by God's grace, to abound to his glory. It can not fail.

QUITE recently the little band of members, numbering about forty-five, at Rockford, this State, were organized, with Bro. P. R. Keltner as elder in charge. The organization will be known as the Rockford church, and is welcomed among the congregations of Northern Illinois and Wisconsin.

THE Old Order Brethren always publish in their church paper, The Vindicator, a very complete report of the receipts and expenditures of their Annual Meeting. We notice that the cost of their late Conference was $1,645.16, and the receipts $562.26, leaving an indebtedness of $1,082.90 to be provided for.

BRO. E. S. YOUNG, of Canton, Ohio, was a recent caller at the Publishing House, and expressed himself as being much pleased with the growth and development of our business. Bible study and its promotion is still the special work and aim of Bro. Young, and to it he is devoting his best efforts.

TWO of our young Scandinavian brethren are in prison for refusing to perform military duty. In Denmark and Sweden it is required that all able-bodied men serve in the army a few years, so as to be prepared, in the event of war, to play their part in military operations. This has been very much against our work in Europe. Most young brethren leave the country and come to America, in order to escape military service, but the two referred to have decided to stand by their profession, and serve out their time in prison, after which they will be at liberty to work for the Master's cause unmolested.

BRO. ALLEN IVES, of Centralia, Wash., died July 17 at the age of eighty-three years. As a pioneer preacher, and a man of rare ability and zeal, he was widely known in the West and did his part in planting and caring for churches in new localities. A more extended notice of him will be published next week.

BRO. CHAS. W. EISENBISE, late of Chicago, recently called at the MESSENGER sanctum. He goes to Kingsley, Iowa, to engage in pastoral work. We had a very pleasant talk with him about his recent experiences in the Bible Lands. He feels that his trip abroad will, in many ways, prove helpful to him in his church work.

WE are told that the Sunday-school Convention at Denton, Md., mentioned last week, is only a local and not a District affair. Our correspondent did not say that it was a District Convention, but we inferred this from the program. Our rule is not to publish local programs, and contributors will please not send them to us.

MANY of the churches are now using our new song book, "Kingdom Songs," and others are taking steps to introduce it in the near future. Those of our churches who have had the privilege of using the book since its first appearance, are loud in their praise of its inspiring songs, and report a renewed interest in the song service.

SEVERAL most remarkable instances of recovery from serious bodily affliction, by means of the anointing service, have recently been reported by our correspondents. Why do not more of our members avail themselves of the gracious privilege, so rich in blessing, and so conducive to the spiritual and bodily well-being of the earnest believer?

THE Lordsburg, Cal., church is taking steps towards an enlargement of the building now in use by the congregation. The house, when built some years ago, was thought to be ample for future needs, but now the increase in membership and the growing needs of the Sunday-school require a larger house. There is no surer indication of congregational prosperity than the demand for additional room, in order to carry on the Lord's work more acceptably.

BRO. B. E. KESLER, of River Bend, Colo., on his way to his discussion in Indiana, spent last Lord's Day in Elgin, and gave us two splendid addresses. Our people heard him with much interest. Bro. Kesler not only understands the Gospel, but he knows how to present it clearly and forcibly. It is to be regretted that a preacher of his ability, in a wealthy church like ours, should have to engage in manual labor for his living. All of his time and strength should be devoted to making the Word of God known to the people.

THERE are various ways of spending a vacation, but he who can combine real service to others with his recreation, blesses both himself and others. Bro. S. B. Miller, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, whose professional duties as a busy physician, keep him closely confined through the year, took a vacation trip to Perth, N. Dak., and held a two weeks' series of meetings while sojourning with the members at that place. So far thirteen have been baptized. One applicant is yet to be received, and there are good prospects for more. Bro. Miller informs us that our new song book, "Kingdom Songs," was used to most excellent advantage in the song services.

THE fall term of Bethany Bible School, 3435 West Van Buren Street, Chicago, opens Tuesday morning, Sept. 5. By the end of the week a number of the outgoing missionaries are expected to reach the city, and for that reason some special meetings will be held on Saturday evening, Sept. 9, and on Sunday following. Bro. Galen B. Royer delivers an address on Saturday evening, and Bro. D. L. Miller conducts the services on Sunday morning. In the afternoon Bro. I. B. Trout and your office editor have been requested to conduct a service that will be of special interest to our missionaries and others. The purpose of these meetings is to intensify and help to develop the missionary spirit among our people.

The Mount Morris Meeting.

THURSDAY, Aug. 3, was the day agreed upon for the District Meeting of Northern Illinois and Wisconsin, and the place was Mount Morris. The day before had been set apart for the Ministerial, Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meetings. This made it necessary for the elders to meet Aug. 1. It is needless to say that the Mount, at this season of the year, is an ideal place for gatherings of this sort. The college buildings were at the disposal of those having the preparations in charge, and there was plenty of room for every purpose.

The elders met at 1: 30 P. M., there being present thirty-five of the fifty-six in the District. Bro. D. D. Culler presided, while Bro. James M. Moore served as Secretary. The whole of the afternoon was devoted to the work belonging to the eldership body, and still some matters had to be taken up and disposed of in short sessions held in the evening and the day following. At this meeting a few committees to churches were appointed, and steps were taken to restore to active working condition two of our run-down congregations. Our elders believe in looking after the weak churches.

It was decided that next year the elders will meet on Tuesday at 8 A. M., and continue their deliberations until their work is fully completed. It is believed that, in some instances, too little time and attention are given to the Elders' Meeting, and for that reason some very important matters are neglected. Here the shepherds of the flock meet and have heart-to-heart talks about the methods suited to the needs of the churches placed in their care. They spend no time laying down rules, for that is no part of their business, but they do consider methods, and devise ways and means of promoting the interests of the Lord's work. They are on good terms with each other, speak out frankly and are prepared to aid and stand by one another in every good work. We were all glad for the presence of Brethren L. W. Teeter, H. C. Early and Chas. D. Bonsack, to whom was extended the courtesy of the meeting.

In the evening we had the pleasure of listening to a good address by Bro. L. W. Teeter on "The Word of God." He handled his subject well, showing that the Word was from the beginning, that God is behind it, that it contains power, is also spirit and life, and is the means by which people are instructed and led to Christ. The address was given in the large College Chapel, which, on this occasion, was packed with attentive listeners.

The next morning, with Bro. James M. Moore in the chair, and Bro. M. W. Emmert acting as Secretary, the Ministerial Meeting was called to order at 8: 30. There was a good representation of ministers present, to say nothing of others from the different congregations in the District. The entire forenoon was taken up with discussing "The Social Problem of the Church," "The Minister's Call" and "The Devotional Side of the Minister's Life." The different topics were well handled, but the one on "The Minister's Call" gave rise to a splendid interest. Some of the speeches were impressive, and all of them proved edifying and instructive.

The afternoon was occupied with topics in the interest of the Sunday-school, and proved to be as full of interest as the forenoon had been. At this meeting Bro. J. G. Royer, our District Sunday-school Secretary, presided, while Bro. J. H. B. Williams acted in the capacity of Secretary. The time allotted to this meeting was taken up in considering "The Teacher, His Preparation and His Work." The different phases of the subject were quite thoroughly canvassed, and we are sure that all present experienced a spiritual uplift. The importance of teachers understanding and teaching the church fundamentals was more thoroughly discussed than we ever before heard at a meeting of this kind.

After a splendid Christian Workers' Meeting in the evening, in which several of our members took a most interesting and creditable part, an exceptionally large audience had the pleasure of listening to an able discourse on "Education" by Bro. O. L. Shaw. He took up the question of education among us, showed the value of mental training, and the marvelous progress our people, during the last thirty-five years, have made along educational lines. It was one of the most satisfactory and the most convincing addresses with which our people in Northern Illinois have been favored since beginning our school work.

He dwelt with marked emphasis on the importance of the Brethren patronizing and supporting their own educational institutions, and among other things said, that he wondered why our schools are not well advertised in our church periodicals. He insisted that these schools should be kept constantly before our people, in the columns of the MESSENGER and our other house publications.

On Thursday morning, as announced, the District Meeting convened. The retiring officers in charge consisted of Bro. D. D. Culler, Moderator; Bro. James M. Moore, Reading Clerk, and Bro. J. H. B. Williams, Writing Clerk. The roll call showed that all of the churches in Northern Illinois, and most of those in Wisconsin, were represented by delegates. The ballot for the officers of the meeting resulted in the choice of Bro. I. B. Trout, Moderator; Bro. S. S. Plum, Reading Clerk, and Bro. M. M. Sherrick, Writing Clerk.

Most of the forenoon session was consumed in receiving and considering reports regarding the Missionary, Sunday-school and Temperance Departments, along with a report respecting the Old People's and Orphans' Home. We can not enter into detail regarding any of these reports, more than to say that each department was found in a good working condition.

Considerable time was spent on a plan, offered by a committee previously appointed for the purpose, recommending that the District engage in Child Rescue Work. The plan was most thoroughly discussed, and then, with certain changes recommended, spread on the Minutes for one year.

A number of queries from the churches were presented, and we did the unusual thing by sending six of them to the Annual Meeting. One paper calls for the Annual Meeting to be held at Winona Lake, Ind., in 1913, and a committee of three was appointed to confer with the Districts of Ohio, Indiana and Southern Illinois, regarding the Conference, whenever it comes to any one of the States named, and so to arrange that the Meeting may be centrally and conve-

The Home.

In Three Parts.—Part Three.

The Duty of Children to Their Parents.—The right relation of children to their parents is the foundation of all true manhood and womanhood. It is so in the very nature of things, and can not be otherwise. And no child who disregards this law can hope to reach the best in life. It is the great question, therefore, of the age.

The duties of children to their parents are the reciprocation of the parental duties. As it is the duty of parents to love their children, to train them and to control them, it is the duty of children to love their parents, to receive their instruction and to obey them.

As it is the first duty of parents to their children to love them, so the first duty of children to parents is to love them. True, filial affection is the seat of all right conduct on the part of the child toward its parents; it is also the measure of it. It should be deep and real, therefore. Filial affection should spring, first, from the natural relation of children to their parents. By them they have their being. To them, as instruments in God's hands, they owe their existence. They gave them birth. Filial affection should spring, secondly, from parental care. The parents nourish and care for the children, and, too, when they are not able to care for themselves. They provide for their needs, train them, direct them toward the best ends in life, share in all their struggles, and rejoice in all their successes. To true parents children owe everything, and, certainly, it would be an ingrateful child whose heart would go untouched. Richter has said, "Filial love can only spring up toward a heart whereon we have long reposed, and which has protected us, as it were, with the first heart's leaves against cold nights and hot days."

Children should cheerfully receive the instruction of their parents. As God has made it the duty of parents to train their children, such training can not be accomplished without the cooperation of the children in receiving it. And as the family is the chief training-place of children, for their mission in life, the highest end for which the family stands is baffled without the spirit of teachableness on the part of children.

The parents are the children's best teachers. They are the fathers and mothers of the children, and hold their interests closer than any one else; they are necessarily much older than their children, and have much more experience; and with the advantages of age and experience, they understand life better than their children, having much more wisdom. Certainly, then, our fathers and mothers are our best teachers and counsellors, and should be accepted as such. The child is a foolish child that closes its ear to those who love it most and teach it according to experience and wisdom, and opens its ear to those who neither love its interest nor are guided by the wisdom of experience.

But "foolishness is bound in the heart of a child." And so it is hard to convince children that their parents understand life better than they. Particularly is this true, when children reach the critical period in life, beginning with a boy a little before his beard begins to grow, and his voice changes, and with a girl a few years younger. It is then that all teaching points the wrong way for them, unless it points their way; and many, many children, refusing all instruction at the hands of their parents during this critical age, have been forced, in later years, with shame and sorrow, to confess their sad, irretrievable blunder.

As it is the duty of parents to exercise parental authority and control over their children, it is the duty of children to render unreserved obedience to parents.

The Ten Commandments are divided into two groups. The first group, embracing the first four commandments, teach man's duty to God; the second group, embracing the last six commandments, teach man's duty to man. Of these, the first one states the duty of children to their parents. It says, "Honor thy father and thy mother; that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee." This is the first law that touches the child life; and it is the first commandment with promise, as Paul classifies commandments (Eph. 6: 1-3).

This law touches the very foundation of obedience. Since there can be no real, filial obedience without reverence for the person and authority of parents, it is required that children honor their father and mother. The act of outward obedience is not enough. The outward must be the result of an inward condition. The first essential to obedience,—whether it be to parents or others,—is respect, reverence, honor for them. In honor to them and their rightful authority, children should affectionately bow in obedience to their father and mother.

Whether or not the reasons for the parental command are made plain to children, it is their duty to obey. Yet, as a rule, intelligent subjection to authority is, no doubt, better training than unintelligent, unreasoning subjection. And whether or not the command agrees with the wishes and inclination of the children, it is still their duty to obey. Prompt and unquestioning obedience is required, and the sooner children are taught to yield cheerfully to the wiser wills and the rightful authority of their parents, the better.

The commandment, or law, for filial obedience has several promises. The sixth of the Ten Commandments says, "That thy days may be long." Paul, in quoting this commandment, says, "That it may be well with thee." And Solomon, in speaking of the father's commandment and the mother's law (and he speaks more frequently on this subject than any of the Bible writers), says, "When thou goest, it shall lead thee; when thou sleepest, it shall keep thee; and when thou awakest, it shall talk with thee." It will be noticed that these promises cover almost everything. Summed up and briefly stated, they promise long life, prosperity, guidance, protection and happiness. Or, in other words, this is the beginning of a right life.

Men trace their longevity and prosperity in life to their foundation in filial obedience; and, on the other hand, most men trace their want of prosperity and peace, and their premature end, to the foundation they laid early in life, in disobedience to their parents. It is the certain way of doing it, for it is God's decree. Let those know, who would enjoy a long and prosperous life, that it begins in filial obedience. Those who would lay the foundation for an unhappy, unblessed life and speedy end, can do nothing more certain to bring it to pass than disobedience to parents.

The limit of filial obedience is determined by the law of right. The command is, "Children, obey your parents in the Lord." Obedience must be in the Lord, or, in other words, it must be according to law of right. When teachings are not according to this standard, children are under no obligation to obey; they are under obligation to disobey, and suffer the consequences, whatever it may be. No child is bound to lie, or steal, or swear, because an ungodly parent may command it. And, certainly, no parent has the right to give such instruction.

When there is reasonable doubt as to the right or wrong of any parental demand, the authority of the parents must be acknowledged, since their knowledge and experience are more mature. H. C. E.

The Thunderstorm.

A MIDAFTERNOON in July, a clear sky, an almost scorching sun, an atmosphere without a breeze, and the people, as they pass by, saying: "O how hot! If it would only rain. Everything is burning up, and if we don't soon have rain, our lots, gardens and fields will amount to nothing." And so it looked, and all we could do was to say: "Yes, it is very hot and dry, and a good shower would be very acceptable indeed." Then we commenced thinking, as we do sometimes, and we said,—yes, we said,—"Does not God know?" Then we continued our reading,—and we do some reading. We were reading a new exegesis on the eleventh chapter of First Corinthians, and we became so interested in this that, for the time being, we forgot all about the weather until a deep, rumbling sound in the West awakened us from our line of thought, and we looked in the direction from which the sound came, and there we saw, in the distant West, banks of dark clouds rising up. As we looked at these clouds, we noticed faint flashes of lightning darting over their surface and, following this, another rumbling sound, as the noise of a distant army, engaged in mortal conflict.

Then we said: "A thunderstorm!" "What is a thunderstorm?" asked the children at play out in the yard. They came running in saying: "O grandpa, there's a rain coming! O goody, goody! A rain coming!"

There may be different ways of defining a thunderstorm, but we shall define it in our own way. A thunderstorm is God's way of interpreting his majesty, his power and his love to the children of men. This is our conception of a thunderstorm, as we had it a few afternoons ago.

We are interested in the singing of the birds; and, to our knowledge, we never heard more beautiful and entertaining bird songs than during the present summer. We are interested in beautifully-kept lawns, filled with fine shrubbery, trailing vines, rambling roses, and the larger trees, as they are gently swayed by the ever-welcome evening breezes. We are interested in the surrounding hills and the mountains, covered with their forest mantle, blue, green and golden. And we are often made to repeat with the Psalmist of old: "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament sheweth his handy-work. Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night sheweth knowledge." But, on the whole, there is nothing to us so intensely interesting as God's thunderstorm, as it comes to the thirsty earth, laden with its golden drops of blessing.

Of course, it does not come to all alike. Some stand in awe at its approach. Others are made to fear and tremble, as it flashes its darts of fire and makes the earth tremble and quake. And still others run and hide in their darkest rooms, or bury themselves in their feather-beds that they may thus hide themselves from the monster death that is ever stalking around among the dark clouds, ready to pierce the most exposed victim with his dart of fire. But to us, and many others, there is something so majestic, so wonderful, so beautiful and so interesting about the thunderstorm that we feel we can not afford to lose the sight by hiding from it.

Independent of everything else, the approach of a thunderstorm is most interesting. First, over the distant horizon or mountain tops, is seen forming the small cloud, as the prophet's servant saw it before the approaching rain. As it grows it darkens, and we see, on its lower side, streaks of lightning, as they dart and zigzag from point to point. Following we hear, —faint or loud, in proportion to the distance,—the report, or the thunder. The storm brews and enlarges, the lightning grows more vivid, the thunder becomes louder and quicker after each flash. We feel the coming storm and we observe its force by the bending forests as they are swayed to and fro by its mighty power. Then come the sharp flashes of electric fire, the instant claps of thunder, the large drops of rain, and the thunderstorm in all of its beauty, wonder and crushing power is on. All we have to do is to clap our hands, admire and thank our God, who thus interprets his love in his everlasting remembrance of us.

What should the manner of a storm's approach teach us? First, it impresses us with God's majesty and power, the largeness of his ways of distributing his gifts, and the power with which he does it. Our fields, our orchards and gardens are drying up and dying for want of water and moisture, and no matter how much water we might have at our command, located as we are among the hills and in the valleys, it would be impossible to apply it to our gardens and fields in a quantity and quality to make it profitable or worth while. We had been trying it on some corn and potatoes in our lot, and the success was so small and discouraging that we decided to abandon it and trust Providence to take care of our garden. The next afternoon the thundershower came, and in a half hour the Lord watered thousands and millions of acres in less time and with greater thoroughness than a hundred men could have cared for one acre. And even for a small amount of water thus used, they would have been necessitated to go to the Lord. It is true that there is much land in this world of ours that the Lord has adapted to irrigation through human effort; but the water thus used, all the same, comes to the earth in showers through the Lord's great watering pot.

Did you ever think how easy it is for the Lord to water this great garden of his, and how timely and well he does it? If we were to make the water and distribute it over this world of ours, there would be a great many crop failures and an endless amount of grumbling. And, further, if, by a stronger degree of faith, we could accept the fact that God, through his great love and wisdom and power, regulates and runs this world for the common good of his people, there would be much less grumbling in time of droughts and short crops, and a thousand times greater joy and appreciation when the life-giving showers do come. How could human wisdom regulate the acreage planted and sowed each year, and the rains so to fall, and the frosts and the destructive bugs so to be held in check that the world would have just enough and no surplus to be wasted? Sometimes there are severe droughts, even to suffering and starvation, in some parts of the world, but this is because of sin and unrighteousness. If the people, the world over, were even half as good and as appreciative as they should be, such things would never happen. Because God so loves us, these chastisements come. The goodness of God ought to lead us all to repentance, but, unfortunately, it does not. Therefore, the penalty of sin comes to us.

Second, God wants us to know him and the power of his love. In order that we may learn to do this more fully, he expresses his majesty and power in connection with some of the most valuable blessings which he showers upon us. Showers of rain are wonderful blessings. Therefore, in connection with some of them, he first gives us an expression of his majesty and power in the lightning and the thunder. What does this do? It causes us to think of God and his wonderful power. He is our Divine Father, and if he holds such wonderful power in his hands, need we doubt, need we fear?

Then, to impress us with his love, he accompanies his expression of majesty and power with the refreshing showers of rain. What effect ought this to have upon us? No true believer in God, the Father, and Jesus Christ, the Son, can witness such expressions of power and love without being touched by his power and soothed by his love.

Did you, in the midst of a thunderstorm, ever sing the hymn beginning, "It thunders, but I tremble not; my faith is fixed firm in God"? If you did not, try it, and we are sure you will have a new and more blessed interpretation of a thunderstorm than you ever experienced before.

And, lastly, do you know that the beautiful rainbow always comes after the shower? As often as you partake of the loaf and cup you are made to remember Jesus, our Savior, until he comes again. As often as you see God's bow promise painted on the clouds, remember that it is his seal that no more shall this earth be destroyed by water. God's goodness and mercy endure forever. Amen. H. B. B.

The Friendly Greeting.

IN no other way, perhaps, do the members of the average congregation fail as often and as grievously as in their lack of Christian courtesy to those around them, especially to the "stranger within their gates." The recent statement of a sister, who said that out of a large number of members at a morning service but two had welcomed her to the meeting, may be a surprise to many of us and yet it was doubtless typical of a score of other churches, remiss in cordiality and kindly attention to strangers. There is nothing that the church and the people in general need more than love,—that practical expression of it that can not help but manifest itself in a look that means "God bless you." There should not be such a thing as coldness in any church or community. A brother recently said, "When I travel I make it a rule to stop off over Sunday and go to church. If the people should happen to miss giving me 'the glad hand,' I reach out and give them the glad hand, anyway. There is nothing that cheers people's hearts like love, —like being neighborly." Happy is the man who has the gift of neighborly approach to the stranger. The gift of the "glad hand" may, at times, be quite as efficacious as the gift of tongues. It is something that even the most unlearned in our ranks can readily cultivate and use to most excellent advantage. Many a man has once got a grip on life and on the hearty handshake of an humble believer, whose tongue might have sadly faltered, had he attempted to administer a lengthy and elaborate admonition on right living.

Joining Reform Societies.

WE are repeatedly asked whether it is right for our members to join certain reform societies, or certain leagues, each one having some good work in view. But these societies and leagues have their public entertainments, at which some questionable things are done, mainly with a view of pleasing the public. Then we are further asked whether it would be proper for our young brethren and sisters to attend these gatherings and take part in the games and plays. There is just one answer to all questions of this sort: Do that which will please Jesus and prove helpful to his cause. We are sure that it would not please the Master to have his children associated with societies and leagues that engage in questionable entertainments, however noble be the purpose of their organization. It is safe to say that our people can accomplish their greatest good by working under the direction and influence of those connected with our own body. Our members know each other, are in sympathy with each other, and understand the genius of the church, and for that reason they can work better with each other than with those having a different spirit.

BLOUNTVILLE, TENNESSEE.

Haw Ridge is a mission point, under the care of the Pleasant Hill congregation, Tenn. There had been no place for preaching services for about twenty years until recently a union churchhouse was erected. The writer was asked to preach for them, and on their third Sunday in April, 1911, was our first appointment. We have had regular services each month since. We certainly were impressed at first that those people were indeed hungry for the Bread of Life. The congregation has expressed a desire that a series of meetings be held for them, and in view of that fact Bro. J. D. Clark, of Jonesboro, Tenn., was secured to assist in the meetings. July 16 we went to the appointed place and began services, continuing for ten days—two services each day. The house was a good-sized building, yet was not large enough to accommodate the people at all the services. As a visible result six were received into fellowship by baptism, four of whom were nearly seventy years old. The baptism was witnessed by a number of people, probably from two to six hundred. Many of them had never looked upon so solemn a scene. Five more await the rite, making eleven in all. We were informed, that, until recently, persons even sixty years old, living in the same neighborhood, had never entered a church door. May God move upon the hearts of his children to look after the neglected ones! We never saw greater interest manifested, and the doctrine of the Bible was gladly received. Truly the harvest is great and the laborers are few. May the Lord send more laborers into this great Southland! Samuel H. Garst.

GREENE CHURCH, IOWA.

I spent two weeks in the Greene church, Iowa. The Sunday following our General Conference these dear people held their love feast, which was a most interesting and blessed occasion, opening, as it did, a fine revival. Bro. William H. Hood is their elder and pastor. He is doing a good work. He is tactful, loyal and zealous. There is always a promising outlook when an elder in charge of a church directs his people to be devotional in spirit and orderly in appearance.

I was not able to do as much as an evangelist should do, but the people had a mind to work, which is, after all, the main thing. Brother and Sister John L. Bingaman know how to care for a minister in delicate health.

There are three things that I wish to mention in this article: Bro. Hood made an appointment for preaching at a central point of the town. Then, with two sisters who are good singers, himself a accompanist, and the writer, he reached the place at the hour appointed, and an impressive street service was held. Hundreds of attentive hearers were present. The automobile was used as a pulpit. This was my first sermon on a street corner. The singing was a happy feature of the service.

A "cowboy" brother, who has spent several years in the "wild and woolly West" before his conversion, lives twelve miles from Greene. He often drove to church after dinner each day during the day, returning after services. He came for six successive nights without missing a service. His effort was a great inspiration to the preacher, and, in turn, had a decided effect upon the meeting. The long-distance comers, the every-night comers and the rainy-night comers gave a force and backing to the meetings that no one can estimate.

All the children,—three daughters and two sons,—of Bro. Glock's family accepted the terms of salvation in a single service. That was a happy evening. I, with others, went for joy. All were baptized at the same baptismal service. I. N. H. Beahm.

THE PASSING OF BRO. J. F. NEHER.

The death of Bro. J. F. Neher has removed from the Church of the Brethren a most loyal and willing worker who gave unstintingly of his time and talent to his beloved church. He was well known and loved, especially in the States of Kansas, California, Texas and Oklahoma, for his original thinking and self-sacrificing service in the ministry, never flinching from leaving bench or farm, and going many miles to fill his several appointments.

He was indeed a pioneer minister and elder. He had the joy of having organized many churches that very successfully extended the borders of our Brotherhood. As is frequently the case with those largely devoted to the Lord's work, he never prospered in the world's goods, although he was a very industrious and methodical man.

The interest of the Elk City church in Bro. Neher began in 1907, when our District sent him to the southwestern part of the State to shepherd the scattered members and organize churches. His intuitive nature caused him to select Elk City, a thriving trading center, surrounded by excellent agricultural facilities, as a center and home from which he could reach different preaching appointments. Thanks to his untiring energies, we now have a very convenient churchhome in the city, surrounded by about seventy-five members, doing most excellent work in all the activities of the church.

It would be an injustice not to mention that our church building, itself, stands as a living monument of the labors of our dear brother, for his hands performed the bulk of the work on the church, and also made our comfortable church furniture and pulpit. Everywhere we look we are reminded of him and sorely miss his good counsel.

He was born in Clinton County, Ind., April 7, 1845, died July 18, 1911, aged sixty-six years, three months and eleven days.

His life was replete with noble deeds. He gave his heart to the Master in his sixteenth year. He was called to the ministry in Adams County, Ill., when he was thirty-six years old, and ordained to the eldership in 1898. In 1906 he came on the Standing Committee from Texas.

Bro. Neher was essentially a home maker. He was married in 1864 to Marguerite Beydler, to which union were born seven sons and two daughters. His sons, Noah, John, Abram, Levi and Jesse, and two daughters, are prosperous citizens of California. His son, Daniel, died in California at the age of seventeen. His twin brother, Harvey, attended his father through his last illness.

Since living in Barber County, Kans., Bro. Neher's wife died in October, 1887. Bro. Neher then married Edith May Thompson, who lived but one year. At Lordsburg, Cal., in 1891, he married Sister Katie Miller, who, with their grown daughter, survives him. He was a loving husband and father. May our heavenly Father sustain these dear ones in their sad bereavement!

On New Year's night Bro. Neher faced a very cold storm in order to be at his post of duty, which brought on the complications from which he patiently suffered for six weary months. June 4 he felt it his duty, although failing, to preach a missionary sermon, preparatory to lifting our Annual Meeting collection. His earnest words came as a ringing message to many. June 11 he sat with us in his last Communion and love feast. July 18 the angels called, but his young heart impelled him to go with us four miles to a park and enjoy a children's outing. During the last week he was unconscious until he peacefully fell asleep.

The funeral was conducted in the church by Eld. E. J. Smith, assisted by Brethren Clapper and other ministers. Interment in the city cemetery. The funeral was attended by a large concourse of people, who thus testified their love and respect for one who was loved by all.

PINE GROVE CHURCH, PA.

The Pine Grove church, Somerset County, Pa., has been an important religious center for many years. It is a part of the Quemahoning congregation, and was, for a long time, known as the church on the Quemahoning. Here, ever since 1856, when the building was erected and set apart for the service of God, men and women have met and mingled their voices in song and prayer. Here God's prophet has declared faithfully the gospel message and many souls have accepted the Savior.

Many fathers, mothers and sisters have left the East and located in various parts of the Great West, even to the Pacific Coast, can recall pleasant associations at the old church in the pine woods. From here influences have gone forth that have been a strong factor in building up the Church of the Brethren.

Some who will read this report will remember when the services were all in German. Others remember when half of the service was in German and half in English. In later years the demand for German became less and less and finally disappeared altogether.

Among those who were born and raised here, later on united with the church and went to other places, are the Forneys, Fikes and Bloughs. Some of these are prominent workers in the Church of the Brethren missionary.—Eld. J. M. Blough, of India, spent his early life here, having been called to the ministry at this place.

Not often does it become necessary to abandon a churchhouse and give up a place of worship when there is a good, strong membership and a large, active Sunday-school. This, however, has become necessary with this historic church. A large reservoir is being erected in the Quemahoning Valley, and the church site will soon be covered by water.

A last public service was held on Sunday, July 23, with an attendance which could not all be accommodated. The service was in charge of Eld. P. J. Blough, one of the elders at this time. The exercises consisted of addresses, singing and prayer. A poem was written for the occasion by Bro. J. E. Blough. One feature of the service was the reading of a scripture and a prayer in German by the senior elder, J. W. Blough. The same scripture, part of John 14, was also read in English, and a prayer offered by Eld. S. P. Zimmerman. Short addresses were given by a number of persons present, some of them somewhat reminiscent, and all of them expressing a tender regard for the place, the truth taught here, and the splendid influence that has gone out from this place.

One of the features of the program was a song, "The Little White Church in the Pine Wood," adapted for the occasion and sung as a quartet by four sons of the former elder, E. J. Blough, now deceased. These sons are all in the ministry and had come from Johnstown, Pa., North Manchester, Ind., Manassas, Va., and Bolsar, India.

The service lasted three hours and we all went away with sad hearts, yet rejoicing that the Lord had done so much through the "Little White Church in the Pine Wood." Long may her memories live! May her influence never cease, and may her sons and daughters ever be loyal and active! S. S. Blough.

FOREIGN MISSION WORK AT HOME.

It causes great rejoicing, on the part of each one of us, as we see the Church of the Brethren opening missions in lands which she, heretofore, has not entered with the Gospel of Christ. There are those who are forsaking "homes, and fields, and sisters, and mothers and children and lands" for Christ's sake and the Gospel's. This, too, brings joy to the hearts of all who are interested in the salvation of souls. We wish there might be more, many more outgoing missionaries, this autumn, in order that God's kingdom might grow the more rapidly. There can not be too many to heed the call for reapers. There are yet millions of souls untouched by our brethren and sisters, in the countries where we are now represented, and there are yet many lands in which we have no workers at all.

For a number of years we did not see our way clear to do very much aggressive work in order to reach all nations. In the beginning, God, "not wishing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance," has been making the command, "Go ye, therefore, and make disciples of all the nations," easier for us to obey. He has been bringing the foreigner,—yes, the heathen, the idol worshipers,—to our doors. Not a few of the American nation have received the foreigner kindly. We have considered them as encroaching upon territory to which they had no right. But God has permitted them to come, and they are here. Shall we, as Christians, allow them to be brought so closely in touch with us and then not obey the command, "Disciple all nations"? Shall we close our eyes to the work at hand? Will not God hold us responsible for the souls, as well as for the souls of those across the water?

We have, in the city of Chicago, besides Americans who know not God, about forty thousand negroes, thousands of Polish, thousands of Irish, four thousand or more Chinese, thousands of Jewish men and women, etc. Most of these are without Christ, and many know nothing, or very little, about God.

Then think of the same condition existing in many other places in the United States. Think of New York City and Brooklyn, Philadelphia and Boston, on the Atlantic coast. Then turn to the West and consider the hundreds of thousands scattered on the Pacific Coast—Chinese, Japanese, and foreigners of all kinds, who have not the faintest idea of Christ and his saving power. What is to be done? If we truly pray the Lord of the harvest to thrust forth laborers into his harvest, I wonder if he will not send a goodly number from our good church homes, all over the United States, to help and labor in the fields that are so numerous on every hand. We are so glad that during the past year our Brethren in South Bend have been reaching the Chinese of their city. At the present writing two of our Chinese brethren from Chicago have gone there, at their request, to assist in the work for several weeks.

There is no greater joy in this world than to be daily in the service of the King of kings, winning souls for him. We would that more might experience this same joy. True, there is much hard and strenuous labor connected with it, but when God calls he is also able to "supply every need of yours."

We feel encouraged to urge others in all parts of our Brotherhood to do work among the foreigners, because of what God has wrought in our midst, during the past three and one-half years, by the most humble service of those who felt incapable of doing much for his cause. From our reports in the Gospel Messenger, you have learned that during this time eleven Chinese have come into the Church of the Brethren. Some of these are very elementary, as yet, in their Christian lives, but the larger percentage are growing very rapidly in the Spirit,—so rapidly that their teachers are often put to shame. During the past spring three of these brethren stepped working in laundries, in order to give their whole time to the study of God's Word. They located in Bethany Bible School, under whose supervision the Chinese Mission is conducted, and drank deeply of the Living Truth. Because of their limited knowledge of the English language, some of the teachers in the Mission helped them privately, so that they could attend the regular classes of Bible study, and enter into the spirit of the work as fully as possible. Oh, that more of us were as eager and willing to sacrifice, so we might prepare to carry the Gospel to those who know it not! That is why our Chinese brethren are thus preparing.

At least three or four of these brethren are arranging to enter school immediately upon its opening in September. Three or four others would be pleased to enter if it were possible, but because of financial obligations they will have to postpone their schooling for another year. Please speak to us in prayer that these sons of China, who are so fully yielding their lives to the Holy Spirit, may be guarded and kept through his power, to help solve the problem of the church in saving China for the Kingdom of God.

There is much yet to be done here in Chicago for the Chinese, the Jewish nation, the negroes and others. We shall be glad to hear from any one who may be interested in the welfare of these souls. Correspondence in regard to the work will be cheerfully answered, to the best of our ability if addressed to Bethany Bible School, as below.

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

ARKANSAS.

Austin.—Bro. D. L. Burns and the writer were called to the bedside of Sister W. T. Pries, of Wayes, Ark., to anoint her, as she was very sick. On account of the distance we had spared of her recovery. We reached the place just after midnight. Many witnessed the anointing for also the administration of the sacred rite our suffering sister was free from pain, fell asleep and awoke in the morning well and strong. Many who stood by were surprised. I myself was astonished, the next morning, when she arose from her bed and walked into another room where she is now, as another bed for a few days. Then she sat on the bed and ate some breakfast. At this writing she is still improving. Praise God for blessing our efforts and increasing our faith! The writer was greatly strengthened.—L. Woodell, Austin, Ark., July 28.

Lake Side.—Bro. T. L. Woodell preached three sermons July 4 and 5 at Lake Side, Ark. All seemed to enjoy the feast as far in the meeting, but none came out on the Lord's side. Their minister is now away on a trip and will be absent for about any more meetings until Sept. 1. I think they surely need a minister at that place. We have returned to our home, near Palestine, Ark., and home interests of the writer. We hope to see the time when we all may be one in Christ and work together for his upbuilding in the cause.—Dora Stonkey, Palestine, Ark., July 31.

CALIFORNIA.

Lindsay.—July 30 Bro. J. J. Brewer, of Reedley, Cal., again proclaimed the Word of God to the few members living at this place. His sermons were logical and full of interest and members here now. Bro. A. I. Hylton and wife have gone away on a visit. We have organized a Brethren Sunday-school here with very bright prospects. We need helpers here, and any persons wishing to go where they can be of service for the cause of the Master should not fail to visit this country, would do well to investigate this place. This is in one of the finest orange districts in the state. There are more than one dozen packing houses here now. We hope and pray that many may move in this part of the state, and help organize a church here, and be able to stand against the evil one. Any who do move here immediately on arrival at this place should write to the undersigned.—Sadie Finch, Lindsay, Cal., July 31.

Long Beach.—Last night our pastor, Bro. A. L. B. Martin, closed a two weeks' series of meetings in which preached the Word of the Lord with power. In his eighteen sermons he showed the great love God has for his people, and what is our duty toward God and our fellow-men. The attendance at the meetings was excellent, and much interest was manifested by both the members and others. One dear soul was born into the Kingdom, and three others were received back into the fold. The membership has been much revived. Brother and Sister Ira D. Gripe, of the East Los Angeles church, assisted in the services. Bro. Cripe leading the singing. We used the new song book, "Kingdom Songs," and found it very good. On account of a number of members being held in the city at this time, it was thought best to close the meetings, although we could have had a number of a good attendance. We hope that the good seed sown will bring forth plentiful harvest. The church is growing and progressing very nicely, with an increased attendance and good interest. The Christian Workers' Meeting is also a very edifying program last night. We certainly enjoyed a feast of spiritual things. The weather was most excellent for our meetings. We praise the Lord for blessings in the past.—Mrs. J. M. Shively, 1219 East Second St., Long Beach, Cal., July 31.

Lordsburg.—Last week just before the meeting began we met in special council, to hear the report of several committees, which had been appointed at the previous regular council meeting. Four letters were also read. The report of one committee was adopted, to the effect that we purchase a lot in the city of the church, which will enable us to enlarge our house of worship, as it is necessary to have more room in the near future. At the close of the preaching service, last Sunday morning, a collection of $18 was lifted for Bro. White, of Pruitdale, on our San Dimas tent meetings are progressing nicely. They are well attended by the San Dimas people, and by the Lordsburg congregation. Our regular first Sunday-school boys has come out on the Lord's side.—Grace E. Miller, Lordsburg, Cal., July 31.

COLORADO.

Bethany.—Our Sunday-school Convention was held July 23. We had an excellent convention and a good day. Some numbers on the program were absent, but others took up the work readily, and the topics were discussed with an earnestness that showed deep interest in Sunday-school work. Sister Anna M. Kohn, of Belleville, Kans., our District Secretary, was with us and added much to the interest of the meeting by the skillful manner in which she handled the work. Our work here requires doing nicely. At the close of the Christian Workers' Meeting, adopted the outlines, published in the Messenger, with a view to work for our meeting. We have our churchhouse enclosed and seats provided, so that we can use it. We will not be able to occupy it when ordered, as our pastor being called away to other fields of labor, we may not have preaching for a while.—Pearl Kesler, River Bend, Colo., July 31.

IDAHO.

Nezperce.—Bro. J. H. Fike and wife, from Middlebury, Ind., came among us June 15, and gave us ten interesting sermons. The house was crowded. His sermons were practical and full of gospel truth. The Sunday-school work was also full of interest. Our Christian Workers' Meeting was reorganized by offering Sister Lois White as president, Bro. Walter Hoover, secretary-treasurer. We expect Sister Sadie Miller sometime in September, to give us some missionary talks.—William H. Hurley, Nezperce, Idaho, July 28.

ILLINOIS.

Cerro Gordo.—Our Sunday-school took its annual outing Aug. 2 at the Bangamo Park. A number of Chicago's trained-air children were present to enjoy the day. About 140 were present, at the noon hour. Brethren Cripe and Hutchison held, a grandson of Eld. George Cripe, to our aged brother, Jacob Replogle, on July 16, which we did. The sermon was fine and all seemed to have a pleasant time. Bro. J. W. Lear recently preached an interesting sermon on the Sabbath question.—Cyrus Wallick, Cerro Gordo, Ill., Aug. 4.

INDIANA.

Eel River.—On Sunday, July 30, we held an all-day Harvest Meeting at the Brick house. Bro. T. D. Butterbaugh preached a harvest sermon in the forenoon; his subject being "Gifts." In the afternoon Bro. Otho Winger gave us a missionary sermon. Bro. Butterbaugh also preached for us in the evening. These sermons were full of the Spirit and attentive. Realized a collection of $25.20 was taken. We expect Bro. G. A. Snider, of Lima, Ohio, to come to assist us in a series of meetings at our Brick house, sometime in November.—Mary E. Miller, North Manchester, Ind., July 31.

Pleasant Valley.—Our church met in council July 29, with Eld. J. G. Weaver presiding. Nov. 5 is set as the date for dedicating our new church house in Middlebury. A Harvest Meeting was appointed for Aug. 26. Bro. Frank Ridder is appointed to be with us Sunday afternoon. Bro. Ridder is selected as delegate to the Sunday-school Meeting. Brethren Otho C. Winger and Eld. J. G. Weaver are chosen for Ministerial Meeting. Our love feast will be held Oct. 14, at the Pleasant Valley house. Bro. J. H. Fike, Middlebury, Ind., July 31.

Solomon's Creek.—Our church met in special council on the evening of July 29, with Eld. Jacob Wise presiding. Four members were received by letter. We decided to use the new song book, "Kingdom Songs," in our Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meeting. Bro. Ira Long will lead in the singing school Aug. 4, to continue indefinitely. We expect to hold our Harvest Meeting Aug. 19. Bro. Jacob Wise, Bro. J. Nappanee, Ind., will deliver the address.—Pearl Geyer, Nappanee, Ind., July 31.

Somerset.—Under God's blessing we were permitted to enjoy a pleasant day on the Lord's day. In the forenoon council we listened to a splendid discourse by Bro. J. L. Mahon, of Van Buren, Ind. In the afternoon a children's program was rendered, after which Brethren Mahon and Cripe fed the children. The collection amounted to $11.39. Bro. Mahon also presented the cause of Bethany Bible School. This was much appreciated. The attendance and attention were good throughout the day.—Ella Ebon, Wabash, Ind., July 31.

Spring Creek.—Our all-day Harvest Meeting will be held Aug. 19. All are invited to come and enjoy a day with us.—Nora A. Ross, Sidney, Ind., Aug. 3.

Springfield.—Council met in regular session July 25. Our elder, I. L. Berkey, of Goshen, Ind., presided over the meeting. Our annual Harvest Meeting will be Sept. 2. It is to be an all-day meeting. Bro. Jacob W. Fike, of Nappanee, Ind., is to be with us at that time. Sister Sadie Stutzman, of Manchester College, will be with us Sunday evening, Aug. 6. Sister Lizzie, of Ft. Wayne, Ind., will begin a series of meetings at this place Aug. 7. Sister Lizzie is also expected to assist Sister Etta Ebon, Wawaka, Ind., July 31.

Wawaka.—Our Harvest Meeting will be held at the Bauge house Sept. 2. It will be an all-day meeting. All are invited to attend. Bro. Otho Winger will be with us.—Retha A. Myers, Wawaka, Ind., July 31.

Yellow River.—Our church enjoyed another spiritual feast July 23, when Bro. Geo. L. Studebaker, of North Manchester, Ind., accompanied by his wife and son Mark, came to us. He held a meeting with us on Sunday, and on the same day the following day preached a harvest sermon to the forenoon and a missionary sermon were given at noon, the meeting was again called to order, and Sister Studebaker gave a very interesting talk, followed by a missionary sermon by Bro. Studebaker. He also addressed us at the close of the Sunday evening. We had a beautiful day, and all the meetings were well attended. Bro. Studebaker is receiving $25.00 for his services, and $11 to home mission.—Rosa Shively, Bruce Lake, Ind., Aug. 1.

IOWA.

Des Moines.—Last evening at our monthly members' meeting it was decided unanimously to adopt the new song book of "Kingdom Songs" and spend one or two evenings each week in singing. Bro. Jacob Heckman, of Ankeny, Iowa, Bro. Heckman, of Polo, Ill., is to assist us in our evangelistic meetings, beginning Aug. 20, and continuing over Sunday. One letter of membership was received and one granted.—Mrs. Ida Hoff, 1020 Fifty-first St., Des Moines, Iowa, Aug. 2.

Franklin.—At our late council Eld. A. L. Sears was chosen to take the oversight of this congregation for one year. He will fill the regular appointments.—Mrs. Mabel L. Bell, R. D. 8, Kob. Oct. 21 Eld. J. D. Brower and wife, of Lenox, Iowa, are to be with us. Bro. Brower is a faithful worker and has many things. Our love feast will be held May 4. Eld. A. L. Sears and wife, Bro. Jacob Heckman and wife, Sister Heckman, Bro. Kob, Garden Grove, Iowa, July 31.

Notice to Churches in Iowa.—The District Meeting of this District convenes in the Prairie City church at 3 o. m. Wednesday, Sept. 27. Elders' Meeting Sept. 26, at 2:30 P. M. Temperance and Child Training Program on Tuesday evening, Sept. 26. Ministerial and Sunday-school programs on Thursday, Sept. 28. Ministerial, Sunday-school, Treasurer's reports, programs and any other business, intended for this District Meeting, will be received by the writer, on or before Sept. 1, in order to appear in printed form on our "business sheet." Let us have a full report of the work done, and also so much correspondence on the part of your clerk. Further notice as to entertainment and other accommodations will appear later.—A. M. Stine, Clerk, Grinnell, Iowa, July 31.

KANSAS.

Morrill.—July 27 we had a very successful all-day Harvest Meeting. Bro. Jacob Wise, of Nappanee, Ind., and wife were conducted by a number of ministers, who gave fifteen minute addresses. Bro. Wise and wife left for their home and all seemed to enjoy the services. At the close of the forenoon services, we had dinner on the lawn, the contents of many well-filled baskets were spread upon them.—Ida Shoup, Morrill, Kans., July 31. The blessings we have received from the Giver of all good. The afternoon was taken up by the Sunday-school, which rendered an appropriate program. All went home feeling that the day was well and profitably spent. A few weeks ago Bro. Frank McClune, our District Sunday-school Secretary, spent several days among us, giving us a number of very helpful addresses along Sunday-school and missionary lines.—Mrs. Ida Shoup, Morrill, Kans., July 31. Bro. Frank McClune, our District Sunday-school Secretary, spent several days among us, giving us a number of very helpful addresses along Sunday-school and missionary lines.—Mrs. Ida Shoup, Morrill, Kans., July 31.

Stockton.—Sunday-school is growing in attendance. Our average attendance for the month of July was thirty-seven. Bro. Theophilus Manaffee is our superintendent.—P. E. Miller, Galesburg, Kans., Aug. 3.

MARYLAND.

Hagerstown.—We are glad to report that Bro. J. C. Flora, who was called to the pastorate of the Hagerstown church, is now with us and actively engaged in his work. Bro. D. P. Hoovack, of Union Bridge, Md., was with us July 23 and, as usual, gave us a very instructive talk. On the evening of July 26 the officers and visitors of the home department entertained the members at the home of the president, Sister Ina Bell Cripps and Bro. Flora delivered a lecture entitled "Home Department Work." Refreshments were served. Our annual outing was held July 29. The attendance was good and all spent a pleasant day.—Jeannie L. Kelder, 8 South Mulberry St., Hagerstown, Md., July 31.

Long Green.—Sunday morning, July 30, we held our Harvest Meeting. Bro. F. D. Anthony, of Waynesboro, Pa., delivered a very interesting address. An offering was taken for Home Missions. We expect to have our council meeting Aug. 12, at which time a series of meetings, beginning with Bro. John Rowland to do the preaching. We earnestly crave the united prayers of the brethren that the church may be strengthened, and many souls be brought to Christ and his church.—Mc Rae Rowland, R. D. 8, Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 5.

Pipe Creek.—We had our Harvest Meeting July 30. Bro. W. D. Keller, of Washington, D. C., gave us a good talk. Our next council is Sept. 2, at 1 P. M. All the Sunday-school services will be held Sept. 10. We expect our Sunday-school Secretary and his assistant to be with us at that time.—Lilia I. Englar, New Windsor, Md., Aug. 5.

MICHIGAN.

Little Traverse.—On account of sickness in the family of the writer, the time or date of our love feast has been changed from Aug. 12 to Sept. 2, at the same place as formerly.—Mrs. Jessie Isaiah Stutsman, R. D. 1, Harbor Springs, Mich., July 31.

MINNESOTA.

Woodstock.—Bro. J. S. Zimmerman, of Waterloo, Iowa, came to us July 15 and remained till July 31. He preached the Word in spiritual sermons. On Sunday two young sisters were baptized. We feel that more are almost persuaded. Pray for the little band of workers at this place.—J. A. Eddy, Woodstock, Minn., Aug. 2.

MISSOURI.

Nevada.—Our church met in regular council Aug. 5. Our elder, Bro. Leander Smith, presided. Considerable business was before the council. Bro. Smith was appointed delegate to Bro. Sister Emma Wine was chosen as superintendent; Bro. Hillman, assistant superintendent. Sister Fannie Hillman, president of the Christian Workers' Meeting; Sister Fannie Robinson, secretary and Bro. Hillman, church Messenger correspondent. Our church decided to have a series of meetings, to begin Sept. 3, and continue over Sunday. We expect a love feast, which begins at 2 P. M. Eld. Leander Smith is to conduct the series of meetings. An offering of $2.50 was taken. Last Sunday morning a father and mother came forward and applied for baptism. At three o'clock we met at the water and buried them with Christ in baptism, in a large crowd of interested people. Many of them had never seen our people baptized before. We feel that it was the most beautiful baptismal scene they ever witnessed.—Mary Smith, 236 North Oak St., Nevada, Mo., Aug. 6.

MONTANA.

Medicine Lake.—The Brethren met at the Enterprise schoolhouse July 23, at 11 A. M., to organize a Sunday-school. Seventy-five people signed the roll. Bro. J. K. Miller and wife, Bro. G. W. Mow as superintendent; Sister Alice Hanes, secretary-treasurer. We expect to have preaching every other Sunday afternoon, all using the Brethren literature. We are sorry that our dear sister and co-worker Barbara Barker, is afflicted with appendicitis, and suffering severely. Since our last report the Lord has blessed us with very good rains, for which we praise his holy name. Farmers are commencing to cut the golden grain.—Katie E. Kelley, Enterprise, Mont., July 30.

NEBRASKA.

Afton.—At a recent business meeting of the church Bro. George Minsker and wife were chosen delegates to our District Meeting. Bro. Ira Long, of Lordsburg, Cal., came to us, and July 31 Bro. W. J. Horner preached both morning and evening. Sister Ida Brubaker is president of the Christian Workers' Meeting. Sister Gertrude Garman, secretary.—Emily D. Moore, Ordnio, Nebr., July 31.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Cando church, at the Zion house, is in the midst of a glorious revival meeting. Brethren Wolfe and Hutchison are assisting. One was reclaimed and fifteen baptized last Saturday in time for the evening love feast. On Sunday morning Bro. J. Will Shively, of Rugby, N. Dak., received the hand of fellowship services by which Bro. Geo. K. Miller and his wife (Mary Lair Miller) were received into the church. Bro. Wolfe and J. D. Kesler and J. W. Fife, with their wives, were elected to the office of deacons, to be ordained Aug. 13. Bro. Wolfe and Brethren W. A. Deardorff and J. H. Brubaker, of Edinson, N. Dak., have been with us for a few days. Brethren Wolfe and Kohler delivered another of his soul-stirring sermons, when four more came out on the Lord's side. The meetings will continue all next week. Bro. Shively leaves Cando our brush-smitten church is relieving in an abundant ingatherings of precious souls.—Mrs. Ida Hoff, 1020 Fifty-first St., Des Moines, Iowa, July 28.

Rhame.—We have just closed a series of revival meetings, which will long be remembered because of the rich spiritual feast which we enjoyed during the meeting's session. Two precious souls were received by baptism, and one brother was restored to membership. Bro. Ira Long was called to the deacon's office. He and his wife were duly installed. In the evening of July 29 a goodly number surrounded the water's edge, where Bro. Hutchison baptized by Bro. Myers, of Minot, N. Dak., and Brethren Weimer and Hutchison, of Rhame. Bro. Myers and Brethren Weimer and Hutchison gave the children a rare treat.—G. I. Michael, Kenmare, N. Dak., July 31.

Perth.—After attending our District Meeting at Newville, Pa., in June, Bro. Wm. Hutchison returned to his home church to conduct revival services, which began on Saturday, July 15 he preached twenty-one sermons,—one in Perth and twenty at Rhame. Bro. Hutchison left for his field July 22 and 23. Bro. Miller officiated. Visiting ministers present were Bro. Myers, of Minot, N. Dak., and Brethren Weimer and Michael, of Rhame. Bro.

of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, were in attendance. Canada was represented by Eld. Edw. Stryker, Manitou; by Eld. J. H. Neher and Bro. D. M. Moothart. No papers were sent to the Annual Meeting. The meeting for 1912 will be held in the Nursery church July 9, 10 and 11.—D. F. Landis, Williston, Fla., Aug. 1.

Snider Lake church met in council July 29, preparatory to our love feast, Aug. 5. We are in the midst of a very interesting series of meetings, conducted by Bro. Moses Deardorff, of Yale, Iowa.—Mary Deal, Brumbaugh, N. Dak., July 31.

OHIO

Ash Grove.—July 28 Bro. John Christian, of Gettysburg, Ohio, and Bro. S. Z. Smith, of Sidney, Ohio, came to us and held a Harvest Meeting. Bro. A. D. Coste was ordained to the eldership. On Sunday morning Bro. Smith gave us a splendid sermon. Bro. Smith has charge of our congregation. He has promised to come again in a few months, to have a council meeting with us.—P. C. Pardier, R. D. 5, Celina, Ohio, July 30.

Casstown.—July 1 the entire Mission Board was with us and transacted business pertaining to the work. Plans were secured to take charge of the work here. Bro. O. P. Haines, of Dayton, Ohio, held such excellent meetings that a church at Troy, believed its last sermon, for the present, July 2. July 16 we had an all-day service. We had Sunday-school and preaching service in the morning, and in the afternoon a Sunday-school Meeting. Four topics were discussed by talented members. We felt the Lord's presence with us in this meeting. Many from adjoining churches were present. The afternoon was also short, for last train left here at 4:30 for hearers.—Mina H. Bosserman, Casstown, Ohio, Aug. 1.

Donnels Creek.—Our church met in council at the New Carlisle house, on Saturday, July 29. Eld. J. E. Barnhart, presided. Brethren J. J. Shoemberger, J. Cassel and Bro. Young were with us. Three letters of membership were received, and two were granted. Bro. D. S. Dredge, with his wife, was elected to the eldership. Brethren Shoemberger and Coppock conducted the ordination services. An election was held for a minister, and Bro. Dred Hoover was unanimously granted. The installation service was deferred. Bro. William Funderburg was elected Sunday-school trustee for the ensuing year. We decided to hold our love feast at the country house Oct. 14, at 2 o'clock. On Sunday Bro. Barnhart gave us a splendid Bible School, preached for us at the country house, both morning and evening. Two young sisters have been added to the church by baptism since our last report.—Ellen Winger, R. D. 1, Box 173, Springfield, Ohio, July 31.

East Dayton church met in council Aug. 2. Our elder, Bro. J. E. Barnhart, presided. Eld. Aaron Coy was also with us. Eight letters of membership were granted. Sisters Daisy Baldwin and Ollie Pidler were chosen delegates to the Annual Meeting, to be held in the Nursery church. We decided to hold our love feast Sept. 30, at 6 P. M. Bro. H. A. Studebaker preached for us on Sunday evening, July 27. Text, Mark xi. "The Whole Life." Which was appreciated by all.—Elizabeth Grove, 261 Maple St., Dayton, Ohio, Aug. 1.

Fostoria.—July 25 Sister Mary Cook, our District Sunday-school Secretary, was with us and gave a very interesting talk on our Sunday-school work. Sister Nora Berkebile, formerly of this place, but now on a visit here, was also accompanied her. In an impressive manner she told us of the Sunday-schools in India. The attendance was good and her talks very instructive. We feel encouraged to make our Sunday-school work a greater success, especially since we are looking forward to the organization of a new church. The work has been started on our new church and is progressing slowly. We hope to present you are future report with a vacant store room nearby. We are looking forward to the time when we can occupy the new house of worship.—Ella Ober, Fostoria, Ohio, July 31.

Lexington.—Our church and Sunday-school are moving along nicely. Sunday-school we have had a great deal of sickness in the neighborhood to hinder us in our efforts, yet we have a great deal to encourage and blessings to report for the time we are very thankful. One of our ministers, Bro. Van B. Wright, is trying to fit himself to preach the word, as at present laboring with the members at Sinking Spring, Ohio. The church is rejoicing in the Lord's blessings upon the ministrations of Bro. Harley Case (a deacon) made the good confession and was received into the church. Also a young sister, Bro. Allen Ockerman. We are to hold our Harvest Meeting in August.—L. K. Ockerman, R. D. 3, Hillsboro, Ohio, July 30.

North Star.—July 29 we held our Harvest Meeting. We were glad to have present with us our elder, Bro. S. Z. Smith; also brethren J. H. Christian and D. L. Forney. Sunday morning Bro. Christian delivered the harvest sermon. Bro. Smith remained with us and gave us two good sermons. His Sunday sermon was especially helpful, as he spoke of "Our Opportunities to Be Good." Quite an interest was felt in the tithing say basis in which old and young in the Sunday-school. Last Sunday three generations of one family were represented in the Sunday-school—a father, son and grandson. The father was seventy-two years old, and the little grandson seven years old. Their average age was over fifty-two years.—Mary S. Miller, R. D. 2, New Weston, Ohio, Aug. 7.

North Star (Mission-stone of Darkness), Ohio.—All Sunday-school classes, having an average of twenty-five or more, should send two delegates, and one minister or district Sunday-school Meeting, to be held at Poplar Grove, Aug. 16.—Chas. L. Flory, Dist. Sunday-school Secretary, R. D. 3, Ansonia, July 31.

Ross church met in council July 29. As our elder was not here, Eld. J. H. Brumbaugh presided. We appointed our love feast for Oct. 7, at 10 A. M. Our next council will be Sept. 23. We had a series of meetings conducted by Brethren Bro. H. F. Honeyman is to conduct the meetings. July 17 our Sunday-school secretary, Sister Hoak, and Bro. Brumbaugh, of India, were with us. Sister Berkebile gave us a good talk on missionary work. We appreciate the efforts of these sisters. Bro. Brumbaugh remained over Sunday, held Sunday-school and gave us three good sermons.—Katie Shellabarger, Mendon, Ohio, Aug. 2.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Amaranth.—June 17 Bro. J. B. Miller, of Curryville, Pa., came to this church and began preaching every evening and on Sunday, closing July 2. Each meeting was preceded by a half hour of song services which helped to create a good interest and spirituality of the meetings. While there were no additions to the church, we trust the seed sown will produce fruit in due time.—L. A. Richards, Amaranth, Pa., Aug. 1.

Antietam.—At our council July 22, Brethren D. B. Mottern and H. H. Barner were advanced to the second degree of the ministry. Sister Dolly Brown was appointed Messenger correspondent to the Messenger. It was decided for us to have our love feast at the Welty church Oct. 7 and 8, at 1:30 P. M.—Mrs. Ella Bingert, Waynesboro, Pa., Aug. 1.

Ephrata.—Our council was held Aug. 1. Our elder, Bro. David Eshelman, presided. Elders J. G. Taylor and Jacob Schlosser were with us. There was quite an amount of business attended to. Samuel Ellhefner was chosen to the deacon's office. Our Children's Meeting will be held on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 27. A Harvest Meeting will be held on Saturday evening, Aug. 19. Our love feast will be held Oct. 28, at 2:30 P. M. We will begin a series of meetings Nov. 11, with Bro. E. E. Young, of Virginia, to conduct the services. Bro. J. F. Graybill and wife were with us July 2. His sermons were very much appreciated.—Ella Ephrata, Pa., Aug. 2.

FALLEN ASLEEP

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

Barger, Harriet E., daughter of Friend F. S. Barger (an Evangelical minister), was born Aug. 12, 1845, died in Pennington, Mo., July 26, 1911, aged 27 years, 5 months and 14 days. She was a faithful member of the M. E. South church. She leaves a father, a stepmother, two brothers and a host of friends. The remains were laid to rest in Rose Cemetery. Rev. Joe Jacobs officiated.—Mrs. Geo. George Mohler. Text, 1 Cor. 15: 51, 52.—Mrs. Mohler, Mt. Solon, Va.

Berry, Bro. Benjamin F., born in Rockingham County, Va., Nov. 7, 1846, died at the home of his son, in Springfield, Ohio, June 18, 1911, aged 64 years, 7 months and 11 days. His wife and one daughter preceded him. He leaves one son, one brother, one sister and many friends to mourn. Services at the Lawrenceville Reformed church by Eld. David Leatherman. Text, Heb. 9: 27.—D. L. Forney, Springfield, Ohio.

Bosserman, Sister Sarah, wife of Eld. Wm. P. Bosserman, was born in Augusta County, Va., Feb. 22, 1837, died in Nursery, Okla., July 9, 1911, aged 32 years, 1 month and 10 days. She was the daughter of Friend Jacob and Lydia Neuenschwander, of the Mennonite faith. She was united in marriage to Eld. Wm. P. Bosserman July 11, 1897. To them were born seven children. Four of these preceded her to death. She united with the Church of the Brethren when she was about eighteen years of age. She was a consistent member and lived the holiness of the family altar and Scripture reading. She always clung, blind fashion, to the promises of God in her helpless and unfortunate. At the time of her death she was the foster mother of a little girl. She was a kind, loving mother and always showed fidelity to her husband and family. She was laid to rest in the cemetery at Nursery. Services conducted by the writer in the M. E. church, Nursery, Okla. Text, "He ye also ready."—Matt. 24: 44). This was one of her favorite texts.—Wm. P. Bosserman, Okla.

Bowman, Mary, wife of John W. Bowman, of Rockingham County, Va., died at her home, near Timberville, Va., aged 71 years, 8 months and 16 days. Mother Bowman was the second wife of my father, Eld. Jacob Wampler, and was a faithful member of the Brethren church from its organization. Services at Mount Zion church by Eld. Jacob Wampler, assisted by Bros. Chas. Long and H. C. Early, of the Church of the Brethren. She is survived by her husband and two daughters. Father and mother had just celebrated their golden wedding a little in eighteen years, being with him for over two weeks. On their return home Mother Bowman was taken with pneumonia. Text, and in Virginia. She was taken quite sick the day before they left Woodstock. Funeral services were held at the same church as Harrisonburg, Va., within ten miles of home, where she was born and lived all her life. Text, Rev. 14: 13.—Sister Bowman, a week later, she sweetly fell asleep in Jesus. She was as kind and as true a friend to me as her own and was loved by all who knew her.—Isaac S. Bowman, 1519 Seventh St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Brallier, Sarah A., born May 15, 1876, died at her home, 521 Willow Ave., Altoona, Pa., July 25, 1911. She was the daughter of Friend Jacob and Susanna Brallier, and in November, 1892, she was married to Bro. William Q. Brallier, of Altoona, Pa. To this union were born four children, one and her faith and trust in him deepened as she continued in his service. She was a kind, loving mother and devoted companion wife. Christian fortitude, as she had committed her life, and indeed entirely into God's hands. She was much loved by those who knew her, and her death will be greatly missed in the home and the church. Her husband, also a member of the Church of the Brethren, four children, her parents, one sister and two brothers. Her older son became a member of the church more than a year ago. Services in the Brethren church July 27, a large body of people being present. Sister Brallier was a faithful worker and her home conscious of the spiritual atmosphere in which she and her family lived. Her husband and pray for those of her immediate home, who must needs feel the keen sense of loneliness caused by her departure.—Interment in Rose Hill cemetery.—W. S. Long, Altoona, Pa.

FIGHTING THE TRAFFIC IN YOUNG GIRLS

BY ERNEST A. BELL

DOUBTLESS the reading of this book will be a revelation to many. The fact that young girls have been and are being sold and made slaves for immoral purposes is not as yet generally known. This vile traffic has been but recently fully exposed. In this book the facts and horrors of it have been compiled. It tells also of the fight that is being waged against this iniquitous business. Many a young girl who has in times past disappeared never to return became the victim of such as make it their business to buy and sell innocent girls.

ARE YOU INTERESTED?

If you have boys and girls you want to know about the pitfalls that are set for them and be able to prevent their being entrapped. Everyone who is interested in the welfare of the rising generations should read this book. To be forewarned is to be forearmed. This book will do it. It also contains much helpful advice to fathers, mothers, sons and daughters.

The book contains over 500 pages, also 32 half-tone engravings, and can be had in either cloth binding, $1.50, or half morocco, $2.00.

WE WANT AGENTS EVERYWHERE

to sell this book. It is a ready seller, and we have a special proposition to make to you. Write us for terms. There is money in it for you and great good to be accomplished in behalf of the girls and boys in city and country.

The Gospel Messenger

A weekly religious journal, 16 large pages, is published in the interest of the Church of the Brethren, and is the only church organ published by the authority of the Conference. Price, $1.50 per annum.

It most earnestly pleads for a return to the apostolic order or worship and practice.

It holds that the Bible is a divinely-inspired book, and recognizes the New Testament as the only infallible rule of faith and practice for the people of God.

It also holds to the doctrine of the Trinity; teaches future rewards and punishment, and emphasizes the importance of a pure, holy and upright life before God and men.

That Trine Immersion or dipping the candidate three times face-forward, is Christian baptism.

That Feet-washing as taught in John 13, is a divine command to be observed by the church.

That the Lord's Supper is a meal, and, in connection with the Communion, should be taken in the evening, or after the close of the day.

That the Salutation of the Holy Kiss, or Kiss of Charity, is binding upon the followers of Christ.

That War and Retaliation are contrary to the spirit and self-denying principles of the religion of Jesus Christ.

That a Nonconformity to the world in daily walk, dress, customs and conversation is essential to true holiness and Christian piety.

It maintains that in public worship, or religious exercises, Christians should appear as directed in 1 Cor. 11: 4, 5.

It also advocates the Scriptural duty of Anointing the sick with oil in the name of the Lord.

In short, it is a vindicator of all that Christ and the Apostles have enjoined upon us, and aims, amid the conflicting theories and discords of modern Christendom, to point out ground that all must concede to be faithfully safe. Send for sample copy. Address:

THE CURSE of DRINK

BY ELTON R. SHAW

If you want to see the liquor traffic in its true light, as portrayed in story, incidents, illustrations, pointed paragraphs, poetry and song by more than twenty men and women in various walks and professions in life, read this book. It will make clear to you, as no other book yet written or compiled could do, the economic, political and social ills growing out of the sale and use of intoxicants. It contains many true stories of drink's awful tragedies and gives in brief and pointed paragraphs the pithy utterances of many men and women who have put their lives into the struggle for the overthrow of a giant wrong. The matter in the book is conveniently classified, making it easy to refer to any phase of the subject desired. It is a book that will appeal to all classes of people. A copy of it should find a place in every home.

The size of the book is 6-½x9-¾ inches. It contains 544 pages besides the halftone illustrations and is printed on good paper.

Price per copy, cloth, $1.75; half morocco, $2.50.

Notes from Our Correspondents.

Pennsylvania for 1912, will be held in the Big Swatara church, Hanoverdale house, three weeks before Ascension Day. There being no call at the time of our last meeting, the above church, after consultation, agreed to take it. Bro. A. M. Kuhns, of Union Bridge, Pa., is to be the corresponding Secretary.—J. H. Longenecker, Moderator of last District Meeting, Palmyra, Pa., Aug. 2.

Penn Run.—We expect to hold a love feast at the Penn Run house of the Manor congregation, Sept. 16. Examination services at 10:30 A. M.; the love feast proper, at 5:30 P. M. We expect Brother and Sister J. M. Blough, missionaries from India, and Brother and Sister Quinter Holsopple, from Elgin, Ill., to be with us at that time. Our church meeting, preparatory to our love feast, will be held at the Penn Run house Sept. 2.—W. N. Myers, Clymer, Pa., Aug. 30.

Spring Run.—Our congregation met in council July 29, at the Pine Glen church, with Eld. C. Wolfe presiding. All business was disposed of in a pleasant manner. We decided to hold a series of meetings at the Spring Run church in October, to close with a love feast. A husband and his wife were received into the church by relief since our last writing. We were favored, recently, with a visit from Brother and Sister Blough, missionaries from India. They are to be present with us on Sunday and held two meetings which were very much enjoyed by all.—Ida Mae Miller, Mattawana, Pa., Aug. 5.

West Conestoga church met in council in the Lititz house July 29. We decided to hold our Revival Meeting Aug. 19. Our love feast will be held Oct. 3 and 4, in the Middle Creek house. We expect to hold a series of meetings at the Lexington house, beginning Nov. 18, to be conducted by Bro. Henry Hollinger. At our Akron house the meetings begin Dec. 5, to be conducted by Bro. Jacob Hoover. Our next council will be held Sept. 23.—Henry Nies, Lititz, Pa., Aug. 2.

TENNESSEE.

Pleasant View.—The brethren of the Tennessee District have just closed one of the most inspiring Ministerial Meetings that we have had for years. Bro. D. F. Bowman was unanimously elected as Moderator, and Bro. Reading Clerk. The committee and topics were well selected. The discussion on each topic was pointed and appropriate. The best interest I ever saw in a meeting of this kind, was manifested. The visiting brethren were royally treated, and everything seemed to be in union. We also had splendid behavior. The meetings were well attended each day. Today, especially, we had a very large congregation.—C. Lariman Jonesboro, Tenn., July 29.

Pleasant View.—We had two more meetings conducted by Bro. Samuel J. H. Garst, of Pleasant Hill congregation, Ind., assisted on Sunday by Bro. M. M. Laughrey. Both meetings were well attended, and both sermons were very pointed. I am certainly glad to see our young ministering brethren coming to the front. Bro. Garst is a study of Truth, and I do hope that they will see the great need of more doctrinal sermons. I, for one, would appreciate them to preach the Word in its purity and power—how close to the line, let the chips fall where they may. We are in need of a great need of a fuller vindication for the power of the Word of God, and the church and its duties to it. On Sunday two young ladies gave their hearts to the Lord. They will be baptized Aug. 13.—N. T. Larimer, Jonesboro, Tenn., July 31.

VIRGINIA.

Mill Creek.—Our harvest meeting was held at the Mill Creek church July 23. Bro. Luther Miller, from the Cooks Creek congregation, was with us and delivered an excellent sermon on that day; also one on the day following. An offering of $5.43 was taken. This and $6.18 added to it from this offering should be donated to an aged brother and sister in needy circumstances. The remainder is to be given to the General Mission Board. Our next council will be held at the Mill Creek church Aug. 26.—Pearl M. Showalter, North River, Va., Aug. 2.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Notice.—The Sunday-school, Ministerial and District Meeting for the Second District will be held at Bell's chapel, convenient with the Brethren of the Valley River church, Junior, W. Va., Aug. 24, 25, 26. Our love feast will be held on the 26th at 2 P. M. For the benefit of those who may not be acquainted with the railroad accommodations, we will say that the Western Maryland, Coal and Coke Railroads run through this place.—W. J. Rowe, Junior, W. Va., July 31.

NOTES NOT CLASSIFIED.

Notice.—The District Meeting of Northeastern Kansas will be held at the Washington Creek church, Douglas County, Oct. 5, to be preceded by the Sunday-school and Ministerial Meetings, Oct. 1 and 2. A representation from each congregation in the District is desired. Our brethren will be ready for the Master, to praise and do service for him.—W. A. Kinzie, Cedar Vale Star, Kans., Aug. 2.

Notice to the Churches of Southern Illinois.—The Committee on Program for the District Bible and Sunday-school Institute request all churches desiring the meetings to report to the undersigned prior to the District Meeting. The District Meeting of Southern Illinois will be held Oct. 6, at Girard, Ill. All business or queries for this meeting must be in the hands of the District Clerk two weeks prior to that time, that the printed programs may be ready. See District Meeting Minutes of 1909.—I. D. Heckman, Cerro Gordo, Ill., Aug. 4.

South English.—The Mission Board of Southern Iowa will meet in their semi-annual meeting in Osceola, Iowa, Sept. 2. Any one having business with the Board will be governed accordingly, and place it in the hands of the Secretary prior to that date.—Peter Brower, Sec., South English, Iowa, Aug. 5.

SOUTHERN OHIO.

The Ministerial and Sunday-school Meetings of the above-named District are to be held in the Poplar Grove congregation Aug. 14-17.

EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS

BY AGNES GIBERNE.

This is one of a number of excellent books written by the author, for boys and girls. It is a book that will be read with interest and helpfulness by young people generally, and older ones, too.

"What is everybody's business is nobody's business." The one special lesson aimed at and clearly and forcibly illustrated in this volume is the importance of the assignment of definite tasks to particular individuals, and their obligations for the performance of the duties assigned.

As a story book that is interesting as well as profitable to a boy or girl it has few equals.

The book contains 311 pages, printed on good paper, bound in cloth. Throughout the pages are found a number of apt illustrations.

FLASHLIGHTS FROM REAL LIFE

BY JOHN T. DALE.

Those who have read any of the author's other books will want to read this one. The sketches and incidents given are real flashlights thrown upon things which are worth revealing. The author in his preface says: "Some of the sketches are based on facts which have come within the personal knowledge of the author, others are founded on incidents which have come under the observation of others, but they are all typical of the ever-changing experiences and situations of life, as the grand panorama of existence moves onward."

Following are a few subjects taken from the table of contents:

Advice to Young Men
The Boy at the Theater
Chapter of Fifty Life
The Faithful Servant
The Golden Rule
The Professor's Advice
Single and Married
The Smoker's Peril
The Young Lawyer's Downfall

The Book contains 205 pages. Bound in cloth.

THE GOSPEL MESSENGER

"SET FOR THE DEFENSE OF THE GOSPEL."—Phil. 1: 17.

AROUND THE WORLD

Is the Negro to Disappear?

We are assured by Dr. Ernest C. Levy, chief health officer of Richmond, Va., that the negro race is slowly dying out, and that, at the present rate of decadence, it will be practically extinct in the twenty-first century. In proof of his point he refers, among other facts, to the statistics of Richmond, Va., where the colored race, numbering thirty-eight per cent of the population, furnished ninety-six per cent of the deaths during the past year. Dr. Levy's statement is corroborated by medical experts elsewhere, but whether the theory is correct or not, we owe a duty to the colored race that can not be shirked. The negro was brought to our shores against his will; he is with us now, and it remains for us to bring out the best that is in him.

The Wonderful Book.

While many agencies, promotive of temptation and sin, are rampant throughout the world, there is much to comfort and cheer. Twenty-seven Bible Societies are printing the Blessed Book,—one in the United States, three in Great Britain and twenty-three on the European Continent. A total of 12,843,196 Bibles was published in 1910 by these different societies, every language on the globe being represented. More copies of the Bible were sold last year than of any other two hundred books combined. At times the capacity of these publishing houses is taxed to the utmost, to supply Bibles fast enough for the various mission fields of the world. Surely, there is reason to "thank God and take courage" because of the continued distribution of his Blessed Word. "The entrance of thy Word giveth light."

Persia Wants the Word.

In the village of Daulatabad, some thirty miles from Hamadan, Persia, several Mohammedans have collected nearly $4,000 to open a school that is to be self-supporting, and they are now asking for Christian teachers. Full liberty has been given to teach the Bible; in fact, the Bible has been included in the curriculum of the proposed school. Neither expense nor effort are to be spared to make this the best school in Persia. When it is remembered that the most bitter prejudice has heretofore opposed women of this kind, one can but regard the present opportunity as a providential opening for the entrance of successful gospel efforts into Persia. There are great possibilities for effective mission work throughout the Orient, but the outlook in Persia seems to be at this time most favorable.

What a Noted Detective Thinks.

"Those who come in close touch with the world of crime are probably well qualified to form intelligent opinions as to the causes that lead to the unfortunate digressions from the path of rectitude. Mr. William A. Pinkerton, head of the famous detective bureau, has given considerable attention to this most important subject, and unhesitatingly pronounces the vicious moving picture shows as the main cause of juvenile delinquency. The exhibitions of train-robbing, pocket-picking, kidnapping, and other crimes, exert a vicious influence on the minds of impressionable boys, who, later on, graduate into full-fledged criminals. During two weeks, recently, nearly seventy boys, still in their teens, disappeared from their homes in Chicago, to lead lives of adventure, and in every case the cheap picture show seems to have been responsible for the perverted ideas imbibed,—the wrong thoughts suggested. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he."

Colonizing Mesopotamia.

The Ica Society,—a Jewish organization to which Baron de Hirsch bequeathed $45,000,000 for the colonization of Jews in Palestine or elsewhere, with the view of eventually forming a separate Jewish state,—is now investigating the possibilities of Mesopotamia. It is thought that, upon the completion of the contemplated irrigation systems, the country will be admirably adapted to the purpose above alluded to. Jews from all quarters of the globe,—especially from places where the hand of persecution has been heavy upon them,—are likely to welcome such a promising haven of refuge,—a land of such great fertility as this. Here are the two splendid rivers,—the Tigris and the Euphrates,—"the rivers of Babylon," on whose banks their forefathers sojourned during the days of captivity. Here the Babylonian Talmud was written, and here the greatest schools of the rabbis once flourished. Since a reëstablishment of the Jews in Palestine does not seem practicable or possible in the near future, there is a strong pressure in favor of the immediate occupancy of Mesopotamia. As the world's bankers, the Jews have control of unlimited funds, and it is a matter of small moment for them to secure all the needed amount for the purchase of the desired land,—the more so since the Turks have agreed to the plan and heartily endorse it.

Ministerial Efficiency.

Of a noted minister's failure to make his house-to-house pastoral visitation among his people as great a success as his wonderful pulpit activity, one of his members said, "He failed because he never really loved his people, and they knew it." While this, undoubtedly, presents one side of the picture, too often indicative of ministerial delinquency, there is another side well worthy of notice. "He failed because his people never really loved him, and he knew it," is also too often lamentably true. There are unwritten chapters in the history of many congregations that would throw much light upon the apparent failures of scores of earnest ministers. There is the record of intense struggles, unappreciated and unrewarded,—a fight with almost insurmountable difficulties,—all because the congregation failed to come to the help of her devoted shepherd. We need ministerial efficiency—that is true enough,—but more than all else we need congregational activity, sympathy and cordial cooperation.

Doing As Others Do.

Following the leading of others may be justifiable in some things, but it certainly seems foolish in the extreme when such following leads us to make some most deplorable mistakes, to the great detriment of ourselves and all who are influenced by our example. It has been but a few years since the first Dreadnought was launched by Great Britain, but since then the leading nations of earth have vied with each other, in feverish anxiety, to construct still more powerful fleets and still more naval monsters. The intense rivalry has borne its legitimate fruits. One hundred of these death-dealing destroyers are now in service, or will be, ere long. All this is an unspeakable folly for both those that insist on doing what others do, lest we suffer by unfavorable comparison. Measuring ourselves by others is sure to lead to most deplorable results if the exaltation of self rules supreme. In the case of the European nations, the military craze has brought some of them dangerously near to bankruptcy.

How One Church Looks at Labor Unions.

At a recent Conference of the "Christian Reformed Church," held at Grand Rapids, Mich., labor unions were subjected to a fair and square examination. From the evidence submitted, the Conference concluded that unfair and illegal measures are often resorted to, in order to enforce the demands of the unions, hence it was advised that the members of their church refrain from uniting with organizations so manifestly unfair. The Conference based its action largely on the following: "(1) The oath required by most of the unions is unscriptural; (2) the object of the unions is not inspired by broad humanitarianism, but rather by extreme selfishness; (3) in no way are the religious and moral faculties of man developed by unionism." The decision quoted is a fair indication that these people are doing some serious thinking along the line of right principles, so far as labor unions are concerned. They are not ready to sacrifice the sacred tenets of their belief to secure the much vaunted benefits of labor unions.

Women in Church Work.

While the Church of the Brethren, from its very beginning, has accorded to woman equal rights and privileges with man, so far as voting at its various business meetings is concerned, and also allows her to serve as a delegate at District and Annual Conferences, few other religious bodies have been as liberal. At the Wesleyan Methodist Conference, recently held at Cardiff, Wales, women were for the first time admitted as delegates to the deliberations of that body. In the case of several of the large and influential American denominations the question of women voting or serving as delegates is either entirely undecided or still pending. It would seem that the churches of today have much to learn yet from apostolic precedent, which accorded to woman an active part in church work, and which spoke of her as "our helper in Christ." Doubtless a new era of power and usefulness might be opened to the church of today, if there were given to woman the opportunity and privilege of more extended service in the field to which, by God-given powers, she is so well adapted.

The Great Army of "Down-and-Outs."

Seeing the multiplied hundreds of unkempt vagrants who daily throng the streets of our cities, one is made to wonder whence they are and whither bound. Did they deliberately set out to become unfit? We find a partial answer in the records of the Industrial Christian Alliance, of New York, which assures us that the fatal cup was undoubtedly the first start down grade for nearly all of them. For the period of only one year, 629 men were received at their rescue home. Of this number 31 had received a college education, 170 were skilled laborers, 146 were from office or commercial life, 71 were ordinary laborers. One hundred and five different occupations and professions were represented. Editors, teachers, lawyers, physicians, clergymen and missionaries were among the number, but drink had put them all on the one common level of degradation. Well might Isaiah say of such: "And the mean man is bowed down and the great man is humbled, and the eyes of the lofty are humbled."

Socialists Against War.

Whatever we may think about the theories and claims of the Socialists in other respects, there is no uncertainty concerning their attitude on the question of war and all that pertains thereto. At their last Congress in Copenhagen, Denmark, they passed resolutions against militarism, and the war spirit in general, that are well worthy of general consideration. They urge (1) that arbitration be made compulsory for the adjustment of international differences; (2) that complete disarmament be made possible by general treaties to that end; (3) that the workers in all nations, by word and deed, declare themselves for peace and arbitration, and that they refuse to serve as soldiers if it can possibly be avoided. If the strong position, thus taken by the Socialists, can be maintained successfully, there will be some interesting problems for the world's governments. Wars can not be carried on without soldiers, but if the men who are drafted to that end, can not be induced to fight, hostilities must cease,—and peace prevail.

Colorado's Good Example.

Can a prisoner really be trusted? Is he amenable to kind treatment bestowed upon him? Colorado's experience in the humane treatment of its convicts seems to answer these questions in the affirmative. The State employs its prisoners in building and repairing roads, and already a number of fine highways bear testimony to the excellency of that method. As many as a hundred men are kept in the camps, miles away from the prison, for weeks at a time. No armed guards are needed. The men, after working eight hours per day, are given time for recreation of various kinds. The only restriction is that they must be in camp by nine o'clock. So far not a single convict has tried to escape, though several desperate characters are among them. They have proved true to their trust and have made good the claim of the penal reformers, that a sense of honor can be instilled into even the most hardened men, if properly treated. What a lesson there is in this for the church of the Living God! We need to have a greater degree of trust in those who have been unfortunate enough to stray from the path of rectitude.

High Altitudes.

The great benefit of purer and rarer air, found in the higher altitudes, has long been recognized as a remedial agent of great value to sufferers from lung trouble. Purity is a foe to incipient germs, while rarefaction induces vigorous breathing, hence the air supply is given to the lungs that are the lower planes. The recent announcement from Colorado Springs, following experiments on the top of Pike's Peak, fourteen thousand feet high, brings out a still more important fact. It was conclusively shown that, in the high altitude named, the red corpuscles of the blood are increased forty per cent. These being the oxygen-carrying agencies of the blood, and eliminators of all impurity, it follows that the greater the number of red corpuscles in the blood, the greater its purity, and the greater its disease-resisting power. Experts from Oxford and Yale Universities and the Colorado College concur in the verdict above given. And while it is well to know that there is a healing balm in the high altitude of the mountains,—a boon bestowed upon us by a Loving Father,—it is still more important to remember that spiritual vigor can be attained only by rising above the scenes of earth to the higher realms in which the soul can bask in the full realization of God's grace, and anticipate the still greater bliss yet to come.

ESSAYS

Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth.

The Old Hymns.

I love those dear old-fashioned hymns that mother used to sing;
A tide of tender memories to which my heart doth cling
Sweeps o'er my soul in waves of love whene'er I sing or hear
Those sweet old-fashioned melodies to mother's heart so dear.

Oftimes, when sorrow bears me down beneath its heavy load,
And rocks and thorns befit my way upon life's weary road,
"'Tis then I rise on wings of faith," to Jesus' hand I cling,
And "Sing the Saviour's dying love," which mother used to sing.

I often hear the same old words, but set to music new;
Of course, the message is the same and rings out just as true—
But there's a chord within my heart that's throbbing all in vain;
"And sinners plunged beneath that flood lose all their guilty stain";
I know it's old and out of date—"A charge to keep have I,"
"A never-dying soul to save and fit it for the sky."
Oftimes the words I do not know; but in my heart will ring
Some dear old hymn of years ago, which mother used to sing.

"I cannot stand where Moses stood and view the landscape o'er,"
But I expect to meet her there, on "Canaan's happy shore."
And other dear ones with her, too; I'll meet them by and by,
"When I can read my title clear to mansions in the sky."
Sometimes I seem to hear her sing, when sorrow comes to me,
"Must Jesus bear the cross alone and all the world go free?"
And there is seems a gentle breath as from an angel's wing
Comes o'er me with that dear old hymn that mother used to sing.

The Bible in School.

BY B. E. KESLER.

1. ITS EFFECT ON MORAL AND CRIMINAL LIFE.—If we should visit our County and State Prisons we would find that a large majority of the inmates are persons who have a very meager knowledge of the Bible. The same would be true of our State Reform Schools. Indeed, to a great extent, they would be found to be persons who were not brought up under the moral and social teaching of the Bible. The same is true of those sections of our great country where lawlessness and criminality are in the ascendency, and where vice and immorality are the least restrained, and where houses of ill-fame, and other recruiting stations of the devil, are wide open.

On the other hand, to visit our Orphans' Homes, Homes for the Unfortunate, Old Folks' Homes, Child Rescue Homes, and other like institutions, whose beneficences are founded on the brotherhood of man, we would observe a great contrast.

Then, too, to cast a glance over the nation, and note those communities where churches and Sunday-schools are in evidence, and to compare them with those communities that lack these moralizing forces, would demonstrate what a great power the Word of God is in molding and developing moral and social life.

2. ITS EFFECT ON CIVIC AND NATIONAL LIFE.—Go into the "holy place" of our courts. Examine the docket. Enquire into the environments and life of the culprits. Draw conclusions. How many, in a hundred of these, have been brought up under the hallowed influences of God's Word? Or, as a silent, unseen guest in the lobby of our legislative halls, how much "civic righteousness," as compared with "wire pulling" would flash across your mental camera? Or, still further, how many legislative enactments, based on the broad platform of "equal rights to all and special privileges to none," as compared with the whole number of enactments, would you find on the pages of the Congressional Record?

How many of the nation's lawmakers of today reverence God's Word, as compared with "ye good old times" when Daniel Webster was said to be "the Bible of Congress"? May we not well pray the God of the Bible to "teach our senators wisdom,"—the "wisdom which cometh from above"?

Suppose the principles of the kingdom of this world were operated upon the principles of "righteousness, peace and joy in the Holy Ghost"? Are not the nations of the future to be ruled by the "men of tomorrow," who are now learning the rudiments of knowledge in our public schools?

How important, then, that the characters of the rising generation be molded on the principles of the Golden Rule!

3. AS A CIVILIZING AND ENLIGHTENING AGENCY.—To the sneers, sareasm and scoffs of an infidel it was once replied: "Do you not know, sir, that there are countries, as China, for instance, whose laws and civilization are founded on Confucianism?"

"Yes, sir."

"And do you not know that the laws of some countries are founded on Mohammedanism,—the Koran,—as Persia, for instance?"

"Yes, sir."

"And do you not know, also, that some countries, as the United States, Great Britain, etc., base their government and civilization upon the principles of the Bible?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then tell me, as an intelligent, civilized man, in which of these countries you would prefer to live, and under which code of laws you would prefer to rear your children?" Silence.

Go to the jungles of Africa, to the plains of Persia, to the table land of Thibet, to the wilds of South America, or even to the isolation of the frontier countries of North America. Note the civilization! Visit any nation, or any community where the light of the Gospel of the Son of God is shining, and note the contrast! Why this difference? May it not be truthfully said, "The entrance of thy word giveth light"?

What agency banished the old-time stocks and the guillotine? What potent power demolished the old-time tyranny that characterized the despots of the past? Are the hopes of the Christian of today better than the superstitions of the past? Why, unless it be that "righteousness exalteth a nation"?

4. HOW CAN WE INTRODUCE IT?—Whenever we, "the people," say it shall be, it will be. How did we get religious toleration in America? Our lawmakers said we could have it. How did they know we wanted it? We memorialized them; made our request known to them.

Have we a right to petition our general Government for special legislation? Certainly. Why not? Could a Government be Republican or Democratic and deny the right to petition it?

Suppose the right to petition our Annual or District Conferences were cut off. Well might we, with Isaiah of old, exclaim, "What part have we in David?" Our fathers wisely laid plans for the grandest system of church government known to the world.

What gospel principle would be violated if the entire population of Christianity in the United States should memorialize Congress by petition, to enact such laws as would, at least, permit, if not enforce, Bible teaching in our schools? If we may sing national airs in our schools, why may we not sing, "Guide me, oh thou great Jehovah"? Was any child, in any community, in any nation ever made the worse for having been taught to reverence God's Word? Then, why may we not have daily Bible reading as a part of our school programs? Might it not well take the place of some much less useful routine work?

5. THE INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY-SCHOOL LESSONS.—But how are we to decide on what parts of the Bible to use? And how about commenting on it by the teacher? These questions should be easily answered. For instance, who could or who would object, on any reasonable grounds, to having the daily readings of the International Sunday-school lessons read in day schools? Would there be anything sectarian about such reading? Would it jeopardize the tenets of any sect? If so, that sect had better revise its creed.

As to the comments that teachers might be permitted to make, it is presumed that we might well leave that to the discretion of our teachers, for if we could not entrust that much to them, it may be seriously questioned if we may afford to trust the moral and literary education of our children to them.

So, by way of starting the sentiment of restoring the Bible to its normal and old-time place in our schools, in helping to mold the character of our boys and girls, it is moved that the Christians of America rise up and petition our law-making bodies, and our National Government, if necessary, for some such wholesome legislation as will permit the restoration of the Blessed Word to our day school programs. Amen!

What Is Holiness?

BY M. M. ESHELMAN.

THERE is quite a difference between religion, devoutness, piety, and holiness. One may be religious, pious, and devout, and yet lack holiness. There is a religious sentiment or a religious education, yet it may not be holy. One may be very pious, have great warmth of mind, yet be lacking in holiness. A devout exercise, by following an outward sign or commandment, may characterize the conduct, yet lack holiness. Piety, devoutness, and religious sentiment, are found in holiness but are not holiness itself. What, then, is holiness?

To be holy is to be heavenly-minded. The holy man "is more fit for heaven than for earth." To be holy means that the thoughts are fixed upon things of heaven. So did the Savior. All his ways were heavenly,—transported from earth to heaven.

When God called Israel out of darkness, he conveyed the idea of holiness to their minds by means of contrasts. He called some kinds of animals clean and other kinds unclean. The clean he designated as fit for sacrifice, and the unclean as unfit for services. By this means he conveyed the idea of holiness of heart and life into the people's minds. Now we get the idea by study of the method he pursued, and can invite the purity of God into our souls. But the evidences must still go with the idea.

First of all we must so believe and so live that the imputed holiness of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit can become ours. This is done through faith and obedience to each of them. A holy kiss is the expression of holy-hearted love for our brother (Rom. 16: 16). A holy submission is to yield to the commandment in John 18: 13-17. A holy heart can not refuse this "walking in the Spirit," —obeying Jesus. If one is infinitely pure in heart, he can no more refuse a command of Jesus than he can denounce God. John 1: 75 says we should "serve Jesus in holiness." Service consists of specific acts,—God's commands obeyed. Even chastisements have their values in holiness (Heb. 12: 10). By these we become "partakers" (partners) of his holiness.

One may be very religious and yet be devoid of holiness. Even the Mohammedan can work at this. A Buddhist can be quite religious, but is that holiness to the Lord? Jew, Gentile, Pagan, and heathen, alike, may be pious, because it is "a practicable" virtue, "applicable to the dependent condition of man," yet this piety is no evidence of heart-holiness. If it were, then heathenism would be salvation from sin. You may have piety, all devoutness, all religious sentiment into your life, yet be utterly empty of "holiness unto the Lord." The commandment of the Holy Spirit is, "Let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God." "In the flesh" is carnality. Cornelius was very devout, but lacked holiness until he obeyed in baptism and in "the all things" of God (Matt. 28: 20). And this holiness, which alone is of value to the soul, is not alone from the mouth. Read Ezek. 33: 31 for fraudulent holiness.

Then, what is holiness? Believing and obeying God through Christ. When one is holy, he will obey every known commandment of Jesus. He will not excuse himself from the washing of the saint's feet any more than he will excuse himself from believing some of the Truth. He will not excuse himself from the Lord's supper, the full meal of Jesus, indicating the last great feast of Luke 22: 20 and Rev. 19: 9. He will not refuse to be nonconformed to the world in its ungodly customs, fashions, forms, and requirements. He will willingly search the Gospel of Christ to ascertain duties to perform, rather than to make excuses for not obeying him. He will find no nonessentials in God's Word, be they prophecy, precept or promise. He loves the truth because he is now holy. Every requirement is a joy, not a burden to his heart. He gives of his substance to the Lord because he is holy.

The Better Righteousness.

BY NATHAN MARTIN.

"For I say unto you, That except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven" (Matt. 5: 20).

RIGHTEOUSNESS is indispensable in the Christian life, but there are righteousnesses and righteousnesses. The Master, in the above utterance, gives a plain and solemn warning that not only must the Christian have a just claim to righteousness, but the righteousness that shall avail for entrance into the kingdom of heaven must be of a higher standard, of a nobler type, than that which was practiced by the scribes and Pharisees.

A very casual study of the righteousness of the two classes mentioned would show its insufficiency according to a New Testament standard. A closer study would serve only to confirm this judgment. Notwithstanding the fact that the scribes were considered the learned of their day, in the letter of the law and the prophets (Matt. 2: 4); in spite of the Pharisees being recognized as the ideal practicers of religion (Acts 26: 4, 5); Jesus, after enunciating briefly a few of the fundamentals of the religion which he came to teach and exemplify, tells his followers that their religion must be of a higher grade than that of the scribes and Pharisees.

In their attitude toward Christ, the fulfillment of the law and prophets which they were continually studying, they showed their greatest weakness and meanness. They were the ones who brought to him the adulterous woman (John 8: 3-6), "tempting him, that they might have to accuse him." They were the ones who desired a sign (Matt. 12: 38, 39). They accused him of eating and drinking with publicans and sinners (Mark 2: 16). They were the ones who were on his track, practically from the cradle to the grave, "that they might find an accusation against him" (Luke 6: 7).

In their relations with their fellow-men, again, the scribes and Pharisees revealed their true condition of heart, showing that they had not learned the first elements of obedience to the chief and great commandment of the law, and to the second, which is like unto it (Matt. 22: 37-40). They devoured widows' houses and for a pretense made long prayers (Matt. 23: 10). They bound heavy burdens on men's shoulders,—burdens which they would not themselves have lifted with one of their fingers (Matt. 23: 4). The climax of their iniquity was possibly reached in shutting up the kingdom of heaven against men, neither entering themselves, nor suffering them that were entering to go in (Matt. 23: 13). Such religion, Jesus would have his followers understand, is not of the type that would further his kingdom. The rule of the kingdom is, "All things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them" (Matt. 7: 12). Again, loyalty to the kingdom, instead of blocking the way, would go after the lost and the fallen, and compel them to come in (Luke 14: 23). Therefore, "Except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees."

But, if anything could be more obnoxious to the Master than their iniquity, it was their righteousness. Never before, nor since, did such a pretentious exterior hide such an abominable interior. They made broad their phylacteries and enlarged the borders of their garments (Matt. 23: 5). Without washing their hands, they would not eat (Mark 7: 3). Their ablutions extended further,—to "the washing of cups, and pots, and brazen vessels, and tables" (Mark 7: 4). Tithes were scrupulously observed (Matt. 23: 23). Their worship was based on the tradition of the elders (Mark 7: 3). This they observed in preference to the commandment of God (Mark 7: 9).

Many times during his career among them, Jesus denounced them as hypocrites. He bade his disciples and the multitude heed their teaching, but not their practice, "for they say and do not" (Matt. 23: 3). What they did do was done with reference to the eye of man, rather than the all-seeing eye of God (Matt. 23: 5). The most scathing epithets that ever escaped the lips of the Son of God were directed toward these would-be teachers of righteousness. They were likened to "graves which appear not" (Luke 11: 44). They were satisfied to "make clean the outside of the cup and of the platter," even though the inside was "full of extortion and excess" (Matt. 23: 25). Again, they were likened to "whited sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead men's bones, and of all uncleanness" (Matt. 23: 27).

In addition to the discrepancy between the teaching and the practice and the love of men's applause, the element of proportion was sadly lacking in this religious system. They had so long worshiped the letter of the law that they had become, in the fullest sense, "blind guides." So long "straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel" (Matt. 23: 24), they necessarily "omitted the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith" (Matt. 23: 23). Zealous to the extreme, they compassed sea and land to make one proselyte, but when he was made they made him twofold more the child of hell than themselves (Matt. 23: 15).

This was the righteousness which could in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven, the religion that Jesus Christ denounced. With so much that is good and commendable, this system, by reason of vital defects, constitutes one of the most remarkable religious systems in history. Never was the truth more strikingly illustrated that "the letter killeth" (2 Cor. 3: 6). "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine" (John 7: 17).

Brother, sister, when you turn the white light of God's eternal truth upon your own heart and life, do you find any trace of the Pharisees' righteousness? Do you adopt, for your own personal religion, the same rule that you would apply to others? Are you going on to perfection, lest you might prevent others from entering in? Does your practice coincide with your profession? Do your public life and your private life harmonize? Are you more concerned about clean hands than about a clean heart? Would you rather give one-tenth, or for that matter nine-tenths, of your substance, than to give your body a living sacrifice? Are you concerned about men's opinions of your carrying out the principles of your religion? Is your religion, in any way, lacking in balance or proportion, attaching undue importance to things which appeal to your natural inclinations, and neglecting judgment, mercy, and faith? If so, the Psalmist's advice would be, to take heed to your way, according to the Word of God (Psa. 119: 9). No more perfect teacher, no more complete example, ever trod this earth than the Son of Man. Oh, for more of the better righteousness, the exceeding righteousness, the righteousness meet for the kingdom of heaven!

Proving the Will of God.

BY PAUL MOHLER.

How shall the world know the will of God? For a long time the world has been guided by another will than God's. The world's eye hath not seen, its ear hath not heard, neither hath it entered into its heart what God hath prepared for them that love him. It is not conscious of the glorious destiny, planned for man by his Father. It does not even know what the life of glory is, as God has planned it shall be lived on earth. Its mind and heart are so full of false ideals, false hopes, and false doctrines, that it will be no easy task to learn the true. How shall the world be taught?

Jesus came to be the light of the world, to teach the world the true life of glory which, it is the will of God, every man should live. How did he teach it? By living the true life himself. He demonstrated the will of God for men by living it before their eyes. He taught by word of course, but he proved his words in action. Without the life of sacrifice, even without his final sacrifice, he never could have gripped the hearts of men as he has done. Verily, by being lifted up has he drawn all men unto him.

How shall men know the will of God today? Shall we not tell them? We who know that it is the will of God that men should live sober, righteous, godly lives of love in the midst of a crooked and perverse generation, shall we not tell them so?

But telling is not enough; men want proof. They want to see a demonstration, an example. "Theories are cheap, give us proof," they say. They have the same right as had those in the days of Christ,—the right to see the righteousness of God. They have a right to see a man give himself, heart and soul, to the service of God, obedient to his will in all humility, even unto death. They have a right to expect the same kind of a life from the Christian that the men of Judea and Galilee saw in Christ, for if Christianity "runs out," in the course of time, it is not of the eternal God. Shall these men be disappointed? Shall they look for righteousness in vain? That depends on us, my brother. It depends upon you and me.

The credit of God is at stake today. Every man that names the name of God in vain, who bears the name of Christian and lives as other men, selfish, greedy for the wealth or pleasures of this life, sour-tempered, distrustful, jealous, proud, scornful, disobedient to the church, destroys the credit of God. There are thousands of that kind,—too many in our own dear Fraternity. There are so many of them, and their "testimony" is so strong that if God's credit is to stand, there must be a great number of true and earnest men who give themselves to God, to prove in their own lives that the true child of God is loving, pure, unselfish, generous, sweet-tempered, helpful, humble and obedient even unto death.

Paul beseeches his Roman brethren to present themselves to God, a living sacrifice, to be transformed by the renewing of their minds, so as to prove what is the good and acceptable and perfect will of God. He bases his appeal on the great mercies of God, as he has recorded them. God has done so much for us that gratitude alone would demand from us a life of sacrifice, but there is more reason even than that. The life which is according to the will of God is such a glorious, joyous life of freedom, due to the mercies of God, that our own loving interest in our fellow-men demands that we should show to them the will of God by living it.

If Christians will not prove the will of God, who will? If there are not enough Christians living the will of God, some one will be lost for the lack of it. My brother, do you love your neighbor as yourself? Then prove to him the will of God.

"Vacation Thoughts."

BY AMOS H. HAINES.

At the close of a school or college year, the teacher, educator, minister and intelligent layman, are very apt to pass, in review, some educational problems, and ask themselves, What of the past, the present and the future of our educational work? As a church, we seem to be getting more and more aware of the meaning and significance of the work of our schools,—especially in their relation to the church and the community. We also get the larger view, which might be termed the rational one, in so far as the training of our young people has to do with Christian citizenship.

No one of our thoughtful Brethren, so far as I know, now questions the necessity and permanency of our educational work. The church has come to see that she can not live aggressively, efficiently and well, without the schools, and surely the schools would suffer much,—and in some cases fatally,—without the sympathy and support of the church.

The main problems seem to be those of adjustment, curriculum, faculty, administration, etc. In all these, efficiency must be kept prominently in the front. We have surely passed the day for what may be termed "educational shams." The credulity of a trustful and confiding people can not now be taken advantage of to forward and support some pet scheme, largely selfish, personal and semi-pedagogical. We have come to the time, when schools, men, teachers and educational systems and codes must and will be taken for their worth, and stand or fall on the bases of merit and efficiency.

One great problem to be considered is that of poise and educational balance. Indeed, I have come to believe that this is, perhaps, the greatest problem for our Brethren schools today. One may say, he cares very little for things outside of his experience or experiential knowledge. This he overworks to the exclusion of the historical and rational. As a result, we get a lop-sided, illy-balanced person. Some may call him a mystic, others a freak or a crank. He may be sincere. He simply lacks poise and balance. The making of such a product, our schools should carefully guard and control. The visionary and mystic can not take the world for Christ.

Another may say, "I care for nothing but the facts." He inquires for the history, and cares for nothing besides. Here, again, is need for adjustment and balance. The person is not properly related to, and connected with, things either spiritual or material. In short, such an one is an arid critic,—nothing more. He is an unsafe guide in matters of religion and education.

Again, another may say, "I rely wholly on the reason. That which I can not fully reason out, shall have no place in my thought, planning and philosophy of life." Such an one is noted for his rationalism and is commonly called a rationalist. He, too, is out of balance and needs adjustment.

With these facts before us, I think we shall come to see that the educational problem is largely one of synthesis, adjustment and balance. The experience, history and reason, must each be given its due place and emphasis. This proper synthesis will prevent the so-called "flying off at a tangent." Especially for the Christian,—that person in personal touch with Christ, and in sympathy with, as well as a believer in, the teachings of the Holy Scriptures,—such an one, above all others, needs the proper poise and balance in dealing with things spiritual, in interpreting the Scriptures and solving the problems of the church.

Now let us look at the question, "How attain to this proper balance and poise in matters educational, religious, spiritual?" In the first place, what is the need,—if, indeed, there be a need? We hear much today of "The New Thought," "The New Theology," "The Scientific Spirit," "The Higher Criticism," "The Historical Spirit," "Evolution," "The Biological Law of Development," etc. Now, what does it all mean? The unfortunate thing is, that, as a rule, the persons who use these words and expressions indiscriminately, and endeavor to throw light upon them, and the subjects and type of thought they represent, are those who know least about them. These words stand for real things,—conditions and problems. They can not be met by jeering at them for a sinister, selfish and jealous purpose. They must be met fairly, frankly, sincerely, in the spirit of honest and devoted scholarship, fully conscious that God is on the side of truth, and that it is safe to follow truth, for, said he, "My word is truth," "The truth makes free."

"How may we prepare for and solve these problems," do you ask? Answer,—By an all-around education, by religious education, because, in truth, there can be no other. Let our young people, so far as possible, obtain a good preparatory education,—say a four-years' course. Follow this up, if possible, by a four-years' college course, leading to the degree, A. B., Bachelor in Arts. In these courses take as much Bible Study as possible. If the student is preparing for the work of the teacher, he should elect a few special courses,—say from four to six,—in the departments of Pedagogy, Psychology and History of Education. After these courses of study have been well and efficiently completed, specialize for professional work in our best universities, either in America or abroad. For our ministers, in particular, we would recommend, after the preparatory and college courses, the taking of a course of Bible study, scientific and scholarly, if possible. This course should cover about three years.

Some may say, "This plan is too long and exacting." In answer I should say, Beware of short cuts! As a rule they do not lead to the goal.

In education, today, there is doubtless a great need for a return to the industrial, practical and domestic. There is much pedagogical value in intelligent handiwork. A good trade has both a practical and educational value. This, our schools and our school systems can not and should not ignore.

May we endeavor, in our educational work, to develop the best possible product for the home, the community, the church and the nation! May we remember that the problem of religious education is the greatest problem for us as a church, as it is the greatest problem for the State and Nation.

Cultivating Patience.

BY JAMES M. NEFF.

DID you ever get into a situation where you wanted to hurry, but couldn't? And did it make you nervous? A man with weak lungs and short breath may be able to do a number of things, but he can not hurry, and my experience is that if you can not hurry, it's a fine thing to resign yourself to it, and, no matter what you undertake to do, make up your mind in advance that you do not want to hurry. Many otherwise good-looking folks bring wrinkles prematurely into their faces and into their dispositions by fretting because they can not do what they can not do. If you should never find a fence crossing your path that you could not climb, where would be the occasion for the exercise of patience? The thing to do, under such circumstances, is to smile and sing, and be grateful that there is plenty of room for you on one side of the fence, even though you would much prefer to be on the other side.

These things have been brought to my mind with renewed force by recent occurrences. I am still in my mountain camp, but I was not here long until it grew monotonous. I yearned for a wider range than my meager strength would permit over these steep mountain sides. So I went to the mountain man who lives near by, to see whether I could arrange for the hire of a donkey. But this is a busy season for donkeys. The woods are full of camping parties now, and I am by no means the only one that has use for a donkey, so the only one that was left for me was one so old and slow that few people would care to wait for him, but I engaged him and was glad for the chance. I decided I would go down and spend a day or so with wife and little ones. The road is only nine miles long and it is all down hill, and upon this I based my estimate that the old donkey would get me there sometime, anyhow. And what matters it, thought I, whether he gets me there sooner or later? I am of little account anywhere, why should I be in a hurry?

Next morning I was up early, and as soon as breakfast was over, and my camp was put in order to leave, I put a lunch in my pocket and tied a drinking cup to the saddle, that I might drink from the mountain brooks at will, and thought that, even though the trip should occupy the entire day, I was prepared for it. And thus the old donkey and I put off down the mountain together. When the donkey felt like it, I would let him rest. When I felt like it, I would get out of the saddle and sit in the shade. The grandeur and the glory of the mountains gave me more pleasure than if I had gone faster, and altogether the trip was fine. But it wouldn't have been so if I had been in a hurry.

A few days later the old donkey and I started back to camp. I had some misgivings as to how we would get along, for I estimated that whether we were going up hill or down would make a difference, even to a donkey. We had not gone far, however, till I saw that my fears were not well founded, for again the trip was fine. But it wouldn't have been if I had been in a hurry.

And if you would see a moral to this story, let me say that when you get to the point where you must go slow, make up your mind not to want to hurry, and thus cultivate the beautiful grace of patience.

The Conquest of Death.

BY H. A. STAHL.

MANY conquests there have been, and the histories of conquests form an important part of the literature of the world. There is, however, one before which all the rest, however brilliant, must needs "pale their ineffectual fires," of which, indeed, every other conquest is but a faint reflection and a far-off suggestion. It is the conquest of death by Jesus Christ our Lord. When shall the glory of it fade? When shall the story cease to be told of the Stronger than the strong, and how he came upon the strong-armed man keeping his palace, and overcame him, and took from him all his armor wherein he trusted, and divided his spoils?

Men will never have done wondering at the mighty Conqueror's lowly going forth; at the veiled majesty and power and splendor of the campaign, at the terrific shock of the collision and combat with the adversary; at the glory of the victory; at the peaceful, blessed and everlasting results of the conquest.

What a history of conquest is the history of our dear Savior's life! How inspiring to contemplate his sufferings, death and resurrection! It was a great victory. No language is too strong to express the overthrow of death by Jesus Christ. It is said in the Scriptures that by death he has "destroyed" death. It is said that he has "abolished" death and brought life and immortality to light. The word used is the same in both instances. It is a strong word, signifying to "make void," to bring utterly to naught. This is what our loving Savior has done with death by means of his death and resurrection.

We speak, for the most part, very narrowly, when we speak of death. It is physical death, mostly, that we mean. We have reference to that separation of soul and body by which our life, in its present earthly form, is brought to a close. If this were death, it might seem strange that Christ should have destroyed death, and physical dying should nevertheless remain a fact in human experience. But we forget that the circumstance of physical dying is not so much death, in the proper sense, as, rather, one of the signs of the presence and power of death,—one of the items, merely, in its destructive agency.

Physical death is as little the essence of death as never-ending duration of existence is the essence of the everlasting life of the Gospel. Death is a thing of the soul and the soul's relation to God. It has its seat in man's moral and spiritual nature. It has its cause and essence in separation and alienation, through sin, from God, the Source of all life. Physical death is but a symptom of it,—the external and visible side of it, the outward manifestation in the realm of the body, of its destroying power in the realm of the Spirit.

Our Savior, in dealing with death, dealt not with the symptoms of it but with death itself. He manifests here, as he does everywhere, that lofty characteristic disregard of that which is external, circumstantial and incidental, as distinguished from that which is central, cardinal, essential.

Christ's ways are the ways of the genuine conqueror. He took no outpost, merely, which would have been taken in vain, had the center of the enemy's strength been left unsubdued. Such a point would be certain to fall in the end, the center having once been taken. He aimed directly at the center of the enemy's strength. He sought his adversary's great stronghold. He came upon the strong man in his palace. He stormed and took the citadel, and left disorder and confusion, and fear and trembling, and overthrow and loss of power, to befall every outpost of the enemy's forces wherever it might be. It was thus that our great loving Savior conquered death.

As regards physical death, we conceive of our Savior as dealing with it in either of two ways: He might have acted upon it directly, he might have removed it, he might have absolved us from the necessity of dying. If his conquest of death had consisted in this, and nothing more, our lot would then have been like that of the fabled Tithonus, whom Aurora loved, and for whom she procured from Jove the gift of immortality. But it was a poor immortality that he gained, being a mere, negative exemption from dying. The goddess had forgotten to ask for him the additional gift of immortal youth. And so old age came upon him, and decrepitude and misery. Gladly would Tithonus, in his wretchedness, have died, but he could not die, for he had the fatal gift of exemption from dying.

Disregarding, for the time being, the circumstance of physical death, and allowing it to remain, as not belonging to the root of the matter, our Savior might have planted, in the heart of our being, such a principle of immortality, such a seed of everlasting life, such a divine vigor of immortal youth as should not only neutralize but positively change and transform the experience of dying, causing it to be no longer the consequence and punishment of sin, but the final abolishing of sin and the entrance into the perfect life of heaven. This is what he did.

As regards the matter of dying, Christ has done for us more and better than we should ever have asked or conceived. He conquered death with a conquest more thorough than we should ever have dreamed. It was a great victory, deserving to be had in everlasting remembrance, and to be celebrated with songs of praise and thanksgiving throughout the Christian church.

Failure.

BY OMA KARN.

WHERE is the active, ambitious life that has not felt a choking death-grip upon the very springs of its being? One day we made a mistake,—did an unwise act, spoke an indiscrete word,—and, lo, the result of years of preparation and years of hard, life-filled service was suddenly swept away from us, leaving us standing amidst the wreckage of our unfinished ambition, overwhelmed with regret, heart-sick, discouraged, ready to make an unconditional surrender to the force of circumstances that confront us.

Not all lives suffer such sweeping reverses, but all have, at some time or other, met with apparent defeat in some way. "We have toiled all night and taken nothing," points to a class of failure in which we all have had a fair share, and by which many have been overcome.

"Get thee up; wherefore liest thou thus upon thy face?" was once said to one of these capitulated soldiers who lay prone upon the earth, heaping dust upon his head. This ringing command comes to every one who has permitted himself to be overcome by what seem to be failure. Sometimes success is never nearer to us than immediately after one of these discouraging, humiliating experiences. The way to find this out is to rise up and take hold again.

"Cast thy net on the other side," was the reply to the lament of the Galilean fishermen, and, behold, they hauled in an overabundance of the very thing they had been fishing for. The trouble with them was, that they were fishing on the wrong side. We get into trouble through the same reason. We have been working on the wrong side of things. Our apparent failure is all that is necessary to take us across and set us to work on the right side. No defeat is final unless we choose to make it so. There is still time to win another battle. The winning of this battle may be all that is necessary to bring us over into the land of our ambition. In the rainbow the colors blend into one another in such a way that we can not tell where one leaves off and the other begins. Failure blends with success in much the same way, and discouragement shades, by imperceptible degrees, into the elation of victory.

In no phase of life is failure more keenly felt than in the spiritual life. To stand before the world in this light is not pleasant, and yet the unpleasantness of it is nothing, compared to the humiliating, self-degraded feeling that one experiences in standing before God,—a failure,—untrue to the trust he has shown toward us. Deplorable, indeed, is the result of these spiritual departures from that which we know to be right.

"Give up and be discouraged," is always our temptation at these times, but to rise up and take hold again is as imperative in this as in our failure in natural life, the result being the same. A sudden failure, here, is no reason for giving up all as lost. It may, for a time, turn us away from the path on which we are walking, but sooner or later we return to it. "A righteous man falleth seven times, and riseth up again." In the Christian warfare there is no possibility of getting the better of one who rises to his feet with the determination to keep on fighting. Heaven and all its forces are on his side.

These failures, whether in spiritual or natural life, are the best of teachers if we will accept them as such. They serve the good purpose of showing us our weak points. Like all good instructors, they show us just enough to grasp the meaning, and then leave us to work out the problem alone. As a result, out of the darkness comes light, out of the chill and dreary atmosphere of failure and regret a clearer sight, a warmer heart, a more intense desire to do the right, a stronger and a better life.

A Promise of Return.

BY J. H. MILLER.

IN the days of Jeremiah, the prophet, God's chosen race turned their back upon him and, would not be led by the God of their fathers. "And they have turned unto me the back, and not the face; though I taught them, rising up early and teaching them, yet they have not hearkened to receive instruction. But they set their abominations in the house, which is called by my name, to defile it" (Jer. 32: 33, 34). For many years they were a disobedient people,—they would not hear the call of their God. In course of time, however, after God had caused much evil to come upon them, he brought them into the promised land.

God rejoiced to know that he could, after so many years, bring his own people back to their native homes. "Yea, I will rejoice over them to do them good, and I will plant them in this land assuredly with my whole heart and with my whole soul. For thus saith the Lord; Like as I have brought all of this great evil upon this people, so will I bring upon them all the good that I have promised them. And fields shall be bought in this land, whereof ye say, It is desolate without man or beast; it is given into the hand of the Chaldeans. Men shall buy fields for money, and subscribe evidences, and seal them, and take witnesses in the land of Benjamin, and in the places about Jerusalem, and in the cities of Judah, and in the cities of the mountains, and in the cities of the valley, and in the cities of the south: for I will cause their captivity to return, saith the Lord" (Jer. 32: 41-44).

This prophecy is about to be fulfilled. The prophet says, "They shall build for money." The Jews will return to their native land with plenty of money to buy their long-sought-for free land, and have it as their own. If the Jews get possession of Palestine as they once had, no nation shall be able to drive them away. "Behold, I will gather them out of all countries, whither I had driven them in mine anger, and in my fury, and in great wrath; and I will bring them again unto this place, and I will cause them to dwell safely [no one to disturb their peace]. And they shall be my people and I will be their God: And I will give them one heart, and one way, that they may fear me forever, for the good of them, and of their children after them. And I will make an everlasting covenant with them, that I will not turn away from them, to do them good; but I will put my fear in their hearts, that they shall not depart from me" (Jer. 32: 37-39).

This thirty-second chapter is a wonderful prophecy. Read the whole chapter. As I see that prophecy, when the Jews get possession of Palestine, there will be no nation on earth to drive them away. God will give the Jews his strength to hold that land. "Behold, I will gather them out of all countries, whither I have driven them in mine anger, and in my fury, and in great wrath."

The Lord's way is now open. God will lead his chosen race to their native land. "And I will cause them to dwell safely" (v. 37). There will be no power on earth to drive them from their homes. God will make an everlasting covenant with them,—"I will not turn them away." God will see to their safety and stand by them. Those who will live for the next twenty or thirty years will see a wonderful change for the Jews.

I am delighted in knowing that our people of late years are so much interested, that they will spend time and money to visit the Orient and make known to the world the things that have been kept secret for ages. All will be brought to light to prove that the Book of all books is the voice of God speaking to man.

THE DEBATE AT AKRON, INDIANA.

The debate has now almost reached the close of the first proposition, which Bro. Kesler has been affirming: "The Church of the Brethren, with which I, Jay. G. Stineb augh, stand identified, is identical in doctrine and practice with the church described in the New Testament Scriptures."

The establishment of the kingdom or church of Christ, under the personal ministry of Christ, was supported by nine carefully-prepared arguments, drawn from the Scriptures.

By a number of arguments it was maintained that the Brethren have evangelical and saving faith, and a repentance that reforms the outward and inward life. It was urged that the Brethren are built on God's Word, hence have Christ as their foundation. Baptism by true immersion was maintained by six leading arguments, drawn from the Scriptures, philology and history. Then followed a defense of the laying on of hands, and bowing in baptism, supported by a number of well-directed arguments.

Next came a number of specific commands as, "The Golden Rule," "The Two Great Commands," "The Lord's Prayer," "The Savior's Law of Trespass," etc. These were followed by a delineation of feet-washing, supported by eight carefully-prepared and well-directed arguments.

Then the Lord's supper was taken up, and five pointed arguments were presented in its defense.

The communion was treated as an institution separate and distinct in itself, and seven arguments were presented in its support, as practiced by the Brethren.

The prayer-veiling came next and was treated in an able manner by our brother. Six arguments were presented on the subject.

This was followed by the holy-kiss, with seven arguments in its support, all of which were pointed and well directed.

This was followed by several arguments in support of the anointing, all of which showed careful study and preparation.

Next came our nonconforming, nonresistance and nonlitigant principles, which were clearly and forcibly defended.

A very noticeable feature of the discussion is, that so far Eld. Denny fails to reply to a number of our brother's arguments. All in all, our brother has made an able defense of the truth, without equivocation or prevarication. For want of time, much valuable material could not be presented.

The debate is being held in a tent 50x80 feet in size, in close proximity to the church now used by our Brethren. The attendance has been quite satisfactory, and especially so on the part of our people, there being representatives from Indiana, Illinois, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Iowa, and Michigan. It is a noticeable feature of the meeting that our people are manifesting great interest in the discussion.

It has been our earnest desire that the debate come out in print, and many advance orders for the book had come in, but the opposite side objected to its publication, and therefore the project had to be abandoned at the last moment. Had our members known of our disappointment in this, no doubt many more would have been here.

Eld. Stineb augh and his little band of faithful workers deserve much praise for their untiring zeal and self-sacrifice in making the surroundings so pleasant.

Flora, Ind. A. G. Crosswhite.

God always makes the road in which he wants his pilgrim to travel smooth; it is free from mud. There is no danger of being mired down in the highway of holiness, or of losing the way, for the track is so plain that a wayfaring man though a fool, can not get lost therein. It is a way that is made for the man, and the man for the way, just as the locomotive is made for the rail, and the rail for the locomotive. If we step where God tells us, though it may be a step in the dark, we shall find, when our feet comes down, that it is resting on the rock.

THE ROUND TABLE

Brethren.

BY JAS. A. SELL.

THE name "brethren" was coined by Abraham. It was the argument that he used when he desired to keep on friendly terms with Lot, at the time when their herdsmen disputed about the pasture land.

The word is said to have its root in two other words,—"one" and "together." From this the idea obtains that brethren ought to be as one, or together. The word expresses a nearness or oneness. This is the basis of union, and is a powerful argument in settling all disputes. When Lot heard it, his heart yielded, and the trouble was ended. Brotherly love seeks not its own but gives the perference to the other. Look at the magnanimous spirit that it puts into a man: "Let there be no strife, I pray thee, between me and thee, and between my herdsmen and thy herdsmen, for we be brethren. Is not the whole land before thee? Separate thyself, I pray thee, from me: if thou wilt take the left hand, then I will go to the right; or if thou depart to the right hand, then I will go to the left."

Discord may come, but it soon blends into loving harmony. The harp has different strings, that give forth different tones. It has, within itself, the possibility of dreadful discord, but it can be chorded and operated in such a way that the difference blends into a sweet harmony that is at once charming, cheering and inspiring. In fact the music could not have been, had there been no difference in the sounds. So the beauty of brotherly love only appears when there is seemingly a reason for quarreling.

Difference of disposition, or opinion, or temperament, or nationality, will not cause contention if "we be brethren." Behind the name is affection, and back of the affection is God. He is the father, and we are his children. Through his Son, Christ Jesus, we are begotten in a fellowship that is dearer and stronger than nature's ties.

Some Whys.

BY FRANK G. KETTERLE.

WHY can a man, chewing tobacco, permit the filthy juice to run down his chin, when but a hair in the gravy simply makes him frantic?

Why do people grumble about the answers to their prayers, and then continue to pray for bread and expect a stone?

Why do we pray for more faith and neglect that which cultivates it, viz., obedience to commands?

Why are some people more concerned about the place of worship than the spirit of it?

Why do some people walk around with long faces and cold countenances, and then censure the preacher if he does not meet them with a beaming face and an old-time handshake?

Why do so-called Christians cry for peace among nations and still hold an attitude of hatred toward their fellow-disciples, when they well know that Christ has put the stamp of murder upon such a disposition?

Why does a man get nervous, and twist, and go to sleep, in a comfortable church pew during a forty-minute sermon when he can sit on an inch board for three hours and talk politics or fat cattle?

Why do some people claim they can not speak and pray in public, and then join the front rank of those who complain about the sermon or the prayer service?

Why are some folks unable to pay their honest debts, while they still have plenty of money to attend every amusement or show that comes their way?

Why Is It?

BY BERNICE ASHMORE.

WHY is it, that when visiting some of our Brethren churches, we find the members slow in recognizing those of like precious faith? Why is it? They let other churches, not of our faith, outdo them in welcoming strangers into their services.

While visiting, my first stop was in a city where we have no church. I met an M. E. lady, who, in the course of our conversation, invited me to attend their services, and who even called for me on Sabbath morning. At church she did not seem satisfied until I had met all of her fellow-members that were present. They gave me a hearty welcome and invited me to all their services, during my stay in their city.

I moved on to other places, visiting old friends and churches, where were those who were near and dear to me, my last stop being in an Eastern city with over 100,000 inhabitants. Knowing of two places where the Brethren worshiped, I inquired for the nearest one, and took the street car to that point,—a distance of five or six miles. I was met at the church by the superintendent of the Sunday-school and welcomed into the Bible class, which I enjoyed very much. We had a very soul-inspiring sermon by a young brother.

Why was it, however, that after services not one sister came to welcome me, to show their appreciation of my presence? The elder and two brethren were at the door as I passed out. They shook hands with me and invited me back again. Why do our sisters treat strangers thus? We ought to make others welcome, to make them feel that we are members of one great family.

A Question.

BY IDA M. HELM.

"Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread? and your labor for that which satisfieth not" (Isa. 55: 2).

MUCH money and time are spent in trying to satisfy the lust of the eyes and the pride of life. They do not satisfy, and they will soon fade away. "The world passeth away and the lust thereof."

We see something we admire, and we take our money or our time to obtain it. Then we place it in our rooms as an ornament. By and by our rooms may be full of useless ornaments, so much that perhaps there is not enough room left for us to place a really useful thing. The mantel, stand and table are crowded with useless stuff that gives neither satisfaction nor profit. Think of what they represent! The hard-earned money of the poor; the time and energy, yes, the life-blood of the little children who are compelled to spend long hours of the day and night working in death-dealing sweat shops; the money that should be saved for a time of need or old age. The useless baubles often represent money that should have been used in paying honest debts, or in providing clothes for the needy and bread for the poor. In these overcrowded rooms, often, there is not one copy of the Word of God and not one religious paper. "Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread? and your labor for that which satisfieth not?"

Be Very Careful.

BY EDGAR M. HOFFER.

AS we pass through this world but once, we should be careful how we live. One thing, of which we should be very careful, is the writing of letters, either to friends or enemies. Let us bear in mind that an unkind letter once sent off, is like an angry word,—it can never be recalled.

Always read your letters before sending them away. Be sure to address them properly, and have a stamp on the envelope. Never write a letter while your temper is aroused. If you write letters while you are angry, you may regret it afterward. Have your letters full of charity and good cheer. You will never regret it.

It is always well to write a good letter. Children should write to their parents when they are away from home. Write to your unsaved friends about their soul's salvation. There are many aged elders and others, nearing the eve of life's day, who would greatly appreciate a letter, were you to write to some of them.

Remember that God keeps an account of all you do, and that he notes every letter you write. Never write a word of which you would be ashamed at a future day.

Trinity.

BY J. H. MILLER.

THE devil is wise, but not all-wise. The Lord God has used his power in a triune form. The devil has tried the same method, and by so doing has made a wreck of the human family. His appeals were made: first, to the human appetite; second, to the lust of the eye; third, to unlawful knowledge. This threefold cord was made so strong and so deceptive that it has done a work that has been felt ever since the creation. Beware of this archenemy!

CHRISTIAN WORKERS' TOPIC

First Aid for the Tempted.

Heb. 2: 14-18.

For Sunday Evening, August 27, 1911.

I. The Tempter (Gen. 3: 1; 2 Cor. 11: 3; 1 Tim. 6: 9; Jas. 1: 14; 2 Pet. 2: 18).

II. Resisters (Gen. 14: 23; Job 2: 10; Dan. 1: 8; Luke 4: 4; John 6: 15).

III. Advice. (Prov. 1: 10; 4: 14; Rom. 6: 13; Eph. 6: 13; 2 Pet. 3: 17).

IV. Encouragement (1 Cor. 10: 13; Jas. 1: 2, 12; 4: 17; Rev. 3: 10).

V. Aids.—(1) By angels. "Angels . . . ministered unto him" (Matt. 4: 11). No one is so holy as to be free from temptation. The best way to meet temptation is by applying the Scriptures. (2) By prayer. "Lead us not into temptation" (Matt. 6: 13). God has such control over the tempter as to save us from his power if we call upon him. (3) By watchfulness. "Let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed" (1 Cor. 10: 12, 13). (4) By resistance. "Resist the devil" (Jas. 4: 7); "steadfast in the faith" (1 Pet. 5: 9). Yield to God in all things; to the devil in none (Rom. 6: 13).

Note.—(1) When temptation assails, it is usually true that "he who hesitates is lost." A sharp, decisive "No" is the best answer to the wiles of the evil one. (2) It is hard to resist temptation when we have gone half way to meet it. (3) Heed the injunction, "Abstain from all appearance of evil." (4) Do not allow the mind to dwell upon the thing that tempts.

PRAYER MEETING

A Prayer Meeting in Prison.

Acts 16: 25-34.

For Week Beginning August 27, 1911.

1. The Happy Prisoners.—Paul and Silas did not lament the ill-fortune that befell them in the line of duty. "Stone walls do not a prison make." God was inside the prison as well as outside. Their feet were fast in the stocks, but their tongue could pray and sing psalms of praise (Psa. 35: 27, 28; 51: 15; 100: 1-5).

2. Momentous Results.—"The prisoners were listening to them." Surely, an interesting prayer meeting,—God's opportunity! Hardened criminals the spell-bound listeners! The day before a prayer meeting at the riverside with the devout women; tonight prayer and song in the prison with felons. Whether by the riverside or in the prison, the soul that has a song will sing it. But greater things are to come. Divine power sends a great earthquake. The very foundations of the prison are shaken, doors are flung open, and shackles fall to the floor. Yes, God answers prayer (Psa. 118: 5-9).

3. The Frightened Jailer.—The sleeping jailer did not hear the songs of praise, but the louder note of the earthquake and falling doors, rent walls, and severed shackles strikes terror to his soul. Escaping prisoners, he thinks. Must his life pay the forfeit? Out of the darkness comes the reassuring voice of Paul, telling him that all are safe. God is in control (Psa. 103: 8-18).

4. "What Must I Do?"—Conviction strikes the jailer. An open prison and unescaped prisoners must be an act of the great God, hitherto unknown, and he wants to know how to escape God's side. Paul tells him, "Believe on the Lord Jesus and thou shalt be saved." Solution of all our troubles,—a panacea for all heartaches (Matt. 11: 28-30)!

5. A Household Reclaimed.—The jailer made glorious amends. He took those two men home with him and bathed their sore and bloody stripes. He never thought of such a thing before his conversion. He and all those of his household who believed, were now baptized and "rejoiced greatly." God's power, by his faithful servant, wrought a wondrous work (Col. 3: 1-3).

HOME AND FAMILY

Alcohol's Alphabet.

In a recent contribution to the North American Review, Dr. Cyrus Edson, health officer of New York City, gave this alphabetic rhyme which he learned from one of his patients. While reciting it, he says, the tears would roll down the young drunkard's cheeks as he described the different stages of his own career.

A stands for alcohol; deathlike its grip;
B for beginner, who takes just a sip.
C for companion, who urges him on;
D for the demon of drink that was born;
E for endeavor he makes to resist;
F stands for friends who so loudly insist;
G for the guilt that he afterwards feels;
H for the horrors that hang at his heels;
I his intention to not drink at all;
J stands for jeering that follows his fall;
K for his knowledge that he is a slave;
L stands for the liquor his appetite craves;
M for convivial meetings so gay;
N stands for no that he tries hard to say;
O, for the orgies that then come to pass;
P stands for pride, that he drowns in his glass;
Q stands for quarrels that nightly abound;
R stands for ruin that hovers around;
S stands for sights which his vision bedims;
T stands for trembling that seizes his limbs;
U for his usefulness sunk in the slums;
V stands for vagrant he quickly becomes;
W for waning of life that's soon done;
X for the exit regretted by none;
Y outh of this nation, such weakness is crime!
Z ealously turn from the tempter in time.

When the Dog Star Rules.

BY ELIZABETH D. ROSENBERGER.

CERTAINLY it is rather warm in the city. The passing water-cart, the loud-voiced huckster, and the sparrow which survives the winter's cold, as well as the heat of dog-days, all seem to emphasize the record of the thermometer. The people in the cities dream of green fields and babbling brooks, until a large number escape from the wilderness of brick and mortar, and go "way off somewhere." It is pleasant to loiter under the leafy canopies of July woods, far from the "madding crowd,"—from the city sights and sounds. Theodosia Garrison has well described it in a poem, "The Green Inn."

"The roof is high and arched and blue,
The floor is spread with pine;
On my four walls the sunlight falls
In golden flecks and fine;
And swift and fleet, on noiseless feet
The "Four Winds" bring me wine.
Oh you, who, in the House of Strife,
Quarrel, and game, and sin,
Come out and see what cheer may be
For starveling souls and thin,
Who come at last from drouth and fast
To sit in God's Green Inn."

But even in the country the summer presents us with new problems and complications which are absent in the winter,—conditions from which the cold, dry air of winter frees us. If you try to read, sitting before the coolest window in the shadiest nook of the house, you find it too dark to see more than the head-lines of your newspaper. Only by stealth can the man let in a little light and air. That is man's time-honored idea of cooling a room. His fathers and grandfathers, before him, have all tried it,—to open the door and windows, and let in the midday breeze,—scorching though it may be,—and incidentally the flies and dust are everywhere.

Some one advises the use of carbolic acid in cleaning drawers and shelves. But the carbolic acid must be used with great caution, as it is dangerous and will burn the flesh. About two ounces of the carbolic acid crystals to a gallon of water will prove quite effective in cleaning shelves and drawers. But plenty of soap and water, all the summer through, is generally all that is needed to keep free from insects. The carbolic acid is only for extremely obstinate insects who will not leave the premises after ordinary persuasion.

The parts of the house that require much looking after through the summer are the cellar, kitchen, pantry and bathroom. When we have flies to contend with in the kitchen, they prove very annoying. Worse than the frogs of Egypt, worse than the curse of serpents, or rivers running with blood, was the "grievous swarm of flies" brought on the Egyptians by Moses, the Israelite, in that memorable struggle for freedom. The cellar is not so difficult to care for, if it is well drained and dry. As for the cupboards and pantry, only care and constant attention to little things can make them sanitary. But if the parts of the house, where daily living is involved, are kept perfectly clean, there need be little fear for the rest of the house.

Microbes are particularly active during these days. A small piece of meat, or vegetables, or fruit, left to decay in the pantry, or some hidden corner, is capable of contaminating all the food in the vicinity. It may even poison the atmosphere of the house. Milk is the most susceptible of all foods, and is easily polluted and made unfit for use. It is an accepted fact that many contagious diseases are carried in the air, in dust and in water.

It is a happy couple, indeed, that is able to start out in married life in a home all their own,—in some place where they will have green grass about their house, and climbing vines,—a place where God's pure sunshine bathes and sweetens every side of the house during the day. But most of us live our lives before we learn the true value of things. Thus many of us aspire to a "flat" in the overcrowded city. I know that there are compensations in every situation. In a "flat" they can be near things that interest people in cities. Some one has said that there is one thing which he has always liked about the word "flat." It is honestly expressive of the kind of life which it offers and gives.

In the parlor we enjoy heavy hangings which keep out the cold and make our rooms look warm and comfortable, but now they are out of place and make us irritable. Furniture that catches and holds dust is also irritating. The bane of modern house furnishing is that so many young people are attracted by what is showy, losing sight of the simple and good. If we could only see that it is the simple thing that wears the best, looks the best, and lasts longest! But no! We turn away from the table which is perfectly plain, stands on four plain legs, is made of good wood, and is valuable because it fills its purpose. Instead we buy something that is cheaply put together with glue, thickly coated with veneer, and handsomely carved by machinery.

In these warm days the dust lodges in carving of such furniture and the tired housekeeper must patiently remove it as best she can. It is the fancy things in our homes,—the useless, the trivial,—that make housekeeping a burden. Remember that a simple piece of furniture is the easiest to take care of and the most satisfactory. A well-furnished home is the result of years of careful buying, and the slower the progress, the surer will be the results. There is nothing finer or higher than simplicity.

We shall not try to analyze the charm of the country, but perhaps one large element lies in the peace which seems to brood over the field, the forest and the distant hillside. Waving corn-fields and fragrant meadows soothe the throbbing nerves and the heavy heart. "I will look unto the hills from whence cometh my help," said the Psalmist. The throng of happy, tired people, who find rest and health in the country this month, find in the cleanliness and openness a freedom wholesome to brains smitten with the gold fever, and even God is more discernible on the horizon lines of their thought. In the country it is possible to open the windows of the soul to the God of space, and consider him as we view the moon and stars, which he created.

Dressing Ourselves and the Children.

BY PELLA CARSON.

WHY should we, as mothers, be so much concerned how the little ones' dresses, aprons and waists are made? Why should we trim up their little frocks with lace, ruffles, tucks and braid? This is not what makes children attractive, nor does it reflect credit upon the mother. The best dressed person is never attractive without an innocent look and pleasing manners.

Do you think you are looking after the best interests of your children, to dress them in the fashions of the world? When you dress them fashionably, are you teaching them to be lowly in spirit? If we dress ourselves in the fashions of the world, what kind of a light are we reflecting in this world of darkness? Is it not just as necessary to teach the children plainness, with neatness, as it is to be honest and obedient? Don't you know that children want these foolish things soon enough without being led into them?

It is pride in the Christian mother's heart that prompts her to fix up her innocent children with the fancies and fashions of the world. If it is not pride, what else can it be? We are sure it is not the child's fault, who is unconscious of all this pride. Dear Christian mother, just stop to think what an opportunity you have to instil into the little ones' hearts the principles you profess to love so much. Think of this true saying of the responsibility of rearing children: "The sins we implant now will have to be rooted out after a while." How true this is! How much harder it will be for them to give up this sinful pride after they are grown! They do not see the harm that comes from sinful indulgences because mother put these things on them, and gave no warning voice against them.

The reason why so many larger children are so finely dressed may be because mothers like to see their children look gay. Do not teach the child to be proud of its clothes. The directions for real adornment, as mentioned in 1 Tim. 2: 9, 10, are all-important. Adorn the immortal souls of the children with the graces of love, obedience, kindness and purity. Let this part of the apparel be fine, instead of the clothing for the body, which is temporary and must soon vanish.

The unnecessary adornment of the body leads to pride, lust, haughtiness, and at last the destruction of the soul. One of the things which are an abomination in God's sight is "a proud look." "He resisteth the proud, but giveth grace to the humble."

Lost.

BY EMMA ROOT.

SUNDAY, July 23, several boys were swimming in Grand River, near here. In their great glee and sport, a young man, about seventeen years of age, named Owen Walch, was drowned. His young friend, Arnold Springer, tried to rescue Mr. Walch, but all in vain. So far the searchers have not been able to find the body, and a reward is now offered for its recovery.

This is a hard stroke on the mother, who has been an invalid for many years, and it also deeply affects the good Sabbath-school, now many, many young boys, girls, and older persons, are going down the stream of time unconcerned! Their only thought is for a good time. Plenty of fun is all they desire. They are not even taught the sacredness of the Lord's Day, and nothing of God's Holy Word. If those who are trying to rescue the people in sin would search as earnestly and diligently as they who are trying to find the dead body, there would be many more souls saved.

The reward for finding "lost souls" is much greater than that offered for the "lost body." And is it not of much more importance?

SISTERS' AID SOCIETIES

ELK LICK, PA.—Our Sisters' Aid Society met and organized April 22, 1911. Sister Olive Egan was appointed president; Sister Cora Ramsey, vice-president; Sister Lizzie Newman, secretary-treasurer; Sister Cora Kline, assistant secretary-treasurer. Several committees were also appointed. We had five regular meetings, during which time we quilted three quilts, besides doing other sewing. We have an enrollment of fifteen, and are still increasing in number and interest. May God help us in our work!—Lizzie Newman, Elk Lick, Pa., July 22.

STERLING, ILL.—Since our report, six months ago, we have held fourteen meetings. Our enrollment is fourteen and the average attendance seven. Our work consists of quilting, making comforters, prayer coverings, and sewing carpet-rags. During the last six months we received for work and by donations, $11.78, and expended $5.85, leaving $5.93 in the treasury. July 19 we reorganized for six months with Sister Lydia Butcher, President; Sister Lizzie Drafer, Vice-President; Sister Emma Becker, Secretary-treasurer. Pray for us that we may, by earnest effort and the Lord's help, do much good in his name.—Mrs. Ezra Flory, Sterling, Ill.

☞All business and communications intended for the paper should be addressed to the BRETHREN PUBLISHING HOUSE, ELGIN, ILL., and not to any individual connected with it.

Bro. Geo. W. Hilton, our missionary to China, was recently ordained to the eldership.

When last heard from, Bro. C. D. Hylton was engaged in a series of meetings in the Red River congregation, Frederick, Okla.

Bro. Ira E. Long, of Mansfield; Ohio, begins a revival at Bronson, Mich., Aug. 20, and will also attend the Harvest Meeting at that place.

The revival services in the Beaver Creek church, Va., conducted by Bro. B. B. Garber, closed Aug. 5, with eighteen accessions—all young people.

Bro. E. F. Nedrow, of Norristown, Pa., is to hold a series of meetings at Jones Mills, in the Indian Creek congregation, his State, beginning Sept. 23.

We are in receipt of the Hebron Star for July, the Catalogue Number for the Hebron Seminary, Nokesville, Va. It will be found interesting and helpful for those looking for a good school.

The Ministerial Meeting and Sunday-school Convention for Middle Pennsylvania, to be held at Huntingdon, are to begin Aug. 30, and close Sept. 1. The program will be published next week.

Bro. J. F. Campbell, R. D. 4, Parsons, Kans., writes us that he wishes to devote himself as fully as possible to evangelistic work, and would be pleased to confer with churches desiring his services.

Bro. E. N. Huffman, of the South St. Joseph Mission, St. Joseph, Mo., may be addressed at Brumbaugh, N. Dak., until Oct. 1. After that date he will return to St. Joseph and resume his mission work.

We are announcing the Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meetings of Northern Indiana, to be held in the Goshen City church Aug. 26. On the 23d the Bible Institute opens, and continues three days.

Bro. N. F. Brubaker, of Fruita, Colo., says that he is arranging his home affairs so he can devote the fall and winter months to revival work. Those interested can write him. His first meeting, at Ozawkie, Kans., will begin Oct. 22.

With a view of establishing more churches in the Southwest, Bro. John Bragdon, of Kingston, Okla., who is willing to answer all letters of inquiry, wishes us to state that 2,000,000 acres of valuable Indian lands will be placed on the market Nov. 2.

We have notice of the death of Bro. Abraham Hull, which occurred at his home near Bermudian, Pa., July 25. He was an elder in the church, a devout Christian, served in the ministry a number of years, and was at the time of his departure sixty-seven years old.

On Saturday, Aug. 19, Bro. M. Flory, of Girard, Ill., begins evangelistic work in the Clear Creek house, five miles north of Huntington, Ind. About the third of September he goes south of Huntington six miles, to the Loon Creek house, in the old Salamonie congregation.

The total Conference offering, as published in this issue, page 527, is given as $14,961.85. It is one of the largest offerings yet lifted, there being only two larger, and still, considering the number of members who attended the Annual Meeting, it is not, by any means, what it should be.

Writing from Goshen, Ind., Bro. W. R. Miller tells us that he is talking each evening to full houses, and that he has the best of interest. Bro. Lemuel Hillery, though quite feeble, because of old age and his crippled condition, comes from the west side each night, and enjoys the talks as well as any of them.

In our write-up of the late District Meeting of Northern Illinois and Wisconsin it was stated that the next meeting would be held at Naperville, Aug. 15, 1912. We should have stated Aug. 22, that being the fourth Thursday of the month,—the day set for the meeting hereafter,—the Ministerial and other meetings preceding in their order.

While pastoral visitation has been urged by the Conference, many congregations, to their great loss, do not enjoy the benefit of this most excellent means of spiritual upbuilding. Congregations in which such visitation is a regular practice,—sympathetically and tactfully engaged in,—show a rich fruitage of love and union of effort in every good work.

The large number of Sunday-school pupils, recently received into church fellowship in the various congregations of our Brotherhood, indicates an awakening to the real intent of the Sunday-school. More and more, as the teachers are realizing the importance of their calling, are souls born into the kingdom from the ranks of the great Sunday-school army.

The pastor of one of our eastern congregations, using his typewriter, wrote the following on the first page of the Minutes of our late Conference, before handing them to the members of his charge: "Please read me. I am composed of facts that should interest every brother and sister." We are sure that this little note prompted a careful reading of the Minutes.

On account of returning symptoms of his former nervous trouble, Bro. I. N. H. Beahm retires from the presidency of Hebron Seminary, Nokesville, Va. He will, however, remain near the institution and assist in a minor way. Bro. W. A. Myers, a graduate of Bridgewater College, has accepted the presidency, and the school work will move steadily forward, opening Sept. 11.

Late reports tell us that the death of Sister Geiser, wife of Bro. J. S. Geiser, Baltimore, Md., resulted from heart failure. She was seated by the cradle, rocking her eight-months-old baby and conversing cheerfully with her husband, when she suddenly grew faint and it was all over with her in ten minutes. The death seemed to be an easy one, and she passed over without a struggle.

Bro. S. H. Miller, of Sunnyside, Wash., called at the Messenger sanctum on Thursday of last week. Since the St. Joseph Conference he has been in Iowa and Illinois, and went from here East, expecting to reach Somerset County, Pa., inside of a few weeks, where he will review the scenes of his boyhood life. He is planning to return to his home at Sunnyside about the first of November.

A correspondent writes us that Goshen, Ind., after remaining dry two years, became wet again, and now the best citizens in the city are ashamed of the conditions. More drunken men may be seen in one week than could have been seen during the two years when there were no saloons. It is said that city has learned her lesson, and learned it well. It is predicted that the next election will place the city on the dry list to stay.

We learn that Sister Wealthy A. Burkholder, of Newburg, Pa., one of our contributors, has been confined to her home the past two months from the effects of rheumatism. On this account the short Bible Institute, which Brother and Sister Burkholder had planned for the early fall, in their home, for the benefit of their congregation, and as many more as they could provide for, has been postponed indefinitely.

Our missionaries to China have arranged to set sail from Seattle, Wash., Sept. 18. The party is composed of Geo. W. Hilton, wife and son, B. F. Heckman, wife and two children, Homer Bright, wife and child, Anna Hutchison and Winnie Cripe. Mail, near the time of sailing, up to Sept. 17, may be addressed to them in care of Great Northern Steamship Company, outgoing Steamship Minnesota, Sept. 18, Seattle, Wash.

The church at McPherson, Kans., has laid to rest one of her promising young ministers in the person of Bro. Frank P. John, the son of Bro. E. E. John, one of the elders of the congregation. The young brother was in poor health when called to the ministry, two years ago, and never grew strong enough to take up the work laid upon him. He is said to have been a very devout and earnest Christian man. He died July 24.

Judging from what appears in the Gettysburg (Pa.) Times, of Aug. 4, it would seem that Gettysburg is working hard for the Annual Conference of 1912. We know nothing about the accommodations for the meeting, yet the people are in earnest, and think that they can take care of all who may attend. They are accustomed to big crowds, but realize that an Annual Meeting like ours is about the largest thing they have yet tried to secure.

We appreciated the calls of the different members of the Sunday-school Board. Before leaving the city they all dropped into the Messenger sanctum for short talks. They have taken hold of their work in real earnest, and we feel sure that their well-directed efforts will in time produce splendid results. We now have a head to which we can refer all Sunday-school matters of a general character, and this certainly will enable all our people to do better work and more of it.

A love feast was recently held in the home of Bro. C. G. Lint, Meyersdale, Pa., for the benefit of the aged elder, who is in his seventy-eighth year, almost totally blind and too feeble to attend the public services. The feast was attended by eleven of his relatives and friends, and was greatly enjoyed by the veteran soldier of the cross and his faithful wife. After the feast Bro. Lint received the anointing. In spite of his bodily affliction his mind is said to be vigorous, and he continues to be much interested in the church and her work.

Bro. O. H. Yereman, of Kansas City, Kans., says that he is happy over the coming of his mother and sisters from Smyrna. He has not seen them for fourteen years, and for quite a while has been doing his utmost to have them sent to America. Considering the obstacles the Turks place in the way of the subjects wishing to leave their native land, our brother can certainly be congratulated. He says that he has spared neither time nor money in accomplishing the task. But now they are in America,—the land of religious liberty,—and he is delighted.

When last heard from, the debate at Akron, Ind., between Bro. B. E. Kesler, on the part of the Brethren, and E. G. Denny, of the Disciple church, was progressing in a most satisfactory manner to the Brethren in attendance. Many of our people will regret to learn that the discussion is not to be published. Mr. Denny objecting to any arrangements to that effect. On page 517, this issue, will be found a brief reference to the discussion, and to the course pursued by the affirmative in the first proposition. We are promised further details later.

By referring to page 523 it will be observed that more ministers are needed in North Dakota and other parts of the Northwest. In fact, we do not have enough efficient ministers to supply the pressing needs of the mission points in any part of the Brotherhood. Though the churches are selecting preachers at the rate of three and four each week, the cry is for more preachers. We probably have enough, but not all of them are of that class who go everywhere preaching the Gospel. Too many of them are tied up with other duties, and the cause of Christ is left to suffer. But read the call referred to.

THE Brethren in the Second District of West Virginia have arranged to hold their Ministerial and Sunday-school Meetings in the Valley River church, on Thursday, Aug. 24.

BRO. J. S. FLORY, of Pasadena, Cal., widely known in most parts of the Brotherhood, died Aug. 3, at the age of seventy-five years. He was born near Dayton, Rockingham Co., Va., March 28, 1836. Before he was quite twenty-one years of age he was married to Elizabeth Sanger, and in 1858, at the age of twenty-two, he, with his wife, united with the Brethren church. The next year he was called to the ministry, and ten years later was ordained to the eldership. When the war broke out, in 1861, his sympathies being wholly with the North, he left his State to avoid being pressed into the Southern army, and spent five years in Iowa. After the close of the war he returned to his State and became very active in the ministry. In 1873 he left Virginia and settled in Colorado, where, during a period of eleven years, he had some varied experiences. After this he made his home in Southern California, where his active mind prompted him to pursue other lines of study, in addition to the work of the ministry. Bro. Flory was not favored with a finished education, but he was well read, a close student and a very prolific writer. He commenced writing for our church publications soon after the war, and kept it up until within a few years of his death. Few men among us have done more writing. He was the author of a few books that enjoyed a fair circulation. And while active both in the ministry and with his pen, he never became a leader of men among us. His talent did not run in that direction. Like some other preachers and elders of his day, he was drawn too far into the emigration business, and other secular pursuits, to render his ministerial experience as pleasant and as profitable as it might otherwise have been.

A Mission in Jerusalem.

WHY not, when the Master said from near this place, "Go ye into all the world"? True, the land has fallen into the hands of the enemy, but this should not keep back God's people from doing their part in planting the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ in that land and in the City of Jerusalem. The message of salvation is needed in every country of the East. Perishing souls, in darkness of unbelief, live in the land of the Savior's birth; the false prophet holds sway from Dan to Beersheba; the strongholds, spiritually, are as formidable as in the days of Joshua they were materially. But Christ shall conquer if we but march forward with the shout of victory on every lip.

For over a year the Board has had a Mission in Jerusalem under consideration. Calls have been made for some one to go to that land. Considerable money, including between $10,000 and $15,000 endowment, has been given. While the funds on hand, including the income from the endowment, are not enough, it is a splendid beginning, and what is needed now is some one to go, and contributions enough, in addition to what is on hand, to send him. Really, the hard place is the securing of the man. Who will go?

While the field, from some angles, may be a hard one, it has some excellent advantages connected with the work. Many English tourists visit the land, so that the missionary will be closer in touch with his own people. It is a land of the Bible and will furnish, as a side study, a most interesting opportunity to know the Book from the land standpoint.

It would seem that it should not be difficult to find some one ready for this field. Yet the call went forth this last year and no one offered. But the call goes forth again, and who will go? The Board will be pleased to correspond with any one who would like to know more about the field or the work. Or, better yet, with one who feels he is called to this field. Address, General Mission Board, Elgin, Illinois.

Meeting of the Sunday-school Board.

As stated last week, the Sunday-school Board of the Church of the Brethren met in Elgin, to transact business and lay plans for the future. The Board was created by the St. Joseph Conference. The work assigned is new, and it is found to be no easy task to devise and put into operation methods in keeping with the plan adopted by the Annual Meeting. The Board, with all the members present, was together one and a half days, and in that time went over the ground thoroughly. The most important step taken was to arrange for a Teacher-training Book, adapted to the needs of the teachers of the Brethren church. The book will be of standard grade, and when ready will fill a long-felt want among our Sunday-school workers. A book of this sort can not be produced in a month or two. The four brethren selected to prepare the different parts must have time to do their best.

It was further decided that it will be the policy of the Board to publish all books and pamphlets, as authorized by the Conference of 1911, at the lowest possible price to cover safely the expense of publication and distribution. Arrangements were made for teacher-training diplomas, and also the teacher-training seal. The Board is to keep in close touch with the Sunday-school work in all our colleges, as well as in close touch with the work in all parts of the Brotherhood. The Sunday-school program for the Annual Meeting of 1912 is already under advisement, and a committee was appointed to provide for a Sunday-school exhibit on the Conference grounds. A supply of good books for a Sunday-school library are to be examined, and a doctrinal department on each lesson was recommended for the Teachers' Monthly. Much other work was considered, and in the future the MESSENGER readers are to hear more of the plannings and doings of the Sunday-school Board of the Church of the Brethren.

Ancient Libraries.

THE libraries of ancient Rome are said to have been immense. This may also be said of the collections of books in other large cities. Some of the people were fond of reading, and the demand for books was much greater than is generally supposed. There were fine libraries at Athens, Jerusalem and at Alexandria, Egypt. The latter, probably, contained the largest and the finest collection of books in the world.

Even without the printing press books were easily and quickly made. To start with, each author wrote his own book, and from his manuscript other books were produced as needed. In fact, book making was a business, the work being done by educated slaves. One desiring a copy of a book containing a few hundred pages, had only to give his order, and the slaves of the book maker would be put to work, a fixed part of the copy being assigned to each slave. They worked rapidly and, in urgent cases, could complete a good-sized book in a day or two. Ten slaves, skilled in the use of the pen, could do a good deal of writing in twelve hours. The purchaser might have his order on Monday and in four days have the neatly-bound volume delivered to him at a cost of several dollars. The larger books, of course, cost more, and required more time for their making.

The man who could afford it, had little trouble in procuring all the books he felt disposed to purchase and read. Some well-to-do literary men kept a few educated slaves, whose business it was to make the books needed for their libraries. They paid authors for permission to make, for their own use, copies of the books needed. In this way books were made rapidly, and those with literary inclinations found it convenient to engage in a wide range of reading.

When the different parts of the New Testament were written, it became customary for churches or individuals to order copies of the parts desired. A church could procure the whole New Testament, or it could order one book at a time, beginning with Matthew and going on to the end. A minister could place his order for a copy of Matthew in Greek, Latin or any other language in common use, and have his book inside of a few days.

Men of wealth spent little fortunes building up large libraries. Some of them kept scores of slaves constantly at work, making copies of the books needed for their library shelves. These books consisted of dictionaries, histories, scientific books, treatises on religion, medicine, philosophy, and the various lines of thought. Some men of ancient times became regular bookworms, and not a few became widely noted for their extensive and varied learning. These learned men wrote many books of their own, and in this way a literature covering a wide range of thought was produced.

Meeting of the General Mission Board.

THE General Mission Board of the Church of the Brethren held its regular meeting at the home of the writer, in Mount Morris, on the fourth inst. For a half score of years all the meetings of the Board were held at the same place and it was a homecoming to some of us. It was a pleasant and happy experience to have the brethren of the Board in our home again. We shall not soon forget the ocasion, for twelve years have passed since the same privilege was enjoyed.

The pleasure was softened and toned down by the memories of those who met with us in the years gone, whose voices are no more heard among the living. They met and labored with us and we enjoyed their presence, but now they have ceased from their work and are at rest. Among these were Brethren Enoch Eby, Daniel Vaniman, John Price, Samuel Riddlesberger, Charles Hawbecker and Jacob Miller. Others of us remain to labor a little longer but soon we, too, shall be at rest in the home of the soul.

The business before the Board was mostly of a routine character, and this was disposed of in the usual careful and thoughtful manner. Plans for future work and further development were thoroughly discussed and carefully considered, showing that the Board is fully awake to the situation and aggressive in its methods.

Money is in hand to support a missionary in Palestine, and steps were taken to locate a mission in the Holy City, if possible, and if the way seems closed there, after a careful and thorough study of the situation, in its vicinity. A large number of our people are deeply interested and are anxious that a mission be started in Jerusalem, if possible, and this is to be done as soon as a suitable brother can be found to carry forward the work. It will require experience, good judgment and tactfulness, to establish and carry on successfully a mission among the Mohammedans found in the Holy Land.

Our last Conference referred two queries to the General Mission Board, touching the question of advertisements in our periodicals. The first one referred to real estate advertisements. It was explained at the Conference that the Standing Committee considered the query too sweeping in its character and hence it was referred to the Board. A very careful consideration of the entire question led to the conclusion that no principle of right would be violated in advertising land in the Inglenook and Almanac. It was determined that the greatest possible care be taken to have the advertisements strictly in accord with the facts in the case. It was held that those having land for sale might advertise it, provided, always, that no overdrawn statements, whereby intending purchasers might be misled, be inserted.

To meet the request contained in the second query it was decided to caution those in charge of our advertising department to take great care as to all advertisements inserted, so that no principle of right is violated.

The business was all completed in one day, and the brethren left us to return to their homes. Come again, brethren; your presence did us good and you will be most heartily welcome.

On the Mountain Tops.

JUST at what period in the creation Jehovah formed the mountains, we are not told, but we know that they were formed; and, we are made to believe, for a very special and important purpose.

In the early history of the world mountains are spoken of as places of refuge in times of danger, and places of worship where God seemed pleased to meet with his people.

It was on the Mountain of Ararat, that Noah's floating home first rested after the flood. Here it was that he built the first altar in the new world, and made his first offering to God for his wonderful deliverance, and it was here that he most fully realized the wondrous power of God and the destructiveness of sin. How long he and his family remained on this mountain, and how soon he ventured down into the valley and the plains, we know not. But as he did so, we can well imagine the respect, reverence and love he must have continued to have for the mountain whence his deliverance was so miraculously assured. And we need not wonder that if, when the thunder rolled, the lightnings flashed, and the floodgates of heaven were opened, he said to his wife and children: "Had we not better flee to the mountains?" There would be two reasons for such a feeling: First, a mountain was a high place,—above the reach of an ordinary flood; second, it was on the mountain top that God seemed to be nearest to his people.

It was on the mountain that God called his servant, Moses, that he might deliver to him the Law, which is still held in reverence by all his children who have learned to know him in his loving and saving power.

As sacred mountains we have Horeb, Nebo, Lebanon, Hermon, Ebal, Gerizim, Moriah, Zion, and hundreds of others, around which sacred recollections cluster. To the mountains Christ loved to resort for prayer and to hold communion with his Father and his chosen disciples. It is with a restful pleasure that we, in imagination, see him, in company with his little band of disciples, wind his way up and over the Mount of Olives to the little town of Bethany, where dwelt the loving family of Lazarus and his sisters, Mary and Martha. Though Christ had no home that he could call his very own,—no place where to lay his head,—it makes our hearts swell with joy to feel that there was at least one home, one open door from which he, at all times, received a gladsome welcome from loving lips and smiling faces, "Come in and abide with us." Thank God for the Bethel of Bethany and the home of welcome and love beyond the Gethsemane of suffering!

And so we find, all through the Book, references to the mountains as being places of strength,—strongholds, refuges from dangers, and places of sacred associations. The Psalmist says: "Great is the Lord, and greatly to be praised in the city of our God, in the mountain of his holiness. Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth, is mount Zion," surrounded as it is on the sides by hills and mountains.

Now, we do not claim that Huntingdon is to be compared with the Holy City Jerusalem, in any way except its surroundings. It is surrounded by hills and mountains, as is Jerusalem; and ever since we visited the Holy City and walked over its surrounding mountains, and viewed its landscapes, we have more than ever fallen in love with our own home place, among the hills and mountains. We not only enjoy living among them and looking at them, but some of our most pleasant hours have been spent in climbing up their sides and viewing the surrounding landscapes from their tops.

Last Saturday afternoon we, in company with the summer school, now in session in the Juniata College, Bro. Miller, wife and daughter, formerly of Iowa, but now residents with us, and Mr. Williams, connected with our State Forestry, took a climb to the Bench, on the top of one of our near-by mountains, a mile distant, and about a mile up. As on this occasion we were favored by the most pleasant midsummer weather, the walk was exhilarating, especially the "up" part. When we reached the "top," the conditions were inexpressibly lovely. We were all, with one accord, in one place, and all breathed the spirit of thanksgiving from our hearts. On the way up there is a well-prepared path, hedged in on either side with trees, plants and wild flowers. At the half-way point we lingered at the beautiful bungalow home of the Blair Company's artist, where we were all refreshed by drinking freely from a near-by flowing spring, and where we took our first downward view of our home city, spread out at the foot of the mountain on the eastern side of the Juniata River. On the top we had a heavy breeze that touched nowhere, after it left the top of Tussey's Mountain, until we had the privilege of breathing it into our lungs, thus enjoying it fresh, cool and pure, as our good Father makes it.

The view from this point was grand indeed. In the far distance were the hills and mountains, spotted with farms and fields. Lower down, with our city, the Juniata River, the Pennsylvania Railroad, and the H. & B. T. M. R. R., at our feet. Over the first-named railroad pass some seventy-six passenger trains daily.

After spending several hours in social intercourse, we partook of the usual evening repast prepared for such occasions. Then it was time for two or three things, and we decided to have all happen, as near as possible at the same time,—to see the fast evening train speed on its way eastward, to see the sun set over the distant mountain, and to start on our way homeward, and it so happened that we were able to have them all quite near together.

To stand on the top of a mountain, and see the trains, several miles away, wind along the riverside, pushing through the mountain gorges, gives peculiar impressions to the beholder, especially to the writer, who has been witnessing these scenes occasionally for years and years. Along this route, years ago, was the then notable "Pike" leading from Philadelphia to Pittsburg. Over it passed the stage coach, carrying the passengers and the mail from city to city, which was considered at that time quite an improvement over the slow post. Over this great highway also passed the "Conestoga" and other covered wagons, carrying the westward tourist and home-finder, his family and his household goods and eatables, because in those days the public wayside inns were few and far between. Following this was the wonderful canal with the tow-path at its side, for the team of mules,—one, two or three, as needed,—to pull the heavy-laden boats. On this public highway were the freight boats for the carrying of the "store goods," needed to supply the trade of the stores along the way. Also, on this same public road was run the packet boat, or "Passenger and Mail Accommodation." These boats had the right of way, because they constituted the "fast line" between Philadelphia and Pittsburg. They did not have the parlor coach or the Pullman sleeper, but they did have sleeping berths. And though the speed was not great, it was really a very pleasant way of traveling, free from the danger of collision, being knocked off the track, tumbled over high embankments, dashed into rivers from broken bridges and buried under their waters, or burned to death under demolished coaches. If the boat should happen to take fire, they had plenty of buckets and plenty of water to watersoak the whole train. During the night they had walking guards. In those days they knew their passengers, and with a slow train, plenty of eatables and plenty of sleep, the canal-boat passengers constituted a contented and happy little band. The railroad, the telegraph and the telephone you know all about, but it was the "fast line" train that brought us to these reflections.

As to the sun setting, we wish that you, who can appreciate God in his majesty and in his beautiful ways of doing things, could have been there to see and to admire the sinking of the sun and the lengthening shades in the valley below. Touching the distant mountain, the rays of the sun illuminated the tops of the trees, as they were pictured in the lower crest. Then came the gradual sinking of the sun behind the mountain, the singing of the birds in the fading evening tide, and the benedictory song of "good-night," by our party, and the outing was ended. H. Right Looking.

A LADY once said that while she endeavored to keep her house clean, she did not make a business of looking for dirt. She took a philosophical and practical view of life and its responsibilities, and so arranged matters that she could enjoy her home and be of some use to the world. By way of illustration this may apply to the conduct of people generally. Some men and women spend their time looking for the unpleasant things in life. They not only look for such things, but they think about them, and talk about them until they become experts at the business. They have an eye and ear for the unpleasant occurrences of the neighborhood, the church or the family. They notice every little detail, can remember everything perfectly, and seem to have a faculty for talking about the bad.

There are others who cultivate habits just the reverse. They are not looking for the unpleasant things in life, but when such things come their way they meet them squarely, dispose of them, then proceed to enjoy the things that are intended for their good. They not only look for the good in life, but they find it, think about it, and talk about it. They take pleasure in cultivating the habit of looking for the helpful and enjoyable, and, as a result, are better men and better women. Looking for the good, thinking and talking about it, helps them to attain to a high moral standard. Right looking and right thinking make the right kind of people.

Provide Prayer Caps.

SOMETHING unusual happened in the Episcopal Church of the Redeemer, Fifty-sixth Street, Chicago, a few Sundays ago. The Rev. Geo. R. Hewitt, curate in church this summer, during the absence of the rector, Dr. John Henry Hopkins, said that the ladies who, on account of warm weather, attended church bareheaded, violate the instructions given by Paul in 1 Cor. 11, in regard to women having their heads covered while engaged in praying and prophesying. He told his people that he had arranged for dainty lace prayer caps for those who needed them and that these caps would be found, the next Lord's Day, in a box near the entrance. He provided for an ample supply, but as the weather the next Sunday was cool, there was no demand for the prayer cap. It remains to be seen what these ladies will do, should the weather get warm again. The minister explained that years ago the Episcopalian church insisted on the lady members having their heads covered in religious services, and that, in providing prayer caps, he was simply endeavoring to carry out the rules of the church. This might serve as a mild hint to those who would do away with the devotional covering.

Card Playing.

BRO. VIRGIL C. FINNELL, of Des Moines, Iowa, has been doing some plain preaching against card playing. In a recent discourse, as reported in the Daily Register and Leader of his city, he said: "Card playing is on the increase in this country and in exact proportion to the increase of card playing in our homes the resultant poverty, shame, crime and ruined lives must be chargeable to those fathers and mothers who have created the desire and trained the hand. Unless there is a marked difference between the church and the world, there is something radically wrong with the church. If a Christian is to enjoy the fullest blessing of his discipleship, he must keep himself free from every questionable pursuit or place. The man or woman who has been truly regenerated will not spend time in an endeavor to determine how many questionable things he may indulge in, but will constantly seek that which will elevate and purify not only the individual, but the community."

The Greek Church.

ONE of the publications coming to our desk says that for a thousand years the Greek church has remained practically unchanged. In some particulars, especially regarding her mode of baptism, it may be said that she has undergone little change for more than 1,800 years. By the Greek church we mean that part of Christendom using the Greek language in its services. The people not only read the Greek New Testament, but their priests preach in this tongue. As known to all travelers, they do not represent the highest type of Christianity, but their disposition to keep up their ancient customs figures somewhat as evidence in support of certain ancient practices. For baptism they have always practiced immersion, invariably dipping the candidate three times. Single immersion is unknown among them.

HELP WANTED.

As there are several mission points without resident ministers, in this northwestern country,—especially in North Dakota, Eastern Montana and Western Canada, the ministerial distributing committee takes this means of soliciting any faithful and loyal ministers, who are thinking of changing locations, to consider our call for help. Perhaps you are located in a congregation where there are a number of ministers, and you are not needed. Here is a chance to improve your talent, and to be the means, in God's hands, to build up a flourishing church, and, at the same time, get a home and be in a beautiful country. One of these mission points is at Bracket, Kansey Co., N. Dakota, about thirty-five miles northeast of Devils Lake; another is at Bowbells, northwest of Minot, on the "Soo Line;" still another at Glasgow in Eastern Montana. There are also other points that need you. Will you come? Let us hear from you, and we will put you in correspondence with brethren who will give the information desired.

MONITOR CHURCH, KANSAS.

Bro. H. M. Brubaker, our District Sunday-school Secretary, conducted our annual Sunday-school Convention at this place yesterday. We were glad for the goodly number of visitors from the surrounding country and adjoining churches. We always welcome them into our midst. We feel that this was one of the best (if not the best) Sunday-school Conventions ever held at this place. Bro. Harvey gave us an excellent address on the forenoon "The Individual and How to Deal with Him." After enjoying the noon hour in social intercourse, the afternoon was spent in discussing various topics for the betterment of our Sunday-school here at Monitor.

Our Christian Workers' Band also favored in short address in the evening, being permitted to talk over plans for our future benefit. We now have a junior Christian Workers' Band at this place, which, though recently organized, is doing a good work and promises much for the future in helping to develop our boys and girls. We feel that both our Christian Workers' Band and our Sunday-school are improving, and that they are among the best in the Brotherhood.

Our Harvest Meeting will be held Aug. 20, instead of Aug. 13, as stated in our last report. Visitors are welcome. Emma T. Stutzman.

THE DEATH OF BRO. ALLEN IVES.

Bro. Allen Ives was born in the city of La Fayette, Ind., Feb. 15, 1830, died at Centralia, Wash., July 17, 1911, aged eighty-three years, five months and two days.

He was married to Mary Deeter Nov. 2, 1848. To this union were born twelve children, five of whom are still living; also thirty-one grandchildren and fifteen great-grandchildren. He united with the Church of the Brethren at the age of twenty-two, remaining true through all the vicissitudes of a long and eventful life. He was elected to the office of a deacon at about the age of thirty-five, in which capacity he served the church for three years. Then he was elected to the ministry, and later on to the eldership, in which capacity he served until his death,—a period of about forty-five years, thirty years of which he served as an elder. He was an active worker, and it may well be said of him that he made "full proof of his ministry." He was the pioneer worker and founder of the Burr Oak church of Kansas, and many other organizations trace their origin and existence to his indefatigable efforts for the cause of our Blessed Master.

He also did much evangelistic work in the time of his strength, and met the opponents of the truth, as he saw them, with the "Sword of the Spirit." His efforts told to the discomfiture of his opponents, whenever there was an open discussion of the truth.

His last days were spent with his children in the State of Washington, and in and around Centralia. He may well be regarded as the father of this church. Though past an age when he could work as he once did, yet he was constant and untiring in his effort to build up this church and was never so happy as when he saw indications of its growth.

Once he was possessed of a fine farm and a beautiful home, and all of his large family of children were with him in health and strength. Earthly friends were then in abundance, but all this was suddenly swept away, his family scattered, his health broken, and his eyesight almost destroyed. Notwithstanding all that I never heard him murmur or complain, neither talk discouragingly of his lot, nor upbraid, in an unkind spirit, those who had been the cause of his financial ruin. It was simply Job's case in the present century. Though dead he still lives. Funeral services by the writer from 2 Tim. 4: 7. Interment in the city cemetery by the side of his deceased companion.

MARKLE CHURCH, INDIANA.

Aug. 6 Bro. Lewis Huffman and wife, of Sugar Grove, Ind., unexpectedly came to us, attending our Sunday services. Bro. Huffman had been a faithful elder, here in the Markle Church, for many years, until about four years ago, when he felt that old age and the condition of his health were weighing too heavily upon him, to retain the eldership. He asked the church to select some one else in his place, and Bro. D. B. Garber was chosen to take charge of our congregation.

Bro. Huffman still retains a spiritual concern for the dear brethren and sisters of the Markle congregation. He has often been here since his resignation, on funeral occasions and at other services. This shows that he still has an interest toward the flock for which he once so faithfully cared,—for those who cherish him as a faithful leader.

Bro. Huffman preached a sermon for us in the morning. His text was taken from 1 Cor. 16: 13. Like Paul, he warned us against false prophets and teachers, and urged us to stand firm in the faith.

We believe, as was mentioned in the Messenger some time ago, that the members of the different congregations should visit each other more in their services, in order to create greater interest and receive a special benefit. During the past year quite a number of members, and especially ministers, have been with us in our services, and it proved of be a spiritual feast to us all. It does us good to meet those of like precious faith.

Our Christian Workers' Meeting is still in progress. We have prayer meeting on Thursday evening of each week. Our Sunday-school is increasing in number and interest. By a loving concern for one another we may be able to accomplish much good to God's honor and glory. Lillian Earhart.

TROY MISSION, OHIO.

For more than two years our people have been conducting services in this town, the county seat of Miami County. We have been renting a house of worship. The District Mission Board concluded that it would be wise to buy the church, which was for sale, and took steps to that effect. The transfer of all legal papers was made July 1, of this year. The Church of the Brethren now has a house of worship in Troy, a town of about 8,000 souls. Thus far this has been a part of what is known as the Casstown church.

July 26 Elders J. E. Barnhart and Sylvan Bookwalter met with a good representation of the members and assisted in reorganizing the work for the remainder of the year. Bro. D. A. Yount is in charge of the preaching services. Bro. Cyrus Petry was chosen Sunday-school superintendent; Sister Edna Bashor, secretary. Sister Daisy Yount was chosen president of the Christian Workers' Meeting, with Sister Hassie Bryom as secretary.

Each of the organizations has been duly reorganized, a place of responsibility being found for practically each worker. Now, as the Lord gives, and each member uses, the power apportioned, good work is anticipated at this point.

With the recent coming of Bro. Cyrus Petry and family, four more have been added to the membership. These are earnest workers, and we are sure they will add materially to the progress of the work here. At the present time this point claims a membership of about thirty-five. Others are favorably considering this location.

May we, as workers everywhere, be found with the Lord more often in our secret closets in prayer, rather than away from him in avenues of worldliness.

Casstown, Ohio, Aug. 1. Mina H. Bosserman.

AHWA, INDIA.

Our neighbors are busy, in their crude way, putting out their crops. The refreshing rains are so restful. It does us good to see nature active again.

Two persons recently were added to our Christian working force in the Dangs. We now have teachers in four villages outside of Ahwa. But there are still nearly three hundred villages in this vast jungle without a "light-house,"—a Christian teacher.

We are encouraged in the work because the Ahwa school has the best attendance of any time in its history. Our Sunday-school is also well attended.

We want to make an earnest request that you pray for Gotis, our brightest and most advanced schoolboy. What a wondrous blessing to God's cause, when he will go out as a teacher among his people! He will have advantages far above the teachers of other districts. Ah, we do look forward to that day with joy.

The people have learned that we stand for justice and right. This we know from the way they come to us, to be helped and shielded. It is sad to see how these poor, ignorant people are oppressed by those who should be their protectors. They are taken advantage of in so many ways.

The other evening our little daughter and I were going up into the village. As we got near, we heard a commotion of some sort. We soon learned that a petty policeman had taken a native umbrella from one of our schoolboys. We had a "gongership," as it is called.

I simply asked the name of the policeman, but that was enough, for soon three other policemen came bringing back the "gongership." Then the whole village felt a great victory was won, and said: "See, you are our parents; if you had not been here, we never would have gotten our gongerdy."

These people are so very ignorant that it takes something concrete to make an impression. Simply preaching to them means very little, but they can be touched by contact in the simplest ways. Nothing pleases them so much as when the missionary goes hunting with them. The other night we sat in a tree with our old neighbor, and waited until a herd of wild boars came to eat the fruit from under the tree. The next day the whole village feasted and rejoiced. Every such little act makes us more friends, and opens the way wider to teach of the Best Friend,—our Lord.

We often see people whom we had met a year or so ago. When we ask them if they remember what we had told them about the true God, they often say: "No; we don't remember what you said, but we remember what you did."

The Christian families who are farming are doing well, and we have faith that the light from the Christian village will shed its rays far out into the surrounding darkness. God is working among these simple people.

We are blest with good health and have every reason to rejoice in him whose we are. Remember your work in this jungle field. Florence Baker Pittenger.

Ahwa, Dangs, India, July 13.

MINISTERIAL MEETING OF OREGON, WASHINGTON AND IDAHO.

The last Ministerial Meeting of Oregon, Washington, and Idaho, was held in the Coquille church, Myrtle Point, Oregon, July 13. There was not so large an attendance as in former years, owing to the distance at which the greater number of members are living from the place of meeting.

Our Ministerial Meetings are held in connection with the District Meeting, but as the former combination of States was segregated last year, this was the last and final meeting of the manner in which we have been formed out of the one, and three such meetings, each year, will hereafter be held. We trust that three times the good will be accomplished in the coming years.

In this, our Ministerial Meeting, the spirit was excellent, and, in keeping with all such occasions, a spiritual feast was enjoyed by all present. We herewith give a few thoughts collected from the various topics:

1. "What Are the Benefits Derived from a Minister Studying How to Appear Before the Public? First, to Himself? Second, to His Audience?" Among other things it was said that the minister should study how to appear to best advantage before he reaches the pulpit, in dress, manner and language. The Bible is the Holy Word and should be treated with becoming reverence. It is very unbecoming for a minister to take a seat with a coilborer and indulge in a nap while the minister is giving God's word to the congregation. A minister should not lower his voice to an extremely low pitch and then instantly raise it to such a high pitch as to excite the nervous.

2. "What Esteem Should the Congregation Show the Minister Because of His Official Capacity?" It should show all due respect to the minister as a man of God. Members should look to him as a leader, and should deport themselves in such a way the congregation has placed the minister in a responsible position as the Lord's anointed. David, speaking of Saul, declared that he would not touch the Lord's anointed to harm him. To speak disrespectfully of the minister is to touch the Lord's anointed. "Obey them that have the rule over you (those who rule well). . . . for they watch for your souls." We, as an audience, should show our esteem for the minister by our attention. We should give him all the encouragement we can during the week and, at the close of the meeting, tell him of some point or points that helped us. Do not be afraid to say "Amen." Teach your children to respect him.

3. "What Constitutes a Good Sermon?" This subject was also discussed with special interest, and the great importance of the pointed, well-delivered sermon was especially emphasized.

4. "How Conduct Family Worship to Be Most Beneficial and Least Embarrassing to the Family and to the Stranger That May Be Present?" The main object of family worship is to get all members of the family to take part in the exercises by reading, singing and prayer.

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

CANADA.

Fairview.—Our series of meetings, conducted by Bro. C. P. Rowland, closed on Sunday evening. While there were no accessions, we do not feel discouraged. The seed sown will bring forth fruit later on. On Sunday morning Bro. Rowland gave a talk to the children, which was enjoyed by all. We expect six ministers to be with us for a few months. We will then have preaching every Sunday evening, which is new here. In the report of the special council of July 25 mention should have been made that Bro. Rensberger was chosen elder for one year, to take charge of the work here at the September council, Bro. Sherk's time having expired. One letter was also read.—L. Heckman, Mutrie, Sask., Can., Aug. 8.

ILLINOIS.

Lannette Prairie.—Our love feast will be held Sept. 2, to be followed by a series of meetings.—Mary B. Weller, 1 Box 111, Ang. 8.

Lorraine church met in council Aug. 5. Our elder, Bro. M. E. Hahn, presided. We decided to have only one series of meetings and love feast in October, after the District Meeting. Our church registers have been completed, both inside and outside. Bro. Hahn gave us a good sermon on Friday evening, but instead of remaining over Sunday, as usual, he was called home to preach a funeral sermon on Sunday.—Myra E. Pittman, Lorraine, Ill., Aug. 7.

Macoupin.—Our congregation met at 1:30 P. M., Aug. 5, in council. Bro. I. J. Harshbarger tendered his resignation as elder in charge, as he intends to move to California soon. Bro. Jesse Smeltzer was advanced to the second degree of the ministry. Brethren Clinton Hamm and Jesse Smeltzer will represent us at the District Meeting. Brethren Martin Benbaker and Eli Bowman are delegates to Conference. Our time appointed for Sept. 1, at 6:30 P. M., and an all-day meeting Sept. 2, by Bro. John Burns, of Girard, Ill., to begin a series of meetings for us Aug. 13, to continue two weeks. Our Christian Workers' Meeting was held Aug. 2, with Sister Ollie Smeltzer leading. The president Sister Ollie Smeltzer, secretary Ina Brallier and vice president Sister Ollie Smeltzer, for Aug. 6 was the time appointed for our local Sunday-school convention. Sister Clara Creek, Sunday-school worker in Sunday-schools met with the Macoupin Sunday-school, and a good program was rendered. Our Sunday-school Supt. Bro. John Heckman, the Sunday-school President of the Macoupin County Sunday-school Union, and the Primary Secretary were with us. One speaker said: "The Sunday-school is out for business, or it has no business to be there."—Mrs. Wilbur Farmerville, Ill., Aug. 8.

Woodland church met in council July 26. Our elder, Bro. E. Blocher presided. Bro. James M. Moore was with us, and opened the meeting by reading Col. 3. Six letters were received. One sister and brethren presented their letters, and the members in love and union, and willing to work with the church. Our love feast will be held Sept. 30 and Oct. 1, beginning at 10:30 A. M. Our new church is now about finished and will be dedicated Aug. 20. Brethren Wm. Hall and D. Johnson are our delegates to District Meeting; Brethren S. G. Bucher and N. Weber, alternates. We have secured a piece of ground for a cemetery, and now have it surveyed and laid out in lots, ready for sale. Our series of meetings at the Woodland house begins Aug. 13, to be conducted by Bro. H. H. Sherfy, of Chicago, Ill. At the Mount Pleasant house meetings begin Sept. 5, by Bro. Sherfy. Bro. Sherfy will go to New Berlin, Ohio, to conduct the services.—Fannie B. Stambaugh, Summum, Ill., Aug. 8.

INDIANA.

Cedar Creek.—Bro. Fitzwater was with us Aug. 6. He preached a missionary sermon in the forenoon, and delivered a temperance address in the afternoon. In the forenoon $17.85 was taken for Home Missions; also a collection of $17.22 for temperance work—$35.07.—Mary Hoffman, Akron, Ind., Aug. 12.

Landess.—We held an all-day Harvest Meeting Aug. 6. Bro. Grover Wine gave us a powerful sermon, in the forenoon, on harvesting and what is meant by reaping. At the noon hour we enjoyed a good dinner. Several visitors were present. We received $15.65 in our free-will offering. In the afternoon Bro. Wine preached a short but interesting sermon. Two souls came out on the Lord's side. We thank our Heavenly Father for his mercy and blessings to us, and are grateful to our ministering brethren for their help and presence.—Lydia Bradley, Landess, Ind., Aug. 8.

New Liberty.—Our two Chinese brethren, of Chicago, Moy Wing and Moy Way, devoted every evening to meetings from 1 and 2, explaining to us something of the darkness of their homeland, and the wonderful opportunities here. Since they received the blessed light, they are anxious to have it for others. We held our Harvest Meeting Aug. 5. In the morning Bro. L. M. Myers preached a helpful sermon on harvesting and giving sermon. In the afternoon Brother and Sister Neher and Brother and Sister Cripe conducted a consecration service. Dorotha Poste, R. D. 1, North Liberty, Ind., Aug. 6.

Pine Creek.—We of our Christian Workers' Band met with us in the evening of July 21, at the East house. They spoke to us about their home land, Aug. 6 we had the privilege of having with us Brother and Sister Cripe, of the Mexican Mission. After the regular Sunday-school session, Bro. Neher gave us a talk on the Sunday-school work. Sister Cripe followed Sister Neher, who gave an address on "The Beautiful Woman." In the afternoon at 2:30 we met for Children's Day exercises. Sister Neher and Sister Winnie Cripe each gave a talk to the children, Brother Cripe with a talk by Bro. Neher, and all were inspiring to the children and older ones as well.—M. S. Morris, R. D. 1, Wolcottville, Ind., Aug. 8.

Rock Run church, five miles southeast of Goshen, Ind., will hold her annual Harvest Meeting Sept. 2, at 10:30 A. M.; also at 2 P. M. We expect Bro. Grover Wine, of Huntington, Ohio, to do the preaching. Bro. W. R. Miller is with the Church during this week giving the Bible study hour to crowded houses, with the best of interest. Many can not gain admittance into the building.—C. E. Berkey, R. D. 8, Goshen, Ind., Aug. 11.

Somerset church met in council at the Vernon house Aug. 6, preparatory to our love feast, Aug. 12. Our elder, Bro. E. E. Brubaker, presided. Bro. J. S. Mahon being present, gave us some very good counsel. Brethren Jacob Studebaker was elected delegate to the District Meeting; Sister Mollie Tinkle, delegate to the Sunday-school Convention. Our Sunday-school is progressing nicely.—Oma Rife, Converse, Ind., Aug. 7.

Sugar Creek church met Aug. 5 to see what should be done at the East house. After Sunday-school Bro. Ira Kreider gave us a spiritual talk. In the afternoon Brethren Dorsey Hodgden, John Minsker and Sister Grover Wine gave us some good missionary talks. Our Sunday-school collection amounted to $5.65. A collection of $15 was taken, at the close of the meeting, for missionary purposes. The attendance was large and the attention good.—Blanche E. Arnett, South Whitley, Ind., Aug. 11.

Walnut.—We held our Harvest Meeting Aug. 6, which was well attended. Bro. Otho Winger was with us and held ten services. In the afternoon he preached a Thanksgiving sermon from the text, "O give thanks unto the Lord, for his mercy endureth forever." At noon the tables were spread and all present partook of refreshments. At 2 P. M. we gathered in the church again, and Bro. Winger delivered a soul-stirring missionary sermon, from the text, "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations." An offering of $17.50 was given for World-wide Missions. Bro. Winger preached an excellent sermon in the evening, taking his text from Luke 15: 11-32.—Emma Foust, R. D. 11, Argos, Ind., Aug. 7.

Yellow Creek church will hold an all-day Harvest Meeting Aug. 27, instead of Sept. 3. Bro. J. D. Frederick will preach for us. Come and enjoy the day with us.—Irvin Miller, R. D. 4, Goshen, Ind., Aug. 8.

IOWA.

Alba.—Bro. Abraham Kaufman, of Udell, Iowa, and Bro. Willis Rodabaugh and wife, of Frederick, Iowa, were with our little band of members here over Sunday and gave us very good sermons. Bro. Kaufman gave three sermons, and Bro. Rodabaugh in the evening.—Samuel Miller, 39 Tenth Ave. W., Albia, Iowa, Aug. 7.

Cedar Rapids.—Bro. John Robinson, our District Sunday-School Secretary, was with us on July 30. In the afternoon we held two sessions relating to Sunday-school work. The forenoon was devoted to business discussed by the out-of-town delegates. In the afternoon Bro. Robinson talked to us on "The Art of Teaching," which was most interesting and helpful to our Sunday-school.—Ida Cook, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Aug. 8.

Garrison.—Our people here enjoyed a visit from Sister Sadie Miller, of Ankeny, Iowa, who gave three very interesting talks on India. The services were enjoyed by all present. We also enjoyed a visit from our District Secretary, Sister Marie Jasper, from Ankeny, Iowa, who was here Aug. 5.—Estella Hoover, Garrison, Iowa, Aug. 7.

Osceola.—Our Sunday-school is growing in attendance. We expect to hold an all-day meeting Sept. 16, with preaching in the forenoon. Bro. Rodabaugh preached for us in the evening. Our series of meetings, held by Bro. S. M. Goughnour, of Ankeny, Iowa, closed July 30. We begin Sept. 3, to be Sept. 2. We should like all our members, living at a distance, and also those who have membership here, to be with us at that time, and help the good work along.—Emma Folger, Osceola, Iowa, Aug. 11.

KANSAS.

Dorrance church met in council Aug. 7. Eld. D. A. Crist presided. Bro. Jesse Ikenberry was called out, pending the question of dividing the territory between Victor and Dorrance, for the purpose of a new church. The Home Mission Board was granted. Our love feast will be held Nov. 4, to be preceded by a two weeks' series of meetings, to begin Oct. 22, if we succeed in getting the ministers. Brethren were elected, with Sister Pearl Holland as president. Bro. O. H. Feller and Sister Clara Himes were appointed delegates to District Meeting. Last Sunday we held our Sunday-school Meeting. Bro. Jesse Ikenberry was elected superintendent.—Mrs. Ira Bellevile, Kans.; also some other delegates. We felt that we had a very successful day. Bro. Ikenberry will contribute to press on in the Lord's work.—Pearl Holland, Dorrance, Kans., Aug. 12.

Kansas Center church met in council Aug. 5. Our elder, Bro. H. T. Brubaker, presided. We decided to send one delegate to District Meeting. Bro. H. T. Brubaker was chosen to represent us. Our love feast will be held Oct. 1, at 6 P. M. We expect to hold our series of meetings the second week of November, to be conducted by Bro. John Crist, of Western Kansas.—Lucy Crist, R. D. 1, Box 17, Lebanon, Kans., Aug. 12.

Morrill.—Our protracted meetings at the North Morrill church began Aug. 6, with Bro. S. E. Thompson, of Lincoln, Nebr., conducting the services. The Lord has been with us and with power, warning sinners to accept Christ and to be ready for the coming of the Bridegroom. Many have been persuaded to accept Christ. The interest is growing each evening.—D. K. Reasy, R. D. 1, Morrill, Kans., Aug. 13.

MARYLAND.

Beaver Dam.—We are now in the midst of a well-attended and interesting series of meetings, conducted by Bro. Levi S. Mohler, of Hagerstown, Md., which began Aug. 6, and will continue two weeks. Bro. Mohler will go from here to Codorus, Pa., to conduct a series of meetings, beginning Aug. 20. Bro. Mohler is from Hagerstown, Pa., in November of this year.—Jesse R. Kline, R. D. 1, Box 37, Taylorsville, Md., Aug. 7.

Meadow Branch.—We held our Harvest Meeting in the afternoon of Aug. 6. Bro. T. H. Pike preached an appropriate sermon. The collection was $18.50. Bro. Pike also preached Children's day services were held the following day, with Sister M. E. Miller, of Hagerstown, Md., as S. S. superintendent. The meeting was largely attended. Bro. C. C. Brown preached in the forenoon, and Bro. Pike in the afternoon and evening. Bro. E. C. Bixler is at home with us again, after his recovery from typhoid fever. Bro. Bixler is the center of the territory stricken by hail recently. Much damage was done to gardens and growing corn. Many windows were broken.—Mrs. Ida Bixler, Meadow Branch, Md., Aug. 7.

Middletown Valley.—We held our annual harvest meeting Aug. 6. Bro. Jesse Ebbert was with us in the forenoon, speaking on "Thankfulness." We took a collection of $37 for World-wide Missions. In the afternoon we held our Sunday-school and quarterly council. We had quite a pleasant meeting. We expect to hold our love feast Sept. 16, beginning at 1 P. M. On Sunday Bro. J. A. Myers, of Juniata College, gave us a good sermon on "Christian Service." Christian Development.—E. N. Frushour, Myersville, Md., Aug. 7.

Mount Zion.—Aug. 6, at 10:30 A. M., Eld. D. V. Long preached our harvest meeting sermon. He gave us some good lessons on what we should render to the Lord for his benefits. In the afternoon Bro. Long gave us a missionary talk. A large gathering at the end of the world. A collection was taken for home missions, which was over $20.—Mrs. J. S. Bell, R. D. 1, Hoover deliver a message to the young people. Many expressed themselves as being well pleased. Our Sunday-school is moving along nicely.—Mrs. Jeremiah Cline, Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 7.

Pipe Creek.—This church will hold a series of meetings beginning Aug. 26, to be conducted by Bro. B. B. Garber, of Hagerstown, Md., and Bro. Jesse Ebbert, Md., Aug. 7.

Sams Creek.—The series of meetings held at this place, conducted by Bro. Jesse Ebbert, closed. Bro. J. S. Mahon is with us. Five accepted Christ and were baptized. The attendance was good. Much interest was manifested, and many sermons were offered and accepted. The Ministerial and Sunday-school Meetings were in session two days. One evening was devoted to the interest of the Sunday-school. Owing to the busy season, the time was well occupied.—Minerva Roop, New Windsor, Md., Aug. 7.

MICHIGAN.

Vestaburg church met in council Aug. 5. Our elder being absent, Bro. Samuel Brubaker presided. Bro. J. S. Hollinbaugh was chosen as our elder; Bro. B. F. Switzer, clerk; Bro. Hollinbaugh, correspondent. Bro. J. S. Hollinbaugh served for three years. Bro. Samuel Bollinger and the writer are our delegates to District Meeting; Bro. Jesse Ebbert, alternate.—M. Bollinger, Vestaburg, Mich., Aug. 12.

Zion.—Our band of members met at the home of our presiding elder, J. P. Bowman, Aug. 5. Our congregational name was reconsidered, and we decided to call our new organization "Zion." Steps were taken to build a churchhouse, to accommodate our increasing attendance. Brethren J. P. Bowman and Wm. Hall were elected our delegates to District Meeting. We will hold our quarterly council on the fourth Saturday in September, at the home of Bro. Wm. Hall. Bro. Ebbert and wife, of Greenville, Ohio, were here both morning and evening of July 23.—Ruth Blocher, Prescott, Mich., Aug. 11.

MISSOURI.

Notice.—Those who desire to attend the District Meeting of Northern Missouri, to be held at the Bellingham church, Sept. 6, 7 and 8, will be met with ample conveyances by notifying the undersigned, stating about how many are coming, and at which station they will arrive—whether Norborne or Hardin.—S. A. Sandy, R. D. 4, Norborne, Mo., Aug. 7.

Topaz.—Bro. J. S. Mahon came to Topaz, Aug. 4, to-day, and preached eight splendid sermons. The attendance and interest were good at all the meetings. We distributed tracts each evening and the people were glad to receive them. We have sixteen members in our congregation, and for the first series of meetings we have had since we moved here, two years ago. The people are inquiring when Bro. Hylton will come again.—Nannie Hartman, Topaz, Mo., Aug. 8.

NEBRASKA.

Lincoln church will hold her love feast Sept. 2. Next day, Sunday, we will have our Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meetings of Eastern Nebraska, to be held at our church. Come one, come all.—Reverend and Q Stretcher—Caroline Brown, Lincoln, Nebr., Aug. 8.

NORTH DAKOTA

Pleasant Valley.—Our elder, J. J. Hix, met to enjoy a love feast. On account of the inclement weather the attendance was small, but a blessing to us. Bro. D. D. Culler, of Mount Morris, Ill., officiated. A number of ministers were present, including Brethren D. P. Landis and W. W. Scott, of Willow Lake, Dak., and a brother from Maryland. July 29 Bro. D. M. Sheob, of Surrey, N. Dak., stopped off at York and preached two sermons for us. We were glad to see him in council. Our elder, Bro. John McClane, presided. Trustees were elected to fill the vacancies occasioned by the ministers having been elected. The writer was chosen church correspondent. Two letters were received. We sponsored Brethren Bethea Bible School. Bro. Andrew Hutchison, of McPherson, Kans., came to this place Aug. 4, and began a series of meetings. Although the attendance for the first few days was small, it is increasing now, since there is not so much rain. Many have promised to be with us.—Mrs. Ida Bixler, York, N. Dak., Aug. 7.

Ray.—Bro. Geo. Hilton and wife came to us July 24, and gave us three sermons. Bro. Hilton's subject was "Signs of the People in China." These talks were very interesting, and were listened to by a large audience. The audience numbered 65 and $15.53 was taken for the China Mission.—T. E. Gordon, Northwood, N. Dak., Aug. 7.

Surrey church met in special council Aug. 4, to ordain Bro. Geo. W. Hilton to the eldership. Bro. D. P. Landis, of Willistun, N. Dak., presided. Brethren Sheob and Sheob were duly installed. They can now go forth in their chosen work for the Lord, being fully ordained.—Maserva Lambert, Surrey, N. Dak., Aug. 11.

OHIO.

Black River church met in council Aug. 5. Our elder, Bro. James Murray, presided. Three were received by letter. Our love feast will be held Sept. 16 and 17, at 10 A. M. Bro. Hilton, of Ft. Wayne, Ind., expects to hold a series of meetings for us in November. We will hold our Harvest Meeting on Thanksgiving Day. Bro. S. M. Friend is our delegate to Bro. John Yoder, alternate.—Sister Nora D. Nolt, Lodi, Ohio, Aug. 7.

Donnels Creek.—Aug. 5 Bro. David Leatherman preached for us. Harvest Meeting was held Aug. 6, conducted by Bro. J. R. Potter preached at the New Carlisle house. The missionary collection was $17.50. Sunday-school was held at 9:30. Bro. Potter preached at the Donnels Creek house. The speakers in the forenoon and afternoon were Brethren Potter and Hoover. Bro. J. J. Hoover, of our Chinese brethren, from Chicago.—Brethren Moy Wing and Moy Way.—were with us, and told us of their experiences in China in their native state today.—Bro. E. J. Neher, from Hollywood, Ala., was also with us.—Mrs. Mollie Neher, R. D. 1, Box 139, Donnels Ohio, Aug. 8.

East Munishillen church met in council Aug. 5, with Eld. Samuel Spanknebel and our home ministers present. Eld. Spanknebel presided. Bro. Jacob Hoover, of Ashland, Ohio, at 10 A. M. Brethren S. S. Shoemaker and Noah Longenecker are our delegates to District Meeting. As the District Meeting will be held in our congregation, several of our arrangements was appointed at this meeting. One was received by letter, and one letter was granted.—A. J. Culler, Middlebranch, Ohio, Aug. 7.

Notice of Arrangements.—The Sunday-school and ministerial Meetings of Northwestern Ohio are to be held in New Stark, on Saturday, Aug. 26, coming in on the Toledo and Findlay Electric Railroad. Local cars go north at 5:26, 6:26, 7:26, 8:26, 9:26, 10:26, 11:26, 12:26, 1:26, 2:26, 3:26, 4:26, gregations with us. Our Sunday-school is moving along as well as can be expected.—Fay Kaser, 628 Leonard St., Toledo, Ohio, Aug. 7.

Upper Twin.—Our church met in council Aug. 3. Our elder, J. F. Deaton, presided. Eld. Aaron Brubaker was also with us. One letter was granted and five letters of membership were received. We decided to hold our love feast Oct. 14, at 10 A. M. at the Wheatville house. Our Harvest and Sunday-school Meetings are appointed for Aug. 26, at the Wheatville house. Bro. Robert Dalton was ordained to the second degree of the ministry.—Wm. M. Brubaker, R. D. 3, Eaton, Ohio, Aug. 11.

OKLAHOMA.

Indian Creek.—We held our council Aug 5. Owing to high water—the result of heavy rains—some of the members were hindered from being present. We decided to have our love feast Nov. 4 at Westerhold. The writer was chosen to represent the church at our District Meeting, to be held in the near future.—William P. Bonsack, Quapaw, Okla., Aug. 8.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Alderson.—Eld. John Herr, of Myerstown, Pa., in company with Eld. Jesse Gingrich and William Peetz, of South Hatfield.

Finger Posts on Life's Highway

Showing How to Succeed in Life

BY JOHN T. DALE

A new book, full of pointers which point in the right direction. A book for the young, the middle aged and the old.

The purpose of the author, in gathering the material, during many years, was to assist those who are striving to gain character, intellectual power, business success, and merited esteem of their fellowmen. Out of a long and varied experience he has been able to collect into this volume more than one hundred articles on that many different subjects, touching human life from almost every possible angle. It is not a novel nor a story, nor yet a long and dry treatise upon some abstract subject, but a collection of articles on everyday topics, written in language and style easy to be understood, making the points so clear that the way of a truly successful and happy life is more easily found. The book abounds in words of wisdom, caution and warning.

We have great hopes for the sale of this book, knowing that it will appeal to all classes with equal force, and be the means of accomplishing good wherever it goes. Should any of our readers be interested in taking an agency for it, write us at once. We can offer liberal commission. The book contains 625 pages, bound in cloth. Illustrated. Will be sent to any address, postpaid, for $1.50.

MISSIONARIES WANTED

You don't have to go to India or China or Africa and endure privation and suffer hardship to be a missionary. You can do the best kind of missionary work right at home, and you won't need any preparation or previous training either. All you need to do is to use a little of your spare time and a little of your surplus cash.

One of the best missionaries to the home that we know of is the Gospel Messenger. It preaches several sermons each week to each and every person that reads it, besides containing interesting bits of news and timely articles on up-to-date subjects.

This paper does not have the circulation that its worth deserves; possibly the reason for this is that a good many people do not know of its value, and thus are not aware of the benefit they are missing.

OUR PROPOSITION IS THIS

We will offer the Gospel Messenger for only 50 cents a year if sent into homes where there are no members of the Church of the Brethren. This fact of course is to be mentioned when sending in your orders. The General Mission Board will pay the deficiency.

Why not take advantage of this special offer and BE A MISSIONARY? If each present subscriber would send in but ONE subscription we would double our list, and the good derived could not be estimated.

Will You Be a Missionary?

Notes from Our Correspondents.

Pa., visited us at the Alderson Mission, and gave us two good, spirited sermons. We closed our Sunday-school services on Saturday and Sunday nights of July 28 and 29. These were the first meetings we have had in the new house. Five were to hold services again Aug. 19 and 20. We are glad that the Lord has answered our continued prayers for the mission point, and the kind people here. We have had much anxiety and inquiry by the people, as to whether the work will be opened here. The pastors of other denominations, as well as the unconverted, seem to be interested in the principles, and taught and practiced, at the Church of the Brethren. We ask an interest in the prayers of God's children, in behalf of the work at this place.—Address, Mrs. Lizzie M. Ikl, Box 59, Alderson, Pa. Aug. 5.

Cherry Creek.—This congregation will begin a two weeks' series of meetings Sept. 4, to be conducted by Bro. D. K. Clapper, of Meyersdale, Pa., to which we hope to unite with a love feast. Sept. 17.—Amelia Kitchen, R. D. 2, Mahaffey, Pa. Aug. 8.

Huntington church met in council Aug. 1, Bro. O. R. Myers presiding. Several committees reported. We look forward to the Ministerial and Sunday-school Institute in September. It is to be held Aug. 20, 21 and Sept. 1. Some plans were made for that meeting, and we trust it will be a helpful, instant and profitable time for us all. Two were baptized here this week. Congregations are good, and the attendance at the Sunday-school continues to be encouraging. Three new names were added to our cradle roll lately. Many are away during the summer, but we are glad all will work to move things on. Our Sisters' Mission Band is helping to furnish the beds at the Brooklyn church hotel. We are planning to make a canvass, to see that every man in this community joins a Bible class.—Eleanor J. Brumbaugh, 1128 Mullin Street, Huntingdon, Pa., Aug. 6.

West Greatrock.—We held our Harvest Meeting at Rheems Aug. 5. The meeting was well attended. A number of ministers from surrounding churches were present, and gave us many thoughts along the line of the day. Many thankful. At the close of the services a collection of $17.59 was taken for orphanage relief. Since we have been here Sunday Hill church, Aug. 26. Our love feast will be held Sept. 20.—Ellie Nolen, Elizabethville, Pa., Aug. 10.

WASHINGTON.

Wenatchee.—As Bro. Geo. W. Hilton and wife, and others of our ministering, who still live here, and will, no doubt, be coming through this city, the church decided to change the date of our love feast from Oct. 7 to Sept. 30, so as to have our newly consecrated workers with us on that occasion. Last night we were favored with a talk from Bro. Winder, who spoke in the interest of the Denver, Colorado, Mission and work for the colored people. Their present place is inadequate; hence he is soliciting funds to purchase a lot or quarter, and provide a sanitary home. Through an oversight, the installation of Sister A. D. Bowman, as deacon of the Sunday Hill church, Aug. 26. Our love feast will be held Sept. 20.—Ellie Nolen, Elizabethville, Pa., Aug. 10.

Their present place is inadequate; hence he is soliciting funds to purchase a lot or quarter, and provide a sanitary home. Through an oversight, the installation of Sister A. D. Bowman, as deacon of the Sunday-school band in the ministry, at our last council, was not reported.—Alice Petrey, R. D. 2, Wenatchee, Wash., July 31.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Allegheny Chapel.—Bro. J. T. Glick, of Bridgewater, Va., began a series of meetings July 23. He preached seventeen interesting and instructive sermons. The attendance and interest continued excellent to the close. Three came out on the Lord's side and were baptized. The church was edified and strengthened, and we think that others are counting the cost. Bro. J. T. Glick is an earnest and able speaker, and we pray that his labors will bring forth good fruit.—C. S. Woodell, Arbovale, W. Va., Aug. 7.

Mountain Dale church began a series of meetings July 1, and July 2 we met for council meeting, to prepare for our love feast. We decided to repair the church-house, and put on galvanized steel roof. The meetings continued until Saturday evening, when a little band of brethren and sisters met around the Lord's tables. Three dear souls were baptized during the meetings. We had good meetings throughout. Brethren Jeremiah Thomas and Geo. Vansickle did the preaching.—E. F. Bisher, Hazelton, W. Va., Aug. 3.

NOTES UNCLASSIFIED.

Lordsburg.—Lordsburg College will open Tuesday, Aug. 29, at ten A. M. Addresses will be given by Professors Edward Frantz, John P. Dickey and J. Z. Gilbert. The Bible Department promises to be the best in the history of the institution. Free tuition is given to all students in the Bible Department.—W. F. England, Lordsburg, Cal., Aug. 14.

Silver Creek.—Our church met in council Aug. 12. Bro. William St. John presided. Two letters were granted and two were received. We decided to hold our Harvest Meeting Aug. 27. There will be services two evenings previous, Aug. 25 and 26. A general invitation is extended to our brethren and sisters.—Mrs. Alta Fisher, Pioneer, Ohio, Aug. 12.

Little Swatara.—Bro. D. C. Reber, of Elizabethtown, Pa., came to us July 15 and delivered three very interesting talks on "Temperance." The collection and pledge cards for sustain the work were very encouraging. July 23 Bro. Thomas Patrick gave us quite a surprise by an unexpected visit. He gave us an excellent sermon in the morning in the German language and in the evening in the English language. Our Harvest Meeting held Aug. 4 was very largely attended. Brethren Benj. Hostel, C. E. Miller, Jacob Nissley, William Oberholtzer and John Royer were present and preached for us. Their discourses were full of interest and instruction. Brethren Hostel and Miller remained for the service on Sunday, when they spoke to a large and appreciative audience. The collection was very encouraging, amounting to about $30.—Henry M. Prants, R. D. 5, Myerstown, Pa., Aug. 8.

Monticello.—Our Harvest Meeting was held at the Monticello church Aug. 27. Bro Otho Winger, of North Manchester, has promised to be with us in all-day meeting.—J. L. Bibler, Monticello, Ind., Aug. 14.

Jonesboro.—The Brethren at Jonesboro had services yesterday,—day and evening sessions. Bro. A. M. Laughrun did the preaching. We had a good attendance at the day services, and a splendid attendance in the evening. Laughrun gave us splendid sermons, that commanded the best of attention by the people. We hope he will come again.—N. T. Larimer, Jonesboro, Tenn., Aug. 7.

WOULD YOU LIKE TO BE FREE

From the cares of investing your money? To have your income a fixed amount and promptly received? To save yourself the burden of taxes?

UNDERLYING THESE QUESTIONS

Has a still more vital one, To what use do you propose to place your money or property when you have passed from the life?

IF you want your relatives to have it,—and they perhaps take it with them out of the church,—then none of these questions interests you.

IF you want the Church of the Brethren to have the benefit of all or part of your property,

THEN these questions are of vital interest to you NOW.

FOR BY OUR ANNUITY PLAN

1. You can place your property with the Board and no longer have any care of it.
2. The amount that you hand will be exempt from taxes.
3. The income is fixed and comes to you on or before January 1 and July 1 of each year during the life of the annuitant.

SEVEN SPLENDID ADVANTAGES.

1. Good rate of income.
2. No worry about investments.
3. No losses in income.
4. No disagreements in income.
5. Sure and safe plan for steady income for yourself, your wife or your child.
6. Assurance that when your interest ceases through death the income goes on aiding the story of the Cross for the Church of the Brethren.
7. Several hundred brethren and sisters have this plan and funds with the Board, every one is pleased, and sound business men recommend the plan as safe, sure and practical in every way.

AROUND THE WORLD

St. Louis Condemns the Communion Cup.

The Board of Health of St. Louis, Mo., by a stringent ordinance has barred the use of the common cup in the celebration of communion services in any of the churches. It is claimed that its use is unsanitary, tending to a spread of disease and hence dangerous to public health. A fine of twenty-five dollars is imposed for each offense. While there are hundreds of ways in which disease might be conveyed to others far more readily than by means of the communion cup, one is made to wonder why such a severe penalty should be meted out to violators of this ordinance, even before actual injury has been conclusively shown.

Battling Against Race Prejudices.

As already announced, a "Universal Races Congress" was recently held at the University of London. Its object was to discuss, "in the light of science and the modern conscience," the relations between the white people and the red, yellow, brown, and black races. Whatever objection prejudiced opinion may urge against the wisdom of better relations between the different races, the spirit and deliberations of the recent congress were an earnest and a prophecy of better things. At best, race antipathy is but a weakness, unworthy of the broad and all-inclusive spirit of the Gospel. Talk as you will, about the peculiarities of the various races, the fact remains that God "hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth." As such, all are brethren, and our duty to them is obvious and plain.

College Fraternities and Scholarship.

The pernicious tendencies of college fraternities have been deplored by educators everywhere, and the present campaign against the continuance of these secret orders seems to be quite general, though a most stubborn opposition has been encountered in many places. At the University of Missouri the comparative standing of students, in and out of fraternities, has been made a matter of thorough study. It was found that those not connected with the societies had a far higher average per cent of scholarship than those who allowed the pleasures and dissipations of the fraternities to detract from their time, energy and endeavor. There is sound sense in the opposition waged by the Church of the Brethren against secret orders of every kind, and it is to be hoped that school fraternities will never gain a foothold in any of our institutions of learning.

Peace Conference at Berne, Switzerland.

Through the resources afforded by the Carnegie Peace Foundation, the recent Conference on Universal Peace made possible. It was a gathering of peace workers from all parts of the world, and it is thought that their earnest labors will not be without a gracious fruitage. For the first time in the world's history has the problem of war been presented scientifically by the deepest thinkers of all nations, and neither strenuous effort nor abundant funds will be spared to carry on the further research work, the result of which, it is expected, will illuminate the whole subject and have an authority of value. A vast amount of educative influences in regard to the Bible method of ending warlike demonstrations is doubtless needed, and to this end every lover of peace may constitute himself a committee of one to proclaim the message of that brighter day when "nations shall learn war no more."

America Helping the Filipino.

While health conditions in the Philippines have materially improved, since American control of the islands has instituted better hygienic and sanitary methods, best of all for the people has been the installment of artesian wells. Before the advent of the Americans, our little brown brother was limited to the scant supply of surface water. When water from the newly-constructed deep well was offered him, he refused to drink it at first, but later he learned that greater immunity from disease was found in the pure water from the depths of the earth. As a consequence he cut loose from tradition and superstition, and now he enthusiastically proclaims the merits of artesian wells and their health-promoting waters. How we wish that the Filipino might obtain an equally clear comprehension of the efficacy of the Water of Life, offered so freely to all "without money and without price"! "Whosoever will," let him take the water of life freely."

Science Commercialized.

The recent aviation contests in Chicago,—which, by their spectacular exhibits, drew thousands to the scene of their flights and in which, besides several minor fatalities, two of the daring aviators lost their lives,—are receiving justly-deserved censure because of their evident attempt to cater to the modern craze for sensationalism and excitement. The Wright Brothers, pioneers in the aeroplane field, severely condemn all attempts at such notoriety and commercialism. They argue,—and rightly too,—that science should not be prostituted to a mere matter of amusement or lend itself to money-making schemes. Too much of this spirit is in evidence, nowadays, in all branches of human endeavor,—not even excepting our holy religion.

When the Saloons Were Closed.

During the crisis in the recent street car strike at Des Moines, Iowa, the mayor "ordered every saloon in the city to be closed." He explained, in defense of his summary order, that it is of the utmost importance, in times of serious difficulty, to have all parties concerned maintain full control of their faculties, and not to allow unbridled passions to be influenced still further by alcoholic stimulants. The mayor, in this respect, followed the example of other communities when facing an alarming situation, and undoubtedly averted serious consequences by his timely act of precaution. But the unprejudiced observer can not help asking some pertinent questions as to the situation. If the saloon, in times of serious calamity, must be closed, why not close it permanently to avoid further troubles? Why temporize with an acknowledged evil?

British Labor War Settled.

The 200,000 workers of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants of Great Britain, who declared a strike Aug. 17, were fortunately prevailed upon to enter into an amicable agreement two days later, and now the difficulty, which threatened to reach gigantic proportions, has been settled to the general satisfaction of all concerned. Following in the wake of the recent strike of the dock laborers, which tied up all the shipping interests of Great Britain, the railway strike bade fair to become a national calamity by virtually tying up all lines of business, causing shortage of food supplies, etc. Now, that peace has once more been restored, the authorities as well as the workers are wondering if there are not better and saner ways of settling labor disputes than the crude and costly expedient of a strike. The answer is found in Christ's perfect rule of equity.

Civic Baptisms in France.

In addition to making marriage a purely civic procedure, France now proposes to confer "civic baptism" upon the children of the Republic. According to the prescribed ritual the child is welcomed to the great family of spirits "emancipated from all religious dogma," and is baptized in the name "of the universal principles of free thought, in the name of the glorious revolution of 1789, the mother of the rights of man, and in the name of the democratic and social republic of France." The law imposes but three commandments: (1) Loyalty to country and parents. (2) Support of justice and truth. (3) True neighborliness. Thus the state hopes to solve the question of good citizenship, but the real need of the soul is not provided for, and the great and momentous question arises: Where, outside of Christ and his saving Gospel, is man to find the power to carry out the real good he knows and would like to do?

Episcopals and Divorce.

At present, prominent leaders of the Episcopal church are seriously protesting against the marriage of one of their bishops, a wealthy New Yorker, to a young girl in her teens, he having been divorced from his first wife, who is still living. The prominence of the parties involved has directed public attention to the case, but most of all it is the attitude of the Episcopal church that is arousing the spirited discussion, pro and con, as to the remarrying of divorced persons. The position of this church has always been quite strict on this question, but of late years it has largely partaken of the stern rigidity of the Catholic church, which permits no remarriage of divorced persons unless strictly within the bounds of New Testament authority. It is encouraging that, together with the Church of the Brethren, there are at least a few organizations that hold to the right when this sacred Bible principle is at stake. No church can afford to grant greater liberties on this matter than are fully warranted by the Holy Scriptures.

The Pending Issue in Maine.

We referred, in a previous issue, to the all-important question that now confronts the Pine Tree State. The entire country is watching the outcome. Texas, after making a gallant struggle against liquor domination, missed the mark by a margin so small as to leave hope for the future. Maine, with a record of half a century of unassurable success in temperance, should have no trouble to hold the fort against the enemy. If on Sept. 11 the voters, by an emphatic "No" declare their allegiance to prohibition principles, right will once more triumph. It will mean, however, an uphill struggle, contested every inch of the way. The anti-prohibition forces are stopping at nothing. To capture Maine would be to them a triumph far more precious than the millions it would cost. The powers of darkness are concentrating their entire strength upon the contest, and there might be reason to despair, were it not that "he that is with us is mightier than they." In his name and by his grace we can conquer, and to this end let there be fervent prayers!

Deplorable Lawlessness.

That civilization, in and of itself, and unsustained by Christian principles, will not suffice to keep in check the wild passions of a mob, was shown in several recent lynchings, notably the one at Coatesville, Pa. Here a negro, during some disturbance, was unfortunate enough to kill a policeman. He was taken, badly wounded, to a hospital. A mob soon gathered and, unwilling to let the law take its course, dragged the negro, still chained to his cot, to a lumber pile, burning him while his shrieks of agony rent the air. While, as a rule, the negro is at a higher point in mental and moral development today than ever before, there seems to be an unreasoning and most deplorable prejudice against him on the part of many of the white race, of whom much more should rightfully be expected. Law-abiding citizens can well afford to condemn the punishment of evil-doers to the "powers that be," remembering that "they are ministers of God's service, attending continually upon this very thing."

Race Betterment Needed.

A prominent writer is authority for the statement that twenty-five per cent of the present generation is producing fifty per cent of the next, and that undoubtedly the least desirable classes of humanity are increasing at the greatest ratio. That the dangers referred to are not mere dreams is shown in the instance of a family, established by two daughters of a woman drunkard, who in five or six generations produced, all told, 834 descendants, of whom 700 were professional beggars, inmates of almshouses, criminals and incompetents of various degrees. Contrasting with that degenerate family the 1,394 descendants of Jonathan Edwards, most of them noted for distinguished positions in life, no one can doubt the great value of an honorable and devout ancestry. To have a better race in the days to come, there must be better parents in the living present. The most precious heritage we can leave to those we love is not an abundance of earthly possessions, but a godly character, which, permeating the life forces of generations yet to come, will cause them to become towers of strength in righteousness and all good works. "The memory of the just is blessed."

Increase in Juvenile Crime.

That there is a deplorable increase of crime among boys, still young in years, seems to be the general experience in most States of our Union. Judge H. P. Coyle, of Humboldt, Iowa, recently said, "The amount of juvenile crime in Iowa is appalling. It is growing larger every year, although the average citizen seems to have no realization whatsoever of the seriousness of the situation." In the opinion of the judge, lack of proper parental training is largely to blame for the alarming state of youthful morals. Then, too, the public schools as well as the Sunday-schools are remiss in their duty,—as he thinks,—in failing to teach the most important things of life. What we need most, in every State of our land, is more Bible teaching and Bible living. With the Blessed Word more thoroughly taught in the home and Sunday-school, there is bound to be a powerful incentive for good in every juvenile mind and heart. Add to this the Bible reading that,—it is to be hoped,—will some day be done in every public school,—when the Sacred Volume has been restored once more to its lawful sphere,—and there will be a strong factor for righteousness, that can not help but make itself felt. There is not an ill nor a trouble to which humanity is heir, that God's Word can not finally eradicate, and will, if applied.

Don't Wait Till After I Am Gone.

BY D. MAXCY QUELLHORST.

Were I a bud of fairest hue,
With fragrance sweet as angel's breath,
My perfumes I would lavish free,
The living should enjoy my wealth.

Yes, while the living plod their way
Through thorns and briars, here on earth,
I would that I might fill their cup
With joy and peace of endless worth.

Don't scatter roses on my dust,
When from this weary life I'm free,
But let me scent their sweetness now,
While I may yet their beauty see.

And let me hear the kindly word,
While 'midst the cares of life I'm pressed,
Don't wait till after I am gone,
To place sweet flowers on my breast.

A Word About District Sunday-School Secretaries.

BY I. B. TROUT.

THE Annual Conference, held at St. Joseph, Missouri, adopted the plan for the enlargement and development of the Sunday-school work of the church. This plan is clear and comprehensive, and a careful reading of it will discover to any one that it is so arranged as to foster active and aggressive Sunday-school work. According to this plan a Sunday-school Board of five "experienced and successful Sunday-school workers" was appointed to have charge of the work. The Sunday-school Editor of the Brethren Publishing House, by virtue of his office, is Secretary of the Board, and for this reason he now calls the attention of the Brotherhood, and especially of the various State Districts, to one very important item, viz.:

The Board, at its recent meeting, held in the Publishing House on August 8 and 9, among other things passed the following decision: "Decided that the District Sunday-school Secretaries, acting under the direction of the Board, shall be the Superintendents in their respective Districts of the various departments of the work, as Teacher-training, Home Department, Cradle Roll, and all other departmental work." In short, this action of the Board appoints the District Sunday-school Secretary of each State District as the Superintendent of Teacher-training, Home Department, etc., for his respective State District. He will be expected to act in this capacity under the supervision of the general Sunday-school Board. This fact makes it imperative that the various District Meetings appoint able, experienced, successful Sunday-school workers for their District Sunday-school Secretaries. The time is past when "almost anybody" will do for District Secretary. The Sunday-school Board intends to push the Sunday-school work of the Brotherhood, and to push it with all the wisdom and discretion at their command. According to the Annual Conference decision, they have asked the Brotherhood for funds, and it is the intention of the Board, as expressed in their meeting, to give the very best service and results possible, to the Brotherhood, in the expenditure of these funds. They will necessarily be required to do a lot of their work through the District Secretaries, and unless a State District appoints a thoroughly competent person to this position, the Board will be greatly hindered in its work.

We wish to say again that the Sunday-school workers of our Brotherhood ought to see to it that their various State Districts appoint thoroughly competent Sunday-school Secretaries. It is not the intention of the Sunday-school Board to pay the expenses of these Secretaries. That part of the work belongs to the State District, and each State District ought to see to it that the Secretary has sufficient financial backing to make it possible for him to give the necessary amount of time and attention to the Sunday-school work of the District.

We believe this is all that it is necessary to say at this time. We have said this because Districts will soon be holding their District Meetings, and in some of these Districts Secretaries will need to be appointed or re-appointed, and great care should be used that the proper person is placed into this very important position. The time is fully here when the Church of the Brethren must wake up to more intelligent, concerted effort in Sunday-school work. We are pleased and thankful for what has been done in the past, and must not be understood to be disposed to belittle past efforts. However, we wish to be understood to be looking into the future for increased and larger efforts and wisdom in the Sunday-school enterprise. We have a right to look for this on the ground of our past experiences and on the ground of our present opportunities and possibilities. We have a right to expect large things because the work is a great work, since it deals with the religious education of not only our children, but of the entire Brotherhood. The Sunday-school is the one big Bible school of the church, and we ought to spare no efforts to bring it to the highest standard of excellency. We will never have any regrets when we come to the time of laying the armor by because we have been too earnest and too persistent in our Sunday-school work. On the other hand, if we do not do our best, there will be regrets that will disturb us when we are about to cross into the great hereafter.

More, with reference to the work of the Sunday-school Board, will be found in the MESSENGER at some later date, and also in the publications going from the Sunday-school Department.

The office of the Board is Elgin, Ill., and their mail should be addressed as follows: Sunday-school Board, Church of the Brethren, Elgin, Ill.

According to Your Faith.

BY JAS. A. SELL.

THERE is, perhaps, no saying of the Savior that is so misconstrued or misunderstood as the one that heads this article. Two blind men appealed to him to restore their sight. "Jesus saith unto them, Believe ye that I am able to do this? They said unto him, Yea, Lord. Then touched he their eyes, saying, According to your faith be it unto you."

It should be noticed that the cure rested entirely upon their belief. When there is nothing but to believe, of course it is according to our faith. But when that saying is used as a proof that obedience to direct commands, or getting the benefits from conditional promises, is according to our faith, it is both dishonoring the Savior and fatal to the soul. It is contrary to common sense and sound reason. What sense would there be in the Savior giving a positive commandment, or making a conditional promise, and then to say, It is according to your faith to do or not to do, and the reward will follow just the same?

If this is really what the Savior meant, in reference to his ordinances or doctrines, then the less one believes the less he will need to do. He will not be held accountable for what he does not believe. Those who believe that they should obey in all things, will be required to do so. If they do not, they will suffer loss. It is according to your faith. The one may go scot-free, because he does not believe; the other is held to strict account because he does believe. This is quite encouraging to people of little faith, and very encouraging to have just as little faith as possible. Truly, such an interpretation of Scripture is lacking in common sense. "O Lord, give us sense!"

It is contrary to sound reason. Truth or principles are not dependent on man's faith in them. Truth is truth, regardless of our opinion of it, and our opinion does not change it. There are certain laws that govern everything in the realm of existence. Our work and endeavor in life is simply to find out those laws and adapt ourselves to them, to obtain results. If the religion taught by Christ is an exception to this, it is not a reasonable thing. Anything that is offered to intelligent creatures must be reasonable, or the mind will reject it. Man will not accept a religion that is not reasonable.

The religion of Christ is reasonable. It makes no unreasonable demands. Every commandment is urged with reason for obedience. But if our obedience is left to our faith, and the reward will be the same, whether we obey or not, then the system is unreasonable and contrary to everything else that is governed by law. Faith that controls, guides, and binds us to the Christian religion, is a reasonable thing. And to keep and do what we are commanded to do, even to make a living sacrifice, is our "reasonable service."

The proper interpretation, "According to your faith be it unto you," must, therefore, be to show our "faith by our works," when work is required. The cure of the blind men rested entirely on their faith. If they believed, their sight would be restored. There was nothing more demanded. To make a general application of this case is "wresting the Scriptures unto our own destruction."

Hollidaysburg, Pa.

Feet-Washing.

BY H. J. HARNLY.

THERE are certain principles which are fundamental in the kingdom of God. Service is one of these, humility is another. Feet-washing is sometimes called "the sacrament of humility," but what is humility but a willingness to serve? Christ humbled himself in that he took upon himself the form of a servant. Indeed, I doubt whether there is any real humility aside from the humility of service. Milton made Satan say that he would rather "rule in Hell than serve in Heaven."

Without humble service there can be no church, no kingdom, so the suggestion of this most fundamental principle must come early to the citizen of the kingdom. If one were seeking for a symbol that would most perfectly symbolize service, even the most humble service, and one that would be most easily recognized, and one through which the suggestion of service could be most forcibly given, could he find one more practical than feet-washing?

Indeed, we may challenge the world to produce a symbol more perfectly symbolizing and more forcibly giving the suggestion of this most fundamental principle of the kingdom of God.

Feet-washing, as a sacrament, is a perfect symbol of service and is therefore psychologic, scientific and practical. It is also a symbol of cleansing, and so adapted to suggest the moral cleansing we may need from time to time.

But some one says, "It is not essential to salvation." I shall not attempt to prove that one may and can not be saved without this sacrament. I am not interested in those who are content to remain weaklings or dwarfed runts. I have no time to help you figure out how you may be saved, as it were, by the "skin of the teeth." There are those who are constantly afraid that they may be missing a pleasure that will not absolutely put what little life they have.

I am no more interested in you to help you solve your problems than I am in the farmer who is determined to raise the most runty, scabby and dirty little pigs. Scientific men everywhere are interested in thoroughbreds, not runts. Thoroughbreds are produced by taking advantage of every law of life, inbreeding, feeding and exercising. I am interested in the practical, thoroughbred Christian,—the one who covets "the best gifts," an abundant life and entrance.

But another says, "There is nothing in feet-washing." That is probably true for the one who says it. Surely, there is nothing in feet-washing for the one who has never kept this ordinance. But the one who has never made the test, is not a competent witness. Besides, it is possible to do the outward act of feet-washing without getting the blessing. Not all who have washed feet are competent witnesses. There is an inward as well as an outward condition that must be met, to fulfill the law of this sacrament.

Perhaps a little incident out of my own life will illustrate. I shall never forget the first love feast which I attended. In canvassing the membership it seemed to me that I could sit by the side of any brother and wash his feet excepting one. So, when I went to the table I sought a place where I thought it would be least likely that the one brother would reach my side. But, fortunately for me, that brother did reach my side and I washed his feet. I got the blessing and a lesson that I have never forgotten.

When you go to the Lord's table, do you choose your company? As sure as you do, you will lose the blessing, for is it not the purpose of the sacrament to make one serviceable, to make one willing to do for the lowliest of his brethren or his neighbor the most humble service?

Let no one try to find excuse in the above for carelessness about his person. Slovenliness and filthiness are not virtues, much less indications of piety and spirituality. They are much more likely to be indications of laziness and uncouth behavior. Filthy feet, clothing, lips and teeth are inexcusable at the Lord's table,—in fact they are positive disrespect for God and man.

Too many of us lose the blessing and make the sacrament of no effect because we are more concerned about the fitness of our brother than our own fitness. The New Testament nowhere makes us responsible for our brother's fitness, but it does make us responsible for our own fitness, and this fitness does not consist in being perfect, but in a desire, a longing, for greater perfection and larger spiritual life and power for service. For this sacrament, as for all sacraments, one of the conditions is a season of fasting and prayer, of meditation, of self-examination. Thus, and thus only, the soul becomes plastic to the sacrament, so that the impress of the sacrament may change it through and through, and for all time.

Are the members of the Church of the Brethren really making greater sacrifices for each other? Are they more serviceable to each other and to those in need? Are they living clearer and purer lives than do Christians who do not keep this ordinance? Those of us who practice the ordinance of feet-washing and yet, in our lives, deny the power of the sacrament, are the greatest hindrance to the universal acceptance of this ordinance. If we would have Christendom accept this sacrament, we, as a church, must show in our lives greater powers of service and greater purity.

I fear that there are some who expect the mere doing of the ordinance to save them, but unless the ordinance accomplishes some change, gives some powers of service and cleanliness that we could and would not have had but for the sacrament, we have made the sacrament of no effect. We might just as well not have kept the ordinance, aye, probably far better not at all, for the mere doing of it may give a sense of false security and it may prove a damnation instead of our salvation. The Lord is not pleased with our formalities which do not penetrate the inner life. A person may wash feet and remain tremendously selfish and worldly.

Our selfishness and worldliness are determined by the time spent for self and the things of this world and the means used in attaching to self the things of this world. A person may wash feet and wear plain clothes, and still be tremendously selfish and worldly. Says DeLaveleye, "Political economy should never forget that material wealth is a means and not an end; the condition of moral and intellectual progress, not the end of life." Just so the sacraments are a means and not an end. They are the condition of spiritual life and progress,—not the end of spiritual life. He who makes them the end misses they very life which they condition.

The statement was made recently by certain Sunday-school teachers, that if "Christ were here now he might perhaps black his disciples' shoes instead of washing their feet." The statement is neither logical, psychological nor scientific. It is extremely superficial. The question is not at all, "What would Christ do now?" but, "What would he have me do now, in the light of his life and sufferings?" It is not scientific, because in the history of the world, there could be only one moment when the Christ must come. Did one appear now, professing to be the Christ, he must, of necessity, be false. Our very customs have so completely grown out of Christianity, that it becomes impossible to say what they might have been but for Christ. To suppose a Christ supplanting himself is illogical. Because of the customs in the times of Christ, and because of the nature of feet-washing itself, it is a perfect symbol of service and cleansing, as blacking of shoes could not possibly be; first, because our customs do not make it so completely a symbol of service; and, second, because it is not a symbol of cleansing. The sacraments are not accidents of time and place, but are perfect symbols of fundamental principles, which all may understand and from which all may receive help.

To speculate what Christ might have been and done, what sacraments he might have instituted, had his mission been to a different world, with different customs and needs, is, to say the least, idle. In the fullness of time Christ came. This is logical, scientific and according to revelation. Christ was not an accident, nor are his institutions accidents in time. Christ and his institutions have a logical, a psychological and a scientific place in the world's progress, and in the development of his kingdom. Because of the suggestion received by the sacrament and because of the entire life of Christ, of which this sacrament is but an expression, we should black our brother's shoes or do him any other service which occasion demands. That humility which submits to the will of God and serves mankind is both practical and scientific, and, of course, scriptural.—(From "Scientific Sacraments.")

Attending Ministerial Meetings.

BY LINA N. STONER.

[While on a visit to Middleburg, Md., the home of her childhood, Sister Lina N. Stoner, of Ladoga, Ind., was requested to speak a few minutes, on the topic given below, and was afterwards requested to reduce her thoughts to writing. Her article follows.—Ed.]

"What Can I Do to Get Ministers to Attend Ministerial Meetings, Who Have Not Been Attending?"

This query was placed upon the program of the Ministerial Meeting of the Eastern District of Maryland, and was considered by that meeting. There was doubtless some cause why the question was asked. The brethren were interrogated privately, and reasons were given why some of the ministers had to be absent. There was, however, a marked improvement in the attendance of the meeting this year. Some could not be present because of sickness, death, and the infirmities of old age and other unavoidable causes. To such, this question does not apply. Others are hindered by circumstances that we may help to overcome.

The time for the meeting should be considered. At some seasons of the year it is almost impossible for the brethren to leave their respective duties. Teachers and students can not, without loss to their work, leave their schools. Fruit-men can ill afford to allow their ripe fruit to decay, farmers must make hay while the sun shines. It is true we should wear our earthly cares as a loose, outer garment, to be thrown aside when more important duties demand our attention; and we should be willing to sacrifice personal interests for the cause of Christ, but care ought to be exercised that the time of meeting suit the largest number of our ministers.

When our Lord called men to his service, there was not one loafer among the number, though there were, doubtless, some idlers lounging by the Sea of Galilee. It was the busy men who heard the call, "Follow me," and the busy men responded. It is the same today. There is work of some kind for every hour of the working day.

What can I do to make it possible for the busy minister to attend who can ill afford to give his time? If I am a farmer, I can work in the farmer-minister's field one or two days. I can take vegetables or ripe fruit, butter or eggs to our minister who lives in town. If the distance is not too great to travel by private conveyance, I might send a carriage to convey him and his family to the place of meeting. If the journey must be made by rail, I can possibly present the minister in limited circumstances with his railroad fare. I can tell him how earnestly we desire to have his presence at the meeting, how he misses a blessing by being absent. I can show a loving interest in his welfare. I can make him feel my willingness to bear his burden, and thus fulfill the law of Christ.

Another cause for the non-attendance of ministers may be indifference. Another may be the habit of shirking. As these two ailments are akin, the same remedy may be applied to both. Do you remember reading of that little band of earnest brethren who met together in a room with closed doors? It was in the evening of that glorious resurrection day, when our triumphant Lord rose as victor over death, hell and the grave. There were ten of them. Poor Judas had paid the penalty of his heinous crime and was not there. Thomas,—where was he? Simply missing. Our Lord came in, spoke peace to their troubled hearts, and said unto them, "Receive ye the Holy Ghost."

What a glorious meeting! What a pity that Thomas was not there. He missed so much! When the disciples told him, "We have seen the Lord," he had an attack of doubt. Jesus cured Thomas. He can cure us if we have been negligent and shirking and doubting, but what can I do for these dear ones? I can go to the meeting in the name of the Lord. If there is work assigned me, I can, by God's help, contribute my mite with the ability he gives me. If each worker does this we will have a glorious, Spirit-filled meeting. The Lord will be with us. We will sit in heavenly places in Christ Jesus. We will be endued with power from on high. We will leave the place strong and ready for service. The Holy Spirit will shed abroad the love of God in our hearts. We can go to our absent minister and say, "Brother, we have seen the Lord." With our hearts aflame with fire from off God's altar we can fan the spark in our brother's heart into a living flame. By God's blessing upon the work, he, like Thomas, will say, "My Lord and my God."

The Second Coming of Christ.

BY MARTHA E. OLIVER.

There is a hope strangely passed over as unimportant by many followers of Christ, and yet so important in the mind of God, and so closely interwoven with the fundamentals of our faith that it is mentioned more than three hundred times in the New Testament,—the second coming of Christ.

Perhaps the cause for the slighting of so blessed a hope lies not only in our inability to prove conclusively to our human minds the surrounding circumstances of this divine order, but in the fact that discredit has been brought upon it by those who have posed as possessing a knowledge on this subject which Christ himself, when on earth, did not possess (Mark 13: 32). Their prophecies have failed, and men, as a consequence, have lost faith in this portion of God's plan.

Then, too, there are many who strive to explain away the references to the second coming of Christ, which I believe to be a sudden, visible, audible and bodily return to earth (Matt. 24: 44; 1 Thess. 4: 16; Matt. 24: 30; Acts 1: 11). Even as his disciples beheld him on Mt. Olivet, as he was taken up in the clouds, so it is promised that he shall return unto us "without sin unto salvation."

One explanation of Christ's invisible return is based upon the repeated statement of the Apocalypse that "the time is at hand." Therefore, they say, he returned in the same generation that his departure occurred. Not visibly did he return, but in the form of the Holy Spirit. But are not a thousand years to the Lord as a day? It is true that the disciples looked forward to an early return; it is natural that they should. Christ told them to watch; so we are commanded to watch for his appearance. It was to this end, perhaps, that Christ left the time of his coming indefinite.

But if the coming of the Holy Spirit on Pentecost was this second coming, why should Paul have taught the Thessalonians that he had not yet appeared (2 Thess. 2: 3)? And, aside from this, the Holy Spirit is a distinct person with a distinct work.

Again; Christ did not mean to withdraw his Spirit, which is to be with us to the end of the world, when he went to prepare a place for us, promising to return again unto us. Certainly he speaks of his bodily departure and return.

By no means, on the other hand, can the second coming of Christ mean the time of the death of a believer, for it is the teaching of Paul that when the Lord descends from heaven, the dead in Christ shall rise first (1 Thess. 4: 16), hitherto, then, they have not witnessed the second advent of the Savior. Nor can we be convinced that this event takes place at the regeneration of a soul, as some have found reason to believe from Jesus' promise that at the regeneration the faithful saints should sit in judgment with him. This regeneration can not refer to the regeneration of our souls, for in this life we are told to "judge not."

We can not say, chronologically, when the second coming of Christ will come to pass, but, according to the New Testament, there will certain things transpire and certain things will accompany this event, which will indicate its near approach. It will not be revealed to us beforehand, but it will come upon us unawares, as was his first appearance. The prophecies concerning the indications of his first coming were fulfilled, and yet, who could have set the date of his birth? Of some of the conditions at the time of his coming we are sure. "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." Again, "That day shall not come except there be a falling away first and that man of sin be revealed." This last carries with it the prophecy of "perilous times," when men shall live under Satan's direction, when "they shall be anarchists, despisers of those which are good, and lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God." Then shall Israel have been restored, and she shall worship the God of her fathers once more.

In close connection with Christ's second coming we have the righteous reign of one thousand years,—the millennium,—when Satan shall be cast into the pit, and the dead in Christ shall sit with him in judgment. Shall this coming be after the millennium "after the working of Satan" when he has been "loosed for a little time" and the lawless one revealed to "try the saints and deceive the nations which are in the four corners of the earth?" Or shall this reign be ushered in by the coming of Christ, "whose breath, as a flashing sword, shall destroy the wicked"? I am inclined to believe the latter.

But what will be the effect in heaven and on earth of Christ's coming that his advent should be called the hope of the church? It will mean the manifestation of the glory of Christ (2 Thess. 1: 10), the overthrowing of his enemies (2 Thess. 1: 8), the establishment of his kingdom and the consummation of all things (Acts 3: 21).

What a valuable doctrine, then, it is! It holds for us a hope to inspire us to faithfulness and a diligent discharge of the duties that our Savior has given us to do, for we believe that he is going to return one day, and if we are found faithful, then shall we be glorified with him. But we know not the day nor the hour of his appearing, so let us watch, therefore, and pray always, that we may be counted worthy to escape his wrath, and to stand before the Son of Man.

Telford, S. Dak.

Peace in the Church.

BY D. B. MENTZER.

THE church is God's family on earth, one of his mansions, the training-place of the children of the kingdom to come. Called out from the kingdom of the world, we are separated from unrestrained sinners, yet, separated unto the grace of God. We were lost in the dominion of sin, but now are saved by the power of divine grace, and brought over into "the kingdom of God's dear Son."

What a marvelous translation this! A sinner lost, a sinner saved! A child of the world, but now a child of God in Christ Jesus, born again, seeing the kingdom of God in his Word and in his people. Born again "of water and of the Spirit, coming out of holy baptism, and out of the work of the Holy Spirit of God, our Father, we utter the filial cry, "Abba, Father," and recognize "our Father in heaven." This is not childish but it is child-like. This is the adoption, so now we are the adopted sons and daughters of God, our Heavenly Father, and him we love for his incomprehensible perfections, his immortality, his unapproachable glory, and loving him, we will have the spirit of obedience.

Our first and ruling desire should be to please, or do the pleasure of, our Father in heaven. But how can we do this? Can rebellious man please God? Yes, truly! God does not speak to men audibly, face to face, as in the days of long ago. He does not send or raise up prophets like Enoch, Abraham, Moses, Elijah, Isaiah, Malachi. No, not so. But he sent a greater one, even Jesus, the Messiah of the promise, the Anointed Son. He is now our Prophet, our Priest, our King, spiritual, immortal, all-glorious. We are drawn to him by the all-conquering impulse of his amazing love. We humble ourselves to confess our sins, to be buried with him in baptism as he was in the waters of Jordan. We kneel daily in prayer, as he did; we stoop to wash his disciples' feet as he did, and we go about doing good as he did. These things bring us to him and make us one in faith and hope and love. And if so, there is peace.

Are we not enjoying the blessedness of peace? Who is to blame? Are not we, seeing we do not submit to him? We have peace in him if we be obedient.

"Be at peace among yourselves," said Paul, the apostle, to the church at Thessalonica; when he wrote his recorded letter. He had reason to write thus in his day. The same is true now.

When members violate the royal law of love, there will not be peace. We should speak well of each other or keep quiet. When any of us lay hindrances, or stumbling-blocks in the way of our brethren and sisters in the Lord, we are not at peace.

We violate some gospel orders or principles when we are not at peace with one another. Peace brings blessings. When we are at peace, we remember each other kindly, regard our gospel fellowship, pray for one another, defend one another, and recognize the great truth that we are our brother's keeper.

Let us note well a few scriptures:

Psa. 34: 14. "Seek peace and pursue it."

Isa. 32: 17, "The work of righteousness shall be peace."

Mark 9: 50, "Have peace one with another."

Rom. 14: 17, "The kingdom of God is peace."

1 Cor. 7: 15, "God hath called us to peace."

2 Cor. 13: 11, "Live in peace."

1 Thess. 5: 13, "Be at peace among yourselves."

Let us labor for peace in the church of our Lord.

The Completion of the Work of Salvation.

BY HERMAN B. HEISEY.

FROM the title of this subject we can readily infer that there was a beginning to the work of salvation. Little need be said concerning this beginning, because the main thought of this subject lays the stress upon the completion of the work already begun.

When man accepts Christ, realizing his weakness as a sinner, he is moved by the love of God. He repents of his sin through the faith which he has in Christ, and in Christ's power to save. Through this faith he is put into the state of a righteous man. By this I mean, that, when a man repents of his sins and takes Christ into his life, all his sins are forgiven. All the wrong that this man has done is removed from God's record of man's deeds. He is looked upon by God and his angels as if he were a holy man all his life.

But this does not warrant the man's hope of being saved from condemnation at the final judgment of the Lord. It is not enough to become a Christian. It is just as necessary to continue a Christian. Many a one, after joining church, relapses into the ways of the world. Such an one, even though, at one time, he accepted Christ, can not have the assurance that his reward will be life eternal. Man's salvation is not complete at his conversion. He is only justified. Sanctification remains to be completed in the end, for it is a process requiring the most extensive preparation.

According to Paul's view, the Holy Spirit is the Divine agent that comes into a man's life at the time of his conviction and repentance, and works in him an obedience to the righteousness of the Law, which the Law itself failed to accomplish. But this righteousness of man, thus far, is not sufficient. At man's conversion only his spirit is delivered and not the body. Paul says, in Rom. 8: 10, "that the body is dead because of sin; but the Spirit is life because of righteousness." The body is the seat of sin, and until the body has also been delivered, the work of man's salvation is incomplete. Furthermore, this is plainly seen in the fact that the sinful life of man is the life according to the flesh, and, therefore, as long as the body remains unchanged, man can not be said to be free from sin and death, which freeing is the work of salvation.

The punishment of sin is death to the body, as well as to the spirit of man. And so man, in his struggle, has the power of sin and of death to conquer before heaven is his home. Now, when man takes the Holy Spirit into his life, this power has only been partly broken, for only the spirit of man has overcome death. The body is still dead. Paul tells us, in Rom. 8: 23, that we who have "the firstfruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body."

From this we infer that salvation is not complete, and that the power of sin and death has been partly broken in ourselves. This being the case, then, as can be expected, there is a continual conflict between the spirit which is redeemed and the body which is sin. In this conflict the spirit, allied to God, comes out victor. But though there be victories of the spirit over the body, it is not content, and Paul says, in 2 Cor. 5: 1-8, that the spirit cries to be free from this body of sin and death.

Since the body, in addition to the spirit, must be redeemed, the question arises, When is the body redeemed? It is not redeemed until the resurrection of man. The body, in its present condition, is corruptible, —subject to decay, and vulnerable to sin,—and to such an extent that the only way to have the body accepted is to do away entirely with the old body, and take the new one, which comes to man at his resurrection.

The condition of man's spirit, from the time of his death to his resurrection, is only a minor fact in this subject, and little needs to be said. According to Gould, man's spirit exists in a dreary, disembodied state,—not only the spirit of the saints, but of the wicked as well. The question now arises, Since the spirits are in a disembodied state, where do these spirits stay while in this condition? As to this question different views are held, and all are of a speculative character.

Some people hold a view that places all spirits into an intermediary place between heaven and earth. Another view is that the spirits of the righteous are put in such a place and condition as to enjoy the joys of the heavenly hosts, while the spirits of the wicked are put in such a position as to feel hell's tortures. After this stage and period are past, both the righteous and the wicked are brought before the judgment bar of God. The end is at hand and it appears as if the work of salvation were completed, but not so.

Paul's doctrine of salvation does not stop with this stage of salvation, for his views are far-reaching. They reach out beyond this earth and take in the universe as a whole. He sees the whole creation groaning and travailing together in pain, waiting till it can be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the liberty of the glory of the children of God (Rom. 8: 21). He looks upon Christ as the Mediator of a salvation truly cosmic, and declares that it is God's purpose "by him to reconcile all things unto himself; by him, I say, whether they be things on earth, or things in heaven." Thus, according to Paul, the salvation in which we share is only a part of the great world process, whose end shall be a universe redeemed (1 Cor. 15: 28).

As to when all these things are to come to pass, Paul says very little. He says he hopes for the coming of Christ and the resurrection within his own lifetime. Be he realizes that God has a certain work to accomplish beforehand, and until this is accomplished, we can but hope for its coming.

The Life That Can Pray.

BY PAUL MOHLER.

JESUS says, "If ye abide in me and my words abide in you, ask whatsoever ye will and it shall be done unto you." (John 15:7, Am. R.). That word, "whatsoever" is a very large word. It is simply without limit. When you think of our Lord's promising that anything and everything in the universe will be done to the disciple who asks for it, it becomes a very startling proposition. How can he do it?

He couldn't make such an offer without condition. Jesus must keep his word, must do what he promises. To make such a promise to any one and every one without condition would be extremely foolish. There would be all kinds of foolish and even evil requests arising to God,—requests which God could not grant without serious results. It would then to refuse them would naturally destroy confidence in the promise, and thus defeat the purpose of our Lord.

Even as it is, so many people have overlooked the condition, have grasped after the promise without-fulfilling the condition, and have been disappointed, that prayer has ceased to be used as a means to do the work of God as he intended it. Many Christian people have little or no confidence in prayer. Perhaps none of us exercise in prayer as we might.

What are the conditions to successful prayer? Let us see: "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you". What is it to abide in Christ? John says: "He that keepeth his commandments abideth in him, and he in him" (1 John 3: 24). And what are his commandments? In the verse preceding he tells us: "This is his connamndment, that we should believe in the name of his Son Jesus Christ and love one another, even as he gave commandment."

How would that qualify a man for successful prayer? Why, if a man loves his brother even as Christ has loved him (John 15: 12), he will not ask God for anything but what is good for his brother, no matter how good it may seem to be for himself. His prayers will ascend to God in behalf of all men, for it is the will of God that all men should be saved and come to a knowledge of the truth. He who has the same love in his heart that Christ has for us, will not offer a single selfish prayer. Even when he prays for his own daily bread, it will be in order that he may be able to serve his brethren whom he loves with the life and strength that God shall give.

I think we can safely say, from the foregoing, that our success in prayer will be to Christ's success as our love for our brethren is to his love for us. He himself has set the standard of love at laying down one's life for the one who is loved,—to lay it down in daily service or in death as need may require.

But there is one more condition: "If my words abide in you." One with a heart full of love for others might go wrong in his asking. He might even ask God for just the thing that would be worst of all. One needs more than love; he needs wisdom to know what is good. The teachings of Jesus, as given by himself or later by his apostles, are true wisdom. With them as a guide one can know what things are good to ask.

But the words need to ABIDE in us,—not simply in the house with us, bound and gagged and lying as a prisoner locked in a glass case, but abiding in the heart, enthroned above the will, woven into the very fibre of our being, so that we think and feel and move as Jesus did, so that we see everything from his viewpoint, stand with him on all questions of life and conduct, devote ourselves to the same life that Jesus did. It is needless to say that the one in whom Christ abides, and who abides in him, will live a life of faith, of holiness, of unselfishness, such as is pleasing to God. He will present his body a living sacrifice to God, in order to be transformed by the renewing of his mind, so as to demonstrate to the world the good and acceptable and perfect will of God. He will make use of every rite and ceremony given by the Lord to help one out of sin and nearer to God and to his brethren. He will walk by the Spirit and not after the lusts of the flesh.

Finally, the one who abides in Christ and in whom the word of Christ abides, will pray for much. He will do all he can do to save his brethren, even all the sons of men, but that will not satisfy him. His desire to see them saved is so great that he will come again and yet again unto the Throne of Grace, beseeching God in behalf of his brother in need. If you don't have time to pray, rest assured you are lacking in something else; you are lacking in the very essentials of prayer, the large love and the large faith that those must have really to pray at all. If you abide in Christ and the words of Christ abide in you, the Spirit you are, the more time you will spend in prayer, for you will find that prayer is God's appointed way for men to secure his power, to do the work you wish to do. You will know that God is mightier than you, and more willing than you can ever be to save the world from all sin. May he teach us to pray!

DEATH OF ELD. J. S. FLORY.

Eld. J. S. Flory was born in Rockingham County, Va., March 28, 1836, died in Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 3, 1911, aged 75 years, 4 months and 5 days. He united with the Church of the Brethren at the age of twenty-two, was elected to the ministry a year later, and ordained to the eldership at the age of thirty-three.

He was united in marriage to Elizabeth Sanger at the age of twenty-one, who preceded him to the spirit world. To this union were born four sons and six daughters. He was united in his second marriage to Sister Anna M. Weaver, of Pasadena, Cal., April 7, 1906, who was a faithful companion to him till the day of his death.

From the time of his second marriage his home was in Pasadena, Cal., until a short time before his departure, when his illness demanded his removal to the hospital in Los Angeles, where he died.

At his request, the funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by Eld. W. E. Trostle and S. G. Lehmer, in the Cemetery Chapel in Inglewood, where his body was laid to rest beside that of his companion. He selected 2 Cor. 5: 4 as a text to be used on this occasion, and wrote the following to be read at his funeral: "Death is a prelude to a life of victory; therefore it is a thing worthy of his eternal. The memorial rite of friends should be a season of rejoicing, and so may this be, is the expressed desire of my soul. Dear companion, dear children, dear grandchildren, dear great-grandchildren, dear brethren and sisters and friends and fellow associates, in the mortal life, I lived that has now come to an end,—be of good cheer, and remember that 'precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.' Therefore, rejoice and be glad."

Bro. Flory was a man of more than ordinary ability, and was well respected in the Brotherhood. His wife and nine children survive him.

MOUNT MORRIS COLLEGE.

Almost Ready for Another Year.

The many friends and patrons of Mount Morris College have been informed that the coming school-year will open on Sept. 12, a conservative estimate, based upon the number of rooms already engaged, is that the attendance will surpass that of any previous year.

In reality, a school-year opens long before the catalogued date, for each successive year of a prosperous institution, and its new facilities for instruction and multiplied opportunities for rapid acquisition of knowledge; is the culmination of an active past. Teachers are hired months in advance; courses of study are outlined, improvements planned,—in fact, everything possible is completed before the students arrive.

In extent of preparation, the vacation which is now nearing a close has surpassed any previous one. While the most expensive outlay has been for the new furnishings for Ladies' Hall, yet many other facilities have either improved or added. Some rooms have received new linoleum; new blackboards have been placed on the walls of the mathematics room, and new lockers increase the efficiency of the gymnasium.

A course in manual training is arranged for, as well as the necessary tools and workbenches. The increase in equipment in the agricultural branches, which is being developed by the liberal gifts, promises to represent an investment well up in the hundreds of dollars.

The work of soliciting and advertising has been carried on systematically ever since the close of the school-year in June. The merits of each department have been exploited in attractively printed circulars which have been given a wide circulation. This campaign is resulting in a bright outlook for a marked increase in enrollment.

President Miller reports a pleasant vacation abroad. We who know him, understand that by means that he is working hard-learning, increasing his usefulness, and broadening his experience. Last year, Eld. D. L. Miller kindly presented Mount Morris College with an excellent stereoptican which, in the past, served him so well when he lectured in our churches from the Atlantic to the Pacific; so,the equipment is already at hand for many illustrated talks from Pres. J. E. Miller.

THE ROUND TABLE

Family Congeniality.

BY C. D. HYLTON.

THERE are many little, easy, simple things that might be done to make our family circles more pleasant,—things that would bring pleasant memories in old age.

Children grow up in the family together, often to be separated from each other in later years. Through the cares and added responsibilities of life they may, to some extent, neglect each other. But as age begins to cause whitened locks and furrowed faces, early memories return. How refreshing if they bring pleasant things!

We have all been children, and some of us have children. We have all had grandparents, and now some of us are grandparents. We then looked forward to the pleasures of this life; we now look back toward them, largely.

If, after our years of experience, we could go back into childhood, carrying with us the experience, how different we might act under some conditions, to make each other and our parents happy!

In my father's home were born six sons and three daughters. Of the boys one died in infancy, and one of the girls died after maturity and motherhood. Of the seven living at this time the oldest is sixty-six years and the youngest forty-seven years of age. Five of us are grandparents. We have been separated for a long time, some not having met for thirty years.

Less than one year ago we decided to start a family circle letter. By this means our minds are called to each other, and the family ties are growing stronger. Thus we love each other better than we did before.

A sad mistake that we made was in not starting this letter years ago, when our parents were living to enjoy it. Besides other pleasant results this letter had the effect to bring the five brothers in this family together July 10, 1911, at Bloom, Kansas, where a few days were spent so very pleasantly as not soon to be forgotten.

I would recommend the family circle letter to all families who are separated, and it should be started while parents are living to enjoy it. In this way the wayward boy, if there should be one, may be won back to the family and to his God.

Elder Allen Ives.

BY M. M. ESHELMAN.

SOMETIME in 1872 or 1873 a minister read Bro. James L. Switzer's call in the Christian Family Companion, that his latch-string was out at White Rock, Kans., and readily responded. This minister settled at the then new village of Burr Oak, Jewell County, Kansas, and as he had a very kind, loving and sympathetic heart, he was soon deeply engaged in mission work over the prairies of Kansas and Nebraska. With him and buggy he went hundreds of miles to comfort the members and bring the glad tidings of Jesus Christ to sinners. A great deal of his time was thus given to God and to building up churches in "the wilds of the West." His home was the shelter and his table the food for hundreds of people. His was a veritable "free hotel." During love feasts his house and barn or shed, was the resting place of scores of people.

He, with the rest of the people of that section, had to suffer losses through droughts and grasshoppers and chinch bugs. And "the defrauder" also got into his holdings. Later in life he moved to the State of Washington and there, over mountains and through forests, he pioneered and gave himself wholly to the work of winning souls for Christ. He never made a "noise" about it. He did not come home, after weeks of absence, with his pocketbook well filled, to meet expenses. With him it was an output all the while. His closing days were spent with his daughter in Centralia, Wash. He had a large heart of sympathy, a forbearing spirit, and a suffering soul. With him, it seemed to me, it was all the time "crucified with Christ." I loved him because he was meek, and ever ready to help the downcast and suffering. He was a noble character. His life was full of good deeds. Such was Eld. Allen Ives, who passed over July 17, 1911, aged eighty-three years Feb. 12, last. He was a real missionary, leaning wholly upon God.

God Revealed in Nature.

BY J. F. BURTON.

WHEN David beheld the solar system with its many orbs, he was made to say, "The heavens declare the glory of God and the firmament showeth his handiwork." He regarded nature as a wonderful emanation of God, for it demonstrates his glory and manifests his workmanship.

If one will only learn to read the book of nature, it will not be difficult to believe in the existence of an eternal Being. So pronounced is Divine Power and Wisdom in the works of creation, and so superior it is to the inventions of man, one must admit that behind the things created is God the Creator.

An untutored Arab was once asked how he knew there was a God. "Just as I know," he said, pointing to a footprint in the sand, "whether it was a man or a camel that passed my tent." Nature is full of God's glory.

Let your heart swell with wonder and joy as you lift your eyes, and behold the wonderful display of nature. Look around you at the great world of vegetable and animal life! Look above at the clouds, sun, moon, stars and comets! Look beneath at the rich deposits of gold, silver and coal, and remember that it is the voice of nature speaking to you of the wonderful God. His power is all around us. "He is not far from every one of us."

Be Kind to Your Animals.

BY EDGAR M. HOFFER.

WE read in Prov. 12: 10, "A righteous man regardeth the life of his beast." We see, many times, that the brute creation is treated very cruel indeed. We should be kind to our domestic animals. If they are treated well, they are very faithful, and they have often been life savers. Be kind to your horses, and merciful to them at all times. Think of faithful "Nell," the horse owned by Eld. John Kline, of Virginia. For years she carried her master over hill and dale, and she was present when he was killed.

It is said that a certain elder's horse, becoming restless while hitched, broke loose, ran off with a sleigh, and ran to the meetinghouse, several miles away, where he was caught. He knew where the church was. Indeed, he did!

Have patience with your animals! It is distressing to see men strike their animals and use profane language to emphasize their feelings. A certain elder said, "If the cat runs out of the house when you come in, there is something wrong." Let love prevail! Teach your children that it is wrong to rob birds' nests and to shoot birds! The Lord created the animals, and man should by no means be cruel to the beasts that are so valuable to him.

The Best Gift.

BY IDA M. HELM.

"If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children; how much more shall your Heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him" (Luke 11: 13)?

OF our own accord we can not overcome the wicked one and make room in our hearts for the Holy Spirit. All our attempts in our own strength at renovating the inner life are in vain. We must yield ourselves to the cleansing power of the Spirit, and under the Divine Influence the fully surrendered heart will be prepared for the indwelling of the Holy Spirit.

One filling of the Spirit is not enough. There must be refilling continually. The apostles and disciples of old were continually seeking refilling. Through the Word, the Holy Spirit effects its workings in the hearts of those who received it, and we should devoutly study the Word of God every day.

A Live Pocketbook.

BY J. H. MILLER.

"Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal" (Matt. 6: 19, 20).

JESUS was willing to pay tribute. He told Peter, the cashier, to go to a "swimming bank," to use a key fashioned like a fish hook (Matt. 17: 27); and draw out the first fish. The pocketbook was safe and well secured by a Banker from heaven. There may have been thousands of fish in the sea, but only one that had the beautiful silver coin.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS' TOPIC

The "Problem" With Your Christian Workers' Society.

Prov. 8: 17, 32-36.

For Sunday Evening, September 3, 1911.

I. Five Questions.—(1) Is your membership smaller than it should be (Luke 12: 32)? (2) Is it hard to get all the young people to take part? (3) Are you afflicted with long speeches? (4) Are you conscious of "a lack of spirituality" in some of your members? (5) Are you longing for new members to help "the faithful few" (Gal. 6: 9)?

II. Which of the Above Questions Touch Weaknesses in Your Society?—I wish your society were in such a condition that you might honestly answer "No" to every one of these questions. That would be ideal. You may not reach it. It is not too much to try for.

III. Something Wrong with the Society Means Something Lacking in Individual Members.

IV. Supply the Lack in Those Members and You Have Remedied the Society's Weakness.

V. Gengaly Speaking, Those Young People Who Will Not Do Things Are (1) Persons who lack interest in Christian work. (2) Persons who have interest, but lack training in how to work.

Note.—(1) Interest the uninterested, and help those who need to learn how, and your problem is solved. (2) Arouse interest in Christian work, and suggest the best ways to do the work, is the way to solve the problem. (3) The great thing about any church is its atmosphere. The hum of the world's industry may be heard in a church when some other things ought to be heard. Read the write-up and get others to read it.

PRAYER MEETING

Our Stewardship.

1 Peter 4: 7-11.

For Week Beginning September 3, 1911.

1. Diversity of Gifts.—The kingdom of God is so diverse in its operations that there is room therein for every entrusted talent. It is not confined to any one given line. It is not preaching the Gospel alone, not healing the sick alone, not the right training of children merely, not the setting of a godly example only, nor is it the ministrations to the poor and needy alone. It is all of these and a thousand times more. Not one of us fails to have a special aptitude for some one thing, and whatever that one thing is, that is our trust, and we are the stewards of it to use it in such a way that God's glory may be advanced (1 Cor. 10: 31; Rom. 12: 6-8).

2. Unfaithful Stewardship Means Lack of Power.—It is the failure on the part of God's stewards to exercise their stewardship in the field where he has placed them that accounts for the lack of power in the church membership of today. We have too many dreamers: too many builders of castles in the air; too many visionaries. The glamour of some new movement has drawn men from the cultivation of the field where God has put them, and the soil is unturned, the grain is unsown, the harvests are unreaped, and the hungering go unfed. The entrusted talent must work in the entrusted field (1 Cor. 12: 4-11; 31).

3. We Should Study Our Trust.—Find out what it is and do it with your might. If it is the home field, be content to labor there. If it is the foreign field, go to it in all your strength. If it is a money trust that has been confided to you, then it is a most responsible one, in the multiplicity of ways in which it can be employed for God's glory. To spend thousands on one's self where a few hundred would be ample, is a misuse of our stewardship. The trust should always be administered in accord with the purpose of the Giver of the trust, so that we may stand approved in the end (1 Cor. 3: 9-17).

HOME AND FAMILY

Lines on the Death of Mrs. Dr. Geiser.

BY F. VON WACHTER.

A sadness reigns within your home,—
A loneliness most drear.
A dear, familiar face you miss,
Which calls forth mem'ry's tear.

A voice is hushed that used to speak
To you in love's low tone.
Dear hands are folded out of sight,
Which oft have clasped your own.

Turn where you will, within your home,
Fond mem'ries oft will rise
Of her whose form now rests in death,
Her spirit in the skies.

Each tone and look comes thronging back,
Although her spirit's fled.
You hold them now a link, between
The living and the dead.

Fond memories of the past to you
The present now they seem.
They linger in your heart today
Just like a pleasant dream.

Although her form is laid to rest,
In dreamless, sweet repose,
Her mem'ry to your heart will cling
Like perfume to the rose.

'Tis hard to part from those we love,
Who have life's journey run;
And harder still to teach our hearts
To say, "Thy will be done."

The sad bereavement you endure
May prove a great renown,
Each tear you shed may prove a gem
To deck a jeweled crown.

We should not question God's design,
While passing 'neath the rod.
We know 'tis true what he has said,
"Be still; I am thy God."

His chastening hand may send the blow;
The other, heal the wound.
Hark, hear the soothing message now,
"There's balm in Gilead found."

That cleansing balm will fit our souls,
When we from earth retire
To hear the words from lips Divine,
"It is enough; come higher."

'Tis sweet to know there is a land
Where severed ties may meet,—
Where broken links, in friendship's chain,
May all be made complete.

We somethnes sigh for that bright land,
Where loved ones fondly wait
To clasp our hands with welcome home,
When passing through the gate.

Duties Under Difficulties.

BY LOVENA S. ANDES.

THE word "duty" implies that we are bound by moral obligation either to do, or to refrain from doing, certain things. It embraces the terms, "respect," "reverence" or "regard" for any one, to do him or her a service. Children should obey their parents, church members should reverence their spiritual advisers, and nations should respect their governments, in so far as it is consistent with the Divine Law.

All human beings are limited to the path of duty. It is God's plan; hence it is unwise for any one to try to evade responsibility. There is no royal road to heaven aside from this. The apostle Paul said: "As we have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith" (Gal. 6: 10). We are under moral obligation to do this, even though we should meet with obstacles to hinder our efforts, for we can naturally expect nothing else here below.

The class of people that elicit my greatest interest and sympathy, and to whom I feel most attached, are the humble, the timid and oppressed, and those who are poor,—financially, mentally or spiritually. How often it has been noticed that people of culture, talent and ability turn their backs (figuratively speaking) upon those who are in less fortunate circumstances than they, and whose lives they might have helped to brighten and cheer! The main reason for this lack of courtesy is, that people want to be popular. They want to engage in things by which they get honor of men. They esteem such praise more than they do the glory of God. Some of them seem to manifest a great interest in the heathen in foreign lands, by giving of their substance for that work, but they pay little attention to those who are starving spiritually at their own door at home.

While it is a pleasure to associate with people of culture and refinement, it is no disgrace to mingle with the lowly ones of earth, and bestow our love and kindness upon them. They greatly prize the recognition of those who are enjoying a more superior station in life, and whose influence is ennobling. The Savior said: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me" (Matt. 25: 40).

Our religious duties would not be so difficult, were it not for the opposition which sometimes confronts us in trying to execute God's will. Satan's forces are always at work, trying to retard the progress of God's kingdom. The spiritual enemy may transform himself into an angel of light, and present flattering inducements to cause truly devoted Christians to compromise with the gilded attractions of sin. "Spiritual wickedness in high places," may be suggested as an advantage toward enlarging the borders of Zion. By yielding to these enchanting enticements the "very elect" may be deceived.

Then there are treacherous persons, who may pretend to be our friends, when, in reality, they are wicked and destructive at heart,—"despisers of those that are good," and destroyers of the work of grace in men's hearts. The reputation of many an honest person has been undermined, or his character ruined, by vicious people who take delight in fiendish calumniations, because they are evil-minded. Thus the influence of those who are earnest and sincere in their efforts is absolutely nullified. That kind of environment certainly will produce evil results, and prevent effectual spiritual progress. At such times the words of our Savior, "Be ye therefore wise as serpents, and harmless as doves," are quite applicable.

Persons who are wide-awake to their Christian duties will diligently watch the entangling forces of evil in their operations, and guard against every invasion. In order to be successful in the performance of their duties, they must be thoughtful, study human nature with its needs, and the conditions under which people are living. To perform duties faithfully under difficulties may be a trying situation, but it may also be a means of quickening the perceptive faculties and bringing out nobler and finer qualities in our nature. It is a painful operation, but it brings satisfaction in the end.

It is possible for any one to be actively engaged in his allotted duties, even under unfavorable circumstances, and yet we find that some people amount to but very little, because they are not willing to do their best in coping with the difficult problems of life. They may have health and wealth, time and talent, education and influence, but they want to take life easy. They are not much concerned about those whose lot in life is not so pleasant and fortunate as theirs; hence the cause of Christ must suffer by their neglect.

We should always bear in mind our highest duty. We should make a practical application of the words of Solomon: "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man" (Eccles. 12: 13).

"She Hath Done What She Could."

BY ETHEL STROHM.

How sweet those words of approval must have sounded to Mary, coming, as they did, from the lips of the Savior! She had been sitting at his feet, enjoying sweet fellowship with him, and now, it seems, she understood, even more clearly than did his disciples, his great love for humanity, and how he was soon to become a "ransom for many."

But why these words of Jesus? What act of Mary was it that brought forth those words of approval? Was it the "precious ointment" which Mary had lavished upon him, or was it her motive,—of such high esteem and pure love, that prompted him to approve of the act as he did? Jesus knew the emotions of her heart. He still looks at the heart rather than the outward appearance.

We, as sisters, no doubt, have desires and longings to do more for Jesus, who has done so much for us. Perhaps we long to answer the urgent call for helpers in the far-away, heathen lands. Perhaps we would spend our time and talent among the needy ones in our own cities, cheering the sick and discouraged, and leading the wayward ones to Christ. There are so many who are living lives of sin that it seems we can do but little.

Those of us who are wives or mothers long to do something to show our love for Christ. As we are busy about our household duties we think of those who are stumbling along life's pathway without Jesus as a Guide, and we long to help them. How can we do it? Duties at home demand our time. Performing those duties faithfully we are surely doing his will.

God has entrusted little ones to our care. What a privilege to guide them in his steps! How careful we should be to show them the Christ-life at all times! Mothers, what an influence we are wielding! So much lies in our power! We may long to "be missionaries," but if we patiently lead the footsteps of those little God-given ones aright, we may have the joy of seeing some of them spend their lives in God's service. It may not be feasible for us to leave our home and family, but if we are diligent in teaching our children of Jesus, what a blessing may be ours!

Christ said of Mary, "She hath done what she could." Are we doing what we can? Are we cheerful and kind to all those of our home circle? There are so many "little things" we can do at home to prove ourselves faithful.

Is there not some lonely, aged couple living within your reach whom you could cheer? Perhaps a poor widow is needing a helping hand. Even a smile can cheer a lonely heart. There are so many "cups of cold water" to be given, if we would only be looking for the opportunities. Christ does not ask us to do the great things. If we do faithfully the duties that lie nearest, he can say of us as he did of Mary, "She hath done what she could."

R. D. 1, Kenedy, Texas.

If You Love, Follow.

GASTON DE FOIX, a brave young general of the sixteenth century, faced a superior enemy with his small but valiant army. Defeat seemed inevitable. His knights begged him not to go into battle. Suddenly Gaston sprang forward, crying:

"Let him who loves me follow me."

The appeal to love aroused every sense of loyalty, and was not made in vain. Knights and soldiers rushed to arms, under the spell of that watchword.

Shall we do less for Jesus, the great Captain of our salvation? His appeal rings in our ears. "Let him who loves me follow me." Shall we refuse to pledge fidelity to him, when that is the very test of true discipleship? Shall we shrink from promising everything to Christ, when we know that the pledge, the covenant, the promise, the vow, are so many strands binding us closer to God?—Christian Endeavor World.

No poetry would ever have been written, had God ordained that the birds should keep still and let the frogs make all the music. If the devil can only fill the pews with croakers, he don't care who occupies the pulpit. No matter what anybody may say or think, the Lord is in favor of anything that will help anybody to get nearer to him.

SISTERS' AID SOCIETIES

PLEASANT VALLEY, IND.—Our Aid Society is still at work, though no report of late has been given. We aim to meet twice each month and sew, quilt, etc.; also send a box of clothing to the St. Joseph Mission. We will contribute what money we have on hand for the furnishing of our new church in town, where we hope to have a well-finished Aid Society room in the basement. At present we have eighteen members enrolled, but should have many more.—Orpha Mishler, Sec., Middlebury, Ind., Aug. 3.

This week the standing announcements will be found on page 533.

Bro. Galen B. Royer was with the Brethren at Plymouth, Ind., over last Sunday.

A church has just been organized at Greensburg, Pa., with Bro. Mahlon J. Brougher as pastor.

The Brethren in Middle Iowa will convene in District Meeting in the Prairie City church, Sept. 27.

We are announcing the District Meeting of Middle Missouri for Oct. 5, to be held in the Spring Branch church.

Sept. 1 is the date announced for the District Meeting of Tennessee, to be held in the Knob Creek church.

Bro. M. M. Sherrick, Writing Clerk of our late District Meeting, attended the District Meeting of Michigan last week.

A revival meeting at Bradley, Va., conducted by Bro. W. K. Conner closed with sixteen accessions, mostly young people.

A series of meetings at Beaver Dam, Md., conducted by Bro. Levi S. Mohler, closed Aug. 13, with six accessions to the church.

Bro. A. C. Young, of Stockport, Ind., spent a few days at Elgin on his way to Carrington, N. Dak., where he is to remain a month.

Mount Morris College opens Sept. 5, with indications that the attendance for the fall term will surpass that of the previous year.

Friday, Oct. 6, is the date selected for the District Meeting of Northwestern Kansas and Northeastern Colorado, to be held in the Belleville church, Kans.

The District Meeting of Southern California and Arizona will be held at Pomona, Oct. 26. The Ministerial Meeting is announced for the day before.

The little band of members at Wayne, Miss., have a meetinghouse in contemplation, and a committee on location has been appointed. When completed, this will be our first house in the State. Wayne is across the State line, a short distance from Fruitdale, Ala.

We are asked to announce that Bro. J. E. Jarboe, of Red Cloud, Nebr., is booked for a series of meetings at the White Rock church, Jewell Co., Kans., and also for one in the Kearney congregation, his home State. We are not informed regarding the dates of these meetings.

Some of the Catholic priests are schemers for money. Recently one of them visited a very sick man in South America, heard his confession, assured the dying man of the forgiveness of his sins, then charged him three thousand dollars. How unlike Jesus who forgave sins while he was upon the earth!

Bro. J. H. Burton, of Mansfield, Ill., has arranged to take charge of the pastoral work at Maxwell, Iowa, and will enter upon his duties the first of November.

The late District Meeting of Idaho postponed the election of her member on the Standing Committee until the next District Meeting, to be held in the spring of 1912.

Bro. John E. Metzger, our Field Agent, writing from Salem, Va., says that he is now at work in that part of the East, and will not return to his home at Rossville, Ind., until October.

The splendid revival at the Zion house, Cando congregation, N. Dak., by Bro. Paul Mohler, closed Aug. 13, with twenty-four baptized and four reclaimed. The meetings continued thirty days.

Twenty-nine gospel addresses were recently delivered in the Snyder Lake church, Iowa, by Bro. Moses Deardorff. Eleven were induced to put on Christ in baptism, while three returned to the fold.

After the close of his discussion Bro. B. E. Kesler went to Flora, Ind., to remain over last Lord's Day. We understand that he will visit a few points in the State before returning to his home at River Bend, Colo.

The Elders' Meeting for the District of Oklahoma, Panhandle of Texas and Pecos Valley of New Mexico will be held at the Brethren church in Thomas, Okla., Aug. 29, at 2 P. M. So writes Bro. J. Appleman.

The District Meeting of Northern Iowa, Minnesota and South Dakota is to be held in the Lewiston church, near Lewiston, Minn. The date announced for the meeting is Oct. 4. The elders of the District will meet Oct. 3, at 10 A. M.

Those desiring to have articles in the Brethren Almanac for 1912 should let us have their manuscript not later than Oct. 1. Corrections for the ministerial list, and other departments, ought to reach us not later than the middle of October.

During the recent Sunday-school Meeting in Southern Ohio the delegates, representing fifty-two out of fifty-six schools in the District, decided unanimously to support Bro. J. Homer Bright while engaged in the mission work in the Celestial Empire.

By request of Bro. G. Nevinger, Rocky Ford, Colo., we are saying that he has sold his little farm and is now in a position to do some evangelistic work in churches desiring his service. After Feb. 1 he will be able to devote all of his time to this line of work.

July 31 Bro. W. K. Moore, an elder in the Waddams Grove (Illinois) congregation, rounded out the eightieth year of his earthly pilgrimage. During the day about thirty of the members and friends called on him, thus making the occasion interesting as well as pleasant for himself and wife. Fifteen days later he was anointed, with Brethren Jacob Delp and Samuel Studebaker officiating in the services.

The special District Meeting of Southern Pennsylvania, that convened at York, Aug. 16, decided to locate the Annual Conference for 1912 at that place. The Committee of Arrangements is composed of Brethren J. A. Long, C. L. Baker, J. M. Mohler, E. S. Miller and C. G. Trimmer. So, if all goes well, the next Annual Conference will be held at York, Pa., beginning on Tuesday morning, May 28. The Standing Committee will meet on Thursday, May 23.

Bro. P. H. Beery, of Covington, Ohio, was a caller at the Messenger office last week. He speaks very highly of the work of the committee sent to the Covington church by the Annual Meeting, and says that the committee acted not only fairly, but it showed a fine Christian spirit. The investigation was thorough, and the decision rendered was healing in its spiritual effect. Bro. L. T. Holsinger was foreman of the committee and presided over the meeting with dignity, intelligence and courtesy.

Bro. T. A. Robinson has closed his work at Muscatine, Iowa, and, accompanied by his wife and younger son, will spend some time in evangelistic work in the West, going as far as Nampa, Idaho, where his mother lives. He can stop off and hold meetings at different points on the way out.

With a view of having the outgoing missionaries to China present, a Sunday-school and missionary program has been arranged for Sunday, Sept. 17, at Seattle, Wash. The meeting for the afternoon will be in the hands of the missionaries, Bro. B. F. Heckman preaching a missionary sermon at 7:30 P. M.

A correspondent writes us concerning a faithful old minister, who preached the Gospel for forty years, and when he died, nearly a year ago, not a word was said in the Messenger about his departure. In addition to this being one of the sad incidents in life, it shows a neglect for which there should be no excuse. When a faithful minister of the Gospel is called away, something should be said about his life, labors and his going hence. The Messenger always has room for such notices.

The committee appointed by the Annual Meeting, consisting of Brethren L. T. Holsinger, D. R. Keltner, J. H. Longenecker, John Heckman and Jesse Ziegler, spent seven days with the church at Covington, Ohio, and presented a report that was unanimously accepted. For the present the Committee retains the oversight of the church, with one of its members, Bro. John Heckman, serving as elder in charge. A member of the committee writes us that the outlook for the Covington church is good, and that the committee is very much encouraged.

At Mount Zion, Green Mount, Va., there was a scene enacted recently, that reminded the Bible student of the baptism in the cloud and in the sea. During a heavy downpour twelve applicants were led into the stream and immersed. Though the people were drenched, not one left the place on account of the rain. While God let the clouds come down in the form of rain, the baptism went on, and it proved to be the most impressive baptismal scene ever witnessed in that community. It was the closing of a series of meetings that had resulted in eighteen being added to the church by confession and baptism, and one restored to fellowship.

The public discussion in Indiana between Bro. B. E. Kesler and Rev. E. G. Denny proved to be a most interesting affair to the community in which it was held. It was largely attended by the people of the community, and not a few of our ministers from Indiana and the adjoining States were present. Bro. Kesler's defense of our faith and practice seems to have given the best of satisfaction. He went into the discussion well prepared, kept his arguments well in hand, remained cool at all times and under all circumstances, showing due respect for the occasion and the importance of the questions under consideration. It is believed that the exchange of views will help a number of people in their search for the truth. At least it will add to the standing of the Brethren in that part of Indiana, and greatly strengthen the faith of those who are identified with us.

Bro. Steven Berkebile called at the Messenger sanctum last week. His health,—so reports his physician,—is improving in a most satisfactory manner, but they say it will not be safe for him to return to India for at least one year. Furthermore, they require that he abstain wholly from public speaking and so arrange that he can sleep in the open air as much as possible. This settles the matter for Bro. Berkebile, and in a cheerful state of mind he returns to Jewell, Ohio, where he will remain for the time being and engage in poultry raising and some gardening. He proposes to get near the soil, toil with his hands, keep up his studies, remain cheerful, sleep in the open air, make it pleasant for his family and let the good Lord and nature do the rest. His friends can write him all the nice letters they please,—the more the better,—but they will please not ask him to preach.

We suggest that all the newly-organized churches, with their respective pastors, or elders in charge, be announced through the Messenger. Such announcements would prove interesting to our readers.

It is said that a member of the Seventh-Day Adventists in Germany, for refusing to perform military duty on Saturday, has been condemned to terms of imprisonment, aggregating about twenty-five years. By this we may understand that the military element of Germany is still disposed to persecute people because of their religious claims. Not until war is banished from the earth can we look for persecution to cease.

One of our earnest pastors says that his congregation is making a slow but steady progress in spiritual life, and that he sometimes becomes discouraged because the growth is not greater. There is no occasion for a servant of the Lord to become discouraged simply because the spiritual growth in his flock is not as rapid as he should like to see it. His business is to feed the flock over which the Holy Ghost has made him overseer, and if he sees some progress from year to year, he has reasons for praising the Lord and continuing his efforts. As a rule, the church that grows slowly, but surely, does better work than the one that increases by leaps and bounds. We would that all the congregations in the Brotherhood were making a steady progress in spiritual life.

In a few of the congregations, in different parts of the Brotherhood, the sisters have not yet commenced breaking the communion bread and passing the cup. This, however, is not a matter for a local church to decide. That has already been settled by the Annual Meeting. It simply remains for the sisters of any congregation to say whether they wish to enjoy the privilege granted them by the Conference, when she in 1910 said: "We grant the sisters the same privilege of breaking the bread and passing the cup that the brethren enjoy." For a local congregation it is not even a debatable question. If the sisters say they wish to enjoy the privilege granted them, the services at the love feast should be so arranged that their wishes, in this particular, may be complied with.

"The Winning of the West."

Within the memory of many the Great West has been won by the hardy pioneers of civilization. Sixty years ago the Great American Desert, home of the buffalo and wild Indian, was thought to be an unproductive, sandy waste, the Northwest a blizzard-swept desolation, where none but the hardiest could survive the frigid winters, and California a far-away dreamland where gold was mined under semibarbarous conditions. The agricultural and horticultural possibilities of the land of the setting sun were unknown and undreamed of quantities.

Kansas, tenth State in area and first in crop acreage, was then a territory just carved out of the Great Desert; California was seeking admission into the Union, and there was not a single State west of the Missouri River. A mighty empire, with untold possibilities, and wealth beyond all compare, was to be conquered for civilization and Christianity, to make happy homes for millions of prosperous American citizens.

In those days we had a few Brethren in Southern Illinois, thrown in the East as "the Far Western Brethren," and a very small number had settled in the northern part of the State. The writer vividly recalls his first visit to the Far West, made fifty years ago. It was the occasion of more concern and anxious preparation than has since been required for a trip around the world. He who had been to Illinois, and returned to the old Maryland home, was regarded as a much-traveled man, a real prodigy, a curiosity among the children, and a lion, for the time being, in his circle of acquaintances.

Our "Far Western Brethren" were the pioneers of the Church of the Brethren in the West. They were godly, pious men and women, who carried the faith of the fathers with them and their first and chief concern was to organize churches and preach the Word. And while they prospered temporally, they did not forget the God of their fathers. The spirit that actuated them abides in the church until this day. It took thousands of our people into Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, the Dakotas and Canada. It invaded the frozen North, turning it into a veritable bread basket, pouring into the marts of the world, in prosperous years, a golden stream of wheat, approximating a hundred million bushels. Churches were organized, State Districts formed and our Annual Conference taken to the Pacific Coast.

Canada has also felt this spirit. For many years the Mission Board labored in vain to gain a foothold in Eastern Canada. A missionary was located there but success did not crown the effort. Then our Brethren crossed the border line into the West, and very soon churches were organized in British Columbia. It was mission work by immigration of the most successful kind.

In winning the West there were disappointments and failures. Some succeed splendidly where others fail miserably. Failure is not confined to locality and may become a personal habit. The discouraged sought the old home again and, like the spies of old, brought back a bad report of the land. The man who fails blames his environments, his fellows, his adversity, his country. He forgets that he is the chief factor in the problem. Such men are not built to endure hardship and these must be endured by the pioneer. The real empire builders, the organizers of churches. State Districts and Annual Conferences snatch victory from defeat. They go forward with intelligent purpose, backed up by determination not to back down, and abundant success, both temporally and spiritually, is theirs. They are too busy to complain and too much in earnest to go back to the old hive. They succeed wherever success is possible. It is their habit.

Interesting is the study of the settling of the West. It was not accomplished by idealists but by men full of good common sense—practical men who sought to make homes for themselves and better their condition financially and build up the Master's cause. Among us such was the interest aroused that queries came to Conference touching the question. Briefly let us look at some phases of the question, for it involves our publishing interests.

Forty years ago the writer took considerable interest in settling parts of Kansas. Then land went begging at from three to five dollars an acre in the vicinities of such cities as Wichita, Newton, Hutchinson, Sterling and Great Bend. Presently it was found that an acre of this land, properly farmed, produced from thirty to forty bushels of wheat, worth at times a dollar a bushel, and land went upward, by leaps and bounds, three thousand per cent above the purchasing price. At the time some were doubtful about sending our people to these new settlements. A prominent elder, a leader in the church, wrote that we should be sending food out to keep them from starving. Others expressed the same thought. Grasshoppers and drought came and the church did her duty in helping the needy. "I told you so," was heard from the former prophets. But where can you now find one to censure those who took an active part in settling the most prosperous part of our country and in establishing a chain of prosperous churches across the "Sunflower State"? In the movement in the Southwest, our brother, George L. McDonaugh, took a prominent and active part. Here he first became acquainted with the Brethren, and soon after united with the church.

In 1892 none of our people were found in North Dakota. Mr. Max Bass a public benefactor to thousands, ably assisted by Eld. Amos Peters and others, began in that year a movement that took large numbers of the Brethren to the Northwest. No land was offered for sale, but a quarter section could be had for the filing, building a shack, living on and farming the land, and paying a government fee of sixteen dollars. The same land now brings from thirty to sixty dollars an acre. Nineteen years have passed and some twenty strong churches, with one of the most active and aggressive State Districts in the Brotherhood, settles beyond all doubt the wisdom of those who promoted the movement of our people to the Northwest. For some years the District has supported two missionaries in China, and voted this year to support two more. All State Districts doing as well, would locate at least one hundred and fifty missionaries in the foreign field. The church has rapidly increased in numbers; more have been added by baptism in a single year than some of the older Districts have received in double the time, and our Brethren have prospered financially far beyond the expectations of any one.

Space forbids mention of scores of localities in Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, California, and in the three extreme Northwestern States where successful churches have been organized, where the cause of the Master has been advanced and where our members have succeeded as to their earthly possessions. A chain of churches has been established on the Pacific Coast from the border line of Old Mexico, on the South, to British Columbia, on the North. In these various movements lands have been largely advertised and some of this was done in our periodicals. It was felt by those in charge that good would result in the end and results have shown the wisdom of the course pursued.

A few failures are to be noted. It would not be fair to speak only of the successes. One in Eastern Canada has already been referred to. A similar one came to us in the Panhandle of Texas. Bro. John Wise was placed at the head of an effort to establish churches in that territory, but did not succeed. Partial failures have occurred at several places in the West, but abundant success has been the rule, and failure the exception. And where failure has come, it may be attributed to the head and not to the heart. A lack of judgment, a failure to examine all the factors in the problem of successfully colonizing a new place, and a zeal born of a desire to win, has doubtless led to some of the failures, and in a few cases to overdrawing the situation in advertising. This is always to be condemned and always works to the injury of those responsible for it. It never pays to overestimate.

Let us give honor to whom honor is due and let us not be quick to condemn the efforts of those who struggled so heroically to promote immigration to the West. The result of the activities of our own people in this line of work has been the organization of churches all over the Great West, and in the years to come it will be found that they builded better than they knew.

In all the honest callings of life dishonest men are to be found. Even the sacred office of the ministry is not exempt. We always make a mistake when we condemn all because of the dishonesty of the few. This is not righteous judging and is forbidden by the Master himself. There are some living today who severely condemned the movement to the Northwest, who now say, "I am ready to lay my mouth in the dust, for I did not know whereof I spoke." It is my candid opinion, after a careful study of the entire situation, and after visiting frequently the localities settled by our people, that the advertising columns of our periodicals were never put to better use than in calling attention to these new homes for the overcrowded populations of the East. And it should be a matter of rejoicing, on the part of all, that God has so blessed the efforts made that churches have been organized in Winning the West all over that great empire.

A Better Distribution Needed.

In recent years we have heard much about the increased cost of living, and complaints have been many because of the self-denial necessary to make both ends meet. And there has not been lacking an effort on the part of the wage-earner—whatever his position—to have his pay increased. The employer has responded, to some extent, to the demand made upon him, and the pay of the able and trustworthy employé has been increased. But the increase has not been an altogether fair one; that is, the one who most needed an increase in his pay has received less than the man already well provided for.

This is not saying that any worker receives too much. The point is that the division of the money to be paid for wages is not a just one. Of course there is a great difference in the ability of men and in their value to a business; but, even so, the man who has most ability ought not to seek all the good things for himself and his family, without regard for his less fortunate companion. The latter has a right to life and at least some of its comforts. He and his family, though, are the ones who must practice economy; the good things to be had for money go to a man with a larger pay check.

Men engage in business in order to make money; and it is right that they should. But when they seek only that they go wrong. We have known men whose business paid them very large dividends, besides liberal salaries. And yet they were unwilling to make a fair division of the profits. They sought to increase their own income and at the same time to keep down the income of their men. The man who can best succeed in these things becomes a great financier. His family must have so many diamonds, so much silk and lace, so many automobiles—so much luxury—that the poor man gets but little. The successful financier too often has won his success through "grinding the faces of the poor."

True, the average man always will be poor; always will have to depend on others for employment. He does not know how to manage things. He is too numerous to go to his employer and demand better pay. There are hundreds and thousands of him waiting for a chance to earn a living; and if one kicks out, another is there ready to take his place. He is to a large extent helpless.

There are the two sides—the able, successful man, and the incompetent failure. What is to be their relation to each other? How far may the one go in oppressing the other?

That depends. He has gone and is going too far. But the man with capital is coming to see things in a different light. He recognizes the fact that he has not done his whole duty when he has made the business which he manages a success. The human element enters in. Every man has his rights, no matter whether or not he can enforce them—they are inalienable. And the employer who is worthy the name of Christian does not seek the best of everything for himself: he wants the other man to live and enjoy also.

In time there must come a more just distribution of the profits from business. And when that time does come there will not be complaint because of the high cost of living. In the world there is plenty to feed, clothe and house the people in comfort. But it is not rightly distributed. That is the reason why we have palaces on the one hand and tenements on the other: one man riding in his expensive automobile and the other plodding his weary way afoot; abundance of the best in the palace and a scarcity of the poorest in the tenement. This condition is wrong, fundamentally and eternally; and it is time for men professing godliness to put forth their best efforts to correct this wrong condition. Only by so doing can they free themselves from the burden resting upon them.

Replacing Inefficient Elders.

An earnest evangelist, who is very careful in his work among the churches, conservative in his views, and a man of wide experience, writes us about a large congregation where the conditions are serious. The members, as a rule, are in good circumstances, have a splendid influence in the community and would be only too glad to engage in aggressive church work, but the elder in charge is too old and feeble to direct active measures. He is even too old to preach, or to attend church regularly.

He insists on remaining in charge as long as he lives, and for fear of hurting his feelings, or making a disturbance, the wide-awake members, who see the needs of the church, are simply waiting for the aged shepherd to die. Should he live several years, and still remain in charge, the once flourishing congregation is almost sure to go to pieces. A condition of this sort is unfortunate; it is alarming, and should give occasion for immediate action. And what we are here saying may, in a large measure, apply to a score of churches.

No congregation should be permitted to suffer just because of one man. If an elder, on account of age, the failing of his mind, or ill health, becomes incapacitated for duty, he should in a kind way be relieved of his charge, so that a strong, vigorous housekeeper may be secured to take his place. This should be done with as little delay as possible. If the officials know that the sentiment of the membership is with them, let them come together, talk the matter over, have the situation fully explained to the elder, and suggest that he send in his resignation. If he does this, the way is open to secure the help needed. If he declines to act, the adjoining elders should be invited to meet with the church, and help to adjust matters as may seem best for the good of the congregation, or the case, for advice and help, may be referred to the elders assembled at District Meeting.

Furthermore, it is the duty of the elders in each State District to keep a careful watch over any congregation that is being neglected on account of a weakness in the eldership. This is clearly implied in Sec. 2, of Art. 1, Minutes of 1894. We quote:

"When in any way a majority of the elders at District Meeting have become fully satisfied that the official labors of any officer in the District are not to edification, but rather a hindrance than a help to the church, they shall appoint a committee of elders to proceed the same as above stated."

This certainly authorizes the elders at District Meeting to take the initiative in cases like the one referred to, and they ought not to be too timid about it. The success of a congregation depends largely upon the faithfulness and efficiency of the eldership, and when a church begins to suffer on account of a weakness along this line, elders should act without unnecessary delay, and the elders all over the Brotherhood must excuse us for saying that, in our judgment, it is their duty to act.

There is one thing of which we are quite sure: If any of the elders had a large flock of sheep, and it should become evident that the flock was suffering for the want of proper care upon the part of the shepherd in charge, they would give the matter immediate attention, and if they found that the shepherd was inefficient, they would not fail in making such changes as wisdom might dictate. Now it seems to us that the elders of each State District ought to be as much concerned about their Master's flock as they are about their own. We further believe that if this policy be carried out as it should be, there will be fewer neglected congregations in the Brotherhood.

Divided Into Classes.

We are told of a State District where the young ministers, and sometimes the young elders, at District Meetings, are held off. The older elders get together, canvass the situation, lay their plans, and all work together in carrying their points. As a result the elders and ministers are divided into classes, and in the open conference it is often one class against the other. For the more devout members this condition is very humiliating, and they often feel ashamed of it. There should be no occasion for divisions or classes of this sort. The young ministers should not be separated from the older ones, nor should the older ones, in any manner, attempt to shove the young ministers and younger elders aside. All the elders, young and old, should, without partiality, confer and work together. And while the young should always have due regard for the older ones in office, the latter ought never attempt to take advantage of the former. Let them confide in one another, trust one another, and do what they can to encourage and assist each other in the work and duties entrusted to them. This principle should also apply to those not in the eldership. They are all ambassadors of Christ, and, as much as possible, deserve to be treated alike. Aside from the respect the young should have for the older ones, and the consideration due the younger by those older, there should be no difference between the older ministers and those having fewer years to their credit. The more they are together, the better it should be for all of them, and the more they can confer with each other, the stronger will become the ties of love and Christian fellowship that should keep them united in their work.

The Knights of Columbus.

A CORRESPONDENT writes us concerning the Knights of Columbus, a Catholic fraternal order, saying that the society contains 2,500,000 members, who are well armed with modern weapons, and are drilled in secret by officers, who are training the men for military duty in the interest of the Catholic church. He fears that the Knights of Columbus may some day attempt to subdue the Protestants of America, and thus bring about a reign of religious persecution. For the information of some of our readers we had the matter looked into carefully, and are now prepared to say, that the order in question was organized in New Haven, Conn., March 29, 1882, and was properly incorporated. Its objects are to promote social and intellectual intercourse among its members, and to render some pecuniary assistance. Men of the Catholic church only can become members, and there is a death benefit varying from $1,000 to $3,000. The order now numbers about 350,000, and the members are not equipped with arms, and drilled for military purposes. They may be provided with arms for parade occasions, but they are certainly not trained for warfare. We are not saying this in justification of such orders, but merely to allay the fears of a few timid people, who have been led to believe that the Catholics are planning to get control of the government and put an end to Protestantism. True enough, a number of influential Catholics are opposed to our public school system, and would be only too glad to see Protestantism crushed in the United States, but that element is not strong enough to render the situation alarming.

Acted Like a Heathen.

THE following, taken from the Editorial Department of the Religious Telescope, contains its own moral:

The growing tendency in our day is for ministers not to betray their calling by their dress or manner. The fashion is to appear as much like other men as possible, which may or may not be a wise way of doing. We never did admire the ministerial garb, but we may have gone too far the other way. At any rate, so far as character and deportment are concerned, the servant of Jesus Christ, the minister of mercy to the children of men, should not be mistaken for the man of the street. In all that goes to make up a devout and spiritual personality, the minister of Jesus should be an open letter, read and known of all with whom he comes in contact. A minister once put up at a hotel where the custom was to charge the clergy only half rates. In the morning the proprietor charged him full price, against which the guest protested, upon the ground that he was a minister of the Gospel. "What, you a minister?" said the tavern keeper. "I never would have suspected it. You did not ask a blessing at the table, and you did not say your prayers at night, for I watched you till you got in bed. You ate and slept like a heathen, and I guess you'd better pay like a heathen."

The Bible in the Public Schools.

WITH a view of having the privilege of Bible reading and the singing of sacred songs restored to the public schools of Illinois, the Chicago Tribune and other leading journals are publishing the following:

The elders of the Church of the Brethren of the District of Northern Illinois and Wisconsin are discussing the recent decision of the Illinois Supreme Court, barring the reading of the Bible and the singing of Christian songs from the public schools of the State. The elders report it as their unanimous sentiment that the Bible and Christian songs should not be barred from the public schools.

This body consists of more than sixty members, ministers of the Gospel, for the most part actively engaged in church and pastoral work. They have prepared a resolution in which they "earnestly appeal to the Christian citizens of this State to join in a petition to the State Legislature for a law restoring to us our former privilege to read the Bible and to sing Christian songs in the public schools."

The moderator of the body of elders is David D. Culler, Ph. D., of Mount Morris College. The secretary is James M. Moore, of the Bethany Bible School, of Chicago.

FIRST CHURCH OF THE BRETHREN, SOUTH BEND, IND.

For the past two weeks we have had Brethren Moy Wing and Moy Way, of Chicago, with us, assisting in our Chinese Mission here. During their stay they visited several of the neighboring churches and last evening the Christian Workers' hour was turned over to them. The devotion and consecration manifested by these brethren, while here, was an incentive to American Christians, as well as an evidence of the joy of Christian service to the people of their own race.

The eagerness with which the Chinese people in our city receive instruction, has given us great joy, while we wait for the fullness of joy which we shall experience in their conversion. They regret that they did not know of our people two years sooner, "for then," they say, "we might be working for Jesus now."

Perhaps we, as Christians, need to learn no lesson more thoroughly than that the field is already white unto harvest, and that souls in our very midst are longing for the light that we might give them.

BETHEL CHURCH, ILLINOIS.

Another year of service for the Lord has gone. We notice, by the expressions of the members and their general Christian deportment, that they are finding joy in their daily Christian service.

Our Sunday-school is growing in interest, in the various classes, though the attendance has not increased very much. The Christian Workers are doing good work by helping to support two medical missionaries, preparing for foreign mission work.

During the winter Bro. C. W. Guthrie gave us six lectures on his trip around the world. The house was crowded each evening. During June Bro. R. H. Nicodemus held a two weeks' series of meetings. Each sermon was a message prompted by the Spirit. Two were baptized.

On Sunday, Aug. 27, we expect to have with us Dr. Chas. A. Blanchard, of Wheaton College, Ill., who will occupy the time at 11 A. M. and 8 P. M. in giving us two lectures—one on "The Lodge Against the Home"; the other, "The Lodge Against the Church." We should be glad to have others with us, to enjoy these lectures.

L. C. Snavely.

78 Van Buren Ave., Naperville, Ill., Aug. 7.

BETHANY, WEST VIRGINIA.

We have just returned from Pleasant Valley, where we found a very interesting Sunday-school. Bro. M. C. Cxigans, the minister at that place, is unable to keep up their appointments, but they have a good working Sunday-school.

One dear sister, from Anderson, where we have been keeping up a mission point, came into our midst the 5th inst., and was received into the church by the rite of Christian baptism. Others at this place are near the kingdom.

Our congregation met at the Antioch house in council Aug. 5, preparatory to our District Meeting, which will convene with the Brethren of the Valley River congregation, Junior, W. Va., Aug. 25 and 26. The Sunday-school and Ministerial Meetings convene at the same place Aug. 24. We have one paper to come before the meeting, asking the District to provide ways and means to support more workers in our District; also one worker in the foreign field, either home or native.

Our series of meetings, to be held by Bro. W. T. Sines, will begin Oct. 21, to continue for two weeks and close with a love feast Nov. 4. We are looking for an ingathering at these meetings. May God add his blessings to the church, here as well as elsewhere!

TO THE CHURCHES OF THE FIRST DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA.

At the Ministerial and Sunday-school Meetings, which convened at Peters Creek Aug. 2 and 3, the Mission Board approved our plan of raising funds to erect a churchhouse in Bluefield, W. Va.

They gave us the privilege of soliciting all the congregations in the First District of Virginia for help in this work. The membership in Bluefield is small and we need your assistance.

A number of brethren and sisters have moved here but, on account of having no place of worship, have left the church and joined other organizations.

In making our canvass we find quite a number of people whose parents belonged to the Brethren, and we also found others who are in sympathy with the work.

While soliciting among other denominations we find that most of the church-going people are heavily taxed to pay their pastor's salary, and to build church buildings for themselves. With but very few exceptions, however, the people have given liberally, and we now have two-thirds of the amount raised for this building. If outside parties, who pay from $2 to $20 per month to keep up their buildings each week, donate $5 and $10 for the Church of the Brethren, we feel as if the members in the First District of Virginia should be interested enough to help us raise one-third of this amount.

We hope to be able to write each church in the District sometime in the very near future.

Signed, J. C. Dixon, Chairman, C. E. Boone, Secretary and Treasurer, No. 715 Carolina Avenue, Bluefield, W. Va.

COLORADO CITY MISSION, COLO.

The Colorado City church met in regular council July 18, with Bro. D. A. Crist, of Quinter, Kans., in charge. Three were received by letter. While there was not much business transacted at this meeting, we were very glad to have a member of the Mission Board with us again.

Since our last report we have been enjoying the helpful presence of visiting ministers and members. Bro. Bennett, of Pennsylvania, Bro. Keller, of Virginia, Bro. Goughnour, of Iowa, Bro. Eshelman (a member of the River Brethren), of Kansas, and Bro. Groff, of Colorado, have all given us much-appreciated sermons.

We may not be able to build our house of worship this fall, as we had intended to do, but the work is only deferred. Our solicitors found crop conditions very discouraging, and so were unable to raise as much money as we had expected. We will continue to unite our efforts for a house, for the promise is ours. Since our lots are well located and paid for, we feel that a little delay is not the worst thing that could happen to us.

The members who donated cash for the house here will not receive a receipt from the General Board, as was expected. The Board will acknowledge receipt through the Missionary Visitor and the Messenger.

The field here grows more profitable as it is worked, and we hope in a short time, to have the work followed in quarters of its own, and on a self-supporting basis. We pray the Master's blessing on all mission work everywhere!

A SUNDAY-SCHOOL CONVENTION.

On Sunday, Aug. 6, the Washita church, represented by seventeen of their members, came forty miles by private conveyance to assist in a joint Sunday-school Convention, held in the afternoon. At 10 A. M. Brethren J. R. Fitzer, of Cordell, Okla., and J. W. Deeter, of McPherson College, Kans., had the two informal conferences followed by children's exercises, conducted by Sister Viola Blanton. Temperance Bulletin No. 5 was carried out, with some additional temperance pieces.

After a sumptuous dinner on the grounds, we convened for the discussion of Sunday-school topics. "Bro. J. W. Chambers was moderator. Our topics were carried through nicely. Much interest was manifested in the discussion of the topics, and especially gratifying work was done by our young sisters. The exchange of thoughts on such live issues can not help but create renewed energy and consecration to the Master's service.

The "Kingdom Songs," recently purchased, were used at our services, and the singing books were appreciated by all. Our meeting was made more spiritual by these inspiring songs. Bro. J. W. Deeter's enthusiasm was contagious. We were fortunate in having him stop with us while not engaged in his college work. Bro. Pointer, of Thomas, Okla., conducted the song service.

This being our first convention, and so great a success, we are looking forward to many like conventions in the future. May every child of God feel the call to service and enter ardently into some phase of Sunday-school work!

KNOB CREEK CHURCH, TENNESSEE.

Aug. 5 our church met in council, with Eld. S. J. Bowman presiding. Bro. C. H. Diehl was with us in this meeting also on Sunday. As this was the meeting for the report of the annual visit, the deacons responded as usual. A number of admonitions were given.

While on the church visit, two of the deacons met a man, eighty-seven years of age, who had never made any profession of religion, though he had been a Bible reader since boyhood. When the Brethren spoke to him about the necessity of making his peace with God, he expressed his desire of uniting with the Church of the Brethren, and arrangements were made for his baptism to take place in the near future. This shows us the good that will result from a few words "fitly spoken" by Spirit-filled Christians.

Bro. John White, who had been elected to the ministry at a previous meeting, was installed. Brethren Robert White and R. B. Pritchett were elected delegates to our District Meeting, which will be held at this church Sept. 1. Arrangements were made for our love feast, to be held Sept. 30. Two members were received by letter. Two have been baptized since my last report: On Sunday Bro. Austin Diehl preached an inspiring sermon from the subject, "One Thing Is Needful."

This summer our church organized a mission band, with Bro. R. B. Pritchett as president; Sister Annie Bowman, secretary; Bro. Chas. Bonus, treasurer. A missionary program is given once a month.

We expect Bro. I. N. H. Beahm about Aug. 20, to preach and lecture among the churches until after the District Meeting.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL DAY IN THE LINVILLE CREEK CHURCH, VA.

It is not often that such wide-spread interest is awakened in the Linville Creek church as on Sunday-school day. This comes once each year, about the last of July or the first part of August. The definite time is fixed by the church. All preparation for the meeting, and the executive plans, fall directly under the supervision of the local Sunday-school Board.

This year, Saturday, July 29, was the date selected. The six schools of the church, with a number of workers from the congregation, made up a large audience. Bro. W. C. Thompson presided over the meeting, and all assigned to duty responded nobly.

The one thing, however, deserving more than a passing notice, was the statistical chart, placed in full view of the audience by those in charge of the meeting. This, in the first few columns, presented a comparison of the work of the present year with that of the preceding. In a general way it showed advancement. Following this, however, were other columns, showing the membership in each of the classes in which the Sunday-schools are located, together with the schools and the members not taking part in the good work. A column following these showed the number of people, not members of the church, who do not attend any Sunday-schools.

On the whole, the chart was very instructive. Its chief value consisted in showing the church the things that should be done for the Master, rather than those which are being done. The meeting was a profitable one, and will long be an inspiration in future endeavor. The general Sunday-school work was remembered by a contribution of $100, to assist the Sunday-school Board in carrying forward the work authorized by Annual Meeting.

LARNED CITY CHURCH, KANSAS.

Sunday, Aug. 6, was a day of unusual interest in this church. We had with us, on that day, two aged veterans of the Cross, Eld. H. P. Schaffer, in his eighty-fifth year, for many years the elder of the Grundy County, Iowa, church, and Eld. Peter Forney, of Glendale, Arizona, in his eighty-third year. Each of these brethren has been preaching for fifty-three years, and each of them shows remarkable vigor for so advanced an age. Like old warhorses at the sound of the bugle, or fire-horses at the sound of the fire alarm, arch their necks and charge into the fray, there seemed to be something about the environments, among the old songs, and mingled our voices in praise and prayer with these aged brethren, that stimulated them to activity. Bro. Strickler preached in the morning and Bro. Forney in the evening. They broke into us the Bread of Life in most acceptable style. Their vigor and clearness would have been a credit to men half their age.

Our heritage of aged men,—"men who have hazarded their lives for the Gospel" is a heritage we may well appreciate more fully. Men who, like these aged brethren, still retain their interest in the work, and still think that things will not all go to pieces when they are gone, are worthy of our emulation, and should claim our respect and love. May the last days of these aged brethren be their best days, and may we long retain the inspiration and benediction of their presence and preaching. Both joined in the singing, and we will long remember the happy associations spent. It does not happen many times that two men of more than a half century's experience as preachers speak from the same pulpit in one day.

J. Edwin Jones.

Larned, Kans., Aug. 8.

Visit the graveyard near your village and read the names of your classmates and the companions of your youth upon the tombstones, and as memory calls back the scenes of your childhood and you sigh over sundered ties and blighted affections, the sad, lonesome feeling that takes possession of you always breathes of orthodoxy and eternal existence. Infidelity never visits the cemetery until it can ride there in a hearse.—Ram's Horn.

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country.

ALABAMA.

Wayne Mission.—Aug. 5 the members of this place met in council at 2 P. M., with the writer as moderator. Brother Bash decided to be represented at District Meeting by letter. As we have no available house of worship at this time the church decided to build one. A committee on location was appointed, and at our next meeting, Sept. 2, will report the choice of place. This will be the first Brethren church in the State of Mississippi.—M. Wine, Fruitdale, Ala., Aug. 15.

CALIFORNIA.

Lordsburg.—The three converts who are the direct product of the protracted effort at our San Dimas Mission, conducted by Elder Saylor Grover, were baptized last Sunday at 2 P. M. Bro. Grover presented the New Testament doctrine, and the applicants, Mrs. Ida Swihart and Mrs. Mary Sanford, confessed them. The members who are thinking of coming to California to locate where they may be helpful in church work will do well to consider San Dimas.—Grace H. Miller, Lordsburg, Cal., Aug. 12.

Los Angeles.—Our church met in special council Aug. 2. Considerable business came before the meeting, but only one has been baptized since our last report. We are looking forward to a series of meetings, to be held in the near future. Bro. Taylor, of Pasadena, was with us the other Sunday and gave a profitable talk. A number of our workers are away at the present time, but we hope to be strong in the fall with added strength and zeal again this fall.—Florence Stutsman, 1361½ South Broadway St., Los Angeles, Aug. 14.

Notice to the Churches of Southern California and Arizona.—Our Ministerial and District Meeting will be held in the Pomona church on Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 25 and 26, respectively.—Geo. F. Chamberlen, Moderator of District Meeting, Covina, Cal., Aug. 12.

COLORADO.

First Grand Valley church was made to realize last Wednesday evening, as never before, the great need of a house of worship church. Bro. Root and wife, our missionaries at Grand Junction, came over with two applicants for baptism, and for baptism. They live near the mission church in town. Bro. Root was called to go to Episcopalian Hill, to the home of some to our secret orders, but these he willingly gave up that he might serve his Lord and Master more perfectly. We gladly welcome them into our fold, and hope they will be a great help to our city mission work.—D. M. Glick, Grand Junction, Colo., Aug. 12.

Good Hope.—Our District Sunday-school Secretary, Sister Anna Hoff, was with us on Sunday, Aug. 6, and gave us a very interesting talk along the line of Sunday-school work, which was enjoyed by all present. Also, Bro. Hoff gave us a talk of the facts that were presented to us. We only wish there were more workers in God's vineyard to engage in this work.—Maude C. Kinsie, Haxtun, Colo., Aug. 4.

Grand Junction Mission.—Aug. 8 we were made to praise the Lord when a husband and wife united with the Church of the Brethren at this place, by baptism. We are looking forward to the time when this dear brother and sister will be able workers in the Master's cause. Bro. Kent served the Episcopal church as priest and lay-reader for a number of years. We hope that their good example may be the means of bringing others into the fold. We are receiving the Gospel Messenger into many homes where there are no members, and we trust that by the means of our literature much good will be done. All outsiders who are now reading the Messenger speak very highly of it. We are sure that the Lord's cause here will prosper if we dear brethren and sisters in the faith will continue to aid us by their earnest prayers.—Emma Root, 732 West Main St., Grand Junction, Colo., Aug. 10.

IDAHO.

Boise Valley.—In the evening of Aug. 2 Bro. A. L. Gorham gave us a very much-appreciated sermon, entitled, "Have Your Heart Right With God!" Our District Meeting convened Aug. 3 and 4. Bro. H. B. Brubaker, Moderator, was the first District Meeting of Idaho and Western Montana, hence much business came before the meeting. Much of the work is beginning to its initiative. Aug. 4 the Ministerial Meeting convened with Bro. C. A. Williams as moderator. Several live subjects were well discussed. We closed in the evening with a soul-cheering missionary sermon by Eld. J. H. Graybill. We trust that all the members in the new District may be aroused to their duty, and that God may hasten the day when the faith of the Brethren will be spread in the states of Idaho and Western Montana. We expect Sister Sadie Miller, of India, to be with us Sept. 13 and 22. We will be glad to have her with us, as this will be the first time. We have one of our returned missionaries with us.—Jennie E. Brower, Meridian, Idaho, Aug. 12.

Nampa.—Our church met in council Aug. 7. Our elder, Bro. J. C. Bauer, presided. Very little business came before the meeting. One letter was granted. The report of our District Meeting was read, which showed a great interest in the work being done. A collection of $116.50 was taken at the District Meeting for mission work.—Bessie B. Bradley, 308 Sixteenth Ave. South, Nampa, Idaho, Aug. 12.

ILLINOIS.

Astoria.—We enjoyed a rich feast in a special tea days' Bible term during the month of July, conducted by Bro. and Sister M. Moore. He also preached a number of excellent sermons for us. Aug. 13 we closed a two weeks' revival in the White house, conducted by Bro. J. W. Harshbarger, of Liberty, Ill. He certainly is a strong defender of the truth, and presents conviction, but would not yield. On the evening of the 14th we had a short but impressive prayer and song service, the close of which Bro. Harshbarger gave us a fine sermon on baptism.—Fay A. Rohrbaugh, R. D. 2, Box 13, Browning, Ill., Aug. 15.

Maxkazka church met in council Aug. 12, with our elder, Bro. D. Wolfe, presiding. Minutes of last council meeting read. Two letters of membership were read. Bro. J. H. Nolser, of Hudson, Ill., will begin a series of meetings at this house, conducted by Bro. J. W. Harshbarger, of Liberty, Ill. He certainly is a strong defender of the truth, and presents conviction, but would not yield. On the evening of the 14th we had a short but impressive prayer and song service, the close of which Bro. Harshbarger gave us a fine sermon on baptism.—Fay A. Rohrbaugh, R. D. 2, Box 13, Browning, Ill., Aug. 15.

Mount Carroll

lems were discussed, and talks were given pertaining to Sunday-school work.—Minnie Schechter, R. D. 5, Worthington, Minn., Aug. 14.

MISSOURI.

Rockingham church met in council Aug. 5, preparatory to our District Meeting, to be held in our congregation Sept. 5. Brethren Oscar Early and George Mason were elected delegates to the District Meeting. Bro. N. S. Rhodes and Sister Ona Hogan, delegates to the Sunday-school Meeting. Bro. Oscar Early, who had been acting Secretary, was elected to fill the vacancy with his wife.—Vera Rodabaugh, Stet, Mo., Aug. 12.

Nevada—Sister Mary Archer and I were received into the church on Sunday by baptism. We feel very much encouraged with our progress, and are thankful for the blessings God has showered upon us.—R. M. Hill, Nevada, Mo., Aug. 2.

Wheeda church met in council Aug. 12, with our elder, Bro. E. G. Rodabaugh, in charge. Officers were elected for the ensuing meeting. Brethren M. P. Hollar and E. J. Early were chosen delegates to District Meeting, and Sister Ida Hollar and Ottie Minnich are our delegates to the Sunday-school Meeting. We feel thankful to have our report that the Lord has been granted to Bro. Walter Mason and wife. They expect to go to Bethany Bible School this winter. We have had the assistance of a series of meetings, conducted by Bro. Chas. Miller, of Kansas.—Grace Bowman, R. D. 1, Hardin, Mo., Aug. 17.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Cando.—We closed our series of meetings at the Zion house on the 11th inst., after having been in progress for a period of thirty days. As a result of these meetings four persons were received by baptism, and four reclaimed. Bro. Mohler wielded the Sword of the Spirit with power, telling pointed truths to arouse God for his goodness and mercy which endureth forever.—M. E. Lichty, Eton, N. Dak., Aug. 14.

Snyder Lake church began a series of meetings July 16, conducted by Bro. Moses Deardorff, of Yale, Iowa. He preached with power and convincing earnestness. We had a good attendance, and excellent interest prevailed during all these services. The Word was received earnest and gladly, and we feel Christ in baptism, and three were reclaimed. The church received much spiritual strength from the meetings. Our next meeting will be held Aug. 5. About 100 members communed. Bro. Deardorff officiated. The services were closed Aug. 6.—Mrs. Ida Hoffman, E. N. Hoffman and wife, of the South St. Joseph (Missouri) Mission, are spending their vacation with us. Sister Hoffman preached for us on Sunday morning, and Bro. Woodard, of Gowrie, Iowa, preached in the evening.—Mary Deal, Brunsworth, N. Dak., Aug. 15.

OHIO.

Bear Creek.—On the evening of July 22 Bro. Herbert Richard Winger began a series of meetings, which continued for weeks. Good interest was manifested. Four young people were received into the fold by baptism, and the church as a whole much strengthened spiritually. Our harvest meeting was held Aug. 2. Bro. Herbert Richard returned to his home and work at Bethany Bible School, the members of this church remember him in their prayers. On the evening of Aug. 2 Bro. Winger left preached for us.—Anna Eby, Dayton, Ohio, Aug. 17.

Brookville.—On Sunday, July 23, Bro. Charles Flory preached for the members of this place. At the close of the service two young sisters were baptized. Sunday, Aug. 6, Bro. J. C. Zeigler, of Pennsylvania, preached both morning and evening. On Thursday, Aug. 10, we held our Harvest Meeting at 10 A. M. Sermon by Bro. Joseph Robbins. A free-will offering was taken of $9.94 was taken. Bro. L. T. Holsinger was with the meeting the last day on Sunday Aug. 13, and delivered a very impressive sermon. We very much appreciate having these brethren with us.—Mrs. Ezra Kimmel, Brookville, Ohio, Aug. 15.

Lower Stillwater church met in council Aug. 10, with Eld. L. A. Bosserman presiding. One letter of membership was received. Brethren Ora Whitehead and Ora Denlinger were chosen as delegates to our District Meeting, which, we think, is to be held at Poplar Grove. We also appointed a committee to arrange for the Sunday-school, to be held on the same day. We will have a series of meetings, beginning about Dec. 1. Bro. David Brown is to conduct the meeting. Our Harvest Meeting will be held Aug. 19, at 3 P. M. Our love feast is to be held Oct. 28, at 2 P. M.—Maude Exter, R. D. 1, Clayton, Ohio, Aug. 14.

Pittsburg.—We held our Harvest Meeting Aug. 19. The meeting was very well attended. We had a good sermon and an interesting sermon. A collection of over $11 was taken for the benefit of the poor.—Cosner Cripe, R. D. 2, Arcanum, Ohio, Aug. 14.

Rose church has decided to change the date of the series of meetings, to commence Oct. 21, instead of Sept. 23; also the date of the love feast. The love feast will be Oct. 28, at 10 A. M. Bro. Jesse Hoff, of Covington, Miami County, Ohio, Aug. 7.

Upper Twin.—Our church met in council Aug. 3, with Elders J. P. Deaton, B. F. Petry and Aaron Brubaker present. Eld. D. P. Petry presided. Three letters were granted, and one received and one letter was granted. Two were restored to fellowship. Sister Robert Dillon and wife were elected to the second degree of the ministry. We decided to hold an all-day Harvest and Sunday-school Meeting at the Wheatville house, Aug. 26. We expect to hold our love feast Sept. 14, at 10 A. M., at the same house.—Chas. Beasley, Camden, Ohio, Aug. 4.

OKLAHOMA.

Bear Creek church met in special council with Bro. W. G. Cook in the chair. Bro. J. D. Bowers was chosen to represent us at the District Meeting, with Sister Fisher as alternate. We also considered the advisability of changing our church name and the location of our quarterly church meetings. These matters are to be decided at the next regular church council Sept. 16. The writer was chosen church correspondent. Since our last report an aged brother has passed into eternity. One young sister was added to the church by baptism. This church has its ups and downs, but is pressing on in a fast hold on this community, and it is a hard struggle to keep the old ship of Zion steady. We ask the prayers of God's people, that we may come out more than conquerors.—Ida Garber, Okla., Aug. 14.

Mowdy valley church met in council Aug. 12, to complete arrangements for the District Meeting, to convene in this church Sept. 5. Brother Esther Rodabaugh and wife have just been chosen as delegates to the Sunday-school Meeting; Bro. J. Applegate, the writer, to District Meeting. Saturday evening, Aug. 27, our local Christian Workers are to give a special missionary program. The Monday evening following there will be preaching by a visiting minister. Tuesday, the 29th, at 3 P. M., the Elders' Meeting will convene. The Ministerial Meeting will be held on Wednesday, the Mission Meeting, Wednesday evening; Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meeting, Thursday; Business Meeting, Thursday evening, and the District Meeting on Friday. The Sunday following the District Meeting, C. H. Bruce, of Texas, will conduct rededicatory services at our church, and continue in a series of meetings for an indefinite length of time. This church is three blocks north, and two west, of the Frisco station, and about one mile east of the Orient station. Those coming by private conveyance will please bring some bedding. We welcome all to come and enjoy those meetings with us.—Birdie K. Sanger, Thomas, Okla., Aug. 12.

Red River.—Our church has just closed a series of revival meetings conducted by Eld. C. D. Bonsack, of Bloom, Kans. The Word was preached with power and one soul accepted Christ and was buried. Our elder, Eld. C. D. Bonsack, was called to Kansas to the bedside of a sick brother, near the close of our meetings. Our love feast was held Aug. 12. About thirty-five members communed. We have a large church-house, yet more than one-third of the spectators could not get seats for standing. Bro. Hylton officiated, and he and the reunited remarks did much toward establishing the church here. On account of being few in number, we feel the need of having much strong brethren to come among us. The field here is a difficult one for the Church of the Brethren, but we feel that consecrated living and faithful preaching of the Word will yet result in the salvation of many.—Guy Sill, R. D. 1, Hollis, Okla., Aug. 14.

Stillwater.—Our church met in council Aug. 13. Our elder, Bro. Daniel Hays, presided. Two letters were granted at this meeting. The former officers were reelected for the next six months. Sister Mary Cox was elected delegate to represent Mary Cox, superintendent of the Sunday-school. We have Sunday-school and preaching every Sunday. Sisters Cripe and Mary Cox were elected delegates to represent us at District Meeting; Sister Ida Cox, delegate to the Sunday-school Meeting.—J. E. Cox, 221 Duck St., Stillwater, Okla., Aug. 14.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Brothers Valley.—We will hold our fall love feast at the Pike Run Aug. 26, at 10 A. M. Our Harvest Meeting, to be held at the love feast, will be held Sept. 2, at 10 A. M. We will hold a series of meetings, beginning with Dec. 1. We have decided to, in two sessions, beginning at one o'clock in the afternoon, and one in the evening, respectively.—J. Reiman, Berlin, Pa., Aug. 14.

Chambersburg—Our church met in council on the evening of Aug. 5. Elders P. S. Miller and D. P. Sayler and Bro. J. Dellig were present. Bro. Dellig presided. Eld. William A. Anthony, who has been preaching for us, was called to the ministry, and was ordained. Bro. P. S. Lehman was chosen as our presiding elder, and Bro. Dellig was also elected to the office of deacon in charge. One dear sister was restored. Our series of meetings will begin Sept. 9, and be conducted later.—Eldine Bear, Center Street, Chambersburg, Pa., Aug. 13.

Manheim.—At our last council the church appointed a temperance committee. The committee consists of the sister of Bro. David Adams, of Scalp Level, Pa., who came to us on the 22. and the writer. We have interested ourselves somewhat in one at each of our churchhouses. These lectures were largely attended. Bro. Adams has been invited to the meetings, and have arranged to begin a series of meetings at the Holsinger house Sept. 2, and continue for a week. Bro. Adams, of Johnstownship, Pa., Bro. David Adams is to hold a series of meetings at the Point church, beginning Sept. 9. Bro. Adams also expect to hold a series of meetings at the Point church, in the near future. Our love feast will be Oct. 7, at the Holsinger house.—Sarah Rogers, R. D. 3, Manheim, Pa., Aug. 14.

Glade Run.—Bro. R. D. Murphy, our District Sunday-school secretary, was with us July 30, and July 31, and gave a talk on Sunday-school work. Our teacher-training class held their graduation exercises on the evening of July 31. The program was rendered in which each member of the class took part. Bro. Murphy delivered the graduating address.—Ida B. Bowser, R. D. 4, Kittaning, Pa., Aug. 3.

Hanover.—Our church met in council Aug 2. Eld. C. G. Miller presiding. Adjoining elders present: J. A. Long, of York, Pa., and Bro. C. L. Baker, of East Berlin, Pa., were appointed to hold a series of meetings in the Bear Creek district. Also to hold a series of meetings in the Point church. Bro. Baker also expect to hold a series of meetings at the Point church, in the near future. Our love feast will be Oct. 7, at the Holsinger house.—Sarah Rogers, R. D. 3, Manheim, Pa., Aug. 14.

Glade Run.—Bro. R. D. Murphy, our District Sunday-school secretary, was with us July 30, and July 31, and gave a talk on Sunday-school work. Our teacher-training class held their graduation exercises on the evening of July 31. The program was rendered in which each member of the class took part. Bro. Murphy delivered the graduating address.—Ida B. Bowser, R. D. 4, Kittaning, Pa., Aug. 3.

Hanover.—Our church met in council Aug 2. Eld. C. G. Miller presiding. Adjoining elders present: J. A. Long, of York, Pa., and Bro. C. L. Baker, of East Berlin, Pa., were appointed to hold a series of meetings in the Bear Creek district. Also to hold a series of meetings in the Point church. Bro. Baker also expect to hold a series of meetings at the Point church, in the near future. Our love feast will be Oct. 7, at the Holsinger house.—Sarah Rogers, R. D. 3, Manheim, Pa., Aug. 14.

Gladie Run.—Bro. R. D. Murphy, our District Sunday-school secretary, was with us July 30, and July 31, and gave a talk on Sunday-school work. Our teacher-training class held their graduation exercises on the evening of July 31. The program was rendered in which each member of the class took part. Bro. Murphy delivered the graduating address.—Ida B. Bowser, R. D. 4, Kittaning, Pa., Aug. 3.

Lost Creek.—Our church met in council Aug 12. Eld. G. G. Winey presided. One letter was granted. Eld. George Strawser and Bro. J. Wm. Lehigh were elected delegates to the special District Meeting at York. Our love feast, at the Sweeping Rock house, will be held Sept. 16, at 2 P. M. Our young sister was buried with Christ in baptism since our last report.—S. E. Frey, R. D. 2, Millintown, Pa., Aug. 14.

Marsh Creek.—We met in council Aug. 5. Bro. Albert Hollinger presided. Much business came before the meeting. We will hold our Harvest Meeting Aug. 19, commencing at 10 A. M. Brethren D. H. Wineman and H. W. Weaver will represent us at the District Meeting. Brethren J. H. Longenecker, Hart and J. A. Long were with us, Aug. 14 about a dozen of our members were present to home at the Longenecker house. He had united with the church before the war, and when the call came he went into the army. He remained out of the church for many years, but in the last few years he united when he decided again to enlist in the army of the Lord. He was stricken with pneumonia and died in a few days. Interment death.—Ida M. Lightner, Gettysburg, Pa., Aug. 14.

Mahaffey.—Our church met in council Aug. 5, with the annual children's meeting Sept. 3, at 2 P. M. Bro. James A. Gardner and Sister Mary Ann Bracken were chosen to represent us at the District Meeting. Bro. Shisler will preach for us on Sunday evening, Aug. 27. Our Harvest Meeting and love feast meeting will be held Sept. 16 at Midway, when Bro. E. M. Wenger and our elder will address the school. Bro. Rufus Beehler, of Kansas, is with us. Our meetings are being well attended. He had united with the church before the war, and when the call came he went into the army. He remained out of the church for many years, but in the last few years he united when he decided again to enlist in the army of the Lord. He was stricken with pneumonia and died in a few days. Interment death.—Ida M. Lightner, Gettysburg, Pa., Aug. 14.

Midway

making apologies. This may be said of a large number of our preachers, who do not have the time to prepare for the great work to which the Lord has called them.

It has been interesting to note the growing interest in the Sunday-school work in the District. The cry of the meeting was for more time for the discussion of these great Sunday-school problems, and a deep impression gained ground that the Sunday-school workers of the District have a day of their own, separate and apart from the Ministerial Meeting. It is hoped by many that this will be brought about in the near future.

The ministerial work was taken up next, and some of the remarks made would, undoubtedly, be beneficial to the church in general, could they be given in full. For the success of a series of meetings the evangelist should think of three things: God, the members, and the sinners. Requirements of the church: It should be well organized, living, loving, working, spiritual, loyal and lasting. The singing should be inspiring and the services should open on time.

We have gotten into the rut of "electing" the elder having charge of the congregation in which the District Meeting is held, and as the meeting goes round in a regular routine, we can tell ten years ahead who is going to represent us on the Standing Committee. If any other District in the Brotherhood does that way, they, too, should consider whether it is best merely to favor certain elders, or to elect a representative body of Christians in our land. A collection, amounting to $11.29, was taken for carrying on the work of temperance in our District.

The various inspiring talks greatly encouraged and strengthened the Christian Workers to do more active and aggressive work in our respective fields. The Christian Workers' Meeting develops power in the use of the Scriptures, Christian character and efficiency for the best and most work the Lord has for each of us to do.

Many expressions were made concerning the helpfulness of the meeting, and the inspiration they could carry back to their home churches.

The election of the program committee for next year and their organization is as follows: Eld. C. S. Harp, Moderator; M. C. Flohr, Secretary; J. Walter Englar, Treasurer, R. A. Nedrow, and J. Walter Thomas.

THE LAST JOINT DISTRICT MEETING OF OREGON, WASHINGTON AND IDAHO.

It was our privilege to attend this meeting, and to do so we had to travel about 3600 miles. We had looked forward to it with a great deal of interest. The meeting was held in the southwestern part of the District, in the Coquille congregation, at Myrtle Point, Oregon. This was unfortunate for the members of Idaho who, if they attended, had to travel over two thousand miles, to get there and back.

We boarded the train at 2 A. M., and found Eld. J. U. G. Stiverson, and T. J. Beckwith and wife on board, with whom we traveled to Portland, Oregon, where we met others, en route to District Meeting. The seven of us took passage on the S. S. Breakwater for Marshfield, Oregon. We had an exceedingly smooth ride down the mighty Columbia River, and before sunset were gazing on the broad Pacific Ocean. The sunset was something grand. The writer has traveled from one ocean to the other, almost, and yet never before saw either of them?

At Marshfield we changed to train service for the balance of the thirty miles to the meeting. We found open hearts and doors upon our arrival. The members did all they could to make the visitors enjoy their stay. When the brain was weary with work, the auto was brought forth, and a spin around the valley brought refreshment, and prepared us for work again.

We were a few days ahead of the meeting proper, on account of adjusting ourselves to the sailing dates of our steamer, and thus we had a chance to enjoy the latter part of a series of meetings, then being conducted by our District Bible teacher, E. M. Studebaker. A number had already been led into the Coquille River, to be baptized into Christ, and more followed later on. Some were restored and some came for the first time. All seem to enjoy their new relation to God and the fellowship with his people. Our District Meetings have seemed to be revival meetings, each year, in strengthening us for further duties, and adding more to the fold of God.

Monday, July 10, was the District Mission Board Meeting. The most of the day was spent in shaping and closing up the business of the District, while Bible meetings were held in the churchhouse.

Tuesday was also a busy day, as the elders were in session, getting ready for the final dissolution. This meeting is becoming a very important factor in church work among us, on the Coast, at least. Here the shepherd of his flock may bring the burden of his soul, and take and give counsel, pertaining to the best ways of caring for his charge.

Wednesday, at 8 A. M., Eld. D. B. Eby, the retiring Moderator, was in the chair, ready to effect the new organization. Eld. Howard Keim, of Newberg, Oregon, was chosen Moderator; M. F. Woods, Reading Clerk; J. A. Eby, Writing Clerk. After a few well-chosen remarks by the Moderator, and a few other preliminaries, the meeting was declared ready for business. The unfinished work having been disposed of, except the dissolution, the Moderator wisely ruled out all new business that would reach into another year, and stated at this meeting was to finish all unfinished business, and adopt the dissolution measures of the present District. After some discussion, relative to the ways and means, the whys and wherefores, a measure was reached that pleased unanimously, that everything might effect. So we now stand as three separate Districts,—the District of Oregon, the District of Washington, and the District of Idaho and Western Montana. We come to Annual Meeting, asking to be recognized as individual Districts of the Brotherhood.

This closes, in a formal way, the work of the District of Oregon, Washington and Idaho, organized in 1891, in looking over the Minutes we note many changes that in the District, since its organization. Especially do we note the growth along a few lines. In 1885 there were only five organizations, now there are thirty-two. There were probably not over one hundred members to begin with, where we now have one hundred. A two-page leaflet was sufficient to hold all the business transacted, where now it takes a sixteen-page pamphlet, almost twice the former size, to hold the information and reports of the present day. The body of elders has increased to about thirty-three and the members are pledging at the rate of $2,500 per year for District work, besides the expenses of the individual congregations in helping their pastors, and other special collections for a more different cause.

Now we do not want to be understood as boasting of the above results. We have nothing whereof to boast; we have only done part of our duty. God is at the helm, and has also his children, until that they would let him,—in accomplishing his great work. He used our pioneers to blaze and chop out the way, and to lay the foundation, or rather, build on the solid foundation for which the District stands today. May he ever bless the work of his hahd!

When we were ready to return to our respective fields of labor, our traveling band had increased to fourteen,—all anxious to take a trip on the ocean. Seven claimed their seats at the table, while the others enjoyed(?) their berths.

We were informed, on our return trip, that our vessel was the only coast liner without a bar. This was made possible also by the efforts of the captain of the vessel. We were glad to know that he stood for the right, and on motion of Eld. D. B. Eby, of Sunnyside, Wash., thanks were tendered the captain by the passengers, for his efforts in behalf of temperance, as well as for the excellent service and the courtesies granted us as a people. We had some good singing aboard the boat and all seemed to enjoy it.

The captain then presented the passengers with a copy of his poem, entitled, "Virginia." He was reared under Sunday-school influences, but drifted seaward, and became a free-thinker. He soon gave up this idea, and says he is "nothing" now. He acknowledges, however, that no other movement has helped the world so much as Christianity. May the good Father not only draw this man, but others, to him!

FALLEN ASLEEP

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord"

Beaver, Thomas L., son of John and Anna Beaver, born in Union County, Pa., Dec. 30, 1833, died at his home near Panther Lick, August 6, 1911, aged 77 years, 6 months and 16 days. He was married to Maria J. Royer in November, 1860. In April, 1870, they, with their family, moved to Dallas County, Iowa, to the farm on which they have since lived. In the year 1876 he was called to the office of deacon, in which office he faithfully served. Bro. Weaver was a man of deep spiritual worth, a wise counselor and enjoyed discussing the truths of our Word. After some months of patient, severe suffering from cancer, he peacefully passed away, leaving his wife and two children. Services by Eld. Samuel Hodgen, assisted by the Brethren.—A. M. Stine, Adel, Iowa.

Bover, Sister Mary Elizabeth, died at Parma, Idaho, Aug. 7, 1911, aged 60 years. She was a devoted Christian mother. She leaves a husband and several children. Services at the Sonnes church by Bro. J. C. Noher.—Rose E. Bradley, 203 Sixteenth Avenue, S., Nampa, Idaho.

Bowers, Sister Salome Agnes, daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth Ronk, born in Botetourt County, Va., June 21, 1856, died near Frankton, Ind., Aug. 3, 1911, after a short illness of two and 13 days. She moved with her parents to Indiana in 1866, and lived in Madison County until 1874, when she married to Joseph Bowers Dec. 17, 1874. To this union were born three sons and one daughter. Her husband and two sons died over two years ago, but she was able to be up and around. The day before her death the doctor was called to see her, but when he left they retired, her husband gave her some medicine, but when he awoke he had passed away. Funeral services were held at the home, near Frankton, by Bro. D. F. Hoover, after which the remains were brought to Elkhart County, Ind., and laid in Stoney Creek house, east of town, where another service was held by Bro. Hoover. Interment in the Miller cemetery.—Florida J. E. Greene, Middletown, Ind.

Carson, Bro. Frank E., born in York County, Pa., March 1, 1870, died at his late home in Colchester, Ill., Aug. 4, 1911, aged 41 years, 5 months and 3 days. He came to Fulton County, Ill., when he was sixteen years old. In 1893 he was married to Catharine Burgard. To this union were born five sons and two daughters. His first wife died about 15 years ago, parents. Their mother preceded their father a little more than three months. Bro. Carson joined the Church of the Brethren many years ago, and was always faithful to the church. He was called to the other world after a long illness of dropsy, which office he filled with credit. The few last years of his life his health was very much impaired, which compelled him to give up his activity in church work. For many years was a carpenter by trade, and the leading man in building the Camp Creek church house, donating both his time, labor and money. He always labored for the prosperity and welfare of the church. He was well known throughout this vicinity in which he lived. He had a quiet disposition and a high moral character. To know him was to love him. He had many friends. Services in the Camp Creek church by the writer. Interment in the near-by cemetery.—M. Hahn, Colchester, Ill.

Early, Sister Emma F., wife of Bro. Frank Early, daughter of Brother H. and Sister Emma Bowman, died of tuberculosis, Aug. 8, 1911, in the bounds of the Beaver Creek congregation, Rockingham Co., Va., aged 31 years, 4 months and 28 days. Sister Emma lived an exemplary Christian life from early youth. Her mother and two sisters preceded her and she is survived by her husband, two little daughters, her father, stepmother, two brothers and a host of relatives and many friends. Services in the Camp Creek church by the writer. Interment in the near-by cemetery.—M. Hahn, Colchester, Ill.

Services in the Camp Creek church by the writer. Interment in the near-by cemetery.—M. Hahn, Colchester, Ill.

Fetters, Joseph M., born in Montgomery County, Ohio, Jan. 7, 1816, died Aug. 7, 1911, aged 95 years, 7 months and 0 days. Services at the Pitsburg house by Brethren Jacob Brumbaugh and William Beachley.—Ruth Etch, R. D. 4, Box 4, Greenville, Ohio.

Ford, Bro. George W., born in Warren County, Ind., Jan. 17, 1838, died in Fulton County, Ind., Aug. 4, 1911, aged 73 years, 6 months and 18 days. When he was four and fourteen months old he moved with his parents to Vermilion County, Ill., where he resided until he moved to Pulaski County, Ind., in December, 1910. He was united in marriage to Bessie Dillinger Oct. 25, 1896. Eight daughters and one son, one daughter having died July 16, 1910, were born to them. Bro. Ford was baptized July 7, 1911, by Bro. Perrot of the Mexico church, and he leaves his parents, two sisters and two children. Services at the home by Bro. J. P. Hoffman, assisted by Bro. Perrot, on the afternoon of Aug. 12. The remains will be taken to Illinois for interment.—Levi Puterbaugh, Argos, Ind.

Hess, Bro. Isaiah, born in Montgomery County, Ohio, June 12, 1831, died Aug. 9, 1911, aged 80 years, 1 month and 24 days. His death resulted from a broken hip, caused by a fall. Bro. Hess was the eldest of a family of thirteen children. In 1854 he was married to Sister Catharine Hoover. Seven sons and four daughters were born to them. His wife and six children preceded him in death. In early manhood Bro. Hess and his wife united with the Church of the Brethren. Nov. 19, 1898, he was elected to the deacon's office, in which capacity he labored zealously. Services in the Bear Creek, Yorkshire, Ohio, by Bro. H. M. Baker. Text, Psa. 116: 15. Interment in the Yorkshire cemetery.—Lydia E. Hess, R. D. 2, New Weston, Ohio.

Holderman, Sister Lovisiana, died of dropsy, in the bounds of the Stony Creek congregation, Hamilton Co., Ind., Aug. 8, 1911, aged 61 years, 1 months and 21 days. She was a member of the church thirty-seven years ago. She leaves her husband, six children, two brothers and two sisters. Services by Bro. William Burkhart, assisted by Bro. Scott Mottinger. Text, Isa. 41: 1-3; 2 Cor. 5: 1-10; Rev. 22: 1-6.—E. E. Stere, Noblesville, Ind.

Hull, Eld. Abraham, died of heart trouble, at his home near Bermudian, Pa., July 25, 1911, aged 61 years, 6 months and 9 days. He was a devoted follower of Christ for many years. He served as a deacon and later was elected to the ministry in the Lower Canawaqua congregation, Pa., serving that church for a number of years. Some years ago he was elected to the Upper Canawaqua congregation. This fall, two years ago, he was ordained to the eldership. He was a wise and safe counselor. He always stood for the truth and was willing to do clearly loved. A year ago, last winter, he was made to realize where he was not living right before God, especially in baptism. He leaves his wife, three sons and one daughter, who mourn their loss. Services at the home and Bermudian by Eld. C. L. Baker, assisted by Elders D. H. Baker, H. Cook S. S. Miller, J. W. Kitson, Geo. Gloup and C. W. Brown. Text, 2 Tim. 4: 7-8.—Nellie I. Baker, East Berlin, Pa.

John, Bro. Frank P., son of Eld. and Sister J. E. John, of Oakley and McPherson, Kans., died at McDonalds Mill, Va., Sept. 21, 1885, died July 24, 1911, aged 25 years, 10 months and 3 days. When he was a child his parents moved with his parents to Missouri, where he lived until 1905, when he came to McPherson, Kans., and made his home with his parents. He had learned the harness maker's trade, but was called to the ministry of the Church of the Brethren and finally became a member on his sixteenth birthday. He remained in school three years during which time his parents moved from Missouri to McPherson, so that the other members of the family might have the benefit of the college. In 1909 his health began to fail and it became necessary for him to leave college. He made a valiant fight against the disease afflicting him—tuberculosis.—He gradually grew weaker and passed away at the Mennonite Sanitarium, La Junta, Colo. He was a noble-hearted young man, hopeful and cheerful, and helpful to those with whom he came in contact. He had hoped to be restored to health. A few days before his death he was anointed, from which he received great comfort. Services in the College Chapel by Bro. S. J. Miller, after which he was laid to rest in the McPherson cemetery.—Sarah Harnly, McPherson, Kans.

Kelly, Alice, daughter of Mahlon and Charity White, born July 18, 1882, died Aug. 12, 1911, aged 29 years and 29 days. She was married to George Kelly Dec. 16, 1893, to whom were born three children. She leaves parents, husband, two brothers, a son eleven years old, and a daughter seven years old. She united with the Brother Kelly church in 1904, and the Brethren eight years ago. Her death is doubly sad from the fact of her being killed by a stroke of lightning while standing in the door. Services by the writer at Cedar Chapel. Interment in the near-by cemetery.—Samuel Hodgen, R. 12 — J. W. Kitson, Fort Wayne, Ind.

Kintner, Samuel Maurice, born in 1839, near Bucyrus, Crawford Co., Ohio, died June 17, 1911, in Pawnee County, Kans. At the age of fifteen he moved with his parents to Defiance County, Ohio, where he was married to Sarah Ann Hinton, July 27, 1862. He united with the Church of the Brethren in May of 1874, and remained a faithful member until death. He moved with his family to Marion County, Kans., in 1885 and from there to Stafford County in 1887, where he lived three years. He then moved to Pawnee County, where he lived until his death. He was a faithful and consistent member. To him were born seven sons and a daughter, together with the wife and one sister, survive. Funeral services were conducted by the editor church. Text, Job 5: 26. Burial in Pleasant Ridge cemetery on the corner of his old farm in Stafford County, beside a son and daughter who preceded him.—Mrs. Sarah Larrick, Larned, Kans.

Larrick, Sister Jennie, nee Clark, wife of Bro. Henry Larrick, born Nov. 15, 1849, died at her home, Long Beach, Cal., Aug. 5, 1911, aged 61 years, 8 months and 20 days. She was married to Bro. Larrick July 21, 1868. She gave her heart to Christ in the early part of her married life, uniting with the Larrick she united with the Church of the Brethren. She was a faithful, earnest Christian worker in the church, always at her post of duty. She was afflicted with cancer, but bore her suffering with Christian patience. She called for the elders and was anointed and died in the full assurance of eternal life. Services by Brethren A. L. B. Martin and B. F. Masterson. Text, Rev. 14: 13. Interment Isea in her garden.—Silvely, 1219 East Second St., Long Beach, Cal.

Mauzley, Sister Elizabeth A., died Aug. 6, 1911, aged 64 years and 6 months. He was the oldest son of a family of five. He was deprived of his father at the age of seven years. He was married Nov. 15, 1863, to Minerva Farner at Swanton, Ohio. To this union were born seven children. Three children preceded their mother in death. He leaves a wife, three daughters and one son; also two brothers and two sisters. He united with the Church of the Brethren in 1868, and in 1872 was elected to the deacon's office, in which he served faithfully and consistently. Services conducted in Swanton to the St. Joseph Hospital, in Kansas City, Mo., July 29, where he underwent an operation by a specialist, assisted by Bro. C. A. Shank in the River Brethren church in Indiana. Text, Rev. 14: 13.—I. D. Parker, Swanton, Ohio.

Merkey, Bro. George, son of Bro. James Merkey, died at his home near Rehrersburg, Berks Co., Pa., July 8, 1911, from the effects of a paralytic stroke, aged 71 years, 11 months 19 days. He united with the church several years ago, and was always a faithful worker in the church until within months of where he will be greatly missed. Besides his parents, he leaves four brothers and two sisters to mourn his loss.—Reuben E. M. Wengert, Jacob Plaute and Jacob Meyer at Ziegler's Investigations. Interment in the adjoining cemetery.—H. M. Frantz, Myerstown, Pa.

Neff, Sister Mary, born Jan. 22, 1848, in York, Pa., died Aug. 10, 1911, aged 63 years, 6 months and 19 days. At the age of eight years she came to the State of Indiana and resided in Elkhart County until her death. In 1867, at the age of 19, married to William Neff. This union was blessed with five children, one of whom preceded her in death, also one in infancy. Four children survive her. October, 1906, she united with the Church of the Brethren, and lived a true and faithful member. Services at the Maple Grove church by Brethren Peter Brockman and Iverson Miller. Text, Rev. 14: 13. —Clara E. Butterbaugh, New Paris, Ind.

Sowers, Sister Henrietta, died of old age, at her home in Hamilton Township, Franklin Co., Pa., Aug. 7, 1911, aged 86 years, 8 months and 23 days. She was a widow thirty-one years, a member of the Church of the Brethren over sixty years, and possibly the oldest church member of the Upper Conawago congregation. She leaves many relatives among whom she raised. One of them is married; the other young lady named Ida Sowers, who lived with her aunt, helping her in the Mummert cemetery near East Berlin, Pa. Services by Elders C. L. Baker and C. C. Brown.—Nellie I. Baker, East Berlin, Pa.

Spangler, Mrs. Conrad, died of paralysis July 4, 1911, at her home in Bermudian, Pa., aged 75 years, 1 month and 26 days. She was a member of the Bermudian church, near Bermudian, Pa. Services by Eld. C. L. Baker, assisted by Rev. Paul Glatfelter (ex-Lutheran minister).—Nellie I. Baker, East Berlin, Pa.

Timmons, Bro. John, born in Maryland May 6, 1825, died in Prairie City, Iowa, July 31, 1911, aged 86 years, 2 months and 26 days. He came to Iowa in early life, and to Prairie City in 1855, where he resided until his death. He united in 1882 and lived a consistent and exemplary Christian life till his death. In 1918 he was married to Sister Hannah Weybright. To this union twelve children were born, eight of whom are living, also he leaves in his wife and sixty-five years old. Services by the writer. Text, 1 Peter 1: 3, 4.—S. J. Goughnour, Ankeny, Iowa.

Weaver, Jesse, died at his home, Aug. 6, 1911, after a long illness of dropsy. He was born in Lancaster County, Pa., Jan. 17, 1848, and was married to Miss Sarah Ann Hoover, Dec. 25, 1873. To this union were born seven children, three of whom preceded their father in death. He was a member of the Church of the Brethren for many years, and was a faithful worker in the church. He was called to the other world after a long illness of dropsy, which office he filled with credit. The few last years of his life his health was very much impaired, which compelled him to give up his activity in church work. For many years was a carpenter by trade, and the leading man in building the Camp Creek church house, donating both his time, labor and money. He always labored for the prosperity and welfare of the church. He was well known throughout this vicinity in which he lived. He had a quiet disposition and a high moral character. To know him was to love him. He had many friends. Services in the Camp Creek church by the writer. Interment in the near-by cemetery.—M. Hahn, Colchester, Ill.

Early, Sister Emma F., wife of Bro. Frank Early, daughter of Brother H. and Sister Emma Bowman, died of tuberculosis, Aug. 8, 1911, in the bounds of the Beaver Creek congregation, Rockingham Co., Va., aged 31 years, 4 months and 28 days. Sister Emma lived an exemplary Christian life from early youth. Her mother and two sisters preceded her and she is survived by her husband, two little daughters, her father, stepmother, two brothers and a host of relatives and many friends. Services in the Camp Creek church by the writer. Interment in the near-by cemetery.—M. Hahn, Colchester, Ill.

Fetters, Joseph M., born in Montgomery County, Ohio, Jan. 7, 1816, died Aug. 7, 1911, aged 95 years, 7 months and 0 days. Services at the Pitsburg house by Brethren Jacob Brumbaugh and William Beachley.—Ruth Etch, R. D. 4, Box 4, Greenville, Ohio.

Ford, Bro. George W., born in Warren County, Ind., Jan. 17, 1838, died in Fulton County, Ind., Aug. 4, 1911, aged 73 years, 6 months and 18 days. When he was four and fourteen months old he moved with his parents to Vermilion County, Ill., where he resided until he moved to Pulaski County, Ind., in December, 1910. He was united in marriage to Bessie Dillinger Oct. 25, 1896. Eight daughters and one son, one daughter having died July 16, 1910, were born to them. Bro. Ford was baptized July 7, 1911, by Bro. Perrot of the Mexico church, and he leaves his parents, two sisters and two children. Services at the home by Bro. J. P. Hoffman, assisted by Bro. Perrot, on the afternoon of Aug. 12. The remains will be taken to Illinois for interment.—Levi Puterbaugh, Argos, Ind.

Hess, Bro. Isaiah, born in Montgomery County, Ohio, June 12, 1831, died Aug. 9, 1911, aged 80 years, 1 month and 24 days. His death resulted from a broken hip, caused by a fall. Bro. Hess was the eldest of a family of thirteen children. In 1854 he was married to Sister Catharine Hoover. Seven sons and four daughters were born to them. His wife and six children preceded him in death. In early manhood Bro. Hess and his wife united with the Church of the Brethren. Nov. 19, 1898, he was elected to the deacon's office, in which capacity he labored zealously. Services in the Bear Creek, Yorkshire, Ohio, by Bro. H. M. Baker. Text, Psa. 116: 15. Interment in the Yorkshire cemetery.—Lydia E. Hess, R. D. 2, New Weston, Ohio.

Holderman, Sister Lovisiana, died of dropsy, in the bounds of the Stony Creek congregation, Hamilton Co., Ind., Aug. 8, 1911, aged 61 years, 1 months and 21 days. She was a member of the church thirty-seven years ago. She leaves her husband, six children, two brothers and two sisters. Services by Bro. William Burkhart, assisted by Bro. Scott Mottinger. Text, Isa. 41: 1-3; 2 Cor. 5: 1-10; Rev. 22: 1-6.—E. E. Stere, Noblesville, Ind.

Hull, Eld. Abraham, died of heart trouble, at his home near Bermudian, Pa., July 25, 1911, aged 61 years, 6 months and 9 days. He was a devoted follower of Christ for many years. He served as a deacon and later was elected to the ministry in the Lower Canawaqua congregation, Pa., serving that church for a number of years. Some years ago he was elected to the Upper Canawaqua congregation. This fall, two years ago, he was ordained to the eldership. He was a wise and safe counselor. He always stood for the truth and was willing to do clearly loved. A year ago, last winter, he was made to realize where he was not living right before God, especially in baptism. He leaves his wife, three sons and one daughter, who mourn their loss. Services at the home and Bermudian by Eld. C. L. Baker, assisted by Elders D. H. Baker, H. Cook S. S. Miller, J. W. Kitson, Geo. Gloup and C. W. Brown. Text, 2 Tim. 4: 7-8.—Nellie I. Baker, East Berlin, Pa.

John, Bro. Frank P., son of Eld. and Sister J. E. John, of Oakley and McPherson, Kans., died at McDonalds Mill, Va., Sept. 21, 1885, died July 24, 1911, aged 25 years, 10 months and 3 days. When he was a child his parents moved with his parents to Missouri, where he lived until 1905, when he came to McPherson, Kans., and made his home with his parents. He had learned the harness maker's trade, but was called to the ministry of the Church of the Brethren and finally became a member on his sixteenth birthday. He remained in school three years during which time his parents moved from Missouri to McPherson, so that the other members of the family might have the benefit of the college. In 1909 his health began to fail and it became necessary for him to leave college. He made a valiant fight against the disease afflicting him—tuberculosis.—He gradually grew weaker and passed away at the Mennonite Sanitarium, La Junta, Colo. He was a noble-hearted young man, hopeful and cheerful, and helpful to those with whom he came in contact. He had hoped to be restored to health. A few days before his death he was anointed, from which he received great comfort. Services in the College Chapel by Bro. S. J. Miller, after which he was laid to rest in the McPherson cemetery.—Sarah Harnly, McPherson, Kans.

Kelly, Alice, daughter of Mahlon and Charity White, born July 18, 1882, died Aug. 12, 1911, aged 29 years and 29 days. She was married to George Kelly Dec. 16, 1893, to whom

WAR VERSUS PEACE

By Jacob Funk

The subject treated in this book is one which, more than any other, vitally concerns the civilized nations of the world, and the interest in it is growing. It is important that the people be intelligent on this subject. All need to know just the things that are herein given. The following subjects are taken up:

The Causes of War. The Evils of War. The Cost of War. A Brief History of the Peace Movement, and Ways of Advancing Peace.

The information concerning each of the above subjects is given in brief form and in a style which makes it interesting reading. It contains the cream of facts gleaned from many historical works, reports of conventions, published articles, etc.

The reading of the book gives one a clear vision of the horrors of war, the enormous cost in money and human life of it, and is sure to inspire greater zeal in the hearts of the people in the peace movement. It deserves a wide circulation.

Notes from Our Correspondents.

series of meetings will begin Sept. 2. Eld. D. C. Flory is to conduct the services. Our love feast will be held Oct. 7. Immediately after our council we held our Harvest Meeting, conducted by Eld. B. B. Garber. A collection of $40 was taken for the repairing of the Meeting-house. On Sunday morning we listened to an interesting address by Eld. A. S. Thomas.—S. Nelella Garber, Ft. Defiance, Va., Aug. 19.

Manassas.—We held our Harvest Meeting July 29. Bro. S. H. Flory, of Nokesville, Va., and Bro. W. R. Conner, of Bridgewater, Va., gave us very practical sermons. A collection of $9.35 was taken up for Home Missions. The same day our council meeting was held. Bro. Conner held a series of meetings at Bradley, beginning July 25 and closing Aug. 8. As an immediate result of the meetings, sixteen were baptized and one reclaimed. Those baptized were all young people, except one, a middle-aged man who had been a Catholic. We feel that the seed sown during these meetings will still bear more fruit. Bro. Conner is not afraid to preach the whole Gospel.—Alice C. Blough, Manassas, Va., Aug. 18.

Montebello.—Our series of meetings began Aug. 6 and continued until Aug. 13. Our elder, Bro. Geo. A. Phillips, of Barren Ridge, preached for us during the week. This was his first visit to Montebello. We hope to have him with us again. We met in council Aug. 12. Bro. J. R. Kindig presided. A goodly number of our members were present. Our love feast will be held in the near future. The funeral sermon of Friend Alford Hite was preached by Bro. J. R. Kindig Aug. 17. On the 14th four sisters came out on the Lord's side and were baptized. Much interest was manifested in the meetings, as we had large crowds and good attention was given. Bro. A. B. Fitzpatrick's horse ran away on Sunday evening, on their way home from church, and both he and his wife sustained injuries. Sister Fitzpatrick is in a serious condition. We hope both will recover.—Emma J. Layton, Montebello, Va., Aug. 19.

Pleasant Hill church met in council Aug. 12, with four visiting ministers, Brethren Wyatt Reed, Zion Mitchell, S. E. Hylton and Austin Hylton, present at the meeting. Three deacons were elected instead of two; namely, Brethren Wesley Alderman, Robert Marshall and S. E. Hylton. On Sunday following Bro. Zion Mitchell preached a soul-inspiring sermon, causing one,—the head of a family,—to decide for the Lord's side. Our love feast will be held in October.—Ruth A. Hylton, Willis, Va., Aug. 14.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Harman.—Eld. Jonas Pike came here Aug. 12, and preached three soul-stirring sermons to good congregations. An aged sister returned to the fold. Bro. Pike expects to begin a series of meetings here Sept. 3. Our love feast will be held Sept. 3.—Cora A. Harman, Harman, W. Va., Aug. 14.

Johnstown.—Bro. Geo. Parrott, of near Mapleville, Md., was with us Aug. 13, and gave us two good sermons. At our last council we decided to have a love feast Nov. 4, beginning at 2 P. M. We also decided to hold a series of meetings after the love feast.—J. W. Williamson, Cherry Run, W. Va., Aug. 14.

Pleasant View.—Since our last writing one has been made willing to accept Christ by baptism, and one reclaimed. Aug. 26 Bro. S. I. Bowman, of Harrisonburg, Va., will begin a series of meetings for us. Sept. 14 will be our love feast.—Anna F. Sanger, Box 46, Bragg ville, W. Va., Aug. 21.

WASHINGTON.

Tacoma.—The work here in the city, is moving along nicely. The Sunday-school, preaching services and prayer meetings are all well attended. Some of our members are out of the city, working in the harvest fields. Our meeting house is 710 South Fiftieth Street. The members in the city seem interested in pushing the work forward. We trust that many souls may be saved.—J. U. G. Stiverson, 710 South Fiftieth Street, Tacoma, Wash., Aug. 19.

THE KESLER AND DENNY DEBATE.

The public discussion between Bro. B. E. Kesler and E. G. Denny, which took place in the Beaver Dam church, Ind., closed in good order on the evening of Aug. 16. The attendance throughout was good. The order and attention were splendid. Bro. Kesler ably defended the doctrines and practices of the Church of the Brethren.

Our neighbors and friends stood by us loyally throughout the meetings, and cheerfully assisted us yesterday in removing the tent and setting things in order.

We feel that our doctrine is now favorably established in their minds, and we hope that it may reach their hearts ere long, and cause them to join hands with us in the advancing of the Lord's work in this community.

The hundreds who had ordered the debate in book form, if printed, will be disappointed, as Rev. Denny positively refused to allow his speeches to be printed. We regret this disappointment, but as Bro. Kesler is now arranging to engage in another debate with the same people in Texas, next month, it is expected that one will be printed. If so, due notice will be given.

THE GOSPEL MESSENGER

"SET FOR THE DEFENSE OF THE GOSPEL."—Phil. 1: 17.

Vol. 50. (Old Series) Vol. 60. Elgin, Ill., September 2, 1911. No. 35.

Deficient Rain Fall in India.

The "Bombay Guardian" reports that a large area of India,—Berar, Gujerat, Rajputana, the United Provinces, and the Punjab,—are suffering from a decidedly insufficient rain fall. In some parts sowing has not yet commenced, and in other parts the water supply is deficient. Clear skies, with sunshine during the day, have dissipated all hopes of an abundant rain fall, and it now looks as though the sections involved will have to face at least a partial crop failures. Excessive rain fall is reported from the East coast and Assam,—Narayangunj having had an excess of twenty-three inches of rain. We trust that later reports of the affected districts may show more favorable conditions than are now anticipated.

Checking Corrupt Influences.

Two official censors,—a man and a woman,—will hereafter examine and pass upon all moving picture films exhibited in the State of Pennsylvania. This, if judiciously done, will undoubtedly go far to remove many, if not all, of the corrupting influences hitherto characterizing these shows. A San Francisco police justice recently fined the proprietor of a nickelodeon $100 for displaying a motion picture showing a hold-up and a murder, basing his action upon the ground that the moving picture of such a debasing scene is likely to furnish a strong incentive for the perpetration of similar crimes. Like restrictions, however, should apply to the regular theaters also, since similarly objectionable scenes are enacted on the stage. The tendency is in the wrong direction,—always downward.

Increase of Tramps and Beggars.

According to a recent report of the "National Association for the Prevention of Mendicancy" there are more than 250,000 tramps and beggars in this country. Most of these are parasites upon society,—barnacles upon the ship of state. They are vagrants by choice, and yet practically nothing is being done by the authorities to win them from the error of their way. Many European countries have public workshops to which people of this class are committed, and where they work for a maintenance until knowledge of a trade has been gained. Thus an opportunity is given them to become honorable and self-supporting members of society, instead of remaining a burden to the country and often a real danger to isolated rural districts. To teach our dependent ones to help themselves is better than any amount of unwise gifts bestowed upon them.

Paganism Increasing in Russia.

Judging by official statistics, published by the Russian Ministry of the Interior, large numbers of the peasantry in the districts of Perm, Ufa, and Vjatka have fallen into a state of paganism, again worshiping the ancient gods, Flor and Lavra. In fact, the worship of these gods is said to have never fully disappeared from these districts, but it is now so rapidly increasing that great concern is being aroused. Nearly 35,000 of these people have been found in the districts above referred to,—heathen at heart, though nominally members of the Greek church. That so many of these people should deliberately forsake church privileges, does not speak well for the body with which they have been identified. As the Greek church, however, is so largely lost in formalism and man-made decrees, one need not wonder at the sad relapse referred to. The salt has lost its savor.

An Insane Asylum for Jerusalem.

Arrangements are being made by Dr. J. Berendt, who is in charge of an asylum for the insane in Berlin, Germany, to found a similar institution in Jerusalem. During a recent journey to the Holy Land, his spirit was deeply stirred, when in the Greek monastery El Chadre, near Bethlehem, he found the insane chained to the walls of their prison, with a rough iron band around their neck. They have no attention given them whatever, and are compelled to lie at night on the bare stone floor. The contemplated asylum is to be of international character, and all patients, of whatever cult or nationality will be treated in accordance with the most modern methods and treatments, in care of up-to-date alienists. The plan is most heartily endorsed by the people of Jerusalem. Mohammedanism does not build hospitals, orphanages or asylums. It is Christianity alone that does unto "the least of these,"—earth's lowly ones,—what the Master would have them do to him.

Religious Papers as Home Educators.

When, recently, the pastor of a flourishing congregation announced to his people that he was ready to take subscriptions for a Sunday paper, there was undisguised astonishment until he learned to add that the paper in question was the official organ of the church and one in every way suitable to read on Sunday. He further suggested that, in order to displace the Sunday newspaper, most excellent use might be made of the church paper on Sunday afternoons, by members of the family reading aloud and discussing the various items and articles of the paper. Some families, who tried the plan, report great success and the best of interest. The church paper is an educator of no mean value if we choose to make it so.

Man's Marvelous Genius.

The recently-accomplished aeroplane flight of Harry N. Atwood, from St. Louis to New York, 1,265 miles, in twenty-eight hours, stands first, thus far, in the world's achievements along that line. Wonderful as it is, we are but in the infancy of the science of successful air navigation. Looking forward to possible progress in the future,—in the light of attainments achieved in other branches of human endeavor,—we may rest assured that the genius of man, God-given, will rise to the opportunity, and overcome the difficulties that are now so apparent. May we not hope that the final conquest of the air, shall minister wholly to man's best interests, affording a ready means of communication, and ushering in a new era of peace and good will to all men?

What Christians Have Done for Japan.

Paul said: "I am made all things to all men, that I might by all means save some." In this spirit Christian missionaries have not only labored spiritually for the people of Japan but also with doctors and nurses, schools and hospitals. Before Perry's arrival most of the 2,000,000 infants, born each year, died for lack of proper sanitary measures. Now, with the best of sanitary and hygienic methods, introduced by missionaries, the child mortality has been most remarkably reduced. One of the strong points of Christian effort in Japan is seen in its wonderful adaptability to the progressive spirit of the nation. Every other inheritance of Japan is fixed. Christianity has shown its living power, while Buddhism, in its gradual decay, has demonstrated its utter failure.

Why India Faces a New Danger.

There was a time when India was ranked among the most temperate countries of the world. That it is, of late years, losing the distinction it once claimed, is not due, altogether, to their own choice in the matter, but to the persistent desire of the English Government to increase the sale of liquor, in order to enrich its treasury. This we are told upon the assurance of Mr. D. E. Wacha, who is an acknowledged authority on Indian affairs. He also tells us that there has been "quite a regiment of Government resolutions of all sorts and degrees on the various systems of pushing the drink traffic, and raising revenue by diversified methods." The fact that census figures reveal an actual decrease in consumption, would seem to indicate that alcohol in India, as elsewhere, is having its fatal results. As Lord Morely says, "India is face to face with a new, dire and additional plague."

Overcrowded China.

Those who have never seen the thickly-settled portions of China can perhaps hardly realize the woeful condition of affairs in many districts, until the following story is told. The carrying coolies rarely live beyond forty-five or fifty years. The term of a chair bearer is eight; that of a rickshaw runner is but four years. The drafting of childhood into the work-life is ruinous. Not one boy in fifty can read. Not one girl in a hundred. Famine is the rule. As one might readily expect, mortality among children is frightful. Poverty, economic pressure, superstition,—these mighty powers for evil,—exact a fearful toll of humanity. Were it better days will come. Better economic management will cause famine districts to cease. Opium will be overthrown. Disease will be throttled. The death rate will decline from fifty or sixty per thousand, as it now is, to twenty per thousand, as it is in Japan. A great future awaits this most populous of earth's nations, and the day will doubtless dawn when China's numerous sons and daughters must find homes in other parts of the globe because of overcrowded conditions at home. May we not hope that while many Chinese are now renouncing the faith of their fathers, they may, in full assurance, rest their hopes in him who said, "I am come that ye might have life"?

Why Encourage the Traffic?

A protest is going up from all parts of our country concerning the participation of high Government officials in the International Brewers' Congress, to be held in Chicago, Oct. 12-22. It appears that Secretary Knox issued a circular letter, addressed to the diplomatic and consular officers of the United States, endorsing the gathering. Then, too, Hon. James Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture, has accepted an invitation to act as honorary president of this congress. All this has aroused intense indignation on the part of temperance workers everywhere. Seeing these high officials exerting their influence in behalf of the terrible liquor traffic, further increasing its power, we are most forcibly reminded of the fact that there is still a battle to wage against the "world rulers of this darkness, the spiritual hosts of wickedness."

Another Million for Humanity's Welfare.

It has been said,—and not without reason,—that it requires the highest degree of wisdom to distribute vast fortunes wisely and well. While many have not the privilege of becoming the world's benefactors by princely gifts, there are others who seek to help humanity at large by their generous offerings. The recent million dollar donation bestowed by John D. Rockefeller upon the "Institution of Medical Research," New York, in addition to other millions given previously, will mean much for the advancement of medical skill in battling with the various ills afflicting humanity. Though we may not approve the ways and means by which the "Oil King" amassed his wealth, his present liberality in behalf of humanity's welfare, is most commendable. Let it not be forgotten, however, that all of us, though not blessed with wealth like Mr. Rockefeller, may use our means "to do good, be rich in good works."

Our National Improvidence.

It may seem strange that our nation, which sprang from the thrifty settlers who founded Plymouth and Jamestown, schooled in the rough adversities of an unusually strenuous pioneer life, should have developed that most deplorable improvidence, so much in evidence today. Perhaps no other country has been so signally blessed with abounding agricultural resources and the treasures of the mine, the oil fields, the rivers and the lakes. Hence it has been, perhaps, but natural that our people, in hoeing with might and main for a more effective conservation of our natural resources. While this is commendable indeed, temporally speaking, we should not forget that in the spiritual world the same care needs to be exercised, lest we fail to make the most of the splendid resources at our command. "Neglect not the gift that is in thee."

Anti-Jewish Riots.

While the persecution of Jews in Russia has been so long continued and violent that it is almost taken as a matter of course,—as belonging to that land of extreme autocracy and religious intolerance,—one would hardly believe such a thing possible of England,—a country of more advanced ideas, one would suppose. Under date of Aug. 23, however, extensive riots are reported from South Wales, during which a number of shops and warehouses, belonging to Jews, were wrecked and looted. Most of the Jews suffered from the unprovoked attacks are residents of long standing and of excellent repute, and there is no apparent reason for the lawless acts being visited upon them. The authorities attribute the entire outbreak to unsettled conditions growing out of the recent labor troubles, which came well nigh plunging the nation into a most unfortunate national disruption. The lawless mobs that are the natural outgrowth of all disturbances, involving the various interests of a nation, are not readily dispersed, even after the original cause of complaint has been satisfactorily disposed of. Then, too, it appears that anarchistic teachings are gaining ground among the lower classes of England, and, following the lead of agitators in other countries, their bitterness is very apt to vent itself upon the generally obnoxious Jew,—the more so because of his possessions. Persecution has been the sad experience of the Jew for centuries, and he has not yet drained the bitter cup to the dregs.

Out of Our Loss the Gain.

SELECTED BY AGNES M. RYAN.

I learn, as the years roll onward,
And leave the past behind,
That much I have counted sorrow
But proves that the fates are kind;
That many a flower I longed for
Had a hidden thorn of pain,
And many a rugged by-path
Led to fields of ripened grain.

The clouds but cover the sunshine,
They can not banish the sun,
And the earth shines out the brighter,
When the weary rain is done;
We must stand in the deepest shadow
To see the clearest light,
And often from wrong's own darkness
Comes the very strength of right.

The sweetest rest is at even,
After a wearisome day,
When the heavy burden of labor
Has been borne from our hearts away;
And those who have never known sorrow
Can not know the infinite peace
That falls on the troubled spirit
When it sees, at last, release.

We must live through the weary winter
If we would value the spring;
And the woods must be cold and silent
Before the robins sing.
The flowers must lie buried in darkness
Before they can bud and bloom;
And the sweetest and warmest sunshine
Comes after the storm and gloom.

So the heart from the hardest trial
Gains the purest joy of all,
And from lips that have tasted sadness,
The sweetest songs will fall.
For as peace comes after suffering,
And love is reward for pain,
So, afar earth, is heaven,
And out of our loss the gain.

Creation vs. Evolution.

BY T. L. WATERS.

The Creation.

"Creation, the act of creating; causing to exist, or constituting; especially the act of bringing the universe or this world into existence."

"Evolution, the act of unfolding or unrolling; hence, in the process of growth, development; as, the evolution of a flower from a bud, or an animal from the egg."—Webster.

THIS definition of evolution all can understand, because it is a natural process, but the evolution with which this article is to deal is that of the modern atheist, and is thus described by Ernest Haeckel in his "Evolution of Man," Vol. II, page 33: "In conclusion I repeat that it is only in the case of monera—of structureless organisms without organs—that we can assume the hypothesis of spontaneous generation. The extant monera do afford us organless and structureless organisms, such as must have originated by spontaneous generation, at the first beginning of organic life upon the earth."

Put in more readable language by Robert G. Ingersoll, it reads: "The moner is said to be the simplest form of animal life that has yet been found. It has been described as 'an organism without organs.' It is a kind of structureless structure; a little mass of transparent jelly that can flatten itself out, and can expand and contract itself around its food. It can feed without a mouth, digest without a stomach, walk without feet, and reproduce itself by simple division. By taking this moner as the commencement of animal life, or rather as the first animal, it is easy to follow the development of the organic structure through all the forms of life to man himself. In this way, finally, every muscle, bone and joint, every organ, form and function, may be accounted for. In this way, and in this way only, can the existence of rudimentary organs be explained. Blot from the human mind the idea of evolution, heredity, adaptation, and the 'survival of the fittest,' with which it has been enriched by Lamarck, Goethe, Darwin, Haeckel, Spencer, and all the facts in the history of animal life become utterly disconnected and meaningless."—Some Mistakes of Moses, page 96.

The natural instinct of a young robin leads it to open its mouth and swallow anything dropped in; truly the evolutionists must presume that the whole community are but a nest of young robins, and will swallow this pill of evolution.

Let us take a common-sense look at these statements. By no known law of physics can a homogeneous substance,—which consists of only one element,—be changed into a heterogeneous one,—which consists of two or more elements. For example, oxygen and hydrogen are each homogeneous, and only by combination of two parts hydrogen to one part of oxygen do they combine to form water, which is heterogeneous. This every person understands who knows anything of chemistry. Now, how could this homogeneous moner evolute or develop into birds, beasts and men?

It Could Not.

Again; by the law of heredity,—everything after its kind (Gen. 1: 21),—it could only reproduce itself; and if the moner was the only beginner in life, then this world would be full of monera. Such an instance as "spontaneous generation," is a thing unheard of. There can be no life without antecedent life, and the antecedent life of all things is God, where the Bible places it.

There is a story told of an Irishman coming home from a lecture on evolution, who bolted the door of his cabin with a carrot. His wife upbraiding him for his foolishness, he exclaimed: "Hush, Biddy, it might a-volute into the finest av sthale afore the thafe comes." There is more sense in this sarcastic remark of the Irishman than in volumes on evolution.

Was the Earth Created Or Did It Evolute?

All infidels and atheists hold that it was evolved from inorganic matter, through the action of natural law. The astronomer La Place begins with a red-hot nebula, whirling in space, though he forgets to tell us how it came to be red hot, or what force set it to whirling.—See "American Cyclopedia," article Cosmogony.

Spencer, Comte, Helmholtz, Tyndall, and nearly all modern atheists hold as follows: "Assuming (note that word) for the sake of the argument, a rare, homogeneous, nebulous matter, widely diffused through space; the following successive changes will, on physical principles, take place in it: (1) Mutual gravitation of its atoms; (2) atomic repulsion; (3) evolution of heat, by overcoming this repulsion; (4) molecular combination at a certain stage of condensation; followed by (5) sudden and great disengagement of heat; (6) lowering of the temperature by radiation, and consequent precipitation of binary atoms, aggregating into irregular flocculi, and floating in the rarer medium just as water when precipitated from air floats into clouds; (7) each flocculus will move toward the common center of gravity of all, but being an irregular mass in a resisting medium, this motion will be out of the rectilinear, that is to say, not directly toward the center of gravity, but toward one or the other side of it; and thus (8) a spiral movement will ensue which will be communicated to the rarer medium through which the flocculus is moving; and (9) a preponderating momentum and rotation of the whole mass in some one direction, conveying its spirals toward the common center of gravity."—"American Cyclopedia," article Nebular Hypothesis.

And this is what skeptics would have us believe instead of believing the simple statement: "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth" (Gen. 1: 1). Which is the easiest of belief?

It will be noticed that it is assumed that the matter with which they start out is all homogeneous, consisting of but one simple element. Says Spencer: "From the earliest cosmical changes down to the latest results of civilization, we shall find that the transformation of the homogeneous into the heterogeneous is that in which progress essentially consists."—"First Man's Origin and Destiny," page 25.

Paschasius Rudbent, in the eighth century, advocated the doctrine of transubstantiation. There was money in it; and so it became popular in the Greek and Roman Catholic churches. It was defined and accepted by the Council of Trent, Oct. 11, 1551. It reads: "Chap. IV: This holy Synod doth now declare it anew, that, by the consecration of the bread and of the wine, a conversion is made of the whole substance of the bread, into the substance of the body of Christ our Lord: and of the substance of the wine into the substance of his blood." Here is the only instance on record where inert matter is instantly changed into living flesh and blood; but the atheistic scientist beats it way yonder. He would have us believe that a simple substance, consisting of but one element, changed itself, without any intelligence taking part, into a world full of fishes, birds, beasts and men. How much more sensible and reasonable to believe the Psalmist:

"The heavens declare the glory of God;
And the firmament showeth his handiwork.
Day unto day uttereth speech,
And night unto night showeth knowledge.
There is no speech nor language;
Their voice is not heard.
Their line is gone out through all the earth,
And their words to the end of the world."
—Psalm 19: 1-4.

The Consummation.

In the investigation of any theory or doctrine the final end should be carefully considered. The consummation of evolution is summed up by Prof. Alexander Winchell, Professor of Geology in Michigan University, as follows: "Every year and every day witnesses the dissipation of terrestrial warmth. While we ponder the great fact, the world is growing cold beneath our feet. The current of events is carrying us inevitably to a state of total refrigeration. Perhaps the mountains will have been leveled first, and the continents swallowed up in the sea. . . . The nations of men, if they still exist, will have emigrated from the temperate to the equatorial regions. New diseases will have diminished their numbers. Polar frost will have crept stealthily and steadily from Behrings Straits to the Gulf of Mexico. Continental glaciers will again have brooded over the land. The prairie blossom will have perished beneath a mantle of snow as limitless as are the prairie regions. The fleet rivers will have been chained to their rocky banks. . . . The Mongolian is not known from the Caucasian. Pale, thin, and feeble, the shivering remnant of humanity have gathered themselves together into compact communities, for economy of vital warmth. . . . Men return to caves, whence they came in the beginning. Year by year the populations become less. Year by year the dead empire of frost is extended. . . . Unless some sudden catastrophe shall sweep the race from being in a day, the time will come when two men will alone survive of all the human race. . . . These two men will gaze into each other's faces, wan, thin, hungry, shivering, despairing.

The last man has composed his body to eternal rest. The once fair earth is a cold and desolate corpse. Nature's tears are ice. The face of the sun is veiled. It is midnight in the highways of the planets. The spirits of heaven mourn at the funeral of nature."—Sketches of Creation.

Such is the final consummation of the gospel of despair, the gospel of evolution. From its awful and fearful ending let us turn to the Bible, and in its sacred pages read the Gospel of light and hope:

God's Promise.

"Behold, I create new heavens (the air) and a new earth; and the former shall not be remembered, nor come into mind" (Isa. 65: 17). "But according to his promise, we look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness" (2 Peter 3: 13). Read all the chapter. "And I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth are passed away; and the sea is no more. And I saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down out of heaven from God, made ready as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of the throne, saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he shall dwell with them, and they shall be his people; and God himself shall be with them, and be their God: and he shall wipe away every tear from their eyes; and death shall be no more; neither shall there be mourning, nor crying, nor pain, any more; the first things are passed away" (Rev. 21: 1-4, Am. Stand. Bible).

Dear reader, honestly now, does not that sound better? The apostles Peter and John were optimistic; their optimism was founded on the promise of God, who can not lie. The pessimism of the geologists and evolutionists is based on what they see with their natural eyes; for they know nothing of that principle called faith.

Now, as we must believe something, which shall we believe, the evolutionists or the prophets and apostles? We are told that "he that cometh to God, must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that seek after him" (Heb. 11: 6). Here, then, is the very first step, and as the child reaches out its hands to its parents when it starts to walk, so reach out your hands to God and take the first step.

Covetousness.

BY NOAH LONGANECKER.

"Covet" is used in the Bible (1) in a good sense,—"Covet earnestly the best gifts." Here it means, "To wish for with eagerness." Here the glory of God and the good of man is sought. (2) In a bad sense,—"Thou shalt not covet" (Rom. 13: 9). Here it means, "To wish for inordinately, or unlawfully." Here the honor and good of self only is sought. This is apparent from the tenth command of the Decalogue, "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's house; thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife, nor his man servant, nor his maid servant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor anything that is thy neighbor's" (Ex. 20: 17). Covetousness in a bad sense is idolatry (Eph. 5: 5; Col. 3: 5).

Selfishness is one of the prevailing sins of the world. Is not the church becoming worldly in this sense? Selfishness is the prime root of covetousness in a bad sense. Hear Paul: "I have no man likeminded, who will naturally care for your state. For all seek their own, not the things which are Jesus Christ's" (Philpp. 2: 20, 21).

Self, self, SELF, is the idol to which all such are continually sacrificing. Have all the heathen idols more adherents than the idol of COVETOUSNESS? This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous" (2 Tim. 3: 1).

May we not conclude that covetousness will be the ruin of more souls than any other sin, because, while rampant, it is allowed to go without any reproof? The writer, at least, never heard of any one being tried for the sin of covetousness. We do not say that God does not reprove the sin. Covetousness was Eve's first sin. "When the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise, she took of the fruit thereof, and did eat" (Gen. 3: 6). How God reproved and punished the sinner! Covetousness was the leading sin under the patriarchal period. It brought ruin to Lot. "Remember," warns Christ in reference to this.

Covetousness was the first sin of the Jewish church in Canaan. True, Achan only committed the sin, but how many perished with him! In speaking of ancient Israel, Jeremiah twice said, "From the least of them even unto the greatest of them every one is given to covetousness" (Jer. 6: 13; 8: 10).

A concordance before me refers to the punishment of Laban, Balaam, Achan, Saul, Ahab, Gehazi, in the Old Testament, for the sin of covetousness. Why is King David omitted in the list? No sooner did he break the tenth commandment, than he broke the seventh. Next he tried to break the ninth, and when his plan failed him, he broke the sixth. Many do injustice to David by only referring to his sins, and omitting to mention his repentance and conversion.

There are many features of covetousness. This being true, where is the innocent man that can cast the first stone at David? Pride manifests itself in many forms. But suppose no one who was guilty of the sin, in some of its forms, would be allowed to cast the first stone, would we not all go out?

So of the sin of covetousness. The first sin in the Christian church, after Pentecost, was covetousness. All know the fate of Ananias and Sapphira. "And he said, That which cometh out of the man, that defileth the man. For from within, out of the heart of men, proceed evil thoughts, adulteries, fornications, murders, thefts, covetousness, wickedness, deceit, lasciviousness, an evil eye, blasphemy, pride, foolishness: All these evil things come from within and defile the man" (Mark 7: 20-23).

Covetousness is the forerunner of pride. We have some seventy-four decisions against one feature of pride in the Minutes of Annual Meeting, and not one against the idolatry of covetousness. How unlike Christ! Christ said of covetousness what he said of no other sin. We read, "And one of the company said unto him, Master, speak to my brother, that he divide the inheritance with me. And he said unto him, Man, who made me a judge or a divider over you? And he said unto them, TAKE HEED, AND BEWARE OF COVETOUSNESS" (Luke 12: 13-15).

The following, from "Peloubet's Select Notes," is clear on the tenth commandment: "This is the only one of the commandments which treats solely of sins of the mind and heart; and in so doing it strikes at the very root of all sin, for every sin is born of desire (Mark 7: 21, 22; Jas. 1: 14, 15), and there would be no sin if this commandment were perfectly kept (Rom. 7: 7).—Todd."

Who, that studies the references carefully, will not see the force of the above remarks? Paul classes covetousness with gross crimes. So does Christ, as already quoted. "I have written unto you not to keep company, if any man that is called a brother be a fornicator, or covetous, or an idolater, or a railer, or a drunkard, or an extortioner, with such a one no not to eat" (1 Cor. 5: 9-11). "Be not deceived: neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind, nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God" (1 Cor. 6: 9, 10).

What will covetousness not do? "Through covetousness shall they with feigned words make merchandise of you; whose judgment now of a long time lingereth not, and their damnation slumbereth not" (2 Peter 2: 3).

Securing Material for the Sunday-school, —Where and How?

BY C. E. BOONE.

At first thought this subject would apply chiefly to the pupils of the Sunday-school, but after some consideration we find that the student body alone is not all the material required for a successful Sunday-school.

The word "material" always implies something that is "essential," "important,"—that out of which anything is to be made. Now, then, in our opinion the most essential part of any organization is its working force, and looking at the Sunday-school from this standpoint, let us consider "the where and the how" of securing such a force.

In the first place, in all cases and under all circumstances, we should have Christian men and women as officers and teachers of our Sunday-schools,—men and women who go often and earnestly to God in prayer, men and women who are ready and willing to give their very best efforts for the cause of the Master,—those who have been converted, regenerated or born again, i. e., changed from a carnal to a Christian life; men and women who are being led by the Spirit of God.

We can not conceive of a sadder mistake than to put our Sunday-schools in charge of officers and teachers who are out of Christ, and who are not under the influence and power of the Holy Ghost. If the blind lead the blind, both will fall into the ditch. "First cast the beam out of thine own eye, and thou mayest see clearly how to cast the beam out of thy brother's eye." How can we teach that which we have never felt? Would any one want his child to be taught by an unbeliever? Just think of it,—a teacher teaching something that he does not believe! Example is the best of teachers. "Practice what you preach" is the most emphatic object lesson before the world today.

Then we say, Get your superintendents and teachers from the ranks of Christian men and women. Get them from the members of the Brethren church. Teachers who are trying to live according to the New Testament teaching, can be found most readily among those of our own faith and practice.

Now, then, Where shall we secure the pupils for the Sunday-school? We must have the material to work upon, if we wish the school to live and progress. Without it our organization is of no use. We can not develop the minds, or win souls for Christ and his cause, unless we have the material on which we can work. There is but one answer to this question: We will have to get this material from our homes. Yes, I say, our homes. I do not mean this home, and that home, and the other home, but in every home within our reach. Yes, in every available home.

Being in the home, the vital point at issue is, Whom shall we take? Shall we take the mother and leave out the father? Shall we take the daughter and leave out the son? No, a hundred times no! It is just as important for one member of the family to go to Sunday-school as the other. All have equal rights, all are heirs of the same salvation. Christ came that we might have life and that we might have it more abundantly.

If the father says, "I am too old and do not care to attend the class," you need not expect the son to be interested. Should the mother say, "I am too busy with my house work and the children, to go to Sunday-school," you need not expect the daughter to take a leading part. We can not expect the hearty support of the children unless the parents are regular attendants at Sunday-school.

Show me a family where the parents are always on time and have their lessons well in mind, and I will show you children who are doing all they can, in the work of the Sunday-school. Our children are imitators. How often do you hear them reason like this: "My papa and my mamma did this, and it is all right. I do this because my father and mother do it. I know they would not do wrong." Watch them as they play; their lives are just full of the acts of father and mother. They are being moulded like those around them.

Parents, we would like to appeal to you. We should like to burn it upon your heart with such force that you would not soon forget it, that it is your duty and your privilege to bring up your children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, and we know of no better way than to set the example, which, in most cases, they will follow. Now, then, get the father and mother to come to Sunday-school and the children will be sure to follow. On the other hand, if you stay at home and send your children, it will not be long until their interest lags. Soon they are careless and unconcerned, and ere long they drop out, one by one, very probably because the father or mother did not go.

While all know, and well know, that we should attend Sunday-school, there is another question: How shall we be induced to come out? Some say, "I feel as if I ought to go, but I am so busy during the week that I feel like resting on the Lord's Day." My brother, my sister, I do not believe that you should have to be begged or persuaded to attend these services. You certainly ought to feel deeply your responsibility to God, and be willing and ready to do all you can in your Master's service, for after we have done all that is possible we are only unprofitable servants. If those who have done their utmost, only narrowly escape, where will the sinner and ungodly appear?

For the smaller classes the prize method may do much to have the children attend regularly, however we should always impress the thought upon them, that it is not the ultimate end of the Sunday-school simply to attend all its sessions. It means more, and the children should be taught to that end. It means a life saved for Christ and the saving of the world. It means a development of the better nature, a well rounded out being, with all the best that is to be had. It means to grow away from our animal natures and to be lifted up to a higher and nobler nature, like unto the Son of God.

In conclusion, then, let us say, "The 'where' means everywhere, the entire family, from infancy to old age. The 'how' is the example, the life we put into the work, and the interest we take in the welfare of the human family."

"There is a time we know not when,
A place we know not where,
That marks the destiny of men
For glory or despair."

I know of no place that will start a soul heavenward more quickly in early life than the efficient Sunday-school. Will we do our part in this great work?

The World's Conversion or Evangelization—Which?

BY J. M. BLOUGH.

WHAT is the church's duty to the world,—to convert it or to evangelize it? To evangelize means to preach the Gospel and to teach the nations in God's way. To convert would mean to turn the nations to the worship of God through Jesus, i. e., to be Christians. This is a big difference, indeed, and one that we should understand.

I fear that missionaries are sometimes misunderstood when they urge the church to send more workers now, that the world may soon be evangelized. Some, perhaps, make the mistake in preaching and say conversion when they mean evangelization. People are found at least, who ridicule the idea of converting the world. They say it is useless, and that the Scriptures teach that the world will not be converted,—at least not in this dispensation. But this I will not argue.

We teach that the evangelization of the whole world is the duty of the Christian church. The conversion of the world would be noble, ideal,—the thing to be hoped for and prayed for,—but it is not our work. We can not convert anybody. That belongs to God and the individual. However, the world can not be converted without being evangelized, hence the importance of evangelization. Paul plants, Apollos waters, but God gives the increase. Whether the world is converted or not converted, does not affect our duty a particle. A missionary may work for thirty years without a convert, yet he is just as responsible for preaching the Gospel, as long as there are people who have not been taught. So the church is responsible for evangelizing the world, regardless of the number of converts. Jesus sends us forth to preach the Gospel to every creature, and to teach all nations, and to witness to them, and our responsibility lasts until that is done. Let us remember that "this Gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." And I feel the end can not come before. How long must God wait?

Of course we must work and pray and hope for the conversion of all the lost, for until that is done we will not know who those are who will believe. "Whosoever" may mean any one. It is not for us to say that certain people or nations will not believe. It is ours to evangelize all, regardless of their condition. God can not convert them without our evangelizing, so let us all do our very best to enlighten all nations quickly, so that God may convert all who might believe. And who will be responsible for those who die before we evangelize them?

Evangelization, however, means more than heralding, i. e., simply the telling of the gospel message, and then passing on. Heathen nations are not Jews. They can not appreciate the message of truth at first, so it is not enough to preach to them once, and then to shake off the dust from our feet if they do not believe. We must teach them until they can intelligently accept or refuse. And this depends largely on living the Christian life before them.

Yet even with this interpretation "the evangelization of the world in this generation" is a reasonable motto for the Christian church. It can be done and it ought to be done, and the Church of the Brethren ought to be the first to do her share of it. Why ridicule the idea? Let us not bring reproach upon the command of Christ by refusing to do all we can in evangelizing the world in God's appointed way, satisfied to let the conversion of the world with him who draweth all men unto himself. Let us do our duty and God will take care of the rest.

Home! Its Great Need Today.

BY C. A. BRALLIER.

"Home's not merely four square walls,
Though with pictures hung and gilded;
Home is where affection calls,
Where the heart its shrine has builded."

"THE hand that rocks the cradle, rules the world," is an old maxim, tried and true. And it shall not cease to be one as long as we have homes, because it strikes deep on the fundamental fact that the life of an individual is largely determined by the environments that are thrown about him in his infancy and, later on, through the maturing years. These are the environments of the home.

Chiefest of the determining factors of the home is mother. Oh, the tender feelings that surge within the care-trammeled soul, as we recall that sacred name. How closely youth, with all its joy, sorrows, and disappointments is linked with mother! The circumference of the child's life is in its mother.

Ah, mothers, little do you realize what a "bundle of possibilities" you cuddle upon your breast. That darling babe will be the man or woman of tomorrow.

We hear the cry today for power, for opportunity, for a chance to do something. Do you ask for power, sister? Do you know what power is? Power does not lie in the right of franchise, nor in a life of competition with men. Ah, no! Power lies in the ability to mould lives,—not by outward restraint and compulsion so much as by instilling into the life the principles that should govern it.

Mothers, herein lies your power, your opportunity! As queen of the home you hold the greatest place of power and influence today among men. The great need of our homes today is mothers who realize this, who see themselves in their relation to life.

"What is home without a mother?" Simply a place to eat and sleep,—a place of convenience for us, to adjust ourselves,—that's about all. A Chinese proverb says, "A hundred men may make an encampment, but it takes a woman to make a home."

Mothers, do you want power? Then lay hold of your God-given right, as man's helpmate, as his complement, and wield your influence for God and the right. This, well done, will leave very little time or inclination to repine for a place among men. You have the place now. God help you to fill it!

God pity the poor boy or girl whose mother neglected the greatest opportunity in her life to mould their lives for good. They are handicapped for life. Instead of going forth, in opening manhood and womanhood, equipped and fitted to perform their functions in the home and in society, they go forth to waste their time and talents in sin. Instead of going forth to conquer, they go forth to be conquered. Instead of their life being spent in progressive development of character, they spend it mostly in picking themselves up out of the dust, where they have fallen.

What we need today in our homes, is mothers. We need mothers who have been schooled in Christ, who have been perfected in him for their highest function in life,—that of motherhood! We want mothers who think more of children than they do of work, books, flowers, birds, pet dogs or cats. We want mothers who study the growing child, with all its needs, more than they do the culinary art. We want mothers who think more of adorning the soul with principles of righteousness, than they do the body with raiment. We want mothers who realize their position in the home, and make the most out of it. We want mothers who teach their daughters to be women,—not fashionable ladies. We want mothers to recognize their place in God's plan of the ages, and to accept with joy their exalted position, as mothers in a home. We want mothers who teach their boys to be men,—not puppets. We want mothers who seek to instill into the boy's life those principles of life that will give due reverence and honor to woman as his complement.

Mothers, do you want more to do? Surely, the responsibility of the position you now hold is enough to make you tremble, lest you let slip an opportunity to make home what it ought to be.

How happy the home where a mother's love soothes the aching brow, stills the troubled heart, binds up the wounds of today, and lives in the joys of her household! "Her children shall rise up and call her blessed." Such a home a son or daughter will be very loath to leave. Back to it will they come with bounding joy.

To such a home, fatigued by the conflict with the world, the husband returns at eventide with joyful anticipation of his royal welcome. The club or lodge can not keep him away. Ah, no! Home is where he finds rest, joy and freedom from cares, with his loved ones.

Ah, mothers, sisters, what an opportunity to serve the Master! May God bless our mothers! Yea, he has already blessed them!

Homiletic Hints.

BY E. B. HOFF.

Doing the Lord's Work with the Lord's Power.—Zech. 4: 6, 7.

THE Jews, after having been warned by the prophet for many years, and still persisting in their sin, were carried to Babylon to endure the chastisement of God (2 Kings 25). After the Jews were seventy years in bondage (Psa. 137 and 74), Babylonia changed hands, and under the administration of the Persian king, Cyrus, they were permitted to go to their home land and rebuild their home city. Returning was made a matter of choice with them. Many did not return but a number did. Read of the joy with which they came (Psa. 126).

Encouraged to rebuild the temple, they began, but were soon hindered by their neighbors,—the Samaritans and Moabites. These people, after not being able to hinder them themselves, sent messages to the King of Persia and interfered seriously with the rebuilding of the temple. Read here, especially, Ezra 4.

The Lord raised up two prophets,—Haggai and Zechariah, to stir up the people to activity, and get get them back to their work again. (Read Ezra 5 and Haggai 1.) In one of the messages to Zechariah we find our text. The prophet,—as prophets frequently did,—had a vision. The vision became the background of his discourse. It is recorded in Zech. 4: 1-5.

A golden lampstand was standing between two olive trees. These trees were connected with the lampstand by pipes, indicating that the lamp was well furnished with oil. The golden lampstand that stood in the temple was supplied with oil by the priests as the occasion required. This one, however, needed no human attention, but was in constant touch with the source of the light power. The angel informs the prophet that this vision is the message recorded in verses 6 and 7. It teaches that sustenance would come "not by might or power [these are military terms] but by my Spirit, saith Jehovah of hosts." This vision, then, is a promise of God's never-failing supply of power for Zerubbabel and his companions in the rebuilding of the temple.

In verse 7 we see that the task of building lay before Zerubbabel as a great mountain, but the promise comes that if the work is done in the power of the Spirit of God it will be completed with shoutings of grace, and the very mountain will become a plain before those who trust in Jehovah for their strength.

This does not indicate that they shall dispense with their skill, and sit down in idleness, but it does indicate that they may depend upon God for their strength and their protection, and that he will prosper them for their trust in him. Then, when the work is done, they will not boast of human ingenuity and ability, and take the glory home to themselves, but their song will be, "Grace, grace." One need but read the Books of Ezra and Nehemiah, to find the fulfillment of this promise. Indeed, we can find the fulfillment again and again throughout the pages of sacred history.

The New Testament indicates very strongly that God's people today are builders of a temple not made with hands. Paul says, in 1 Cor. 3: 9, "We are God's fellow-workers: ye are God's husbandry, God's building." In the same chapter, in verses 10-17, we note what kind of building God's servants should do, what kind of material they should use, and how they should build. In 1 Peter 2: 5, the apostle speaks of the spiritual house which God's people are building. If, in all Christian effort, we were to follow carefully the message of the prophet, given to Zerubbabel, the Lord's cause would prosper mightily in the face of all the enemies of the world.

Some Practical Suggestions.

BY WM. MOHLER.

Practical Talks tells of a business man who gave away four New Testaments every day. Some years ago he found that the cigars he smoked daily cost him the price of four Testaments, so he stopped the smoking habit and began the New Testament gift habit. He may have reasoned as some others have done: If he could afford to spend a certain amount of money for a habit that did him no good, he could quit the habit and afford to spend an equal amount of money in some way that would do good.

If every brother in the Church of the Brethren, who is now using tobacco, would quit the habit and give its cost, yearly, to the mission fund, what an amount of good could be done with the money now wasted on a useless habit! I find that the average user of tobacco spends for its cost about five cents a day. Some spend more, others less, but five cents a day seems to be a fair average. Five cents a day seems a small sum to say much about, when considered individually. A small piece of chewing tobacco, or one cigar a day, who would fuss about that? But when we estimate what is spent in one year, the amount is not so small, and then, when we estimate what is spent yearly, by all of the tobacco-users in the church, the amount grows appallingly.

If one member, in every twelve, uses tobacco, which I believe is a fair estimate, it means that members of the church are spending every day about $350, which in one year amounts to the enormous sum of $127,750,—an immense amount absolutely wasted! Money enough, if placed in the hands of the Mission Board, to supply 100 missionaries, paying them $600 a year, each. Out of the money remaining twenty-two churchhouses could be built, costing $3,000 each. If they did not want to build churches, they could build forty cottages for the use of the missionaries.

When the amount of good is considered, that the money, now wasted on a useless habit, might do, does it not look like a very great sin to spend the Lord's money in this way? We are supposed to be faithful stewards of the things which God has entrusted to us. If the money was given to us by the Lord for a good and useful purpose, and we use it for self-gratification, we certainly sin in so doing.

We do not want to censure the user of tobacco too severely. I notice that when contributions are taken, he gives about as liberally as those who do not use tobacco. If the non-user of tobacco pays into the Lord's treasury all that the Lord gave him for that purpose, is not the remaining money his own, to do with as he may see fit, providing that he does not use it to his own injury or the injury of others? Is not the same thing true of the user of tobacco? If it belongs to him, what difference does it make how he spends the money he does not need for his living,—whether it is for tobacco, luxuries, stocks, bonds, farms, or anything else that he may think will add to his pleasure? I am not saying that the remaining money is his own to use as he may see fit, but I do say that God will require us all to give an account of our stewardship. One essential thing is that we pay into the Lord's treasury all that he gave us for that purpose. If we give a freewill offering out of what we may call our own, we will be blessed for the deed. Under the law of Moses one-tenth of the increase was the Lord's (Lev. 27: 30). It was to be used for a specific purpose (Num. 18: 21-32). I do not know that the Lord ever relinquished his claim to this tenth. Since he has done so much more for us than he has done for the Israelites, I see no reason why he should not ask as much of us.

We have suggested that the tobacco-user quit the habit and give the cost of it to the mission fund. Our figures are based on a membership of 84,000. About one-half of this number, or 42,000, are brethren. If 7,000 of this number use tobacco, that leaves 35,000 brethren who do not use it. Now, if the 7,000, by quitting a bad habit, could be made willing to pay into the Lord's treasury the amount thus saved, every year,—$127,750,—the 35,000 brethren could, by an equal amount of self-denial, pay in five times as much. Altogether they could pay $766,500.

This is an enormous sum, yet I am quite well convinced that it is nowhere near the one-tenth of the church members' financial income. It is far more than is now given to the Lord for the support of his ministers.

We are wasting more for trifles than we are giving to the Lord. There are members that are giving liberally because they love God and are glad for the privilege of being able to help spread his Gospel, but there are many others, concerning whom I am often made to wonder why they give at all, whether they give because they are afraid not to do so, whether they give because they feel it a duty to give a little something, or whether it is because they are ashamed not to give when they see others giving. It is more than I can tell. It does look to me that if they loved the Lord with all their heart, their purse-strings would not tighten when the mission solicitor asks for help to spread the Gospel.

Many more missionaries can be used to spread the Gospel, and when I consider the wealth and increase of the church, I am made to feel that the Lord has provided us with an abundance of means to send them out into the harvest. Do you know that if every member of the Church of the Brethren would lay by one cent every day, to give to the General Mission Fund, the Mission Board would have money enough to support five hundred missionaries? Let us not censure the tobacco-user for his waste of the Lord's money until we place our equal amount of the Lord's money to the Lord's use. If all of us do that, there will be money enough to support many more than 500 missionaries. Will you do so? Some will, and some will not. May the Lord be merciful to those that will not.

IDAHO AND WESTERN MONTANA.

Just as the birth of the Child Jesus was an occasion of joy for all the heavenly host, so should the begetting of any new church organization be to all the hosts of the redeemed. When Annual Meeting spoke the District of Idaho and Western Montana into existence, she begat another son into the economy of Jesus Christ. More men are today vigorously pushing the great work to the front. Men and women are conscientiously putting life into commissions which heretofore lay dormant.

We note a few things which affect a larger range of interests than those in our immediate territory:

1. In the "Rules," or constitution, under which this District Meeting organized, she pledges her allegiance and fidelity to the General Brotherhood. She means to help the united Brotherhood to accomplish the great mission of the church.

2. In order more effectually to do her work, she appointed the following committees:

(a) Missionary Committee: L. H. Eby, President (3 years), David Betts, Secretary (2 years), Nampa, Idaho, R. D. 3, S. S. Neher, Treasurer (1 year).

(b) Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meeting Committee: E. B. Sargent, President (3 years), Jennie Brower, Secretary (2 years), Meridian, Idaho. C. A. Williams, Treasurer (1 year).

(c) Ministerial Meeting and Bible School Committee: Eld. L. E. Keltner, President (3 years), Eld. J. E. Shamberger, Secretary (2 years) Payette, Idaho, A. L. Gorham, Treasurer (1 year).

(d) Committee on Homes for Orphan Children: Eld. C. Fahrney, President (3 years), A. L. Gorham, Secretary (2 years), Payette, Idaho, T. J. Beckwith, Treasurer (1 year).

(e) Temperance Committee: Eld. L. E. Keltner, President (3 years), Julia Graybill, Secretary (2 years), Boise, Idaho, Harry Beckwith, Treasurer (1 year).

(f) Committee on Time for Next Meeting: A. I. Mow, S. A. Rhodes, A. B. Eldredge.

The secretaries of these several committees or boards, are properly the District Secretaries to correspond with both the congregation officials and the General Brotherhood officials in their respective functions. Of this, both correspondents at home and abroad will take notice, and preserve the address of those serving your interest.

3. The District organized a Child Rescue Board and withdrew from the "Board of Charities" of the combined District of Oregon, Washington and Idaho, now dissolved. The new committee is energetic and their plan of work is perfectly simple and economical.

4. The Temperance Committee is not the least feature of this new District. Before the session that appointed them adjourned they already took steps to go about their work. It was urgent.

5. A resolution from the District of North Dakota, Western Canada and Eastern Montana, proposing to make the crest of the Rocky Mountains the dividing line between them and the District of Idaho and Western Montana, was also adopted.

6. It will be observed that the secretary of the Mission Board is the District Secretary provided for in Art. II of "Petitions from the General Mission Board," p. 6, Annual Meeting Minutes, 1911. While there are now twelve organized churches in Idaho and Western Montana, yet the Mission Board has much virgin territory, and will doubtless need some assistance from the abler and better established churches. Up to the present, the District Meeting has not left any matter, within her power undone that would raise the courage and establish good fellowship within and among the several churches. We unitedly pray that, severally and unitedly, the members of Idaho and Western Montana may not only be the happy recipients of more...tune and living exponents of the Spirit of the Holy One.

Calendar of District Gatherings.

ANOTHER DEBATE.

To relieve the suspense of the many who were so disappointed in our failure to have the Akron, Ind., debate reported, I wish to say that arrangements are being made for a debate with the same people at Miami, Texas, Sept. 19. This debate will be, in all essential features, the same as the Akron debate, and as I have permission from the other party to have it reported, you still have a chance to get the debate in book form.

To those who had ordered the book, I will say that Bro. Stineclough is turning your names over to me. If I hear nothing from you to the contrary, I shall consider each subscriber as being a member of the advance order club, who still want the book.

To those who still wish to order the book, I would say, send your name and address to Bro. N. A. Gray, Miami, Tex., on a postal, stating you want a book.

Rush in your orders NOW, so there may be no question about the sales paying out on the first edition. This opportunity may never come your way again. Embrace it NOW!

THE HORN AND WOODIEL REUNION.

We held a reunion at Bro. W. L. Woodiel's home Aug. 13. It was a rainy day, and all could not get there, but twenty-one of the Horn family and twenty-seven of the Woodiel family met, and enjoyed a good dinner and a pleasant social time. The old-time reminiscences were appreciated by all. The father of the Woodiel family died in the year 1885. The writer is the oldest of the children living. Our mother is still living and enjoyed this meeting. The father of the Horn family died in 1874, but the mother is still living. Bro. Horn, with his family, moved to Austin, Ark., in 1857, and Bro. Woodiel moved to Austin, Ark., in 1868. These two widows are the oldest settlers living in that neighborhood. May God bless our mothers that their last days may be the happiest and brightest of all these days, and may we so live as to be an honor to them!

THE ROUND TABLE

Following Jesus.

BY EMMA J. MODLIN.

JESUS said, "Follow me." There are two ways of following Jesus. One way is to follow closely. "Then shalt thou walk in thy way safely, and thy foot shall not stumble" (Prov. 3: 23). The other way is to follow afar off, as Peter once did. We can not follow in this way very long before we deny him. No doubt, in our weakness, we have denied him many times, either in word or action. But if so, did we weep bitterly over our mistake, as Peter did, or did we justify ourselves?

When we think how often we have hid our light from the world, by presuming that it is unnecessary to follow the Word so closely, and then think of the judgment seat of Christ, where we must give an account, we exclaim, with one of old, "What then shall I do when God riseth up? What shall I answer him" (Job 31: 14)?

Gentle reader, do you love Christ? Then follow HIM instead of following man and man-made theories. There is so much worldly wisdom and so-called scientific teaching and methods extant today, that the simple teaching of the Gospel, in many instances, is almost lost sight of. Wisdom is all right, if it is of the right kind. But much of it is not that wisdom that cometh down from above, full of good fruits and without hypocrisy (James 3: 17). Too much of it is fleshly wisdom, from which come man-made theories and methods, until our eyes are blinded to the true light of the Gospel.

Poor, deluded souls that we are! Who hath blinded our minds? 2 Cor. 4: 4 answers the question. But these carnal natures of ours are so lustful after the things of the flesh, that, if left to go on unrestrained, we will almost wrest the Scriptures from their true meaning in order to justify ourselves in following Jesus afar off.

Let us all strive to keep on the straight and narrow way that leadeth unto life; and if at last, by the grace of God, the gates of that heavenly city swing ajar for us, and we are permitted to enter and "see him as he is," then shall we sing,

"May this my glory ever be.
That Christ was not ashamed of me."

Contentment.—1 Tim. 6: 6.

BY J. H. MILLER.

THIS word is found but once in the Bible. Paul saw how necessary it was for a Christian to heed the advice. Paul speaks of perverse disputings, of men of corrupt minds, etc. He says, "From such withdraw thyself." "But godliness with contentment is great gain." How eager some people are for wealth! They are never satisfied. The more they get, the more they want. Paul would speak on this wise: "Having food and raiment, let us be therewith content." The rarest feeling that ever lights the human face is the contentment of a loving soul—one who walks in the blessed sunlight of God's eternal truth. Some are laboring hard for more wealth, but even when it is obtained, they are not contented.

A contented mind is the greatest blessing a man can have in this world. Of a truth, contentment is felicity. Few are the real wants of men. Like the majority of his troubles, they are more imaginary than real. "Let your conversation be without covetousness, and be content with such things as ye have" (Heb. 13: 5). Some people are like the rolling waves of the ocean,—never satisfied. They have a discontented mind. Nature teaches us how to live, but wisdom teaches us how to live contented. A contented mind is opposed to luxury and affluence. To be contented, as a Christian, keeps us walking in the fear of God.

What a glorious world this would be if we had Jesus in our minds at all times, saying, "Peace be unto you." I would rather be shut up in a very modest cottage with my Bible and good books, with my friends and family, and live on the most common food, than to have the world, in its restless wave of a discontented mind, rolled at my feet. Paul had learned a good lesson. "But I rejoiced in the Lord greatly, that now at the last your care of me hath flourished again; wherein ye were also careful, but ye lacked opportunity. Not that I speak in respect of want: for I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content" (Philpp. 4: 10, 11).

A Struggle for the Light.

BY G. E. YODER.

As I was sitting in my study, one evening, with the lamp near the window, I noticed a very large "miller" putting forth every possible effort to get to the lamp on the inside of the pane. Repeatedly he would go back into the darkness and then, with a bound, dash for the light.

I was wondering what the result would be if American citizens would put forth such an effort to get to the real fountainhead and source of all light and life,—Jesus Christ! If insects, in their nature, seek light in the darkness of the night, why should not man, likewise, seek the Light of Salvation in this night of sin?

Poor man seems to be differently constituted, for he "loves darkness rather than light." But the Lord says the reason men do so is "because their deeds are evil." Man stays away from the light "lest his deeds should be reproved."

The Light will "reprove" our deeds sometime, and it will be the better for us if it does not in this world. If we "hate" the light now (because of our sins), what will be our feeling of heart at the judgment bar of God, when the searching rays of God's piercing light shall be turned upon our life, and picture each act from start to finish?

Let us seek the Light NOW.

Staying on High Ground.

BY OMA KARN.

THOSE so unfortunate as to have yielded to temptation to retaliate for a wrong, will doubtless agree with the assertion that of all the mean feelings to which human nature is subject, the feeling that follows this act, is the very meanest of all. Any one who can feel satisfaction over the results of such a proceeding, has lowered himself to a condition where the moral tone of character is at very low ebb, without much hope of ever rising from that condition. He has injured himself far more than has the one that attacked him.

It need never hurt us to be wronged or attacked or set aside. It may hurt our feelings but that is a minor matter. The one who is really hurt is the one who has wronged us, for as some one has said, "The aggressor does more harm to himself than to the person whom he wrongs."

The place for the one wronged is on high ground,—so high above our assailant that only the echo of his blows reaches us. To return the wrong,—get even,—necessitates getting down on his level. In this fact lies the explanation of the degraded feeling that follows retaliation. Better suffer in silence than to lower ourselves to this level.

The "Know-All."

BY DAVID M. ADAMS.

THE greatest bore to humanity is the "Know-all." He is a decided nuisance. So far as inflicting any material harm is concerned, he is very much like the dove, but when compared with the serpent, with reference to wisdom, he is woefully lacking. He presents himself at almost every public gathering. He makes himself conspicuous in every circle,—social, political and religious. He is watched only to be avoided. He meets no legitimate want of society. However, he is very intrusive, and preys greatly upon the patience of his fellow-man. No matter who is speaking, he is sure to interrupt and express his opinion, which, in his judgment, should put an eternal quietus to the discussion. He vaunteth himself and is always puffed up. His ambition is to serve humanity in the capacity of a ready reference book.

Now, there is no use to contend with a "Know-all." It is a useless expenditure of time, words and energy. Let him have his say while you preserve wise and eloquent silence. Nothing else will satisfy him.

Scalp Level, Pa.

THE apostle tells us that we should "earnestly contend for the faith," and the injunction is well worth heeding, in these days of loose religious views. We must remember, however, that when our earnestness is shown merely by being contentious about our own definition of the faith, we are a good ways from the apostolic mark of perfection. The faith referred to by the apostle is one thing, while man-made definitions may be, and are, quite different, and lamentably deficient, at times.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS' TOPIC

Abraham the Man of Faith.

Heb. 11: 8-10, 17-19.

For Sunday Evening, September 10, 1911.

I. Faith Is Confidence in God (v. 1).—It is associated with hope (v. 1); with righteousness (v. 4); with holiness (v. 5); with diligence (v. 7); with trial (v. 17); with conflict (vs. 32-37, 39).

II. Faith Is Demanded (Mark 11: 22; Luke 8: 50; Eph. 6: 16).

III. Samples of Faith (Gen. 15: 6; 22: 8; Job 19: 25; Dan. 3: 17; Heb. 11: 33); an active faith (Jas. 2: 21-26).

IV. Abraham Was the Great Typical Example of Faith.—By faith he obeyed the call of God (Gen. 12: 1-4); by faith Isaac was born (vs. 11, 12); by faith he "offered up Isaac" (v. 17). Abraham's faith in God and his love for God were stronger than his love for his beloved son. Hence, his prompt obedience.

V. Abraham Was an Extraordinary Man.—(1) He sustained the very intimate relation of "friend of God" (Jas. 2: 23); "father of many nations" (Rom. 4: 17); and "father of all them that believe" (Rom. 4: 11). (2) He complies with conditions of true discipleship in forsaking all (Gen. 12: 1-4; Heb. 11: 8; Luke 14: 33); and in being justified by faith (Gen. 15: 6; Gal. 3: 6).

VI. Faith Is the Living Source of Christian Conduct.—(1) We walk by faith (2 Cor. 5: 7); we stand by faith (2 Cor. 1: 24); we resist the devil by faith (1 Peter 5: 9), we overcome the world by faith (1 John 5: 4). (2) Faith is the spring of our spiritual life. Hence, the life of faith (Gal. 2: 20); the work of faith (2 Thess. 1: 11); the household of faith (Gal. 6: 10). With all the examples in Heb. 11, we ought to be spiritual giants.

PRAYER MEETING

Living for the Day or for Eternity.

Titus 2: 11-14; Matt. 16: 24-27.

For Week Beginning September 10, 1911.

1. Looking Beyond the Portals.—A realization of the world invisible is a source of great help and inspiration to Christians. It was said of Moses, "He endured as seeing him who is invisible." Willingly he renounced the honors of the Egyptian court, that he might resolutely pursue his way toward the promised land. An unseen hand beckoned and he followed. All of God's people may share the influence of the world invisible. They may feel the "impulse from the sky,"—the power of an endless life (Heb. 12: 1, 2).

2. The Message From Above.—To the Christian, burdened, saddened, weary with life's struggles, there comes the greeting, with voice of music and the beckoning of an inviting hand, "Cheer up! There awaits you the loving welcome from the loved ones of long ago! God is real! Spirits are real! Heaven is real! The things that are unseen are eternal! Have courage! Work on! Fight on! Pray on! The light afflictions, which are but for a moment, work out for you a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory!" Then, in response to this "impulse from the sky," this "power of an endless life," the child of God is able, like Moses, to "endure as seeing him who is invisible" (2 Cor. 4: 15-18).

3. Our Standard of Things That Count.—Three things we must bear in mind: (1) The transitoriness of the visible,—"The things that are seen are temporal." (2) The permanency of the invisible,—"The things that are not seen are eternal." (3) The value of a faith that is better than sight. Happy is he who has full control of this new, spiritual faculty. It is the only way to spiritual greatness. He who sees things of earth only, and spends his time in getting them, is sure to lose all desire for the development of his higher nature. His lower self will soon be most prominent,—his real self. Get right with God and keep there (2 Peter 1: 2-11).

HOME AND FAMILY

The Use of Flowers.

God might have bade the earth bring forth
Enough for great and small,
The oak tree and the cedar tree,
Without a flower at all.
We might have had enough, enough
For every want of ours,
For luxury, medicine, and toil,
And yet have had no flowers.

Then wherefore, wherefore were they made,
All dyed with rainbow light,
All fashioned with supremest grace,
Upspringing day and night,
Springing in valleys green and low,
And on the mountains high,
And in the silent wilderness
Where no man passes by?

Our outward life requires them not—
Then wherefore had they birth?
To minister delight to man,
To beautify the earth;
To comfort man—to whisper hope,
Whene'er his faith is dim.
For who so careth for the flowers
Will care much more for him!

As It Is Told in Our Faces.

BY ELIZABETH D. ROSENBERGER.

"Favor is deceitful and beauty is vain," quoted Aunt Cynthia.

Her niece, Leah, pouted a little. "Any one would rather look at a beautiful face than a homely one."

"It all depends on what you call beauty," replied Aunt Cynthia seriously. "If I could not have both I would rather have an attractive face at fifty than at twenty-five."

Leah looked surprised but said nothing and Aunt Cynthia explained, "My face at twenty-five is the one that God has given me. But when I am fifty I have done much toward making my face what it is. At that age my face is a history of my life. At your age," and Aunt Cynthia smiled as she looked into the sparkling eyes of Leah and noted the rosy cheeks and delicate features,—"your face is a prophecy."

"Let the beauty of the Lord our God be upon us," said the Psalmist, and that is the only beauty that is imperishable. The newspapers, today, publish hints for those who are anxious to improve their personal appearance; but the wisest counsel of all was given once by a preacher who said, "If a man or woman wants to realize the full power of personal beauty, it must be by cherishing noble hopes and purposes by having something to do and something to live for."

Queen Esther was considered "fair and beautiful." She had been brought up in the fear and love of God, and when her time of testing came, she was loyal and true. Mordecai told her that if she failed to do her duty, God would find some other means of saving his people, but he thought it likely that God had brought her to the throne for such a time as this. Then Esther, the queen, said, "If I perish, I perish." She risked her life by going in to see the king uninvited. She was beautiful,—her heroism and courage left its impress upon her features,—and to this day Queen Esther is admired and praised.

There is a story in every face. I wonder why we do not keep in mind that on our face is printed a diary or a sort of handy reference journal of what we are, and our friends are quite skillful at interpreting it, too. If we thought of this when the impulse is strong upon us to say angry words and hold spiteful feelings, we would more often ask God to take away all anger and malice and evil thoughts from our hearts, since the story they outline on our faces is an ugly one.

It is most interesting to read what is portrayed on the faces of people. The trial and sorrow which was bravely borne and afterward brought forth the peaceable fruits of righteousness, has left an impress of strength and courage that inspires other struggling souls to do their best. There are faces which speak only of the joy of living, their story is illumined with hope and happiness. The troubles and trials are forgotten and not permitted to embitter their lives. Looking at such faces men praise the Lord for all his goodness, and resolve to live closer to him. They see the glory of God and ask for grace divine which enables them to come off more than conquerors through Christ. Such a face is a prophecy of greater joys in the world to come.

What is sadder in all the world than the old age that has lived for self alone! The face of such a one is a chronicle of noble thoughts and impulses which were stifled; of great possibilities which were unrealized, of noble deeds which were never done because the man was too selfish to give his time or thought or money to bring it to pass. A face like this is hard, and cold, and repellent. We do not care to read the story,—it is too painful. It speaks of a life given over to pleasure and selfishness. Such a face, like the gate to a cemetery, tells us, "All within here is dead; this man tried to save his own life and lost it; he lived for himself."

It was not until Moses had been living forty years in the palace, forty years in the desert, and had forty days of fasting in the desert in communion with God, that his face shone with the reflected effulgence of divine glory. It was then that his countenance proclaimed the beauty and holiness of the Lord's presence. When saints on earth have had some of this kind of preliminary training, they will have somewhat more in their countenances of the divine light which illumined his. The brooding over wrongs, fancied or real, leaves its unerring mark on our faces. To think about the offense,—how unkindly we have been treated, how mean and unjust was some remark,—only adds to its sting and deepens our own suffering and anger. And this record is in our faces, in the lines which are eloquent of discontent and unhappiness. Eggs are not the only things which are kept alive by brooding over them; our grievances multiply and enlarge when we sit down and brood. We almost instinctively turn away from the face with a look of sorrow; it is so natural to turn to the smiling face with a tale of joy instead; but we should help all as we are given opportunity. We avoid the face with a history of crime and sin; it is sad, and only God can erase those lines and inscribe his forgiveness.

We have read of a heathen prince who visited London, and while there met the good Dr. Marsh, and was so impressed that he said, "That good minister has such a beautiful face, I must learn about his religion and worship God." It is not at all likely that Dr. Marsh was aware of his beautiful face; if he had been, it would have been spoiled. The sooner we learn that there is a close relation between character and the face, we shall believe that the beauty of holiness is as imperishable as the God who gave it.

A traveler said that what impressed him in Christian lands was the beautiful old ladies; heathen women grow ugly as they grow old. Here the mothers who pray for their dear ones and live a life of unselfish service for those they love, are beautiful; the radiance of peace and trust is about them. On the face of a Christian mother is inscribed that which draws the love of all hearts. There are poems and tragedies, purities and victories dramatized within it.

Before the years have all brought their gifts, and the last one comes, in that gray-haired waiting time, to offer me eternity, God grant me the beauty that takes possession of a plain face in the name of its immortal soul and stamps it with the grace of God.

Save One.

BY WEALTHY A. BURKHOLDER.

"He which converteth a sinner from the error of his way, shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins" (James 5: 20).

"Souls are perishing before thee,
Save, save one.
It may be thy crown of glory,
Save one.
From the waves that would devour
From the raging lion's power,
From destruction's fiery shower,
Save, save one."

THE account of the consecration service at the St Joseph Conference was certainly inspiring, and I believe there will be glorious results in the future from its influence. When I read it I thought of the hymn, "What Must It Be to Be There?" If only reading about it, hundreds of miles away, thrills one with such interest, what must it have been, to be in that audience? No wonder the thousands were moved to tears, and no doubt there were many who were interested as they never were before. On such occasions the heart is deeply stirred, and it is good it is so. These consecration meetings are a power for good, and we hope they will continue to grow in interest as the years go by.

But let us not forget that while many can not cross the ocean and enter foreign fields, the home field is needy, and souls are just as precious. The mission field is all around us, and often a very needy field is right in our own congregations, for many are going down to destruction that we ought to try to save. If every member of the church would make an effort to save only one, what a great addition there would be to the body! There would certainly be a revival of wonderful interest, because those who are rescued would feel like being a working force to help to save others.

What is needed is to lead men and women to obey the truth as found in God's Word and not simply to join some denomination. There is plenty of church-joining going on, but where do we find them? Often they do the very things they are commanded not to do, because they have not been taught correctly. The commands and precepts of the good old Book are not considered essential, and hence unnecessary. But our God is jealous of his Word, and he demands obedience on the part of those who would be his followers. But people are not instructed, and not taught a strict observance of the Gospel. It is not a hard service, but one of great joy if people only would consider, and not allow themselves to be blinded by the trifling pleasures of this world. "Thus saith the Lord, thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel; I am the Lord thy God, which teacheth thee to profit, which leadeth thee by the way that thou shouldest go. O that thou hadst hearkened to my commandments! then had thy peace been as a river, and thy righteousness as the waves of the sea" (Isa. 48: 17, 18).

Will we not make an effort to have people know of this great peace, which comes from obeying the great Teacher? Time is short, and many workers are falling, and their places should be filled.

"Not in thy own strength confiding,
Save, save one,
Faith and prayer thy effort guiding,
Save, save one!
None can do'er unless possessing,
Heavenly aid and heavenly blessing,
To the work of mercy pressing,
Save, save one."

SISTERS' AID SOCIETIES

OTTAWA, KANS.—We, the Banner Aid Society, retain our officers for another year, with the exception of Mrs. Teeter as assistant superintendent. We have been making bedding for the Colorado orphanage at Denver, Colo., which was thankfully received. Notwithstanding her extreme age, Sister Neusbaum has made over a dozen pieced two-block bedtick quilts. She has them almost finished. She will work until Jesse comes.—Sister Emma Teeter, Ottawa, Kans., Aug. 26.

EPHRATA, PA.—The report of our Sisters' Aid Society for the year ending Aug. 1, 1911, is as follows: Meetings are being held once a month, with an average attendance of ten. Articles made for sale are 181 aprons, ten quilts, eight comforts and one gingham bonnet; donations given: $25 to Bethany Bible School; $23.50 towards furnishing a room in the Brethren Home at Neffsville, Pa. One box of clothing was sent to the Chicago Mission on Christmas. The needy near home were given help as circumstances required. The total amount of money received during the year was $167.85. This includes donations, dues and receipts from sales. The total expenditure was $124.35. With last year's balance of $32.97, this leaves $42.88 in the treasury. The officers for the following year are Sister Emma Hildebrand, president; Sister Emma Seltzer, vice-president; Sister Gertrude Shirk, secretary; Sister Alice Taylor, treasurer.—Mary A. Martin, Ephrata, Pa., Aug. 17.

HUNTSDALE, PA.—We reorganized our Sisters' Aid Society July 6, with Sister Annie Quigley as president; Sister Annie Miller, vice-president; Sister Velva Evans, treasurer; Sister Hattie Beeler, secretary. During the year fourteen meetings were held, with an average of eleven members present. The report of the past year was as follows: Amount carried forward from the previous year, $7.80; amount received during the year, $48.47; amount expended for goods, donations to the needy ones, and a donation toward putting in a phone for our elder, amounted to $28.83, leaving a balance of $28.08 in our treasury. We made and sold thirty-four sun-bonnets, thirty-two dust-bonnets, ten dust-caps, thirteen aprons, eight bibs, four clothes-pin aprons, one lounge cover, and other articles. We have an enrollment of thirty-four, and are still increasing in number and in interest. With God's help we hope to prosper and do much good in his name.—Elizabeth Kreider, Huntsdale, Pa., Aug. 18.

☞All business and communications intended for the paper should be addressed to the BRETHREN PUBLISHING HOUSE, ELGIN, ILL., and not to any individual connected with it.

We have the report of the committee on rebaptism. The report will be published next week.

Bro. Chas. W. Rowe, of Indiana, is locating at Bridgewater, Va., and has accepted a position in the college.

We have the initial copy of the Berean Worker, issued in the interest of the Berean Bible School, Los Angeles, Cal.

At the late District Meeting of Michigan Bro. C. L. Wilkins was chosen as a member of the Standing Committee for 1912.

Oct. 5 is the date announced for the District Meeting of Northern Indiana, to be held in the Springfield congregation, near Wawaka.

Bro. J. E. Miller and his party are expected to reach New York about Sept. 8. When last heard from they were in England.

Thirteen put on Christ in baptism and were added to the White Rock church, Va., as the fruits of a revival held by Bro. J. S. Showalter.

Bro. David M. Adams, of Pennsylvania, has been engaged for a series of meetings in the Bachelor Run congregation, Ind., beginning Nov. 18.

Bro. D. D. Culler, of Mount Morris College, gave the Messenger office a short call last Saturday. He tells us that his school will open Sept. 5.

On another page we are printing the program for the Ministerial Meeting of Northern Missouri, to be held in the Rockingham church, Sept. 7.

The members composing the District of Western Maryland are to convene in District Meeting in the Accident congregation, on Saturday, Oct. 7.

Bro. C. B. Smith, of Kansas, who has been engaged for some evangelistic work in Indiana, is now conducting a series of meetings at Clay City.

Bro. Edward C. Bixler, late of North Manchester College, has located at Bridgewater, Va., and will occupy the chair of ancient languages in Bridgewater College.

Bro. G. N. Falkenstein, of Elizabethtown, Pa., is to hold a series of meetings at the Free Spring house, Lost Creek congregation, his State, beginning Sept. 30.

The program for the Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meetings for Northern Missouri, to be held in the Rockingham church, Sept. 6, will be found on page 557.

In Hutchinson, Kans., good lots for a church have been purchased in a very desirable part of the city, and work on the building, so we learn, will begin the early part of next week.

Reporting for the Trevilians congregation, Va., our correspondent says that nine have been added to the church by baptism since the last report. Seven were baptized quite recently.

We have the program for the Sunday-school and Ministerial Meeting of Northeastern Kansas, to be held in the Washington Creek church, Oct. 1 and 2. The program will be published soon.

As the fruits of some effectual revival work done at West Milton, Ohio, by Bro. Harvey Snell, of California, twenty-six were added to the church by confession and baptism, and two restored to fellowship.

In the Appanoose congregation, Kans., W. A. Kinzie, of Texas, did some evangelistic work that resulted in twenty-one accessions by confession and baptism, one restored to fellowship and two awaiting the initiatory rite.

During special evangelistic efforts in the Middle Creek congregation, Pa., six were added to the church,—five buried with Christ in baptism and one restored to fellowship. Bro. H. C. Early did the preaching.

We are asked to announce Oct. 5 as the date for the District Meeting of Northeastern Ohio, to be held in the Nimishillen church. The Ministerial Meeting is the day previous, while the elders are to meet on the 3d, at 1 P. M.

Bro. W. L. Hatcher, of Indiana, devoted a few weeks to revival work at Poages Mill, Va., and had the pleasure of seeing twelve added to the church, eleven by confession and baptism, and one reclaimed. Two are yet to be baptized.

Bro. B. E. Kesler writes us from Bruce Lake, Ind., where he is conducting a series of meetings, under the direction of the Mission Board of Northern Indiana. His purpose is to remain in the State until the close of the second week in September.

The little band of believers at Verona, N. Dak., are building a meetinghouse, and expect to have it completed in time for their fall feast. There is a fine farming country in this part of the Northwest, and the outlook for our people is most promising.

Bro. B. B. Garber, of Virginia, is engaged in a series of meetings in the Old Pipe Creek church, Md. Our correspondent says that "the messages given are from above and have the divine flavor." What more should be expected of men chosen to preach the Word?

On account of the health of his wife Bro. I. J. Rosenberger, of Covington, Ohio, is not doing any evangelistic work at this time. He writes us that his years are piling up, and that if he lives until next April, the 20th, he will have rounded out his three score and ten.

Bro. Paul Mohler, who has been spending the summer in North Dakota, is in a position, just now, to hold some Bible Normals in congregations desiring his services. He may be addressed at Bethany Bible School, Extension Dept., 3435 West Van Buren St., Chicago, Ill.

Do not overlook our twenty-five cent proposition. Any one who is not receiving the Messenger at this time may have the paper from the time his subscription is received until the end of the year for twenty-five cents. This, of course, means trial subscriptions, and the splendid offer ought to add a few thousand names to our list. See special offer on page 559.

Bro. C. W. Guthrie, writing from Hovatter, W. Va., says that his health has been improving very slowly, still he is not strong enough to continue in the lecture field, especially in the North. He is planning to reach Bethany Bible School by Sept. 9, and after the special services, the next day, will arrange to return to his home in Los Angeles, Cal.

Bro. I. S. Long, wife and two children, of India, are planning to sail for America Sept. 15, and should reach New York about the middle of October. This they will do if the threatened famine does not set in. If the famine comes, they will remain by their people, though they have been in India eight years, and are fully entitled to a furlough. Their address, on reaching Virginia, their native State, will be Port Republic.

Bro. James M. Moore, after spending most of the summer in Southern Illinois and Iowa, has returned to his work at the Bethany Bible School, Chicago, and may be addressed accordingly.

It has been arranged for Bro. B. E. Kesler to engage in another public discussion, this time at Miami, Texas, beginning Sept. 19. The propositions will be practically the same as the ones discussed in Indiana. In all probability the debate will be published. See notice on page 549.

The Committee on Program for the Ministerial Meeting of Northern Illinois and Wisconsin, for 1912, is composed of Brethren Ezra Flory, M. M. Sherrick and I. C. Snavely. The Sunday-school Committee consists of Brethren J. G. Royer, Ezra Flory and Sister Maud Newcomer.

Michigan joins with Northern Illinois and Wisconsin in recommending a permanent place, such as Winona Lake, for the Conference whenever it comes to the Central District. Should this sentiment prevail, it means that about every third or fourth year the Annual Meeting will be held at Winona Lake, Ind.

While in Elgin last week Bro. D. L. Miller spent a few hours in the Messenger sanctum. On Saturday, accompanied by Sister Miller, he started to North Dakota, expecting to be absent several weeks. Before returning, they may go as far as Seattle, Wash. They probably spent last Sunday with the members in Minneapolis.

July 28 Bro. Jeremiah Brown, an aged elder of New Windsor, Md., passed to his reward. For a number of years he preached the Gospel, and labored earnestly to give full proof of his ministry. On account of ill health it became necessary for him to retire from active work five years ago. He was eighty-four years old when he died.

Last week mention was made of the pleasant occasion, when Bro. W. K. Moore, of Waddams Grove, Ill., rounded out the eightieth year of his earthly pilgrimage. He died on Monday morning of this week, after spending the greater part of his life in the service of the Lord. Bro. Moore was a very devout man, had unbounded faith in the Master, loved the church dearly and was always delighted in her service. As a minister he faithfully served the church a number of years, and for several years served in the eldership. With his faithful wife, who survives him, he was never absent from the house of the Lord, when it was possible for them to attend. He is the last of the four aged and earnest elders of the Waddams Grove church to pass over during the last few years. Together they labored for a full generation, and now, together, they rest in their graves, awaiting the final resurrection and their reward.

At the late District Meeting of Northern Illinois and Wisconsin the elders decided in favor of ordaining Bro. J. H. B. Williams, of Elgin, to the eldership, and appointed Brethren D. L. Miller and I. B. Trout to conduct the services. They met with the Elgin church on Wednesday evening, Aug. 23, and, after a season of prayer, announced the purpose of their coming. The scripture, setting forth the qualifications of New Testament elders, or bishops, was read and explained. After this the members, one at a time, went before the two elders, in an adjoining room, and cast their votes. When the votes were recorded, the choice for the ordination was found to be unanimous, and the result was so announced. Next in order was the delivering of the charge, setting forth, in short, clear statements, the duties, privileges and responsibilities of an elder and his wife. All of them being cheerfully accepted, without mental reservation, then followed the laying on of hands. With us it is customary for the husband and wife to kneel side by side, while the husband receives the imposition of hands, accompanied by impressive invocations. The receiving of the newly-ordained brother and his wife completes the ceremony. The wife of Bro. Quincy Holsopple was, at the same time, received with him in office, he being a minister, and appointed as missionary to India. The ordination services were impressive throughout.

We have an interesting letter in which we are told about an evangelist, who is said to be a good man and a preacher of considerable ability. It is encouraging when we can speak thus of a minister who is sent forth to preach the Gospel. One who is a good man, and who can preach the Gospel with ability, ought to be recognized as a man chosen to represent the interest of heaven on earth, and what he says should be regarded as a message from God.

The temperance addresses, delivered at the St. Joseph Conference, have been printed, making a neat little paper-covered pamphlet of twenty-three pages. Here you will find addresses by Brethren D. W. Kurtz, J. J. Yoder, S. P. Berkebile, D. L. Miller and P. J. Blough. One could hardly find better reading on the temperance question. Price, five cents per copy, fifty cents a dozen, or $2.25 a hundred. The pamphlets should be purchased and distributed by the hundreds. Send all orders to the Brethren Publishing House.

The Sacrifice of Human Life.

A gloom was cast over a large portion of the country by the sacrifice of human life at the National Automobile Races at Elgin, last week. The races lasted two days, and nearly 100,000 people witnessed the contests between more than a score of machines, whose drivers, in their eagerness for victory, seemed to defy death. As the result of the practice in preparation, and of the races themselves, three men are dead. By the collapsing of a section of the grand stand at least seventy-five people were injured, and some of them severely. Instead of a banquet celebrating the races, as had been planned, there were houses of mourning and long funeral processions. Instead of the cry for victory, there is the lamentation of the bereft. And why all this? Merely to gratify the cravings of a pleasure-loving public. People demand that which is sensational,—even to the sacrificing of life,—and are willing to pay the price. For the money and honor in it, there are those who are anxious to take the fearful risk. But what must be said of people in this civilized age who insist on such performances? Then, what must be thought of the thousands of Christian people who, by their presence and money, encourage contests which mean the sacrifice of precious lives and the maiming of people? Such contests must, necessarily, lead to the lowering of spirituality in any community. In the scale of civilization and Christianity such a performance simply means the lowering of the standards. What is needed in this country is a higher sense of spirituality, and a type of religion that will not sanction or encourage the endangering of human life for the carnal gratification of a pleasure-loving people. There is a painful lesson in the sad incidents that happened at Elgin, and it is to be hoped that the community may never be called upon to pass through a similar experience.

The Law and the Gospel.

There is a difference between the Law and the Gospel, the former belonging to the Old Dispensation, while the latter pertains to the New. Moses represents the Law, while Jesus represents the Gospel. These distinctions are referred to under different heads. We speak of them as the Old Covenant and the New Covenant, and the Old Testament and the New Testament. Then we read of a "Better Testament" (Heb. 7: 22), implying that there was an inferior testament. The terms "covenant" and "testament" refer to the same thing.

We read that "the law and the prophets were until John: since that time the kingdom of God is preached" (Luke 16: 16). By this we are to understand that the Law given by Moses was in full force until John entered upon his mission. Then the principles, pertaining to the kingdom represented by Jesus, began to be preached. John did not represent the Law of Moses, but he proclaimed the ushering in of the New, or Christian, Dispensation. His theme was Jesus, the Gospel, the New and Better Testament, and what he said prepared the people to receive the still more advanced teachings of Jesus.

Jesus, though made under the Law (Gal. 4: 4), was the Head of a new and better system of religion than that taught by Moses. He did not come to destroy the Law, but to fulfill, or to perfect, or to consummate it. He not only embodied, in his system, all the good in the Mosaic Law, but even more. He instructed on a much higher plane, and demanded a line of conduct that would excel the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees (Matt. 5: 20). The real purpose of his system was finally to do away with the Law of Moses and to give the people the Gospel instead.

During the time of the apostles this was the burning question—a question that made more disturbance than all the other questions put together. Paul would have it understood that those who accepted Christ need not keep the Law of Moses, while many of the converted Jews held that the Law was still binding. This is why there was such a contention regarding circumcision. Moses taught circumcision, while the Gospel did not. Jesus, though circumcised himself, did not teach the rite in any of his addresses. He introduced a system of religion that would eliminate circumcision along with all the rites, ceremonies and sacrifices of the Law of Moses.

To get the Jews to understand this, was the most difficult task with which Paul had to deal. With a view of settling the question, he wrote the Epistle to the Galatians. Ephesians, in part, deals with the same question. So do the Books of Romans and Hebrews. Paul discusses the question by referring to the Law and contrasting it with the Gospel. Under the head of "works" he again refers to the Law, and contrasts works with faith and grace. He does the same when mention is made of the letter and the spirit, the former relating to the letter of the Law, the latter to the teachings or the spirit of the Gospel.

In Eph. 2: 8, 9 he affirms that salvation is of grace and not of works. The term "grace" here embraces what is taught and promised in the Gospel, while "works" refers to the requirements under the Law of Moses. In Gal. 3 the works of the Law and faith are contrasted. The term "faith" carries with it all that Christ taught and enjoined. Salvation was obtained by faith in Christ Jesus, and not by the works required in the Law of Moses. And so Paul continues to argue the question, contrasting Moses and Christ, the Law and the Gospel, works and faith, and works and grace. The burning question was, The Old Testament or the New Testament, the Old Covenant or the New Covenant, the Better Testament or the inferior one?

Then, to make his point more clear, Paul would have the Jews understand that the believers in Christ are no longer under the Law but under the Gospel; no more under Moses, but under Christ, and that the real purpose of the Law was to serve as a "school master to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith" in Jesus, and not by the works of the Law of Moses (Gal. 3: 24-26).

The Minister True to New Testament Standards.

The supply and distribution of our ministers have been considered the problems in the past. And, true enough, these are serious and perplexing questions. Under the present plan, there is nothing to require the churches to elect men to the ministry, though suitable material may be abundant; and when men are elected, there is no rule of distribution, save the choice of those thus chosen, and the result is, there is much unused talent lying dormant in the church, and very much talent has been given to the professions, such as teaching, medicine, law, etc., that should have been directed into the channels of church work. Without any rule of ministerial distribution, there is a congestion of ministers at some places and great want at others. This ought not so to be.

But the most serious and vital question of all is the qualification of the minister, or the minister true to New Testament standards. Supply and distribution are minor questions in comparison with the minister himself,—the minister as a minister. His qualifications may be divided into several classes: The moral and spiritual, the mental and the doctrinal.

For the present it is enough to say that the moral and spiritual fitness of the minister is placed above all else. Only godly, spiritually-minded men can meet the requirements of the ministry. The command to the minister is, "Take heed to thyself." As to the mental, or intellectual, qualifications, it should be considered that the minister is to be a teacher. He is not only to exhort the people, inviting and urging them to the better way, but he is to teach the people the better way; he is to be a teacher, a real teacher of the people; and his work and strength should command such recognition at the hands of the people. And he should be an apt teacher, doing his teaching aptly.

It means, then, to say the least, that the minister must be an intelligent man,—the most intelligent of men. He is not only abreast of the thought of his age, that is, even with it, but he is in advance of it; he is in the position of the real teacher. The duties of his office require him to meet and deal with all classes of men. His need, then, of an education,—the best that he can get,—is no longer any question. It is an imperative need, clear to all. No danger of too much of it, if it is of the right kind. Generally speaking, there is much too little. The chief danger is on this side of the question.

Whether or not an educational standard should be fixed for our ministry, is a vital question, and an interesting one as well. Already some complications have been developed that make it a little embarrassing. Those going abroad as missionaries must meet some educational requirements. And the General Mission Board, as well as most of the workers on the field, are of the opinion that, for the best interests of the work, the requirements are not high enough at present; and it is most likely that the conditions abroad will force a fixed standard, or nearly so, for this class of our preachers and workers in the near future. And the logic of this act would set a standard for all our ministers and workers. The conditions of the foreign field may make an education more essential than conditions at home; but the conditions here are such as to demand the best learning. Other things being equal, the learned worker is much more effective than the unlearned one. It might be a wise thing, then, to establish a standard, with some flexibility, for all the ministers at least. Any way, it will be wise to consider the matter carefully.

Under the doctrinal qualification, it is to be understood that the minister must be sound in doctrine, sound in faith, "holding fast the faithful word as he hath been taught, that he may be able by sound doctrine both to exhort and to convince the gainsayers." He is to be taught in the Word, he is to believe the teaching, he is to hold fast the faithful Word, and he is to exhort and convince by sound doctrine. He is thus authorized as a minister of the Gospel and set apart to teach the Word by the church, God's representative on earth.

It is the province of the church to decide whether or not her ministers are sound in doctrine. And the church is far from her duty to the Word, when installing men into the ministry, if she does not test their soundness in doctrine; and if unsoundness in doctrine is developed, it is her duty to hold the matter up until the necessary change is brought about. Certainly, no one unsound in doctrine should be installed into the ministry.

And now, the point of most concern with me at present is, that those chosen to the ministry are not sufficiently examined on points of faith and doctrine. I insist on it. As proof you need only refer to the installation service. Briefly summed up, it is this: The minister is asked whether he willingly accepts the office of the ministry, whether he accepts and adopts the order and practice of the church in plainness of dress and nonconformity to the world, and whether he promises to unite his labors with the faithful brethren to observe and enforce the faith and practice of the general Brotherhood. If he answers yes, he is installed. Nor does the charge, as printed, cover the ground of essential doctrines.

These three questions are proper. Every minister should answer them. But they are not enough. The general ground work of faith in doctrine should be carefully looked into. In this day of higher criticism and general heterodoxy, when the wildest sorts of things are believed and taught from the pulpit, it is high time that the Church of the Brethren should authorize only those to preach who are sound in faith. Few churches exercise so little care as to the doctrinal qualification of her ministers as our own church. She installs her ministers without knowing what they believe in general doctrine, and each one goes out and preaches what he pleases; and the wonder is that she has held together as well as she has.

The Conference ought to take up this matter and appoint a strong committee to prepare an examination in general doctrine, in addition to what the installation service already contains, to which every one chosen to the ministry shall be subjected. Then it would be well for each State District to constitute a strong committee on the election and ordination of ministers, with terms of office, who would conduct elections of the ministers and their examination.

By the Seaside.

As long as we can remember, we were interested in the sea, and the dream of our boyhood was to get big enough and old enough to go and see the sea. But after having once enjoyed the privilege, traveling thousands and thousands of miles over its billows, and obtaining some idea of its vastness, we were only then made to realize the immensity of this world of ours; and what a large part of it lies hidden beneath her seas.

The story of Jonah and the vessel of rescue that God had provided for him, after trying to hide from his presence, was simply beyond our comprehension, as the story was based on things of which we had only the most vague conception. But this fact only made our desire the more intense, to see and know more about the great seas and the inhabitants thereof.

Then, too, the story of Simon, the tanner, and the house by the seaside and what happened there, were of great interest. The Christ and his preaching, his works and talks with his disciples, the fishing experiences, the miraculous success at his command, his walking over its dashing billows to save his frightened disciples, and the calming of the boisterous waves, the feeding of the thousands on its shores,—all this added greatly to our wondering speculations about the seas.

And what shall we say of Paul's perilous and providential trip to Rome? Need we wonder that Bible readers, who have learned to know Jesus and are made to feel his loving power to save, should be wonderfully interested in the great seas that are so closely associated with his life, while preparing his great scheme of salvation for a perishing world,—for those who believe in and accept the deliverance from the bondage of sin? Surely, the seas, as well as the mountains, and all things else, are the Lord's and have been created for our enjoyment and good, if we use them as his gifts and to his glory.

One of the supreme pleasures of our life came to us when we had the privilege of traveling over some of the great seas,—especially those connected with the Bible story. Thus we saw the port of Jaffa of turbulent fame, the embarking place for Jonah's perilous voyage. That, too, is the town where Simon, the tanner, lived. There was his house, on the roof of which we stood. Of course, Simon and his family, long ago, had passed away; but our standing on the roof and seeing and hearing the dashing waves, as they plunged up against the seaside of the house, made the story more real than it could otherwise have been. Then, too, we enjoyed our sojourning, for a while, on the shore of the Sea of Galilee, and later on, our traversing of a part of the road over which Paul went, in going to Rome, and standing at Puteoli, and seeing the place where he landed from his voyage. All these opportunities were wonderful realizations of younger life-dreams, and the Bible stories that so significantly cluster around the seas made deeper impressions on our mind and heart. Because of these many fond recollections we are now at this place, "The Beacon by the Sea." Here we are in view of the sea and in hearing of the waves, as they dash up against the sandy shore, and we are telling, in pen story, some of the thoughts we are having while here.

During the hot days of July and August hundreds and thousands leave the large and crowded cities and come to these seaside resorts, to escape from the almost unbearable heat, and for a season of rest and respite from the business cares of life. And as long as the regular seasons come and go, thousands will flock to seaside homes, or to the mountains for needed rest and relief from the oppressive heat, that is so common in the crowded cities.

The only sad feature about the whole affair is that too many that profess to be Christians leave their church services, their religion and their Christ at home. It may be a good thing, for a season, to get away from the heat and business cares of life, but it is not a good thing to get away from religion, and Christ, and to dismiss God from our thoughts. We need our religion and the Christ at these places as much as we do at our homes,—yea, much more,—because Satan has not ceased his trips to and fro, and up and down through this world, where the children of men assemble. He is anxious to see how they do and, in the fullness of his craftiness, to offer his services to those who dismiss God and Christ from their minds and hearts.

These are the places where he sends his most faithful missionaries, because at such places men and women are most liable to neglect their religious duties and give themselves over to fleshly and sinful pleasures. This is a sad and ungrateful use to make of the good things which our Heavenly Father has provided for us. Whether we eat, or whether we drink, or whatsoever we do, we should do it all to the glory of God. Why not do all we do at the seaside,—where he so wonderfully manifests his loving care and power,—to the glory of his blessed name?

This morning, as we sat on the sands by the seaside and watched the mighty waves come rolling in, one after another, and dashing up over the sandy beach, we were wonderfully impressed with the wisdom, the care and the love of God, and the littleness and the ingratitude of man. How can we, in the presence of such wonderful manifestations of power, be unmindful of the Hand that formed the deeps, and holds them in control at the pleasure of his will? And then, how beautiful is the thought that it is his will that such control is always for the good of his children and those that love him!

A very blessed thought for every child of God to entertain is that Jesus has not only promised, but it is his pleasure to be with always, and everywhere, at home and abroad; and if we do not have this presence it is because we do not want it, or go into such places where he can not go with us. There are such places, but they are so barren of soul food that no child of God should have any desire to go. Let us follow the leadings of our Shepherd, and we will always find the green pastures and be led safely by the still waters. No matter how safe the places may seem to be, unless we follow the leadings of Jesus, we are in danger, for where he is not, there Satan will be ready to do us harm, whether it be in the city, in our homes or by the seaside.

Commerce and War.

It begins to look, says the Homiletic Review for July, as if the preachers of peace and international righteousness could retire upon their laurels. The prophets are being reënforced by so many outsiders that division of our labors will leave us only perfunctory tasks. And the beauty of it is that these recruits from Mammon are so dead in earnest. They are discovering that the pocketbook lies at the bottom of these great moral problems. To save their pocketbook they are obliged to make the problem their own. Hence their deadly earnestness.

They see that war and commerce can not grow side by side. When war begins, commerce must be restricted. War not only disturbs the peace and prosperity of nations, but it disturbs business, more or less, in all parts of the world. During war times men of business find it necessary to be exceedingly careful about their investments. They often call in much of their money, tie it up in some safe way, and this makes hard times. In fact, war makes it hard on both the rich and the poor. The rich man fears to invest his money, while the poor man often finds it difficult to earn enough to purchase the necessities of life for his family.

All parties are coming to understand that war is the worst enemy known to the business interests of the country, and in order to protect their business, the moneyed men of the world are getting in dead earnest about having a stop put to war and military preparations. They are right in thinking that the commercial interests of a half dozen countries should not be made to suffer simply because two nations decide to settle their differences by an appeal to arms, instead of carrying their case to The Hague. Christian ministers have been contending for peace measures on the ground of reason, good sense and in the interest of common humanity. They hold that war is wrong, unchristian and barbarous; that it belongs to a lower order of development and should be entirely abandoned by a people of education and culture. They have paved the way for those who are chiefly concerned about their pocketbook, and are only too glad to have them take up the plea and by their powerful influence in commercial circles make war impossible. We are assured that if the great financial magnates of the world will set themselves firmly against war we shall hear very little more about military operations.

Sunday Collections.

We learn of a community where the people are so decidedly opposed to Sunday collections at the regular services, that some of them may refuse to unite with the church, should it be decided to take up a collection regularly on the Lord's Day. So far as we can understand, there is nothing either for or against salvation in a church collection on Sunday, or on any other day. But if a collection of this sort should keep well-meaning people out of the fold, we would advise this particular congregation to gather her money for church expenses in some other way. We presume that the people referred to would not object to offerings on Sunday for charitable and missionary purposes. And while it is not proper that the church should place a stumbling-block,—even though it be a lawful one,—in the way of people seeking membership, still it is not wise for new converts to attempt to regulate the policy of the church before they enter the fold. The policy of any congregation should be dictated by those within and not by those without.

The Neglected in Cities.

The pastor of one of our city churches writes us of a sister locating in his city, and no notice of the fact was received by him until six months later. During all this time the sister, who had lost some of her first love for the church, was being neglected. She fell in with those not of her faith, and was led away from the simplicity that should have characterized her daily life, and it may be a question as to whether she can ever be fully restored to the true faith. Had he been informed of her coming at the time she left her home church, he would have taken pleasure in looking after her spiritual interests. When members move into cities, it is important that the pastors of the Church of the Brethren, in those cities, be advised of such changes of location, so the parties can be looked after and be apprised of the place of religious services. Many members are lost because they do not receive the attention that their condition should demand.

No Work, No Happiness.

One of our active ministers writes us and says that, on account of failing eyesight, he finds himself idle most of the time, and for him no work is the hardest work he ever undertook. He has not yet learned how to adjust himself to the situation. For a man like this heaven would be of little interest without something to do. After entering the pearly gates and taking in the situation fully, about the first thing he will want to know what work has been assigned him by the loving Master. He reminds us of the sister who, on moving into another congregation, at once began looking around for something needing her attention. She was the Lord's servant and felt like cheerfully doing her part in carrying forward the Master's work. The Lord loves cheerful workers as well as cheerful givers.

LAST CALL!

A fai wafiuing is here given to all our District Temperance Committees. The Almanac for 1912 is to contain the names and addresses of all the officers of our Temperance Committee. We regret to say that, after years of tireless effort on the part of the General Committee, some Districts that have Committees, must be listed "Committee not organized." Moreover, other Districts must be noted as failing even to appoint a Temperance Committee. Are there not members in these Districts who will either tell us why such is the case, or see that a Committee is appointed at the earliest convenience, and their names sent to the General Committee? In those Districts, from which no Committee has ever been reported, can not a live soul be found who will take up the matter, and have their Committee organize AT ONCE? We desire correct names and addresses and offices of all members of the Temperance Committees. This information will be warmly welcomed at any time, but especially on or before Sept. 23, for shortly after that date the Brethren at Elgin will want our corrected lists in manuscript form. We are pleased to believe that in these few weeks all delinquent Committees may yet organize by correspondence, if not otherwise, so that our list will be more complete in the Almanac. Send all information concerning this matter to the undersigned. W. M. Howe.

THE DISTRICT MEETING OF MICHIGAN.

The meeting, this year, was held in the Harlan church, Manistee County, Mich., on Friday, Aug. 18. It was organized by electing Eld. C. L. Wilkins as Moderator; Eld. J. E. Albaugh, Reading Clerk; Eld. J. E. Ulery, Writing Clerk.

The mission work received the first consideration of the meeting. The report showed that the Board had expended nearly $1,450 during the last year. On account of failing health Brother and Sister Bashor say that they must close their work in the Grand Rapids Mission this fall. Brother and Sister John L. Mishler, of Middlebury, Ind., have promised to take up the work. The District Meeting voted an appropriation of $1,000 for the coming year. Some contributions by Sunday-schools, each year, aggregate more than the amount voted. A District Missionary Secretary was also elected, according to the decision of the last Annual Meeting. Bro. J. Edson Ulery was chosen.

Eld. C. L. Wilkins is to represent Michigan as a member on the Standing Committee, with Eld. J. E. Albaugh as alternate. We send no papers to Annuel Meeting. We accept the invitation of the District of Northern Illinois and Wisconsin, to join in asking that a permanent location, such as Winona Lake, be secured for our Annual Conference whenever, in due order, the meeting comes to the Central District. A Temperance Committee of three was appointed for the District.

It was decided to purchase a suitable tent for the use of our District, in the holding of series of meetings where needed; also at the time of the District Meeting, etc. We now have twenty lost all churches, with an aggregate number of about 1,100. Two of these were not represented at the District Meeting. The remaining eighteen sent twenty-eight delegates,—twenty-three brethren and five sisters. The next District Meeting is to be held in the New Haven church, Gratiot County, the third Friday in August, 1912. Peter B. Messner.

Lake Odessa, Mich., Aug. 21.

A MESSAGE TO OUR MISSIONARIES.

In a short time you, as the servants of the church, the friend of sinners, and the messengers of Jehovah, will sail for your chosen fields of labor. We pray that how every fiber of your souls is being absorbed and stirred, as you contemplate your voyage and new fields of activity.

The preparation for the journey, the farewells, the voyage, the arrival in your several fields of reception, the outlook,—then the labors, the trials, disappointments and achievements,—all loom up before you. There is so much to think about, yet much of it is wrapped in mystery and uncertainty.

In the midst of this array of anxious waiting there is the blessed consolation that the work is the Lord's and that you can look to him for guidance, support and comfort, let come what will. Then, too, every live, active member of the church is in sympathy with your work, and will often pray for you and your labors.

I was not privileged to meet with you at our recent Conference at St. Joseph, but I think of you all as our beloved fellow-workers. I have a special interest in this new band of workers; some because of relationship, others because of intimate acquaintance, and with all of you because of the common cause in which we are engaged,—soul-saving.

Like all new ventures,—your pathway will not be strewn with roses. Bonds and affections were awaiting St. Paul, and while your career may be similar in character, may you say as he did, "None of these things move me." These often prove the stepping-stones to success.

Eld. Lindy Long, of sacred memory, once said, "No one will preach the Gospel successfully until he feels the worth of souls." This cardinal principle must lie at the bottom of your purposes, and prompt you to action in the midst of discouragements and difficulties.

To preach Christ and him crucified, means, first, a personal crucifixion of self. Press the great doctrine of the atonement upon your hearers; it is this that must touch the soul before it can be born again.

While you are laboring on the opposite side of this globe, we, who remain in the homeland, will not only think of you, but often bear you, as well as your noble cause, before a Throne of Grace. Then, sooner or later, we shall all be gathered home to enjoy what remains for us,—mains to the people of God, each bearing his sheaves to the great harvest. May heaven's benedictions rest upon each of you! Amen. S. F. Sanger.

SYSTEMATIC GIVING.

Right Methods.

In whatever line of work one is engaged, it is needful that the right method be observed, in order that the work be carried on economically. Where there is a lack of system, there is nearly always a loss of efficiency.

If we can not profitably carry on a business enterprise without systematizing the work, how can we carry on the Lord's work without proper system? In giving God the just returns of our stewardship, we not only discharge a duty devolving upon us, but we are taught in the Scriptures to do so on a systematic basis.

"As God Hath Prospered."

We are instructed to give "as God has prospered us." But before we can give as God has prospered us, we must necessarily be guided by some system. Paul, in writing to the Corinthian church (1 Cor. 16: 2), points out a method of giving as we are prospered. He says, "Upon the first day of the week, let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him." We may say that Paul wrote this to the Christians at Galatia and Corinth only, and that the command is not in force today. Without attempting to debate that question, would not Paul's method be an excellent way of determining the Lord's share of our earnings? By adopting this method, we would have a permanent fund from which to draw when there is a call for help in the Lord's work.

Paul's Ideal Method.

If we give only an indefinite amount each week, we may fall short of giving in accordance with Paul's ideal method. Paul says, "As God hath prospered him." Then, if one week brings us twice the income that the preceding week brought, we owe God twice as much.

Without this, or some other equally satisfactory method, it is much more difficult to obey the apostle's injunction to "give as we are prospered." We may think we can give as we are prospered, without any system, which we may; but, unless extreme care is taken, we may, by this haphazard giving, forget God during prosperity, as far as giving is concerned, or we may think we are doing our share, by giving as much as some brother who may, possibly, have less of this world's goods.

Giving a Certain Portion.

An ideal way to overcome these shortcomings is to give a certain per cent of our income. Let us examine carefully Matt. 23: 23, "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye pay tithe of mint and anise and cummin, and have omitted the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith: these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone."

Giving the Tenth.

Tithing was a custom observed through the ages of Jewish history, and is adopted by many Christians today. Christ told the Pharisees to observe the weightier matters, but he also warns them "not to leave the other (tithing) undone." Some may say that it was simply an old Jewish custom, but did not Christ sanction it when he was on earth? The force of the command, given in Matt. 23: 23, is not understood alike by all Christians. I wonder, however, if the explanation above given could not be a safe method to adopt. Let us remember what is said in 2 Cor. 9: 7, "So let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity: for God loveth a cheerful giver."

God's Blessings for Cheerful Giving.

Some individuals testify that the more they give, the more abundantly God prospers them. It is said that a certain man began giving the tenth for the Lord's work. He saw that his income was increasing, so he gave the Lord more and more, until he was giving the half; and still God continued richly to bless him.

Although we may feel that God will bless us with a greater abundance because of our giving, we should, by no means, let that be the motive of our giving. God wants us to give freely, cheerfully, willingly and unselfishly.

Honoring God in Our Giving.

We should give for the purpose of honoring God. Solomon says to us, in Prov. 3: 9, "Honor the Lord with thy substance, and with the firstfruits of all thine increase." Here we have another plan set forth. In giving according to this method, the farmer might give the first load of hay of the season, the first few bushels of grain, or the first of whatever he may have. The teacher or other salaried employé might give at least a part of the first month's wages. It would not matter so much what the occupation, or how much or how little the income; if it is given in the right spirit it will bring the reward.

Be Sure to Follow Some Method.

There are many other methods that might be employed to guide us in systematic giving, but these three are worthy of special mention, since they are all spoken of in the Scriptures. To reduce this matter to a still more ideal system, one might combine the three into one. By that plan, once each week, the tenth of the increase may readily be reckoned and credited to God's fund.

But above all, we must remember the teaching to "give as we are prospered," else we will be robbing God. Notice what Malachi says (Mal 3: 8), "Wilt a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings."

HELPING THE CITY CHURCH.

"Our son, John, is coming to your city in a few days, as an employé of the ——— company. He is not a member of our church, as yet, but we desire that you form his acquaintance, and extend an invitation to attend the services at your church."

Information, such as is contained in the above, is always welcomed by the workers of the wide-awake city congregation. It makes possible the saving to the church of those who might otherwise be lost.

The population of our larger cities is recruited daily from the country. A majority of these newcomers from rural districts are reared in Christian homes. They have been lured to the city by its promise of wealth, position and pleasure. Its schools, parks, theatres, and countless business and industrial openings have been the attraction, rather than the church and the opportunities for religious activity.

"Men come to the city to forget God," is the statement made by one student of the city, and whether it be true or not, we must admit that the country-born young man finds in the city an environment far less religious than that in which he formerly lived. The general tendency of city life is away from church and the spiritual life.

Because of all this, and much more, it is important that some effort be made to establish an intimate relation between the city and country congregations of our Fraternity.

There is scarcely a country congregation of the Church of the Brethren, that does not lose one or more of its members to the city annually. Among these would-be city dwellers, we find a few who have been active, spiritual workers in the home church, although it would seem that the Church of the nominal Christians, come to the city in larger numbers.

Concerning the one class we need not concern ourselves, for they will speedily find their way to the city church and to a place of activity. But the alarmingly large percentage of the latter class of Christians are lost to the church when once they have entered the city.

In the City of Des Moines there are today scores of ex-members, elders, and others, who, when were reared in Brethren homes, who logically belong to us, but their names are not found on our church register, nor are they known to the membership of the local church. They are without a church home. They are your friends. Will we try to help them? How? What can be done? Who can do it? When?

These questions are worth considering prayerfully. Those who have been taught the Gospel as practiced by the Brethren, before coming to the city are more easily reached by the city missionary, evangelist, or pastor, than are many others with whom they labor. But they must have the cooperation and encouragement of the country workers. Some one must tell them of your son, daughter, or other relative, who now lives in the city.

As you read these lines, dear brother or sister, will you not sit down and in a few sentences tell the pastor or Sunday-school worker of that city church about your friends and acquaintances, whom you desire to see become members of the church?

When? "Now is the accepted time." Do not wait! Today may mean "Joy in heaven over one sinner" repentant. Tomorrow may be too late.

Again, I say, The city and country churches must cooperate if we are to have the largest returns for time, money and effort invested in the city mission church.

Des Moines, Iowa. Virgil C. Finnell.

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

CALIFORNIA.

Chico—Since we wrote last, there have been added to the church one baptism. Two of them are young men, verging into manhood. The other two were an aged couple, the latter had their eighty-three years of age and also over the seventy years. They are glad to be numbered with us, and we rejoice with them, and ask God's richest blessings upon them for the few remaining years they may have yet here on earth. Two members from Corning, about thirty miles from Chico, were received by letter. Brother and Sister Temple live there also, and their work with us over Sunday, Sunday-school, Brother and Sister Forney are doing all they can to enlighten the people along the line of our belief and doctrine. Brother Forney is now building the church since it was dedicated.—Bertha G. Kerr, Chico, Cal., Aug. 22.

Empire church met in special council Aug. 19, at 10 A. M. Our elder, Bro. J. W. Deardorff, presided. Five letters of membership were read,—two of them for baptism. A committee of five brethren was appointed to make the necessary arrangements for the District Meeting in October. A vote was decided to charge fifteen cents a meal at the District Meeting. The ministers here are opening up a new mission point. We have a large territory to work in, and there is plenty for all to do. We have several ministers here, but some of them are getting aged, so there is plenty of work for the younger ones to do. We have need of young workers. Bro. J. D. Gilliland, of Los Angeles, Cal., preached for us on Sunday morning and evening, Aug. 13; also on Monday evening. Bro. Gilbert's sermons were well-received by the people present. Bro. D. W. Crist, of Los Angeles, gave us three interesting sermons, commencing Aug. 15. We are glad to have the brethren visit us, and preach the Word of God to us.—Myrtle M. Julius, R. D. 3, Box 213, Modesto, Cal., Aug. 19.

CANADA.

Fairview.—Our church met in special council July 28, prior to our love feast. The report of the committee appointed to call all to love peace and harmony was willing to labor in the Lord's work. July 29 we had our love feast. Bro. Rowland conducted the services. July 30 we had our baptismal service. At the close of the program Bro. Rensberger gave a talk to the candidates and members who were contemplating uniting in the first communion. There were twenty-five. The attendance at the services was 135; the collection was $18.25. We had an all-day meeting. Bro. C. P. Rowland preached in the afternoon and evening. We are now in the midst of revival services, conducted by Bro. C. P. Rowland, of Lanark, Ill.—Jennie L. Heckman, Myrtle, Sask., Can., Aug. 7.

Pleasant View church met in council July 29. Bro. Shatto presided. Some business was attended to, preparatory to our love feast. After council adjourned we repaired to the home of Eld. J. T. Jordan, who was anointed with oil in the name of the Lord. Bro. Jordan is very low with dropsy, while plastering a building, and sustained severe injuries. Aug. 6 we enjoyed our love feast, with Eld. Shafer officiating. Some visiting brethren and sisters were with us.—F. E. Pobst, Major, Alta., Can., Aug. 23.

COLORADO.

Grand Junction Mission.—Last Wednesday evening Bro. A. C. Root took two converts to the Grand Valley church where they received membership by Eld. Peterson, assisted by several of the brethren and sisters of the Grand Valley church visiting with us, and we organized a mission Sunday-school to work in conjunction with the society of the Valley church. Bro. Root and wife have had a very busy summer in this field, and, unless all signs fail, we will reap a blessed harvest in the near future.—H. S. Kent, Grand Junction, Colo., Aug. 16.

IDAHO

Winchester.—Bro. J. H. Fike and wife from Middlebury, Ind., came among us Aug. 5. Bro. Fike gave us three interesting sermons. We are now using our church for a free Methodist Songs."—Amanda E. Flory, Winchester, Idaho, Aug. 19.

ILLINOIS.

Allison Prairie (Illinois).—Bro. H. W. Garber and wife, of Decatur, Ill., were with us to assist in our annual Harvest Meeting, which was held Aug. 6. Bro. Garber occupied the pulpit, both morning and evening, and gave us two good addresses, suitable to the occasion. He also gave an instructive talk to the children at 2 P. M. Bro. W. G. Calvert, of Englewood, Cal., went from the Annual Conference to Ohio, where he conducted revival meetings for Bro. J. H. church. Then he came here and preached two very interesting sermons for us.—Pleasie Mercer, Girard, Ill., R. 3, Vinctures, Ind., Aug. 24.

Cerro Gordo.—Eld. J. G. Royer, of Mount Morris, Ill., recently visited us for several weeks. Bro. Royer for several years was elder in charge of this congregation, and it was a mutual pleasure to meet again. He preached a very good sermon for us last Lord's Day. His theme was "The Bible." On the same day J. Hugh Heckman received his letter of admission from the text, "Without me ye can do nothing" (John 15: 5). He spoke of the weakness of human resolution, the futility of Christless charity, and the barrenness of a Christless life. True reformation is a regenerative work.—Cyrus Wallick, Cerro Gordo, Ill., Aug. 19.

Girard.—Last Sunday, at 3 P. M., we met at the Home for worship. The meeting was well attended. Eld. J. H. Fike, of Kansas City, conducted the services. He gave us an excellent sermon from the text, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock: the Lord his trust." All present appreciated and enjoyed the services.—Pleasie Shetler, Girard, Ill., Aug. 21.

Salem church met in special council Aug. 19. At 6 P. M. we met for our regular Sunday-evening service, with communion. Bro. G. W. Miller, our elder, was present. Visiting ministers present were Bro. Otis Stutsman, of Mount Vernon, Bro. S. S. Miller, of La Place, and Bro. J. H. Fike, of Girard. Bro. Stutsman preached the examination sermon, and Bro. S. S. Miller administered the communion. Bro. Fike was present from Martin Creek, Mount Vernon and Romine. Bro. Stutsman gave us a sermon on Sunday, Aug. 20, at the protective congregation. Bro. G. W. Miller gave us a sermon at 7:30 P. M., to a well-filled house. We have had very good interesting communion seasons we have enjoyed for years. Sister J. A. Peterbaugh was appointed to the temperance committee to fill a vacancy.—Jacob Hershberger, Salem, Ill., Aug. 21.

Sterling.—We met in special council Aug. 12. Eld. John Heckman presided. Six letters were granted, which caused several members that were supposed to be lost to be found. Bro. John Heckman tendered his resignation as elder, after five years of faithful service. The church accepted the tendered his resignation. Bro. Ezra Flory was chosen elder for one year. Two letters of membership were received. Sister Bertha Dutcher will assist us in the work here for eight months longer, making one year in all.—Lillie C. Frantz, 2104 Ninth Ave., Sterling, Ill., Aug. 21.

Sunday-school Meeting.—July 30 the five Sunday-schools, Decatur, Center Grove, Center Goods, Round Lake, and Pleasant Hill, met at the Centennial church for their annual Sunday-school Meeting. An all-day program was rendered, beginning with the Sunday-school at 9:30 A. M. Following this hour the remainder of the day was spent in discussing subjects of the highest interest to the Sunday-school. The meeting proved to be one of the most successful yet held. Sunday evening, Aug. 13, two Sunday-school classes, which are supporting Bro. Peng Shu Hi, China, gave a very interesting program on "The Conditions and Needs of China."—Elizabeth Eikenberry, Decatur, Ill., Aug. 21.

West Otter.—At our council, held Aug. 19, Brethren W. H. Shutt and Geo. W. Wrightsman were elected delegates to the District Meeting. The visiting brethren presented a favorable report. Bro. M. Flory, of Girard, Ill., our assisting elder, of meetings, beginning Oct. 8. Our love feast will be held Oct. 21, at 6:30 P. M.—C. G. Arnold, Tampico, Ill., Aug. 21.

INDIANA.

Mexico.—Bro. Otho Winger, of North Manchester, Ind., met with us Aug. 20, and preached a Harvest Meeting sermon to a large and appreciative audience. At the close a collection for Home Missions was taken, which amounted to $31.18. Bro. Winger was with us over Sunday, and Sunday evening, which greatly strengthened all who were present.—Bertha E. Fisher, Mexico, Ind., Aug. 21.

Middle Fork.—We held our Harvest Meeting July 30. Bro. J. B. Eash, of Nappanee, Ind., was with us to do the foreman. An offering of $32.66 was taken. In the afternoon a program was rendered by the children. In the evening Bro. Smith was chosen elder of mechanics, which continued three weeks. He labored very earnestly, and as a result four were baptized and received into the church.—Cora Goodrich, Ind., Aug. 21.

North Manchester.—The members of the Ogans Creek church met in council yesterday afternoon. Our elder, Bro. Geo. Snyder, presided. Bro. Wm. Swihart, of Iowa, was with us. Three were received by letter. Bro. Swihart was reelected to have charge of the church for the coming year. Sister Kreider and Gilbert were elected delegates to District Meeting; Sister Kreider and the writer, alternates. The writer was elected delegate to the Annual Conference; Brother Sister Kreider as alternate. Bro. Appelman, of Plymouth, Ind., is to give us a series of meetings, beginning with the second love feast in September. We decided that the Sunday-school would take up the Peng Shu Hi work. We had a second Sunday of each month. It was decided that the sisters break the second Sunday in each month for a social.—Susanna Miller, Suite E, Cert, R. D. 1, North Manchester, Ind., Aug. 21.

Notice.—The Executive Board of the Northern Brethren of the Southern District of Indiana that the District Treasurer's books will be closed for the current year, Oct. 1. We hope all church treasurers will see to it that they will remit their annual quota at their earliest convenience, as all money received after that date will be used in the work of the next year.—John F. Shoemaker, Dist. Treas., Silvidder, Ind., Aug. 21.

Silver Lake.—Bro. Wm. Swihart, of Iowa, was with us to-day. Bro. Swihart, could not be with us, so Bro. Frank Rupel filled his appointment. He is expected to be with us Aug. 27, and will have preaching again in four weeks.—Hattie Carbiener, Bremen, Ind., Aug. 22.

Roann church met in their annual Harvest Meeting Aug. 20, with Eld. D. B. Garber doing the preaching. We had a harvest-meeting dinner, which was served to everyone present in the afternoon. A large audience attended these services, which were exceedingly interesting. The collection for the occasion of $18.24 was taken for the benefit of the Old Folks' Home in Huntington, Ind.—Nellie Miller, McBain, Mich., Aug. 22.

Tippecanoe.—Bro. William Overholser came to this place Aug. 15 to assist in harvest meeting in the forenoon. He reminded us how good God has been to his people. The noon hour the tables were spread with an abundance of good things. At 2 P. M. Bro. Overholser gave us a few interesting reminiscences and touching songs. Then Bro. Overholser gave us an missionary sermon, for which a collection of $10.00 was taken for home mission work.—Josiah Garber, Syracuse, Ind., Aug. 18.

Union church has had a feast of good things since our last report. On Aug. 5 and 6 Bro. Elder Galen R. Royer, of Elgin, Ill., Secretary of the General Mission Board, was with us and gave us two thrilling missionary discourses. He used specially-prepared charts in connection with his talks, which gave figures of the real condition of things in these dark countries, which we have opened for the Lord. The meetings were well attended and all were impressed to do more for the salvation of souls. Sunday evening the preaching was taken in behalf of the work. Bro. Levi Puterbaugh, of the Walnut Grove congregation, who is Chairman of the Temperance Committee of Northern Indiana, was with us and very forcibly preached for us. He gave a good temperance lecture on the first Sunday evening. We were entertained by him at both of these meetings Bro. Jesse Dickey, of Walnut, led the song service. The Lord has been very graciously with us during the midst and we always receive spiritual strength by their presence with us. The Lord bless them in their labors about completed.—A. Laura Appelman, Plymouth, Ind., Aug. 24.

White-Oak church council will be held Aug. 27.—Lelah Wall, Clarksbill, Ind., Aug. 19.

IOWA.

Coon River church met in council Aug. 19. Our elder, Bro. Irving Haughtelin, presided. Communion services will be proposed for Brethren Wm. Cordis and Oscar Diehl were chosen as delegates to District Meeting, with Bro. Irving Haughtelin and Wm. Royer as alternates. Six letters were granted to the members who are contemplating forming a new Bible School. Among the number are Eld. E. F. Caslow, wife and son. Aug. 20 communion services were held. Bro. Caslow acted in behalf of the Bible School. Bro. Caslow will be elected to have charge of the new work. The meeting was then completed.—A. Laura Appelman, Plymouth, Ind., Aug. 24.

White-Oak church council will be held Aug. 27.—Lelah Wall, Clarksbill, Ind., Aug. 19.

IOWA.

Coon River church met in council Aug. 19. Our elder, Bro. Irving Haughtelin, presided. Communion services will be proposed for Brethren Wm. Cordis and Oscar Diehl were chosen as delegates to District Meeting, with Bro. Irving Haughtelin and Wm. Royer as alternates. Six letters were granted to the members who are contemplating forming a new Bible School. Among the number are Eld. E. F. Caslow, wife and son. Aug. 20 communion services were held. Bro. Caslow acted in behalf of the Bible School. Bro. Caslow will be elected to have charge of the new work. The meeting was then completed.—A. Laura Appelman, Plymouth, Ind., Aug. 24.

Des Moines.—Our church was elected a local Sunday-school Institute last Sunday, with Sister Marie Jasper as the principal speaker. Sister Jasper delivered two addresses, and Sister Jasper discussed "Holding Our Boys and Girls," "The Teacher as a Student," and "The Duty of Parents." All were helpful and practical way. Many phases of Sunday-school work were discussed by the members in the Round Table period. The offering taken at the evening service was given to the general Sunday-school Board for the promotion of their work.—Estell C. Bright, 1020 Fifty-first St., Des Moines, Iowa, Aug. 21.

Garrison.—We held our council Aug. 12, and decided to send three delegates to District Meeting. They are Eld. Jacob Hoff, City Sept. 24, 25 and 26. Brethren W. H. Long and H. A. Yeagy are the two lay delegates, and the writer as a Sunday-school delegate.—Our love feast will be held Nov. 25 and 26.—Eld. H. Yeagy, Sutherland, Iowa, Aug. 21.

Grundy County.—Aug. 13 Sister Sadie Miller came to us, and remained with us over Sunday. She gave us some interesting and instructive talks. The house was well filled. Services in two languages. Sunday-school and meeting. Sunday there were present also. The offering for the India work was about $10.—Hannah C. Sayre, Center, Iowa, Aug. 21.

KANSAS.

Bloom congregation held her Harvest Meeting Aug. 20, Bro. D. B. Hyden gave us good missionary talk. A collection was taken for mission work, which amounted to $8. The Lord blessed us with refreshing showers during this last week.—Cassie Martin, Bloom, Kans., Aug. 21.

Conway Springs.—On the evening of Aug. 16, at 8 P. M., we met to consider the question of how to raise means to erect a house-to-house missionary work in this congregation. A committee of three was appointed to canvass the needs of it, and to look up an elder and his wife for the proposed work. Our series of meetings will begin Oct. 21, to be conducted by Bro. Hardy, of Kansas City, Kans., and to close about Nov. 4 with a love feast. We are using "Kingdom Songs" in our song service, and are pleased with the book. Bro. E. F. John, of McPherson, Kans., was in our midst, a few days ago, and placed an eleven-year-old homeless girl in a Brethren home here.—J. Bowser, Box 483, Conway Springs, Kans., Aug. 19.

Hutchinson.—An earnest effort has been made by the members of the Darlow church, for more than ten years, to carry on a city mission in Hutchinson, but so far it has been a failure, partly, at least, because the church had no house of her own. Now that the property purchased for the desirable part of the city, and work on the house, I am told, will commence next week. Consequently, we should expect to have a good Sunday-school, if the proper efforts are put forth. We are partly under the care of the Darlow members and the Brethren Band of Southwestern Kansas. There are several brethren in and near the city, but they are scattered. One of our ministers here feels the need that the Word of God's people everywhere. Brethren, may we have them? We have Sunday-school and preaching at 3 P. M., and preaching services at 7:30. In the Congregational church, corner of Walnut and Fifth streets.—Lemuel Shaffer, N. Perry, 615 East Ninth St., Hutchinson, Kans., Aug. 23.

Pleasant View church met in council Aug. 6. Our elder, Bro. I. L. Hoover, presided. Bro. Roy Herr was chosen to represent us at the District Meeting. We will have our love feast Sept. 16 and 17.—Mrs. Ida Wolfe, R. 4, Lawrence, Kans., Aug. 26.

Wade Branch church met Aug. 12, with our elder, Bro. A. I. Crist, in charge. Bro. A. D. Crist is our delegate to District Meeting. Bro. J. H. Keltner, alternate. Bro. F. E. Mohler, of Ottawa, Kans., is to begin a three weeks' series of meetings for us about the time our love feast will be held Sept. 16.—Martha Kalebaugh, Wellsville, Kans., Aug. 21.

MARYLAND

Beaver Dam.—Our two weeks' series of meetings, conducted by Bro. Jesse Calvert, closed last evening, Aug. 20. As a result of his sermons we have received 4 by baptism. Bro. Calvert is to return to our meetings a young sister, was baptized.—Edna A. Dotterer, Union Bridge, Md., Aug. 21.

Monocacy—Our church held her Harvest Meeting and communion Aug. 13. Bro. Jesse Calvert presided. A collection of $12.61 was taken for a thanksgiving offering. We decided to hold our love feast Oct. 7.—E. C. Fike, Detour, Md., Aug. 21.

MICHIGAN.

Lake View church met in special council meeting Saturday evening, Aug. 19, with Bro. Geo. E. Deardorff presiding. On motion of Brethren Wolfe and Hoffman, it was decided to have a Harvest Meeting Sept. 2. We will have an all-day meeting.—Ella Keck, Lake View, Mich., Aug. 21.

Riverside.—We expect to begin a series of meetings at this church Sept. 4, to be conducted by Bro. J. W. Killian, of Beaverton, Mich. We will have our love feast Sept. 23.—Nettie Miller, McBain, Mich., Aug. 21.

Sugar Ridge held her Harvest Sermon Aug. 6 by Bro. Bruce Miller, of Darlow, Kans. Aug. 20, at 11 A. M., we had the pleasure of hearing a missionary sermon by Bro. Bruce Miller. School, and the same evening another sermon by Bro. D. P. Warner, of Milledgeville, Ill. Bro. W. Yeeter, Scottville, Mich., Aug. 22.

MINNESOTA.

Winona.—Aug. 20 a large audience listened to a most interesting temperance program, given by the Sunday-school. We commenced at 2:30 P. M. Two letters of membership were read and one granted. This church will be represented at District Meeting by Brethren P. E. Myers and Silas Whitestone. As we expect to leave for a year's work in Bethany, Bro. F. B. Myers, of Pennsylvania, will have charge of the pastoral work. Bro. Myers is a graduate from the course of the missionary work at this place. All money and clothing intended for the Old Folks' Home will be sent by Express.—Ida Olmstead St., Winona, Minn. At present there is no money on hand. (Write with the exception of some winter coats) in the Mission.—D. H. and Martha H. Keller, 253 West Seventh St., Winona, Minn., Aug. 22.

MISSOURI.

Bethel church met in council at the Sqhaw Creek house, Aug. 19. Bro. Wm. Swihart presided. Six letters were granted. The visiting brethren reported all the members as being in favor of continuing to work with the Sqhaw church. Delegates were appointed as follows: Sister Mertie Hilderand, delegate to Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meeting; Bro. Wm. Swihart, delegate to District Meeting. Bro. Thomas Prather was elected treasurer. We had a very interesting meeting. Bro. Swihart was called to District Meeting.—L. L. Alger, Mound City, Mo., Aug. 21.

Kansas City.—Our church met in special council.—We met in special council Aug. 24. We received two members by letter. It was decided to hold our love feast Sept. 23 and 24, the latter part of October preferred. Further announcement will be made later.—T. C. Nininger, 5921 St. John Ave., Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 24.

Peace Valley.—Bro. Moses Crues, from Kansas City, Mo., was with us Aug. 19, and preached two very interesting evenings closed Aug. 21. Bro. Crues preached the Word of God with power and demonstration of the Spirit, and encouraged by his preaching. There were no additions to the church, but the members were much revived and strengthened. We are longing to see the time when many souls may yet be gathered into the garner of the Lord. Aug. 13 we met for children's day at the Peace Valley church. Bro. Crues preached and preaching, and then dinner was served. In the afternoon a temperance program was rendered by the Sunday-school scholars, followed by a talk to the children by Mr. Hannah. The collection for the occasion was $3.—Mrs. Ida Hannah, Peace Valley, Mo., Aug. 23.

Warrensburg will hold children's day services Aug. 20, which were attended by a large congregation, and were much appreciated. Our District Sunday-school Secretary, Bro. Irvin Snook, Adrian, Mo., visited the church, and gave an interesting talk to the children during the preaching hour. After dinner the children rendered a program of short and suitable recitations. Considerable comment was made on the number of children present, and the number of parents. We are nearing the time when we hope that two Warrensburg church may be organized. We have a number of strong members and 10 possibilities. Oct. 22 Bro. E. G. Rodabaugh expects to commence a series of meetings, and continue if necessary, to which we look forward with interest and desire. Our regular council will be held Sept. 7, at which we will arrange for our love feast.—Jesse M. Mohler, Warrensburg, Mo., Aug. 26.

MONTANA.

Gisston.—Aug. 9 Eld. D. Warren Shock, of Minot, N. Dak., was with us to organize us into a congregation. This congregation is known as the Gisston congregation. Eld. John E. Joseph, of Riga, N. Dak., was chosen as our elder. He lives over 700 miles away by railroad, so you see that our congregation is isolated from the working body of the church. Ours was the second church organized in Montana. The usual officers were elected, and a choice was held for two deacons. Brethren Elmer Zimmerman and Allen Zimmerman were elected and installed. Bro. Christian Krabill, of Denton, Mont., was with us also. He is the only one who has come from the West, and stopped off two days. Eld. Shock preached very good sermons. On Saturday evening, Aug. 12, we held a love feast. Twenty-seven members participated. Bro. Krabill was baptized on Monday, making twenty in our congregation, as it now stands.

our Sunday-school, preaching services and our Christian Workers' Meetings continue with good interest.—M. Alva Long, Big Timber, Mont., Aug. 21.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Ingeland Mission.—Bro. D. F. Landis, of Williston, N. Dak., gave us a two weeks' series of meetings, closing July 30. The interest was good and the services closed with a much increased attendance. During these meetings a middle-aged father and mother united with the church. We feel that the church has been greatly strengthened. Aug. 13 we met at the home of the Sunday-school Secretary, Sister Nelson, with many from neighboring churches were present. Bro. Marvin Kensinger, Assistant State Sunday-school Secretary, of Zion, N. Dak., was with us. A good meeting was enjoyed.—Addie Nelson, Ingeland, N. Dak., Aug. 19.

Surrey.—Bro. Amos Blocher and the writer started for Inglewood, Nov. 15, to attend to some matters of business left to us by the District. We held six meetings and elected a brother to the office of deacon. Our meetings were well attended, with the very best of interest. One applied for baptism. Bro. J. R. Smith is alone in the ministry. Crops are good around here, and where they are not good we have found a very earnest group of members. Although they are few in number, there are good prospects for a church here. I like the country as well as any place I have seen in the Northwest. Land is of the best quality, and farms can be bought at fair prices. Some very fine land can be had close to the church. I would advise any one wishing to find a new location, to investigate this country. The Brethren are building a good, comfortable church-house. Brethren generally expect to have it completed this fall in time to have the dedication and love feast; also a series of meetings. May the Lord richly bless and their untiring efforts.—David M. Stoner, Surrey, N. Dak., Aug. 12.

OHIO.

Canton.—A children's meeting was held at the Center churchhouse Aug. 20, at 10 A. M. A good program was rendered by the Sunday-school children. Bro. Wise and others also took part in the recitations, declamations and songs. —Ella Wise, Louisville, Ohio, Aug. 22.

Greenwood.—Bro. E. Shepfer preached for us last Sunday morning and evening. At 2 P. M. we met at the water-side where three took put on Christ in baptism. Although we have no resident minister and have preaching only once a month, the interest here seems to be growing and the members are determined to make the most of every opportunity.—Ada Hartsough, Glenford, Ohio, Aug. 22.

Londonville church held her members' meeting Aug. 19 at the Ridge churchhouse. Bro. Aaron Hostetler presided. The members selected Bro. Aaron Heestand as our elder. He accepted the call. Bro. Wise also delivered a short address. Sept. 2, at 6 P. M. Bro. Daniel Martin was chosen to represent us at the District Meeting, with Bro. Heestand as alternate.—Jennie Roseborough, R. D. 1, Box 17, Perrysville, Ohio, Aug. 21.

Loramie.—Our church met in regular council Aug. 19, with Brethren Jacob Coppock and U. R. McCorkle present. Bro. Coppock had charge. We decided to hold our love feast Nov. 4 at 2 P. M. On Sunday morning, Aug. 20, Bro. Coppock delivered an excellent sermon, and Bro. Hostetler, S. E. Porter, of Bradford, Ohio, delivered an interesting sermon. Bro. Porter has been secured to assist Bro. Coppock in the preaching services. He will preach one Sunday in each month. Bro. W. H. Beery, of Covington, Ohio, expects to be with us on Sunday, Sept. 3.—Allie Heiman, Dawson, Ohio, Aug. 22.

Lower Miami (Ohio).—I am in the midst of a series of meetings at this place and find this congregation to be one among the best of Southern Ohio. We have no resident Elder. Bro. I was permitted to be with the Brethren one day in their Ministerial Meeting of Southern Ohio. The workers in this part of the Brotherhood are awake to their best interests. At this meeting will be present Bro. Moses, of Dorsey Hodgden, Huntington, Ind., Aug. 21.

Lower Stillwater church held our Council Meeting Aug. 19. We had a pleasant meeting which was well attended. Bro. B. F. Heckman delivered an interesting sermon. A collection of $6.00 was taken for the benefit of the Messenger. Sister, R. D. 1, Clayton, Ohio, Aug. 22.

Lower Twin church met in council Aug. 1, with Eld. Aaron Brubaker presiding. Two letters were received. We decided to hold our love feast Oct. 10, at 10 A. M. Our Sunday-school meeting was held Aug. 15. Bro. J. O. Garst was with us and delivered an address for the occasion. We received two letters from adjoining congregations present. We had a large attendance.—Ruth C. Kinsey, R. D. 4, West Alexandria, Ohio, Aug. 21.

Mahoning.—Our church met in council Aug. 12. We had a good attendance and many interesting matters were considered. We decided to hold a series of meetings at both houses and a love feast Sept. 1. We also decided to hold our next meetings at Woodworth, where one of our brethren is conducting a Sunday-school. We organized a Sunday-school at that meeting, and are having a good attendance and interesting programs. We are arranging for a local Sabbath-school Convention in the near future. Sister Lucy Hoover, our missionary, will soon leave for Bethany Bible School. Although we regret to see her leave us, we rejoice to know that she will her take up this good work.—Lena Longanecker, Columbiana, Ohio, Aug. 22.

Springfield.—We met in council Aug. 19, with Eld. James Murray presiding. Four letters were granted to members who will soon locate in Arizona. Our delegates to District Meeting are Brethren Jacob Young and S. A. Young, with Brethren Kurtz and Wm. Bixler alternates. Our communion meeting will be held Nov. 4, at 10 A. M. Bro. D. R. McFadden will begin our series of meetings Oct. 15. Other meetings will be soon arranged for the latter part of July, but, owing to a serious runaway accident, affecting Bro. McFadden's family, he could not be with us at that time. Aug. 6, at our regular preaching service, ten of our Sunday-school boys and girls were received into the church by baptism. This caused much rejoicing, as we trust that others will soon follow. Aug. 13 saw the Master. Two Sunday-school scholars were baptized recently, at the Kent house.—Alice C. Mumaw, Mogadore, Ohio, Aug. 23.

Trotwood.—Aug. 16 and 17 our Chinese brethren, Moy Way and Moy Wing, from Chicago, Ill., were with us and gave us two inspiring and interesting talks on "China as a Mission Field." The writer and wife were present with the Sunday-school Meeting of Southern Ohio. Bro. B. P. Heckman, of Chicago, Ill., is in the midst of a series of meetings at this place. So far three have come out on the Lord's side, and others are near the kingdom. The sermons have been and are inspiring, and great interest is taken in the meetings. Our love feast will be held Nov. 4.—N. A. Conover, Trotwood, Ohio, Aug. 19.

West Dayton church met in called council Aug. 17, our elder, D. L. Miller, presiding. The object was to meet a request with us. Four were added to our number by letter. Five letters were granted.—Orville Myers, 1030 W. Third St. Dayton, Ohio, Aug. 21.

West Milton.—July 23 Bro. Harvey Snell, of California, came to us and held a three weeks' series of meetings, delivering twenty-five sermons. The meetings were well attended and all felt inspired to rise to a higher plane of life. Much good seed was sown. As a direct result, twenty-six were received by baptism and one penitent was restored.—Russell C. Wenger, R. D. 1, Union, Ohio, Aug. 22.

OKLAHOMA.

Guthrie church held her quarterly council Aug. 19, with Eld. J. C. Nininger presiding. One letter was granted. Sister Hannah Neher and Bro. I. B. Niswander were chosen as delegates to the District Meeting. Sister Neher, Minnie and Birdie Lehman to the Sunday-school Meeting. Sunday morning, Aug. 20, at the regular preaching hour, the children rendered a splendid program, which was enjoyed by all present. We have several meetings, recently, to get better acquainted with the new members. Our midweek Bible class is progressing nicely.—Birdie B. Lehman, R. D. 3, Guthrie, Okla., Aug. 21.

Moyie church met in council Aug. 12. As our elder was not present, Bro. Wm. Hoover was elected to serve. Considerable business came before the meeting. We decided to hold our love feast Sept. 16, at 2 P. M. Bro. Hoover was appointed as three to arrange for a protracted meeting some time this year. Brethren Wm. Hoover, C. Root and Hoover were elected as our delegates to District Meeting. Our church is prospering and we expect to do more work. Our church covers a large scope of territory. Brethren L. P. Morgan, H. G. Peters, E. M. Shenefelt and the writer made a trip by private conveyance to visit members and scatterers in the north part of the state and union. At one home there was a young soul that wanted to accept Christ.—Ella M. Long, Moyie, British Columbia, Aug. 13.

Mount Hope.—Our series of meetings, conducted by Bro. J. C. Ninniger, closed Aug. 9. While there were no accessions, we feel that the meetings were a help and encouragement to the church, and made some good impressions upon others. A number attended throughout and seemed greatly benefited. Bro. Ninniger is an able speaker and delivered some excellent sermons. He also gave an illustration to the Sunday-school that was interesting. We held our love feast Aug. 12. Sentiment surrounded the Lord's table and enjoyed a spiritual feast.—J. D. Newell, Greenfield, Okla., Aug. 21.

Pleasant Plains church met in called council Aug. 19. Our elder, Bro. H. F. Richard, presided. We decided to hold our love feast Oct. 7. Members from other congregations are invited. Communion services to follow. Since our last report one letter has been granted.—Hulda Prentice, R. D. 3, Aline, Okla., Aug. 21.

OREGON.

Portland church held an election Aug. 9 for more help both in the deacon's office, and in the ministry. Bro. Milton Arnold was elected deacon, and Bro. Walter George Carl, of 1175 Alblina Ave., Portland, Ore., was elected to the Abraham Royer, 4612 Seventy-third S. E., Portland, Oregon, Aug. 24.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Glade Run.—We expect Bro. Wm. Stough and wife, missionaries from India, to be with us Sept. 2 and 3. Our revival meetings will begin Sept. 3, and continue over Sunday. Our love feast Sept. 16.—Ida B. Bowser, R. D. 4, Kittanning, Pa., Aug. 22.

Indian Creek (County Line house).—Brother and Sister J. M. Blough came to us on Friday, Aug. 11. They gave us very interesting and inspiring talks on mission work among the Indians, and of the work as it is now being accomplished by the missionaries in the field. Our elder, Bro. Jacob Hoff, of India Mission, Sept. 23. Bro. E. P. Nedrow is expected to be with us and begin a series of meetings to continue two weeks and close with a love feast Oct. 7.—Irwin R. Pletcher, Jones Mills, Pa., Aug. 21.

Indian Creek.—Today was a day of rejoicing in our church, when three precious souls covenanted to be followers of Jesus, and were buried with Him in baptism. Bro. Hoff will hold our Harvest Meeting Aug. 26, and also open a series of meetings in the same evening, to continue two weeks. Bro. David Weaver, of Reading, Pa., has promised to be with us. We will have our Sunday-school Convention Aug. 30, to be conducted by Bro. J. H. Longanecker, of Palmyra, Pa., principally. Sister Carrie Walker, R. D. 2, Mount Joy, Aug. 21.—Continue two weeks, and will close with a love feast Nov. 4.—Hannah R. Shisler, Vernfield, Pa., Aug. 17.

Johannesburg.—Our series of meetings was held at the Conemaugh house recently, conducted by Bro. Silas Hough. Bro. Hough remained with us over Sunday. Two were added to the church by baptism. Sept. 2 we expect to hold our quarterly meeting, commencing at 10 A. M., at the same house. Our revival meetings, which were to begin at the Walnut Grove house Aug. 27, will be held one week later date. Bro. Young could not be with us at the present time, but we expect to have meetings at a future date.—Sarah Ella Adam, Mt. Beaghly, 724 Thomas Ave., Johnstown, Pa., Aug. 22.

Middle Creek.—We have just closed a well-attended and interesting series of meetings conducted by Elder Albert Hollinger, of Gettysburg, was with us in this council. One certificate was granted. Our love feast will be held Sept. 30 and Oct. 1, followed by a series of meetings, to be conducted by Bro. Jacob Hoff.—Carrie Walker, R. D. 2, Mount Joy, Aug. 21.

Quemahoning.—This congregation will begin a two weeks' series of meetings at Stoystown, Somerset County, Sept. 19, to be conducted by Bro. D. M. Adams, of Scalp Level, Pa. The meetings are to close with a love feast Sept. 24.—Annie K. Balough, R. D. 1, Hollsopple, Pa., Aug. 21.

Upper Cumberland church met in council at Green Spring Aug. 12. Eld. Samuel Stauffer presided. Albert Hollinger, of Gettysburg, was with us in this council. One certificate was granted. Our love feast will be held Sept. 30 and Oct. 1, followed by a series of meetings, to be conducted by Bro. Jacob Hoff.—Carrie Walker, R. D. 2, Mount Joy, Aug. 21.

Quemahoning.—This congregation will begin a two weeks' series of meetings at Stoystown, Somerset County, Sept. 19, to be conducted by Bro. D. M. Adams, of Scalp Level, Pa. The meetings are to close with a love feast Sept. 24.—Annie K. Balough, R. D. 1, Hollsopple, Pa., Aug. 21.

West Conestoga.—We held our Harvest Meeting Aug. 19. We had a good attendance. Several outstanding ministers were with us. We appreciated their presence. A collection of $14.00 was taken for the benefit of the Messenger. Our special Sunday-school collection for the mission fund amounted to $3.—Henry Nies, Lititz, Pa., Aug. 22.

TENNESSEE.

White Horn church met in council Aug. 12, with Bro. P. D. Reed presiding. This being the time for the report of the annual visit, quite an amount of business came before the meeting but was disposed of satisfactorily. The report of the visiting committee was encouraging to the Bro. and union, and willing to work with the church. Brethren S. P. Sherfey, Wm. Hylton and Eli Shepherd were elected to the District Meeting, with Brethren C. and E. Berry as alternates. Our Dunkard Valley Sunday-school Convention will be an encouragation Sept. 1 and 2. Our love feast will be held Sept. 26, beginning at 1 P. M. Sister Mollie Hylton is to be with us.—Nora McCullough, R. D. 2, Whitesburg, Tenn., Aug. 22.

TEXAS.

Bethel.—In a brief, special council, Sept. 29, presided over by Bro. Cone, of Wylie, we decided to hold our next regular council from Sept. 30 to the evening of Oct. 6, to be followed by our love feast Oct. 7. Communion services to be at 2:30 P. M., Oct. 7. The north-bound passenger train, arriving at Denton at 11:30 A. M., stops over at Aubrey. All will be met Oct. 6. If any should come on the south-bound train, arriving at Denton at 2:30 P. M., they may stay over until the time for the evening train, when they will be met by conveyances. All parties intending to come will please notify the undersigned, if convenient.—Leo Dashiman, R. D. 2, Kendy, Tex., Aug. 26.

VIRGINIA.

Bethel.—July 20 Bro. I. N. H. Beahm came to our place and began a series of meetings. He preached each evening for a week, when he was called home by the illness of his wife's illness, and he had to leave. Just as he was ready to go, one dear soul came out on the Lord's side. Others are near the kingdom. Owing to the rain that set in, the attendance was not so large, but we had good interest. Bro. W. H. Beery came the second Sunday and baptized the applicant. She is the mother of a large family, and two of her children are members of the church. We also had our children's day service, and Bro. Myers gave us a talk on the Sunday-school, which was much appreciated by all. We trust Bro. Beahm can come back in the future and finish the meetings. We also hope that Sister Beahm has much improved in health by this change.—Annie Cunningham, Box 15, Sulphur, Va., Aug. 21.

Klarville Creek.—Our church met in annual visit council Aug. 15. Brethren Benj. Miller, John H. Kline, and others from adjoining congregations were present. The visiting brethren found the membership faithful and free with a few exceptions. Seven letters of membership were granted, and one were received. Brethren I. N. Zigler, W. C. Hoover and C. E. Nair were advanced in the ministry. We decided to hold our love feast in the Klarville Creek church, Oct. 7. W. C. Hoover will begin a series of meetings at Fair View Aug. 26.—Catharine Hoover, Broadway, Va., Aug. 21.

Rodeak Grove church met in council Aug. 12. Our elder, Bro. W. H. Beery, presided. Two letters were received into their visit. The church was found to be in love and union.

A BAPTISM IN THE RAIN.

Sunday evening, Aug. 13, we closed a very interesting series of meetings at Mount Zion, Green Mount congregation, Va., conducted by Eld. S. I. Bowman, of near Harrisonburg, Va. He held forth the Word in earnestness, and preached nineteen sermons. The meetings were well attended and the interest and attention were all that could have been desired. The membership was strengthened and encouraged, and eighteen were made willing to be buried with Christ in baptism. One was restored and others are counting the cost.

On Monday morning, Aug. 14, we met at the waterside, where prayer was wont to be made. Twelve of these new converts were to be received by baptism. Quite a crowd had gathered to witness the administration of the rite. Soon after our arrival at the place of baptism it commenced to rain,—and it rained very hard,—so that we could not hear a word the administrator said, but the crowd was so interested in the service that they did not mind the rain, and all remained to see the baptism. The little stream had been dammed up for the occasion, but the heavy rains raised the water to such an extent that it came up to a buggy bed before the people could all get away.

Aug. 5 was our visit council.—The visiting brethren gave a good report, after which Bro. S. I. Bowman, Eld. D. Hays and the home brethren gave us good admonitions. Eld. J. A. Garber presided. Katie Kline.

SANGERVILLE CHURCH, VIRGINIA.

We have been blessed with a feast of spiritual things since our report. The Ministerial Meeting of the Second District of Virginia was held in the Sangerville congregation Aug. 17 and 18. Those assigned topics were not all present, but others were ready to take up the work, and each subject was well and ably discussed. The spirit of the meeting was most excellent from beginning to end. The interest and attendance were also quite good. This District now has fourteen organized churches, fifty-five to sixty ministers, and a membership of 3,000. A collection of $32.84 was taken for District Missions. The next Ministerial Meeting will be held in the Valley Bethel congregation, Highland County, one of our mission points.

July 29 we held our Harvest Meeting at the Sangerville house. Bro. B. B. Garber, of Waynesboro, Va., gave us an excellent sermon from Psa. 8. July 30 a joint Sunday-school Meeting was held at the same place. The program was well rendered by the Sunday-school children and others. Aug. 4 we met in council with our junior elder, Bro. J. W. Wine, presiding. Eld. Emanuel Long, of the Bridgewater congregation, was present. Not much business came before the meeting. A committee of arrangements was appointed for the Ministerial Meeting. Sister Meda Garber and Bro. E. J. Miller were appointed as tract distributors. Our love feast was appointed for Sept. 2 at the Sangerville house, to be followed by a series of meetings, in charge of Bro. J. Carson Miller. A series of meetings is in progress at the Branch house, conducted by Bro. A. S. Thomas, of the Beaver Creek congregation, Va.

Jamie R. Miller.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL MEETING OF SOUTHERN OHIO.

On the morning of Aug. 16 our District Sunday-school Meeting opened promptly at eight o'clock. Many of our workers were present. Soon the large church at Poplar Grove was filled to overflowing. Those on the program handled their subjects with skill and power, and were listened to with appreciative attention.

The greater part of the afternoon program was devoted to missions, China being the field under consideration. The needs of this mission field were brought nearer to the hearts of our people by addresses from the outgoing missionaries, Bro. J. Homer Bright, Sisters Minnie Bright and Minnie Heckman. Bro. B. F. Heckman gave a very impressive and appealing farewell talk. Surely, they will have the prayers and help of all our brethren and sisters.

Bro. Roy Wing, our first Chinese convert, and Bro. Moy Way gave us splendid talks. They told us of their conversion and of the influence of Sunday-school work on their lives.

The delegate body, consisting of about one hundred of our best Sunday-school and church workers, representing about fifty-two out of fifty-six schools, decided unanimously to support Bro. J. Homer Bright in the Celestial Empire. Two schools have been supporting Bro. J. M. Pittenger in India for seven years.

We were favored by the presence and help of Bro. Studebaker, of Flora, Ind., and Professors Early and Otho Winger. The latter gave us a splendid sermon on Tuesday evening. Bro. Harvey Snell, of California, one of our Sunday-school workers, was with us also. May our superintendents, teachers, and all others be encouraged to do better work, that God's name may be glorified and souls saved. Chas. L. Flory, Dist. Sec.

Union, Ohio, Aug. 18.

FROM ALBIA, IOWA.

Our members are doing a good work here. We have regular services every Sunday and Sunday-school. We have preaching both morning and evening. Bro. Frank Roberts, a minister in the Monroe County congregation, preaches for us. The few members, here in Albia, belong to that congregation. Our church is too far away, for all the members to attend regularly, and keep the Lord's work moving along as well as we would like to do.

Bro. Samuel Miller and wife have not been permitted to attend church very much for the past eight years, but they have not been idle in working for the Master. Sister Miller takes the Gospel to shut-ins and sinner, along with her daily work. Through her humble efforts, a few people are under conviction, and all that is keeping them away from the church is their pride. They do not want to conform to our principles of plainness.

Bro. Abraham Wolf, of Udell, Iowa, preaches for us whenever he can. We are truly sorry that he can not be with us oftener. We are disappointed that, on account of his wife's illness, he can not be with us tomorrow (Sunday), to address us. We pray that she will soon be restored to health again.

Aug. 6 we had a good meeting, which was largely attended. Bro. Abraham Wolf, of Udell, Iowa, and Bro. Willis Rodabaugh, from the Monroe County congregation, assisted Bro. Frank Roberts at both services in the house of worship, here in Albia. We have services in the homes of the members. Everybody is welcome to attend.

Three united with us this summer by baptism. Fifteen members reside at this place, and we have a wide field of work. We are only a little band of workers, but we endeavor to do what we can, and never allow ourselves to become discouraged. We consider it a pleasure to labor for the Lord. Brethren and sisters, do home mission work in your own neighborhood. We all need help in this work in your own neighborhood. We all need help in this work if we drop a kind thought to some hungry soul, it may do them good.

Mrs. G. W. Martin.

Albia, Iowa, Aug. 19.

SOUTHERN PENNSYLVANIA.

August 16 the first of the three days' meetings in the commodious church at York, Pa., convened. This was the second Ministerial Meeting of Southern Pennsylvania, called for the express purpose of determining the place for the Annual Meeting of 1912.

Much interest was manifested, for this is the first time, since organization, that this District was ever accorded the privilege of entertaining the Great Conference. There was very little other business, so ample time was given by the Moderator, Bro. J. A. Long, to discuss the places mentioned.

There were only two places offered for the consideration of the meeting. The first was the Springs Hotel property, with its large, commodious hotel, its fine lithia water spring and its grand old woods. The place is pedestrately ideal for such a use. The National Park, but is about one mile from Gettysburg. The other place was the grounds of the York Agricultural Association, with its sixty acres of well-kept park, with extensive lawns and gravel walks running between the numerous buildings, surrounded by the City of York, with railroad and streetcar tracks to the very gates of the grounds.

There were many good, strong arguments presented by business men and others. Gettysburg, while the strongest association for York was a visit to the grounds, at the noon hour, by the delegates.

Shortly after convening in the afternoon, we decided to try to settle the place by ballot then and there. When the vote was taken, the ballots showed an overwhelming majority for York.

A Committee of Arrangements was elected, which organized as follows: J. A. Long, York, Chairman, C. L. Spangler, Bro. Secretary, E. S. Miller, Limeboro, Md., Treasurer, J. M. Mohler, Mechanicsburg, Pa., C. G. Trimmer, York, Pa.

To this committee, with the subcommittees they may appoint, are consigned all the affairs of the Annual Meeting of 1912.

The Ministerial Meeting, on the day following, Aug. 17, was well attended. Almost all, assigned to a part on the program, were present; also several from adjoining Districts. The meeting moved on with spirit and enthusiasm until the subject was called that had been assigned to our late Bro. Wm. A. Anthony. The Moderator spoke a few words about the joy and delight, experienced by our departed brother, when at these meetings. He alluded to his absence, and yet his probable presence. As he spoke, many eyes filled with tears, and with deep solemnity the whole audience sang the hymn that Bro. Anthony so greatly loved, and which he wanted sung at his funeral, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul." Bro. Bonsack filled the vacant place on the program and the meeting continued until its close with the same spirit and ardor.

The Sunday-school Meeting of August 18 continued with the same enthusiasm that marked the former meetings. Every person on the program responded and the time was well used. Surely we realized "where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty."

Mechanicsburg, Pa., will have the privilege of entertaining the Ministerial and Sunday-school Meeting of 1912. H. M. Stover.

Waynesboro, Pa., Aug. 21.

FALLEN ASLEEP

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord"

Beaver, Thomas J., son of John and Anna Beaver, born in Union County, Pa., Dec. 29, 1833, died Aug. 6, 1911, after almost nine weeks of constant suffering from cancer. He grew to manhood's estate in Union County, and on November, 1865, he married Maria J. Boyer, of the same place. In April, 1870, he, with his wife and family of two children, moved to Dallas County, Iowa, and in September, of that year they moved on the farm where he has since resided until where he died. He was a most faithful member of the Church of the Brethren for more than forty-one years. He was one of the charter members of what is now the Panther Creek church. He was elected to the ministry in 1870, which office he filled very faithfully. He was a kind father and will be missed in the church and community. He leaves a wife and two children. Services by Brother J. S. Bender, J. B. Brower and A. M. Stine. Interment in the Panther Creek cemetery, near his home.—M. Ellen Beaver, Adel, Iowa.

Binkley, Mary Catherine, daughter of Jesse and Mary Brown, born in Rockingham County, Va., Feb. 17, 1844, died Aug. 16, 1911, at her home Aug. 16, 1911. She was united in marriage to Jesse Binkley Sept. 15, 1864. To this union were born seven sons and two daughters, all of whom survive; also her husband, a brother and two sisters. Sister Katie and her husband united with the Church of the Brethren in 1874.—Her husband was elected to the deacon's office Oct. 28, 1883, and called hospitality. Services conducted at her home by Bro. S. F. Grossnickle, to a large and sympathizing congregation. Interment in the cemetery.—Adam Wine, R. D. 2, Loveland, Ohio.

Blair, Dan. H., died of tuberculosis, July 23, 1911, at his home near Meroersburg, Pa., aged 65 years. He was a member of the Brethren church for a number of years, and tended services quite regularly, when his health would.—Frank P. Blair, Mercersburg, Pa.

Brown, Mrs. Elizabeth, died in Washington County, Md., Dec. 31, 1826, died in New Windsor, Md., July 28, 1911, aged 84 years, 8 months and 28 days. She grew to womanhood's estate for many years in the ministry, being ordained to the eldership seven years ago. About five years ago she had a slight stroke of paralysis, which disabled him for his work in the ministry; yet, in his affliction, he seldom missed a service when it was possible for him to attend. He leaves a large family of children who mourn their loss. Services by the writer, after which the corpse was made to rest in Pipe Creek cemetery.—A. P. Sunder, New Windsor, Md.

Cowgill, Jacob Henry, son of Henry and Gula Schwartz, born in Christian County, Ky., Aug. 29, 1837, died Aug. 4, 1911, aged 73 years, 11 months and 6 days. In her early life she joined the Methodist church, but being satisfied, she became a member of the Church of the Brethren in 1897, in which she was active in its service. Sister She was married to Frank Cowgill, Feb. 6, 1895. To this union was born one son. After an age of thirteen months, she is left without the mother who loved him so dearly. She also leaves her husband, her father, two brothers and two sisters. Her mother, one brother and one sister preceded her in death. Through the illness of several years, the bright and sunny disposition of her nature shone forth as if no ill of life were ever known. She could hardly realize that anything but goodness could be in store for her. Services by Brethren Richards and Joseph Longanecker at the Castine church. Burie County Cemetery, interment in the cemetery by—Mae Longanecker, West Manchester, Ohio.

Crum, Ida, died at the home of his son, J. N. Crum, near Bridgewater, Va., Aug. 1, 1911, aged 74 years, 7 months and 6 days. He is survived by one daughter, one son and one brother. Services at the Bridgewater Church of the Brethren, by Bro. B. B. Garber. Text, John 11: 25.—Ida Fry, Bridgewater, Va.

Crum, Chas., son of Brother D. C. and Sister Nora Crum, died at the home of his parents, July 26, 1911, aged nearly 7 years. He is survived by his father, mother, one sister and two brothers.—Dr. S. Bridgewater church of the Brethren, by Eld. A. S. Thomas.—Ida Fry, Bridgewater, Va.

Garber, Sister Barbara, died in Elkhorn, born near Trotwood, Ohio, Nov. 4, 1890, died Aug. 18, 1911, aged 20 years, 9 months and 9 days. She united with the Church of the Brethren in December, 1907, and remained faithful to the Master. She was united in marriage to Bro. Chester Garber, Sept. 26, 1909. To this union was born one child, which died and a brother preceded her. She leaves her husband, an infant daughter, father, two grandmothers, a brother and a sister. Services in the Trotwood church by Eld. D. M. Garver, assisted by Eld. Cullen Garrett in the Kuns cemetery.—N. A. Conover, R. D. 1, Trotwood, Ohio.

Mower, Bro. Jonathan, born in Stark County, Ohio, May 14, 1837, died Aug. 12, 1911, aged 74 years, 2 months and 28 days. Oct. 14, 1861, he was married to Leah Flory, who preceded him. To this union were born seven children, all of whom survive. He united with the Church of the Brethren in 1887, in which he remained faithful until his death. Services at the Chapel house by Bro. W. R. Deeter. Text, Job 5: 26.—Etta Neff, R. D. 1, Milford, Ind.

Pentmyer, Sister Sarah, born Sept. 30, 1834, died Aug. 11, 1911, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Georgs Jager, Upland, Franklin County, Pa., aged 76 years, 10 months and 12 days. Sister Pentmyer was a faithful member of the Church of the Brethren for many years and was the mother of a number of five sons and one daughter. All of them survive her. Services Aug. 13, 1911, at the Brethren's church by Brethren Shrader, Geo. Winger and John Lehner. Interment in the cemetery adjoining.—Wm. Wilson, R. 5, Greencastle, Pa.

Her husband, William Shaak, two sons, one daughter and one foster-daughter survive her. When she was quite young she accepted the Christian faith and united with the church. She was affiliated with the Camp Creek congregation, Ind., where she continued her membership until death. Services at the Summit Chapel by Bro. John Appelman, assisted by the writer. Interment in the adjoining cemetery.—Levi Puterbaugh, R. D. 1, Argos, Ind.

Stremmel, Bro. John, born in York County, Pa., Aug. 6, 1838, died at the home of his son-in-law, Jacob Bolinger, Astoria, Ill., July 31, 1911, aged 89 years, 11 months and 25 days. He was united in marriage to Mary Bollinger Jan. 15, 1860. To this union nine children were born, five having preceded him in death. His aged wife and four children remain to mourn their loss. Services at Astoria Aug. 2, by Bro. Chas. Walters, assisted by Bro. J. C. Demmy. Interment in the Woodland cemetery.—Fay A. Rohrbaugh, R. D. 3, Rock Island, Ill.

Swezey, Bro. James S., born near Vevay, Ind., died at his home in Winona, Minn., Aug. 3, 1911, aged 57 years. His death was due to a complication of diseases. About thirty years ago he united with the Church of the Brethren. A wife, three sons and four daughters survive him. Services by the writer, assisted by Brethren Jacob and J. H. Wirt. Interment in the Lewiston (Minnesota) Brethren cemetery.—D. H. Keller, 552 West Seventh St., Winona, Minn.

Teagarden, Bro. Henry, born in Jay County, Ind., April 19, 1845, died near Crowson, Tenn., June 15, 1911, aged 66 years and 2 months. He was married to Laura Z. Minnich Jan. 16, 1878. To this union were born two sons and four daughters. All are members of the church except one. He leaves a devoted wife, six children and three brothers who mourn his departure. There has not been a death in his family from the oldest of his children to the youngest of his grandchildren. Bro. Teagarden united with the Church of the Brethren about twenty-two years ago, and was elected to the office of deacon in 1896. He served his Master and the church faithfully—always willing to bear his part—until he was called away. Services by Brethren C. W. Davis and A. M. Bashor. Text, John 11: 25. Interment in the church cemetery.—Eva Teagarden, R. D. 1, Box 98, Lawrenceburg, Tenn.

Thomas, Joseph L., a deacon in the Manor congregation, Pa., was laid to rest Aug. 12, 1911, in the Manor cemetery, aged 64 years, 3 months and 10 days. He had served in the deacon's office for many years. He had a keen insight into hard problems, and his advice was always safe. He loved the principles of the church and was very zealous in carrying them into effect. He was a man of strong convictions and very courageous, and always filled his place in the church, in the community and in the home. His funeral was one of the largest in Manor church for years. He leaves a wife and three sons.—John E. Otto, Sharpsburg, Md.

SPECIAL TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS

THE Gospel Messenger has long been considered one of the best religious papers published. Each week it contains sixteen large pages. It is published in the interest of the Church of the Brethren and is the only church organ published by the authority of Conference. Price $1.50 per annum.

The worth of this paper deserves a much larger circulation and in order to secure a larger circulation we are making three special offers.

1st. If you are not acquainted with the merits and wish to subscribe for it for a few months we will send you the paper from the date your remittance is received to Jan. 1, 1912 for only 25c.

2d. If the paper goes into a home where it has not been going we will send it from the date your remittance is received to Jan. 1, 1913 for only $1.50.

3d. In connection with the second proposition we will send you a copy of "Our Saturday Night" by J. H. Moore for only 35c extra. This is a book of 192 pages, containing fifty-four chapters on as many different subjects. It will make a valuable addition to any library and should be read by every one. It cannot be gotten except in connection with the Gospel Messenger.

Below you will find coupons, which we will kindly ask you to fill out and mail to us at once. Now. The sooner you send the more you get for your money. The longer you wait the less papers you get. Send today.

SPECIAL TO OLD SUBSCRIBERS

We want you to assist us in getting new subscriptions. Speak to friends about the special offer. Show them the coupons. Get their signature. Possibly you have a few friends to whom you want to donate the paper. All we ask is that the paper goes into homes where it is not now being received, for no name will be accepted at these prices that is already on our books.

To every one sending us two coupons at the 25c rate, or one at either the $1.50 or $1.85 rate, we will send postpaid a beautiful art picture, size 16 x 20 inches, of the "Lord's Prayer and Ten Commandments." Any one sending his own subscription is not entitled to this premium.

BRETHREN PUBLISHING HOUSE, ELGIN, ILL.

In accordance with your offer to accept this coupon and twenty-five cents as pay for the Gospel Messenger from now to Jan. 1, 1912, I send herewith 25 cents, and I hereby certify that I am not now a subscriber to the Gospel Messenger, and that this subscription is not intended to take the place of any subscription now on your list.

Notes from Our Correspondents.

We decided to hold our love feast Sept. 2, at 11 A. M. All that desire to be with us will please come. Services will begin the second Sunday,—the time we usually hold our meeting.—G. E. Yoder.

Our district meeting will not be held at the usual time, as there were a little more than half of the members that opposed it. On Sunday forenoon, after the Sunday-school, Sid. W. Naff preached an excellent sermon, taking his text from 2 Cor. 5: 1. We were pleased to have Uncle John Spangler with us. He's one of our aged ministers, living eight miles from our church. He is past fourscore and is quite active. His mind is perfectly clear.—Emma D. Sowers, 44, Floyd, Va., Aug. 14.

Roanoke.—We met in council at the Valley house Aug. 1, with Bro. D. N. Kiser as moderator. This was an important meeting and largely attended. On account of much business the council-table, to which we were entitled, was dispensed with. Two letters were received and one was granted. The result of the annual visit was reported, and the meetings all prevailed, throughout our membership of about 600, is commendable. The visiting brethren reported well, all having been collected. A business meeting of the missionary circle was held at the close of the council, by private subscription an amount of $144 was raised for the support of a native worker in India. We are always glad for the letters from Brother and Sister Kiser, and we realize in their well-doing.—Jennie Crumpacker, Roanoke, Va., Aug. 16.

Rolling Green.—On Sunday morning, Aug. 26, Bro. J. C. Jones preached a very interesting sermon. Our newly-organized church is moving along nicely. All our meetings are well attended, and everybody seems to take an interest in the meetings. We expect to hold a series of meetings, beginning Sept. 16, to be conducted by our pastor, Bro. S. Hardy and Bro. Reed.—Margaret R. Thompson, R. D. 1, Seven Mile Ford, Va., Aug. 26.

WASHINGTON.

Mt. Hope church met in special council Aug. 13, Bro. Strecker, our foreman, presiding. We decided to hold our love feast some time in the near future. Bro. John O. Streeter was chosen as delegate to District Meeting. Aug. 19 we decided on our number by baptism. Aug. 20 another was baptized. We are much encouraged by the interest taken. The first Sunday of July we had a program and picnic dinner at Bro. Metcalf's park. Aug. 3 the Brethren Sunday-school had a family picnic. There were seventy-five present (all children but twelve, as it was given for the special benefit of the juvenile and primary classes).—Pearl Hixson, Chewelah, Wash., Aug. 28.

Seattle.—Sept. 16 is the time set for our communion. The next day, Sept. 17, the Sunday-school Convention of the Centralia, Olympia, Tacoma and Seattle congregations will be held here from 10 to 12 A. M. In the afternoon, from 2: 30 to 4: 30, a program will be given by the missionaries who sail for China. In the evening Bro. J. E. Hedman will give us a missionary sermon. The program for the Sunday-school Convention has also been arranged. Love feast Dec. 1, to be held Sept. 2. A missionary sermon was delivered. A collection for Home Mission work was taken up. We have had good confession and was baptized at 3: 30 P. M. A large crowd had gathered to witness the administering of the sacred rite. The Brethren here have a fine Sunday-school, and great interest is being taken in singing. Things appear cheerful, and we feel that some are near the kingdom.—C. E. Annon, Thornton, W. Va., Aug. 16.

NOTES NOT CLASSIFIED.

Correction.—Since my last note from this place the date of our Harvest Meeting has been changed from Sept. 17 to Sept. 16.—Sadie Strain, Avilla, Ind., Aug. 26.

Salem.—We held our annual Harvest Meeting Aug. 19. Bro. C. M. Yoder was with us an interesting sermon. Following this to have our love feast Sept. 16, at 3 P. M.—Mitylene B. Dettra, Vanclues, Va., Aug. 21.

LORDSBURG COLLEGE

The only school on the Pacific coast owned and controlled by the Church of the Brethren.

A school where Brethren's children may receive competent instruction in our environment, favorable to the church, and free from the snares and allurements of the city.

The Lordsburg congregation numbers over three hundred members. There are no saloons or resorts in the town. Health and climatic conditions are ideal,—and both the strong and weak are made stronger by escaping the rigors of the northern winters and living in southern sunshine.

Bible, academic, commercial, music, art and expression courses are offered. Expenses reasonable. Tuition in Bible department free to all.

The Twelve Apostles

J. W. Wayland

This is the only book of the kind offered to our people, and, indeed, it stands almost, if not altogether, alone as a volume containing the biographies of the twelve men whom the Savior chose as a central group,—nucleus from which all future effort takes its beginning. Ordinarily we think of them as a group. The author of this book portrays them as individuals. To know "who they are and what they did" of the men who were called to a position of such importance and responsibility is not only interesting but helpful to the Bible teacher and student. The book ought to have a place in every Sunday-school library, as well as in that of every minister and Sunday-school teacher. The material for this volume has been obtained at the cost of much thorough and painstaking investigation, and the reader is the reaper of the rich fruitage. 252 pages, bound in cloth. Price, 75 cents.

THE GOSPEL MESSENGER

"SET FOR THE DEFENSE OF THE GOSPEL."—Phil. 1: 17.

Vol. 50. (Old Series Vol. 66.) Elgin, Ill., September 9, 1911. No. 36.

AROUND THE WORLD

A Check Upon Trashy Literature.

The city authorities of Cleveland, Ohio, have become fully persuaded that trashy literature of the "Wild West" variety is doing incalculable harm to the rising generation, as shown by the many acts of lawlessness engaged in by youthful criminals. An ordinance is to be passed at the earliest opportunity, which will absolutely prohibit the sale of all objectionable literature within the limits of that city. We wish that a similar ordinance might be passed and enforced by every city, town and village in the United States. Meanwhile let parents be the guardians of the literature that enters the home. In this, as in all else, we reap as we sow. If we provide the pure and the good, we will reap the result in the noble lives and pure minds of our children.

A Brighter Day Coming.

The Christian people of the Hawaiian Islands have sent a monster petition to the United States Congress, asking the passage of a law prohibiting the sale of alcoholic beverages throughout the commonwealth. The five largest cities in New Zealand have cast a majority of votes in favor of prohibition. In Australia 900,000 women have been given the power to vote, and soon the saloon will have no chance to wreck homes and destroy happiness. Mohammedans, Buddhists and Brahmanists are not allowed to drink or sell intoxicating liquor,—only the foreigner in the Orient is guilty of its sale. A prohibition movement is stirring Japan also. From the plains of equatorial Africa to the frozen shores of Iceland the cry is ringing, "Down with alcohol!" The daybreak is everywhere!

Words and Acts of Kindness.

Most of us pass through life without a due appreciation of the real good we might do by gentle and courteous treatment of others. Occasionally the reward of a kind deed is so pronounced, that we are led to pause and reflect on the far-reaching effect of an act, trivial in itself, perhaps, and almost forgotten by him who was thoughtful enough to do it, and yet of wondrous power. This was shown, recently, in New York, when, because of an act of kindness shown by Augustus W. Wiesmann, Superintendent of the Hahnemann Hospital, the institution received a legacy of $1,146,826. It was Weismann's courtesy and kindness to Mitchell Valentine, a chance visitor, desiring to inspect the institution, that brought the unexpected reward. Well, indeed, it is to heed the words of the apostle, "Be ye kind one to another"!

Marriage and Divorce.

The annual conference of Governors, which convenes during the present month, will likely take effective action in regard to uniform divorce legislation. The present confusion created, and the harm done, by the diversity of State laws regarding divorce, and remarriage of divorced persons, is evident to all, and concerted action is no doubt needed to bring effectual results. So long as the statutes of the States are not uniform, there is bound to be uncertainty as to the validity of divorces and other interests therewith connected. It has been suggested by one of the Governors,—and with much truth and reason,—that church members, by a closer adherence to gospel precepts on the question of marriage and divorce, might do much to create healthy public sentiment on the matter, and help others to a higher conception of the sacredness of the marriage vow.

New Race in the Arctic Regions.

A race of people, never before known, is said to have been discovered in the Arctic regions of British Columbia by Vilhjmar Stefansson, leader of the American Museum's scientific exhibition, now exploring various portions of the North. These hitherto unknown people are found in the region specifically known as Victoria Land, and never before had they seen the face of a white man, or an Indian, though they had heard of both. These people are distinctly European in general characteristics, but as to their origin and early history nothing could be learned. The idea has been advanced by ethnologists that they may be descendants of the 3,000 Scandinavians who suddenly and mysteriously disappeared from Greenland during the fifteenth century, or that they may be the progeny of possible survivors of ill-fated Polar expeditions, in some of which entire families are known to have been represented.

When the Pipes Were Burned.

There was a notable celebration at Tientsin, China, Aug. 24, when the "Anti-opium Society" held a great opium-pipe-burning meeting, attended by ten thousand persons. The American and other foreign consuls made felicitous addresses and there was great rejoicing. More than one thousand opium pipes were given to the flames. Besides the ordinary bamboo pipes there were the most costly jade and ivory gem-studded pipes,—all freely sacrificed to help the new China and to hasten the downfall of opium. It must have been a scene much like the noted one, referred to in the Book of Acts, when costly books of magic were freely burned because a love of better things had taken possession of the heart.

London's Working Girls.

While dissatisfaction may at times seize upon the working girls and women of our own favored land, they might do well to think of their own very fortunate condition, compared with their sisters in the great metropolis across the briny deep. Only recently fifteen thousand working girls of London went on a strike for higher wages. Their average pay was $2.10 per week, and they asked for an increase, which, under the circumstances, was not unreasonable. Their demands were acceded to in part, and their average weekly pay is now $2.60. Think of boarding and clothing one's self on that amount! No wonder that the bloom of health gives way to pallid cheeks and haggard eyes! No wonder that socialistic teachings are finding fruitful soil! "The destruction of the poor is their poverty."

Where Canada Excels.

According to a prison expert who recently inspected Canadian prisons, the penal system of our neighbor to the north is far ahead of our own. Each prison has a large farm attached, where at least half the prisoners are healthfully and congenially employed. No walls surround the prisons, no guards patrol the grounds, and yet but five prisoners have attempted to escape during the last two years. It is the Canadian idea that a State prison should be a custodial school, and that no embittering stigma should rest upon the offender who, in a moment of weakness, broke a law. It is the confession of which he is now atoning. A Canadian authority states that penning up ordinary offenders is out of date. It is degrading instead of lifting up. "Lift up!" is the clarion call to newer and better prison conditions,—an opportunity for a new life.

Why Not Agree?

In view of the most deplorable recent instances of race antagonism it is encouraging to note that in some places, at least, there are indications of a friendlier spirit. At Slidell, La., a formal treaty was drawn up and signed jointly by white and colored residents that there shall never be a race war in the town, but that all differences between the races shall be submitted to arbitration. This compact, believed to be the first of the kind in the United States, was drawn up for the special purpose of maintaining law-abiding and orderly conditions in case of any serious infraction of statutory law. It is hoped that many other communities will make similar agreements, thus avoiding the disgraceful occurrences that have thrown a stigma of darkest hue upon the fair name of many communities. But an agreement would not really be necessary, if, in a Christian land like ours, there were a disposition to be obedient to constituted authority, and to be Christ-like in demeanor at all times.

Millions for Alaska's New Railroad.

At an outlay of $23,000,000 a new railroad has just been completed in Alaska. If ever the genius of man was tested and made to do its best, it was among the rugged mountains of the Coast State, and all this to reach the lofty peak of almost pure copper, in the Copper River district. To avoid several huge glaciers, it was necessary to cross and recross the mountain stream with bridges costing millions of dollars. In places cliffs were dynamited, to furnish a level bed for the steel rails. This is man's activity in behalf of earthly gain, and freely he gives his time and multiplied millions in order to achieve the desired end. We wish we might say as much for man's spiritual activities. We realize the great need of concerted effort in the all-important work of gospel promulgation. Somewhere among the Lord's people are the millions required for the great work, and also the workers to tell the story to all the world, but who can suggest a plan by which both money and men may be laid upon God's altar, to go forth at his bidding?

Food Riots in France.

At various places in France, and more especially in Paris, there is a general uprising of the populace against the high prices demanded for the necessaries of life. Whether the dealer is justified by prevailing business conditions or not, the consumers have come to a point when forbearance has given way to intense indignation, and the police is practically powerless to prevent the many acts of lawlessness that are the direct outgrowth of many years of oppression. If,—as it is claimed by those who are in a position to know,—there has been a concerted attempt by the dealers to rob the people, and especially the poor, by oppressively high prices for the necessaries of life, a speedy reform should be instituted. There is no blessing upon money thus gained. "He that oppresseth the poor to increase his riches, shall surely come to want."

Ancient Sardis Uncovered.

Most interesting excavations are now being conducted by Professor Butler, of Princeton University, among the ruins of Sardis, the famous city referred to in the Book of Revelation. Already portions of a temple of Artemis have been laid bare, indicating a temple of the same immense proportions as those at Ephesus and Baalbec. An acropolis has been found, from which were unearthed thousands of relics, including utensils, ornaments of gold and precious stones, mirrors, etc. One of Dr. Butler's discoveries is the marble throne of the Bishop of Sardis. Looking upon it, the message to Sardis,—one of the noted "Seven Churches of Asia,"—recurs to our mind, "I know thy works, that thou hast a name that thou livest, and art dead." The throne, indeed, it boasted of its regal magnificence, but as it did not receive and heed the warning,—"Hold fast and repent," —swift punishment came upon the erring church. "I will come as a thief, and thou shalt not know what hour I will come upon thee."

Why Not More Flowers?

At a recent meeting of the "Railway Gardening Association" plans were favorably considered by which the unsightly fences, now bordering the railway tracks on either side, will be replaced by flowering hedges, trees, shrubs, etc., adding much to the beauty of the roadside scenes. Mr. Bok, the editor of a noted journal, some time ago secured permission from the Pennsylvania Railroad to plant a row of rose-bushes, starting at his suburban station,—a few miles out from Philadelphia,—and continuing to the next stations below and above his own stop. While, doubtless, he greatly enjoys the fragrant bloom of the roses as he journeys back and forth, throughout the season, he also confers a genuine pleasure upon the thousands who pass over the busy thoroughfare. Thinking of this admirable and unselfish act, one is made to wonder why Christians, as travelers to the better land, do not place more flowers along the pathway of life. True, we are ready to heap them upon the casket of the departed ones, but why, oh, why, not put them where they may cheer and brighten life's sad and dreary hours?

A Lesson from Egyptian Mummies.

The carefully-embalmed Egyptian mummies that for more than three thousand years reposed in the rock-hewn tombs allotted them, have hitherto been looked upon as mere curiosities,—museum specialties. Modern research now ascribes to them definite scientific value. It has subjected the bodies to close examination, and found in them the same fatal "hardening of the arteries" that is the despair of the medical practitioner of today. And yet, some things are taught by these mummies. Meat eating can not be the cause of arterial hardening, as alleged by some, for Egyptians were largely given to a vegetable diet. Tobacco, also, can not be at fault, for the dweller by the Nile had never seen it. Then, again, intense muscular exercise, adduced by some as the cause of arterial lesions, can not be cited as a reason of the difficulty referred to, for many of the mummies examined were those of priests, who were not given to hard work, and yet their arteries were badly affected. Thus, while we have learned that the ancient Egyptians were "men of like passion" as we are,—subject to the same arterial difficulties,—we have also learned the fact that the conditions under which they lived,—in many ways more conducive to physical well-being than ours today,— did not exempt them from the baneful hardening of the arteries. They ran their appointed course until impaired vitality laid them low, leaving their well-preserved bodies as mute reminders of the physical conditions with which they had to battle.

Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth

In After-Years.

BY FRANK G. REPLOGLE.

The world is full of joy and tears,
But we shall know in after-years
Why all these changes come and go,
Dressed in the garb of peace and woe.

This world to us a vale appears,
But we shall know in after-years
How troubles oft and sorrows e'er
Did us for life beyond prepare.

Free from all trials no man steers,
But we shall know, in after-years,
That crown of thorns, on earth by love,
Means crown of stars in heav'n above.

The mocking sinner laughs and sneers,
But we shall know in after-years
That every knee shall to him bow,
Who pleads for all to serve him now.

Then, mournful saints, awake with cheers,
For we shall know in after-years;
How God guards all and governs all;
E'en feathers that from sparrows fall.

Christ then shall wipe away the tears
And in the glow of after-years
We'll lay our earthly crosses down,
To wear the faithful worker's crown.

The Battle of Life.

BY S. Z. SHARP.

"The weapons of our warfare are not carnal" (2 Cor. 10: 4).

MAN struggles to enter this world, and with a struggle he leaves it. All through life he is in a battle. The forms of his conflicts are: (1) For life. (2) For education. (3) For a living. (4) For promotion. (5) For eternal life.

These conflicts do not follow in succession, but two or more may be on at the same time.

Man's first battle is for a mere existence. His first enemies are all the diseases to which infancy is heir. After a siege of colic, brought on by the abnormal condition of the mother, he must face scarlet fever, diphtheria, measles, smallpox, mumps, etc. According to statistics, one-third of the human race dies before the age of six years, and so fulfills the statement of Job, "Man, born of woman is of few years and full of trouble."

With the struggle for existence comes also the struggle for knowledge. With many efforts and many failures he learns his mother tongue. With the aid of intelligent parents, teachers and associates, he learns the meaning of ten thousand words by the time he reaches the age of six years. With many a tumble he learns to walk, and with many a stammer he learns to talk. Then new fields open up before him, and new subjects of conquest. Through the various stages of learning, the battle goes on, nor does it cease until this life ends. The learning of language, science, as well as of trades and professions, costs many a hard struggle.

No less arduous with most men is the struggle for a living. While it is decreed that "in the sweat of his face, man shall eat his bread," yet with all his efforts, it is said that about eighty per cent of the inhabitants of the United States do not own a home. The daily toil of the laboring classes is a daily battle, and often only a partial victory. This battle continues, while the battles for knowledge and with disease are still on, which makes the struggle still more arduous.

With all these conflicts on, nearly every one strives for promotion. It may be in the family, in the school, the church, in the state, or it may be for wealth or renown. There is something inherent in us that seeks the esteem of our fellow-men or to gain a position above those of our own class. The struggle in school for first honors, or in the various games, as well as for office, or in church or state, are only so many of life's battles with their victories or defeats.

The greatest, the most important, of all our battles is that for eternal life. Our enemies are the world, our flesh and Satan. Our opposing forces are the church, the Spirit, and the Word. Though we are in the flesh, yet "our weapons are not carnal, but mighty before God to the casting down of strongholds, casting down imaginations and every high thing."

Much depends on our armor and weapons. In the worldly warfare the weapons are constantly changed and improved, but in this spiritual warfare the weapons which the Lord furnishes can not be improved. They are the very best. The first article mentioned is truth. It is an old adage that "truth is mighty and must prevail." Falsehood can never stand against truth. To be girt with truth means to have truth on every side.

"Truth crushed to earth will rise again,
The eternal years of God are hers,
But error, vanquished, writhes in pain,
And dies amid her worshipers."

We must not overlook the fact that, with our armor on, we must take a firm stand—stand on the Rock Christ Jesus—stand with the church, for "the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." The reason why some young Christians fall and are overcome by the enemy, is because they do not take a firm stand with the church. Nothing pleases Satan better than to see our young members drift from the church toward the world. He feels sure of getting them and often does.

Next we are to "put on the breastplate of righteousness,"—not our own righteousness, but that of Jesus Christ, imputed to us by faith, repentance and baptism, and wrought out in us by the Holy Spirit. One stands a poor show of gaining the victory over death, hell and the grave, without joining God's army, the church. The enemy is too strong for any one to resist single-handed.

"Having your feet shod with the preparation of the Gospel of peace." This figure, no doubt, is borrowed from the practice of the Roman soldiers who wore sandals with nails in the soles, which enabled them to stand on slippery ground and slanting places. The article that the Christian soldier is to wear is made of "the Gospel of peace." There is no such thing as gospel of war. Christ, our Head, is the "Prince of Peace." His ministers are all messengers of peace, and his soldiers must be armed with peace. One of the greatest conflicts, now going on, is between the building of great warships and manufacturing deadly weapons, on the one hand, and the work of peace societies on the other. One of the latest great war vessels cost as much as a city of eighteen thousand houses, costing one thousand dollars each, and every shot fired from one of its great cannons costs seven hundred dollars each. On the other hand we have the million-dollar Peace Court house at The Hague, and the ten-million-dollar Peace Fund given by Mr. Carnegie, to teach peace among nations, but greater than all this is the "Gospel of peace" infused into the souls of men, which constrains them not to fight with carnal weapons.

"Taking the shield of faith." "Without faith it is impossible to please God," or gain a victory over the enemy. 1 John 5: 4 says: "This is the victory, even our faith." Turn to Heb. 11: 32-35, and notice the wonderful victories gained by the ancient saints, "who through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions, quenched the power of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, from weakness were made strong, waxed mighty in war, turned to flight armies of aliens." By this shield of faith we are "to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked one." These fiery darts are the insinuations of the tempter, shot into our minds to inflame our lust, pride, or other evil feelings with which every soul has to struggle. Even in our holy exercises evil thoughts or feelings may come up. This is the experience of every Christian, but by faith we can bring them to Jesus in silent prayer and they are soon quenched.

"Putting on the helmet of salvation," or as we have it in 1 Thess. 5: 8, "the hope of salvation." This is to protect the head or the intellect against doubt, or rationalism.

"The sword of the Spirit which is the Word of God." This Word, indited by the Spirit, was the weapon that Christ used in his defense when tempted by Satan or the Pharisees, and may be our most formidable weapon. Paul used it, and so did David, and found it most effective. To make this Christian armor most effective, it must be accompanied by prayer, for

"Satan trembles when he sees,
The weakest saint upon his knees."

Remember, "with all prayer and supplication" is meant every kind and form of prayer, congregational, social, domestic or secret. It means at all times, "Pray without ceasing." It means in every place. "I would that men pray everywhere, lifting up holy hands without wrath and doubting." Jesus has well said: "Without me ye can do nothing." No Christian should attempt it, and we can not see why any one should stay out of Christ and expect to win the battle of life alone, especially when the last great, great conflict is to be engaged in. When the angel of death comes, and you are out of Christ and without hope for the world to come, you can not look the grim monster in the face and say, "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" but the Christian, with his armor on, can say with Paul, "I have fought the good fight, I have finished the course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me the crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give to me at that day; and not to me only, but also to all them that have loved his appearing."

Irreverence.

BY NETTIE C. WEYBRIGHT.

A SIN that is so very common that it is often passed by unnoticed is that of irreverence. It begins in disobedience. In little children it is frequently condoned under the false title of being "cute" or "bright," but as they grow older, this indifference to parental or other authority becomes more marked and alarming. In a few years they boldly resent school authority, and, later, openly rebel at all powers,—parental, school, church and civil, even treading under foot the holy name of God. They become so utterly rude and rebellious that, unless something radical be done to curb them, they will surely come to grief,—in prison, perhaps. It is useful to contemplate, but what will things come to? What will the end be?

Nor does this end with the children and young people, but even the older, the more experienced ones, share in the error. I was once in a Sunday-school when the works of Satan were being discussed. The teacher spoke of him as "the old devil," and actually smiled at the remark. Naturally, most of the class, too, laughed at the, to them, funny phrase. It seemed terrible. Satan, the prince of this world, should not be lightly spoken of by any puny, helpless human being, when, on every hand, we see manifestations of his awful power over us. He holds his followers in abject slavery and is constantly watching to ensnare unwary followers of the Lamb. The Bible speaks of him as a "roaring lion," seeking whom he may devour. Then let us beware, and rather pray lest we enter into temptation.

There is yet another phase of this subject, that, if possible, seems still worse,—that of preachers speaking lightly of their work,—men who have been set apart to handle the Holy Word of Truth, giving it out to perishing souls,—servants of the Most High God making light of their profession!

A minister appeared rather unexpectedly in a small crowd of young people. As he approached he hailed them laughingly with, "Be careful what you say now. There's a preacher coming." What was the effect? A few careless ones joined him in foolish talking and jesting, while some more thoughtful members of the company were sorry that he knew no better, and secretly prayed that the others might soon forget the unguarded word.

The Sunday morning sermon was preached by a minister of considerable talent. He afterwards invited all the young people present to spend the afternoon together in his home. The idea seemed a good one, for this was a weak, struggling, little church, and there were many still unconverted. This might help to interest them. But, during the afternoon he seemed to be making a special effort to keep up a continuous roar of laughter, with his funny stories, teasing, foolish remarks, and other hilarious proceedings. At dinner his manner was unchanged, and such statements as5, "The chickens always run when the preacher comes visiting," and "All preachers like chicken and pie," were all too characteristic of his ceaseless chatter. Such idle talk certainly did not seem to be "seasoned with grace," nor was it at all heavenly in its nature. Some, at least, felt almost condemned in being present. This sounds bad,—almost too bad to relate,—but may it help some one to be more careful.

We can not exercise too great care in our conversation, especially among the unconverted. We can not glorify God by vain talking. The Bible condemns it. Paul says, "Speak thou the things which befit sound doctrine, in all things showing thyself an ensample of good works; in thy doctrine showing uncorruptness, gravity, sound speech, that can not be condemned." "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." In many ways we may fail truly to reverence God.

"Cheerful Giving."

BY C. C. HAWBAKER.

"But this I say, He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully. Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity, for God loveth a cheerful giver" (2 Cor. 9: 6, 7).

HERE we have one of the rules for giving, which is taken from God's inspired Word. By reading the chapter from which these two verses are taken, we infer that the financial affairs in the church needed attention in Paul's time. We do not doubt that it is one of the "big" problems we have to face at the present time. The success of the church, which is the Lord's work, depends almost wholly on what is given to defray its needful expenses.

Let us notice the relation between sowing and reaping. Paul says that if we are stingy with seed, we will have a poor crop. Now, this is something that can be understood by every one. We all know that the sowing has a great deal to do with the harvest. If we expect a bountiful crop, we must, of necessity, sow bountifully. It is a self-evident fact that if not enough seed is sown, a full crop can not be produced. On the other hand, if a man sows bountifully, he has reason to expect a bountiful harvest and he will receive such a harvest if other conditions are favorable.

So Paul would have us learn that if we contribute sparingly to the Lord's work, our blessings derived therefrom will be scarce. If it is true in nature that the relation between sowing and reaping is close,—and we all know it is,—then it is also true in our sowing and reaping in the Lord's vineyard. If we give much of our means to advance the Lord's work, we have the promise of blessings from God. There is a condition to this, however, the same as in sowing seed on the land. We must "give, not grudgingly, nor of necessity," but cheerfully. We should have good motives in giving. It is not enough that we give a dollar or two because our brother has done so, or because some one has asked us to do so, but we should be so anxious to give that we could hardly wait to be asked. We must have the Lord's work uppermost in our hearts, and should give because of our love for him and because he has done so much for us.

Each man is to give according as he purposeth in his heart. Now here is where some of us free our conscience. We purpose in our hearts to give a small amount, and then quote this scripture to try to prove we have complied with the command. But remember, every passage of scripture must be considered with its context. Those who give just enough to try to free their conscience, can expect a very thin stand of grain at harvest time. If we give all we have, and have not love, it is of no profit to us. There is the secret of it all. That one word of four letters,—love.

Why is it that people can not be made to see their duty in giving as God has prospered them? A good farmer can be shown the reasonableness of spending money to enrich his land, in order that, in a few months, he can reap a more bountiful harvest. He spends his money before he receives any returns, while a great many of us, who profess to have the love of God in our hearts, are watching and waiting for a great demonstration of God's goodness to us before we are willing to give a dollar for the support of his work. During the time we are waiting, we are partaking of many blessings from God every moment. "Blessed be the Lord who daily loadeth us with benefits, even the God of our salvation" (Psa. 68: 19).

It seems to me that the reasonableness of giving many times as much as we do, should be so evident that we should not need so much teaching along this line before we respond. The Lord has given us the earth. "The heaven, even the heavens, are the Lord's but the earth hath he given to the children of men" (Psa. 115: 16). We often hear it said of a person, "He wants the earth." Now it is said in God's Word that we have the earth. We draw from the earth all we possibly can, and yet are too close and stingy to give the Lord even a fair interest. We slave all the year, and when our duty of giving is shown us, we say, "Oh, I have a note coming due that I must pay," "I have to buy this or that," or "Money is scarce with me just now." Yes, and as long as we continue with these excuses, we will always have some other place for our money as long as we live, and when we come to leave this world we may realize that we are going to a worse one. This is what I learn from the teachings of Jesus himself.

It would appear that there is no plainer command in the Bible, than the command to give, and give generously. We should not treat it as a light matter. It should not be given a second place. We are positively commanded not to worry about gathering around us so many temporal things and then give God only about a dollar out of a hundred, and that only when we are almost forced to do so.

Many people excuse themselves for their small contributions by referring to the widow who gave two mites, and was commended by Jesus. But listen to what he says, "She of her penury hath cast in all the living that she had" (Luke 21: 4). As soon as we "go and do likewise" there will be no need of so much teaching on this subject, nor of so much begging for money to give to the Lord. I am truly sorry that it is necessary almost to beg for the Lord.

Brethren, let us wake up and meet this issue! We have the command, and the promises, and if we do not do better in face of the teaching we now receive, there is only one conclusion,—We have not the love of God in our hearts.

The Brethren Schools.

BY GEO. L. STUDEBAKER.

THE time is near for the opening of our schools in various parts of the Brotherhood. How very thankful we should be, as a church, that we have these schools! Parents, in sending their children to college, should not hesitate to patronize one of our own schools. Many of our promising young people are lost to the church by the influence they were under in other schools. In my canvass for students I found some young members who were once considered strong in the faith of the church, and promising as faithful workers in the church, but, having been associated with others in their school work, were becoming weak in the faith and practices of the church.

Many of our young people, who have attended our own schools, and graduated from the various departments, are holding responsible and lucrative positions, as much so as those who have attended other schools.

It is very gratifying to hear of an increased attendance in all of our schools. This indicates that our people are patronizing our own schools more. Not one of our Brethren's children should be found in other colleges, if they can possibly secure the course which they desire to take.

Manchester College is gratified to report the prospects in attendance better than the preceding year. The Academic Course has been certified by the Indiana State Board of Education as being equal to the commissioned high school course. Although there are high schools in almost every township in the State, there being two in the City of North Manchester, yet not a few of the young people prefer completing their high school course in the college. This gives us a very creditable enrollment in this course.

The Commercial Course aims to prepare young men and women for actual business. Students graduating from this course have no trouble in securing good positions. A good increase in attendance is expected in this course. The Music Department, under the supervision of Sister Cora M. Stally is very promising. Our people are lovers of music, and why should they not be? When all the "sweet singers get home," we will not stop singing. We will sing there, with perfection, the songs of the redeemed.

Elder S. S. Blough will be in charge of the Bible Department. Some are expecting to enroll in this department to prepare themselves for missionaries and Christian workers in the church. What a telling influence these Bible Departments have in our Colleges!

In past years it was thought by many that a high school course was sufficient. Now our young people do not care to stop there, but prefer to continue their school work until they have completed the College course. It is in this Department that Manchester College will more than double her enrollment. Several young ministers will enroll this fall to complete a College Course. These faithful young brethren are making great sacrifices, so as to prepare themselves for greater usefulness in the church. May God bless and prosper them and may they ever be found faithful in his service!

While we are pleased to report such bright prospects for Manchester College, we hope that our other colleges are looking forward with renewed courage for a successful school year. May God bless our Christian colleges!

Organization of District of Idaho and Western Montana.

BY A. I. MOW, DISTRICT CLERK.

IN accordance with the favor and recommendation of the St. Joseph Conference, the elders and delegates of the churches of Idaho met in the Boise Valley church and organized the new State District,—Idaho and Western Montana.

The following churches were represented by two delegates each: Boise City, Boise Valley, Nampa, Payette Valley, Madden View, and Weiser. Twin Falls had one delegate.

When the delegates were qualified and seated, the temporary officers of the meeting proceeded to elect the permanent officials. The officials chosen are Eld. L. H. Eby, Moderator; Eld. J. E. Shamberger, Reading Clerk; Eld. A. I. Mow, Writing Clerk.

Hereupon the meeting proceeded to adopt the following constitution:

I. Name and Territory.

1. This District shall be known as the District of Idaho and Western Montana.

2. The District of Idaho and Western Montana shall embrace all the territory of Idaho and the western portion of Montana.

3. It shall include all the organized congregations at present within this territory, viz., Boise City, Boise Valley, Clearwater, Flathead Valley, Lost

River, Madden View, Nampa, Nez Perce, Payette Valley, Twin Falls, Weiser, Winchester, and any others which may hereafter be organized in this territory.

II. Organization.

1. The organization shall consist of Moderator, Reading Clerk, Writing Clerk, Treasurer, Timekeeper, two delegates from each congregation, a Committee on Credentials, a Missionary Board, a Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meeting Committee, a Ministerial Meeting and Bible School Committee, a Committee on Homes for Orphan Children, a Temperance Committee, and the Elders' Meeting.

III. The Election and Appointment of Officers and Committees.

1. The Moderator, Writing and Reading Clerks, and Treasurer, shall be elected by the majority of ballots cast by the delegates.

2. The Timekeeper shall be appointed by the Moderator.

3. The Committee on Credentials shall be appointed by the Elders' Meeting.

IV. Tenure of Office.

1. The Moderator, Writing and Reading Clerks shall be elected at each Annual Meeting of the District, and shall be the officers of the District during the ensuing year, until their respective successors are elected. None of these officers shall succeed themselves in the same office. Only elders may be elected as Moderator. The clerkships are not necessarily confined to the ministry.

2. The Treasurer shall be elected for a period of one year. Any faithful brother, with good business tact, may be elected as Treasurer.

3. All the committees specified shall consist of three members, who shall be elected, one for one year, one for two years, and one for three years; and thereafter, as their respective terms expire, their successors shall be elected for three years, except the Committee on Credentials.

Provided, that in the first election of the Mission Board the Chairman shall be elected for three years; the Secretary for two years; the Treasurer for one year.

Provided, that any vacancy occurring in the Board by either death or moving away, shall be supplied by the remaining members and the Moderator of District Meeting. Their appointment to hold only till District Meeting convenes.

Provided, that the Mission Board may be composed of either officials or laity.

Provided, that any member of the Mission Board, when his term expires, may be reelected.

Provided, that all expenses, connected with the mission work, shall be paid out of the mission fund.

V. Disbursements from the District Treasury.

1. Expenses of printing District Meeting Minutes, queries for District Meeting, of Annual Meeting Minutes, of delegate on Standing Committee sent by District Meeting, of any fixtures pertaining to the District for their meetings, and any assessments made upon the District by the General Brotherhood, are to be paid from the District Treasury.

Provided, that churches calling for committees for ordination, or for settling other matters, shall themselves pay the expenses of the same.

Provided, that this foregoing provision shall not debar weak churches or mission points from getting needed committees. In such cases the committee may decide for the District to pay any part or all of such expense.

VI. Authority and Method of Procedure.

The District of Idaho and Western Montana herein declares and pledges her allegiance and faithful adherence to the councils of the General Brotherhood of the Church of the Brethren, as set forth and published in the Minutes of Annual Meeting.

1. For the conduct of the District Meeting the moderator shall preside according to "Rules of Governing District Meeting," p. 10, Revised Minutes of Annual Meeting.

2. For Rights and Privileges she finds her authority in "District Meetings," pp. 14-16, Revised Minutes of Annual Meeting.

3. For directing the faith and personal habits of individuals, and the constituent churches, she shall seek the counsels of Annual Meeting.

4. For Elders' Meeting and its functions see p. 70, Revised Minutes, Art. 16.

VII. Specific Conveniences.

1. The names of all delegates and all the queries for District Meeting shall be in the hands of the District Clerk one month before District Meeting convenes. The Clerk shall have the queries printed and several copies sent to the elders in the different congregations for distribution, and shall retain some for the use of District Meeting.

2. Churches entertaining District Meeting may collect for meals as follows: Adults, twenty cents per single meal, or six meals for one dollar; children, between five and twelve years of age, fifteen cents per single meal, or eight meals for one dollar. All surplus resulting therefrom shall be turned over to the District Treasurer.

The several papers were then considered, and several important relations fixed.

After the meeting elected the several committees and made provisions for the necessary finances, we bowed in humble, grateful thanks to our Father for having set another young and willing branch into a position to grow, and bear fruit. May the dear Lord grant us his love and guidance!

Weiser, Idaho.

Annual Meeting Committee at Covington, Ohio.

BY ELIZABETH D. ROSENBERGER.

As is well known to many readers of the MESSENGER, the last Conference appointed a committee to visit the Covington church. In view of the fact that our church troubles were widely known and discussed, we ask a little space in the MESSENGER to give an account of the proceedings and the results.

We have had differences in the Covington church for a number of years. Some of us felt that our difficulties were augmented and made worse in the same way that family difficulties are often increased,—by outside interference. It does not tend towards peace and confidence, to have our differences too freely discussed by others,—however well-meant their efforts may be.

Two years ago we started a movement to have a pastor locate here. A large majority of the church were in favor of it and proceeded to carry out their plans. The church and Sunday-school attendance soon doubled. Then it was apparent to all that a new church building must be erected, as the old one was too small. This was undertaken and completed within a year. In all this effort and activity, Eld. P. H. Beery was the moving spirit. Always hopeful of better days, he pushed the work with unflagging energy and enthusiasm, and happily his efforts were crowned with remarkable success. But there remained a small band of members who did not affiliate with the church in these measures, and thus it was that a committee was sent us.

The committee, consisting of Eld. L. T. Holsinger, of Indiana, Elders John Heckman and P. R. Keltner, of Illinois, and elders J. H. Longenecker and Jesse Ziegler, of Pennsylvania, met with us on Tuesday, Aug. 8. They announced their organization as follows: L. T. Holsinger, Moderator; John Heckman, Secretary; Jesse Ziegler, Reading Clerk. Then began a hearing of the case in the presence of the church, which lasted one week. The plaintiffs were the dissatisfied members; the defendant was the Covington church,—composed of about nine-tenths of the entire membership.

The committee listened patiently to the evidence presented by the plaintiffs, and then to the reply by the defendants. They investigated the charges most thoroughly and in the kindliest spirit. Unkind criticism and personalities were not permitted. And as the case was unfolded, it became plain that, instead of tending to further separation, we were being drawn closer together. The plaintiffs were willing to admit that they were mistaken in some things. Then Eld. P. H. Beery, who had been chosen by the church to present her case before the committee, stated that he was willing, in behalf of the church, to withdraw all charges which had been drawn up against the plaintiffs, as it was not the desire to "win out" or to conquer, but rather a prayerful hope for peace and fellowship, and a united body of members in doing good, that had actuated his entire defense. He also, at this moment, introduced a "peace proposal," which was discussed with keen interest before the committee, and agreed to by every member present amid tears of forgiveness and joy.

In this way everything of a personal nature was withdrawn from the charges considered, before the committee retired to consider the matters laid before them. So overwhelming was this desire for peace and union, that many said, "This must be an answer to our prayers." Perhaps never before, in the history of our church, was a like scene witnessed by an Annual Meeting committee. Here was the reconciliation and peace that makes angels rejoice.

The entire church had confidence in the committee, as being men of the highest Christian character. It was a new experience for us to see the committee with such keen sympathy probe the depths of our difficulties and look at all sides of the question. We were, therefore, not surprised when at last we met to consider their report, to find it framed so wisely and impartially that the entire church, without a dissenting voice, accepted their report. That meeting will never be forgotten! Under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, kindly things were said and done, faces brightened and grew hopeful under the influence of love and peace, and all confessed that great help and blessing were brought to us by the godly men of this committee.

The oft-repeated request of Eld. Jacob Coppock, to be relieved of the charge of the Covington church, was granted by the committee. Eld. John Heckman was placed over the church, with Jesse Ziegler and L. T. Holsinger as an advisory committee. We are anxious to move forward as a united people, with but one object,—the salvation of souls,—and but one aim,—the formation of the highest Christian character.

Just before the committee came among us, six souls were baptized. While the committee were here, our attendance at Sunday-school was 395; amount of our collection, $35.76. On the following Sunday one dear aged lady was baptized in the afternoon. In the evening our pastor, Geo. W. Flory, preached to a crowded house. At the close of the services one more came forward, making eight in all. And why should they not come? Jesus said, "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto myself."

The Eighty-second Birthday Dinner.

BY J. G. ROYER.

YESTERDAY,—August 28,—I had the privilege and pleasure of being a participant of the Gish-McCauley birthday dinner, given by Brother and Sister Oscar McCauley in the old Gish-McCauley homestead.

The dinner was given in honor of Aunt Barbara Gish, widow of Bro. Jas. R. Gish, of sacred memory, and Bro. John McCauley, the surviving husband of Mary Elizabeth Gish, Bro. Gish's oldest sister. It was Aunt Barbara's eighty-second birthday, with Bro. McCauley's eighty-second birthday only one month,—Sept. 28,—in the future.

Bro. Jas. R. Gish, with his then young wife, Barbara, came from Roanoke, Va., in the fall of 1848, and entered the quarter section of land on which the greater part of the city of Roanoke, Ill., now stands. On the highest part of their quarter section they erected their first Illinois dwelling,—a one-room house twelve by sixteen feet.

A few days after moving into their new house, Rufus,—as he was generally called,—planted his first tree,—a cottonwood switch,—a short distance from their door.

I visited the place where once the one-room house stood, and found a larger and more modern structure occupying its place; but the cottonwood switch remains in the form of a wide-spreading tree which, a few days ago, measured eleven feet, eight inches in circumference, two and one-half feet above ground.

Rufus and Barbara came to Illinois in 1848. His father, with the remainder of the family came in 1851, and settled on a quarter section adjoining that of Rufus. In 1852 and the year following the father built the commodious Virginia-patterned residence in which the dinner above referred to was given. In 1855, John McCauley, a young man of twenty-six came from Roanoke, Va., and, using his own words of yesterday, he said, "I hung up my hat here when I came from Virginia, and have not taken it down to this day." John came to claim Mary. Rufus's oldest sister, as his wife. And, by the way, this Mary, or "Betty," as she was generally called, was a school-teacher,—the first one to have our venerable Office Editor of the MESSENGER as a pupil. They lived in a small house in the yard for some time. Then they became the occupants of the homestead.

Bro. McCauley now is at home with his oldest son and wife, who have become his successors in the occupancy of the memorable Christie Gish mansion.

Both Aunt Barbara and Bro. McCauley, although past the four score mark, are well preserved. They enjoy good health, and are cheerful and happy.

More About Eld. Allen Ives.

BY C. S. HOFF.

It is with sadness that I read of the passing of Bro. Allen Ives. One more pillar in the church has been removed, and the burdens and the responsibilities of the church have been shifted one step nearer to the shoulders of some of us younger ones. While Bro. Secrist writes of his life in a general way, I wish to speak of it as viewed by those who were his neighbors in Kansas.

True, Bro. Ives lost his property, but I am convinced that he did not lose his friends. I know of no one who has more friends than Uncle Allen Ives had in and around Burr Oak, Kans. In fact, if he had an enemy, I never heard of it. While my acquaintance with him was very limited, yet my knowledge of him was somewhat extended, and every one with whom I talked spoke of him with the greatest respect and esteem. If he had a failing it was in being too lenient. He was of a gentle and yielding nature, allowing himself to be wronged rather than to defend himself, which accounts, probably for the loss of his property. He was not a fluent speaker; neither did he deliver his message with great power or eloquence, yet he impressed one as a man who believed what he was saying, and was deeply in earnest. This counts for more, with the world, than mere eloquence or power. I well remember when he delivered his farewell addresses. He spoke at the church in the morning to an exceptionally large gathering, and by special request from the Christian minister, he filled his pulpit in the evening, again to a crowded house. There were people at church that day from a considerable distance, whom I never saw at church before nor since.

His missionary efforts were noteworthy. He used to drive as many as twenty miles, or more, on Saturday, so as to be at the appointment on Sunday, and that without pay or compensation of any kind. If only we could have more such consecrated workers! There would be more churches organized and fewer disbanded than there are. We owe much to the memory of the faithful old veterans who are leaving us one at a time. Though they did not make a great stir about their missionary zeal, and take large collections for the missionary cause, they made greater sacrifices in the spread of the Gospel than any of us do today. I would not say a word to disparage the missionary movements of this age, neither do I like to hear the efforts of the past generation spoken of lightly. Each age had its own conditions to meet, and it met them in the way, I believe, best suited to the age. Our missionaries of a generation ago did their work well, and their labors bore fruit. As I sit here, thinking of the past, the present, and the future, of the church and her workers, I am made to feel, more than ever in my life, that the Church of the Brethren has a mission in the world, and that God is with her to fill that mission. Brethren, are we at work with all our power; or are we allowing the spirit of the age to rob us of our spirituality, and cripple our work so that it becomes unfruitful? Remember, that in a few short years we shall be called home to give an account of our stewardship. Then, what shall our answer be? Remember the one who is the subject of this article. He lost all his earthly possessions, yet he did not allow that to stop his work, but labored on the more earnestly, looking forward to the time when he would inherit the home that no one can take away from him. He was poor on earth, but is rich in heaven. Which is the more valuable?

Why Men Doubt.

BY EZRA FLORY.

FIRST, men doubt because sin so blinds moral vision that the truth is not seen at is, but in a distorted fashion, which makes it less attractive. "Now the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness to him; and he can not know them, because they are spiritually judged" (1 Cor. 2: 14). And Christ said, "This is the judgment, that light is come into the world, and men loved the darkness rather than the light; for their works were evil" (John 3: 19).

SECOND, the truth of Jesus carries with it condemnation for the sinner, and no one enjoys reproof or rebuke. A lawyer once, "willing to justify himself," said, "Who is my neighbor?" He is a fair example of the natural man who questions the authority of the Bible and the existence of God, rather than to confess his sin.

THIRD, there is a devil. He first injected doubt into the mind of man (Gen. 3). Jesus called him the father of lies. He is still at his art of prejudicing the creature against the Creator, and it is not at all strange that all people pass through a period of doubt as to the fundamentals of religion. Some are so completely blinded that they never come out of their spiritual darkness.

Doubting will not change the eternal truth of God but does subject the doubter to the charge of making God a liar. "He that believeth not God hath made him a liar; because he hath not believed in the witness that God hath borne concerning his Son" (1 John 5: 10). And, again, "And even if our gospel is veiled, it is veiled in them that perish; in whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of the unbelieving, that the light of the Gospel of the glory of Christ, who is the image of God, should not dawn upon them" (2 Cor. 4: 3, 4).

God has left an abundance of evidence for us, so that we are without excuse. "Again therefore Jesus spake unto them, saying, I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life" (John 8: 12). "If any man willeth to do his will, he shall know of the teaching" (John 7: 17). The words of Jesus to the unbelieving are touching in John 5: 40, "Ye will not come to me, that ye may have life." That is, they did not exercise their will to accept.

MEDICINE LAKE, MONT.

In the early part of October, 1906, Bro. D. M. Mootheart, of Cando, N. Dak., made his selection for a home-site nine miles northeast of Culbertson, Mont. Eld. J. E. Keller, of Tipton, Iowa, made his selection for a homestead twenty-three miles northeast of Culbertson, Mont., in the early part of April, 1907. Brethren Mootheart and Keller met for the first time in Culbertson, upon the arrival of their respective families. It was also our first knowledge of any Brethren coming to this new and unoccupied field. Rapid settlement was made on each of our claims, in a temporary way. The following July we held our first preaching services at the home of Bro. Mootheart, who is a deacon. In three weeks after this, services were held at the home of Eld. Keller, and so we held our services alternately till in the late fall.

In the spring of 1908 we again renewed holding the alternate services. In the same spring a number of Brethren moved into the vicinity of Eld. Keller. They took homestead land, and when they had their houses erected, arrangements were effected to have services at their new homes, thus uniting our efforts in worship. This small nucleus of Brethren expressed a strong desire to become an organized congregation. By mutual consent, on July 4, 1908, an organization was effected. The adjoining elders who were to preside in the organization, did not appear. By mutual consent the members decided to proceed, and Eld. Keller was selected to preside. The organization was effected with a membership of eighteen. The name of "Medicine Lake" church was submitted to the District Meeting of North Dakota, Northern Minnesota and Western Canada for approval, and the work was sanctioned.

At the time of the organization a Sunday-school was started, which has been evergreen. July 18, 1909, we held our first love feast, with forty-three communicants. Bro. I. M. McCune was elected to the ministry, and Bro. Wm. Swank was elected deacon. They and their wives were duly installed. Bro. H. C. Longanecker, of Berthold, N. Dak., officiated. Four were received into the church by baptism. The above-named meeting was held on the claim of Bro. Chalmer Bailey, in his newly-built barn.

July 17, 1910, we held our second love feast in an enlarged shack, erected for the first term of school, on the claim of Miss Vesta H. Keller, the church securing lumber for a temporary addition. At this meeting forty-six members communed. Four were received by baptism. Prior to the meeting of June 18, 1911, we began our first series of meetings, conducted by Eld. Keller. He labored until June 25, after which Eld. D. F. Landis, of Willsiton, N. Dak., continued the meetings, concluding with a love feast, July 1 nine united with the church by baptism. This love feast was held on Bro. C. E. Beaverly's claim, in a temporary building.

Enterprise, Mont., Aug. 24. KATIE E. KELLER.

PRAIRIE CITY CHURCH, IOWA.

We met in council Aug. 26. Our elder, Bro. W. J. Buckingham, had charge of the meeting. The wants and needs of the forthcoming District Meeting were discussed. Our love feast will be held Sept. 16, at 6 P. M. Bro. Galen B. Royer will follow with a ten days' series of meetings, leading up to our District Meeting. We will also have prayer meeting each Wednesday evening. We have many opportunities to prepare our hearts and minds for more united action. Sisters Neiswander and Katie Buckingham are our delegates to District Meeting. As Sister Nora Alexander, our church clerk, is leaving our field of labor, Bro. Chester McCune was chosen clerk in her stead. Our church indebtedness of $84.76 was quickly raised by special donations. The decision of Annual Meeting on the dress question was duly considered, and we hope that all will labor to the honor and glory of God.

Our District Secretary was with us Aug. 13 and gave us many good thoughts on Sunday-school work. Her work with us was pleasant and inspiring. Bro. W. West will begin our series of meetings sometime during the first part of December. Brethren Caskey and McLellan, like Paul, are busy in building us up spiritually. They are giving us soul-inspiring sermons, which are much appreciated. Sister Nora Moomaw has been giving our Sunday-school some good, practical talks on the Sunday-school lessons, which are much appreciated. He still walks his mile and a half to Sunday-school and church, and is a good example for those who find so many excuses for staying away. How we shall miss these old soldiers of the cross when the call of the Master is, "Come up higher." JENNIE ALEXANDER.

A TENDER FILIAL FAREWELL

Aug. 20 Jacob Homer Bright came to the church of his childhood and youth, and preached his farewell sermon to his relatives and friends. After a logical and Scriptural lesson of the value of fellowship with God and his people, and how this will lead us to do our utmost to extend his kingdom to the ends of the earth, he said: "We are anxious to carry this fellowship to China. It is true there are duties that would seem to keep us here, but others can and will perform them. I think of the Savior, when hanging on the cross, he said to his mother, 'Behold thy Son.' Then he said to his beloved disciple, 'Behold thy mother.' He committed his mother to the care of the Apostle John when duties called him from her. So, as I leave for the Orient, I commit to your care and love my father."

To me these words seemed like apples of gold in pictures of silver. And as the days, or perchance the years, steal over me, they shall add a softness to my pillow, a joy to my last conscious moments, and doubtless augment our fellowship in the Paradise of God.

THE ROUND TABLE

A Deceptive Drink.

BY IDA M. HELM.

It is high time for every thoughtful person, who has not yet begun an earnest struggle against strong drink, to enter a solemn protest at once. Well may the Indians call strong drink "fire-water," and fittingly the Hindoos call it "shame-water." There is not a community that does not contain drunkards' graves. The living wrecks that the accursed traffic has made are seen everywhere.

We have only one short life to live. Every movement is so very precious that no one can afford to waste time at the bar. The money we call ours is entrusted to us by God, and we should use it sacredly in his service. We have no right to pass it over the bar, or exchange it for strong drink.

Nothing is more deceptive than liquor. You may take an occasional glass and think it is good for you, and you may scorn the thought of becoming a drunkard, but you are in imminent danger so long as you tamper with the fatal cup. When once the thirst has been created, the downward course is swift and terrible. Strong and wise men have been mastered by this tyrant. If it is hard for us to do without a little whiskey, it is a sure sign that it is doing its work. It is folly to run the risk of creating the awful thirst. "Public houses are well called 'shades' and 'vaults.' They are the shades of death, and vaults for the burial of all that is noblest and best in man."

Many a barge, drifting on the treacherous, cruel waters of intemperance, has been rescued, and helped to anchor in the harbor of safety. By the grace of God there is hope for the hopeless.

The Choice of Ways.

BY OMA KARN.

"No force divine compels,
To him who will,
The Christ of Calvary a place prepare,
Iscariot makes his own."

It was before them, there in that upper room, the choice of ways,—the way of the cross or the way of self. One glance at the future of him who chose the way of self, and we turn shudderingly away. One glance at the radiant figure ascending heavenward from the Mount of Ascension, one glimpse through the eyes of faith at the beautiful home he has gone to prepare, and how can one hesitate about which way to take?

In this matter of choice there is no compulsion. God does not force any one to be good. We hear our Savior saying, "If any man will come after me." This implies that if we are to follow him it will be through deliberate choice,—whole-souled purpose and earnest determination.

"Him they compelled to bear the cross," was said of Simon of Cyrene. No such obligation is laid upon us. We may take up the cross or we may not,—just as we please. To those who will take up the cross and follow our Leader in the narrow path of sacrifice and self-denial, there awaits a place, which, when compared to what we have to leave, in order to follow him, causes all we have given up to sink into utter nothingness. He who chooses the way of self, makes his own place. And what a place it is! Of one who chooses this way it can well be said, as was said of one of old, "It were better had he never been born."

A Pure Heart.

BY WEALTHY A. BURKHOLDER.

It covers everything. One who has a heart that is pure is not entangled with any of the sins which are so common to humanity, and will meet the approbation of him who said, "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

A heart that is pure is a loving heart,—ready and willing to help every good cause possible, ready and very willing to forgive every one their trespasses, and be free from deceit, jealousy and wrongdoing. It is said of our Master, "No guile was found in his mouth," and hence we note his purity in that particular. And yet, when necessary, he had to use strong terms and telling language to correct the wrongdoing in others. When the heart is pure as God would have it, persecutions and trials can be borne bravely, remembering how the Master bore all things without a murmur.

What the church and the world needs today is more pure hearts. It is an individual work, but we should labor to have more influence over others, by trying to free ourselves from the sins of deception, untruthfulness, and many things that are hard to resist, that more good be accomplished. "To the pure all things are pure." When the heart is pure there is no unfeigned love, but a true, heart-felt love toward all. Instead of hunting for and pointing out the defects in those around us, the Master Teacher would urge us to have charity for them, and to try to help them to overcome. The lines of the beautiful hymn should be the desire of every heart:

"Purer in heart, O God, help me to be,
May I devote my life wholly to thee;
Watch thou my wayward feet,
Guide me with counsels sweet,
Purer in heart, O God, help me to be."

The Sermon and Its Effects.

BY DAVID M. ADAMS.

Because Jeremiah delivered God's warnings just as he received them, without modifying or diminishing a word, he was prosecuted and presecuted by his auditors. He found himself suddenly in the hands of an insulted and indignant people. Jesus came to his own and his own received him not. The primitive disciples suffered violence and death because they dared to denounce, in unvarnished terms, the popular sins of their day and gengration. Many of the Apostolic Fathers suffered martyrdom on account of their vehement denunciation of individual and ecclesiastical heresies. When John Wesley preached the Gospel, he was mobbed right and left.

Probably the reason why the multitude accepts quietly, and as a matter of course, the bulk of what many a preacher says today is because he has toned down the Lord's message to a very great degree.

How often, with reference to many of the present-day sermons, do we hear men say, "Wasn't that grand? Wasn't that eloquent? He held us spellbound. It was scholastic. It was marvelous." It was not so when Peter preached that memorable sermon on the day of Pentecost. The cry of the multitude then was, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" If our sermons have a pleasing or soothing effect upon our audience, we may gravely question whether our message came from God.

How We Talk.

BY BARBARA M. H. SONAFRANK.

We sometimes hear it said that a business firm does not care to keep a boy very long in its employ who does not show enough interest and concern for the affairs of the firm employing him, to say "we," when speaking of their business transactions.

How does that compare with church members who say "they" when speaking to strangers or others with reference to the activities of the church or congregation to which they belong? There are, seemingly, some who are full of excuses about accepting even the smallest office or task which the church might wish to assign them, for fear they might have to shoulder a little responsibility, or have to go out of their way, somewhat, to be present with the necessary regularity, or in other ways deport themselves becomingly to the situation.

How can such drones expect to have any right to the company of those who have "come out of great tribulation," spoken of in Rev. 7: 14? Brethren and sisters, let us be very careful to say "we" when we speak to our neighbors and friends of what the church in our locality is doing, has done, or ought to do. And let us be equally careful that we are telling the truth when we do say it.

Dumont, Iowa.

We notice that many of the recently-appointed Sunday-school Meetings insist upon a full representation of delegates from every Sunday-school within their territory. This is a move in the right direction. If the delegates get in full touch with the spirit of the meeting, there is sure to be an inspiration and zeal engendered that will be felt by the local Sunday-schools upon the return of the delegates. The Sunday-school Meeting has failed in its allotted work if the delegates are not so filled to overflowing with the good things heard at the meeting that the home school, too, participates in a shower of blessings.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS' TOPIC

Lot the Selfish.

Gen. 13: 7-13.

For Sunday Evening, September 17, 1911.

I. Selfishness.—(1) "Inasmuch as ye did it not," etc. (Matt. 25: 43-45). Not to do good to the needy is Christlessness. (2) "Lovers of their own selves" (2 Tim. 3: 2). Eminently selfish under the garb of religion. (3) "How dwelleth the love of God in him" (1 John 3: 17)? Real piety expresses itself in more than mere good wishes.

II. Examples of Selfishness.—(1) "Am I my brother's keeper" (Gen. 4: 9)? (2) "They bind heavy burdens" (Matt. 23: 4). (3) "Grant . . . that we may sit" (Mark 10: 37). Keeping the best for one's self.

III. All Such Leads.—(1) To covetousness. (a) "Thou shalt not covet" (Ex. 20: 17). (b) "Not greedy of filthy lucre" (1 Tim. 3: 3). (c) "Covetousness is idolatry" (Col. 3: 5). (2) To neglect. (a) "Whoso stoppeth his ears," etc. (Prov. 21: 13). (b) "Desiring to be fed with the crumbs" (Luke 16: 21). (c) "To him that knoweth to do good," etc. (Jas. 4: 17).

"The ability to do good in any case imposes the obligation to do it"—Cotton Mather.

It is not for yourself alone that you work and strive. It is for others as well as for yourself.

For Young Workers.—(1) Why do we call Lot a selfish man? (2) What selfish choice did he make? (3) How did Abraham show an unselfish spirit? (4) What kind of people lived in Sodom? (5) Why are so many people selfish? (6) How can we learn to put others first and self last? How will this make us happy?

PRAYER MEETING

Life Lessons for Me from the Book of Job.

Job 42: 1-6, 10-17.

For Week Beginning September 17, 1911.

1. The Experience Job Gained.—Job was a good man, but he suffered awful calamities. He questioned his friends as to the reasons for his misfortunes, and they answered him foolishly. He questioned God, and he answered him out of the whirlwind. But nevertheless he did answer. He called attention to nature, setting forth Job's ignorance of creation and the constitution of the earth,—light and snow and heat and rain and ice,—and of the ways of animals. He, by God's plan, was to find consolation in nature, and so must we. If you are sad, or in sorrow, or burdened, try looking up! Look up into the sky! See the hilltops, the fleecy clouds, and the blue heaven beyond. We all look down too much. Jehovah's call to Job was to look up (Job 35: 5; Psa. 5: 3; Isa. 45: 22; 2 Peter 3: 10-12).

2. The Whole Universe a Mystery.—God means to say: "If you can not tell where or how the foundations of the earth were laid, or where are the storage chambers of the snow and hail,—if the whole creation is a mystery, is it any wonder if your little part, your little problem, is a mystery to you? If you can not fathom these natural mysteries, how can you expect to penetrate the problems of the spiritual life" (Job 36: 26-30; 1 Cor. 13: 12)?

3. God's Providential Care.—There is order and system in all of God's creation. Behind apparent mystery is an all-knowing God. Things are right because God made them so. We live in a world of order. God's dealings may seem mysterious, but they are always wise. There is meaning and purpose in our lives. We, like Job, can well afford to trust a God of order, wisdom and power (Psa. 119: 133-135).

4. God's Abounding Love.—All his acts are love, and we may well put our trust in him. We may not know which way to go, but we do know our Guide,—the Pilot of our lives. He is able to make his grace abound toward us,—to make all things work together for good. He says, "My grace is sufficient for thee" (2 Cor. 12: 9; Rom. 8: 14-17).

HOME AND FAMILY

Recognition.

BY S. K. HOLSINGER.

When we've crossed the chilly waters,
And are free from toil and care;
Resting over Jordan's billows,
Will our loved ones know us there?

First of all I'd know my Savior,
Praise him for his saving grace;
Then the dear ones gone before me,
Oh, what joy to see each face!

Will we clasp glad hands in heaven?
Can we know our loved ones there?
Why is death so fraught with anguish
If it means such joy to share?

As we stand on brink of Jordan
Need we fear the swollen tide,
If a tender hand will guide us,
Friends be on the other side?

Death must lose its sting and terror;
Grave no victory can share;
If our Savior walks beside us,
And our friends are waiting there.

The Golden Rule.

BY JENNIE TAYLOR.

To do unto others as you wish to be done by, is the complete summing up of that divine command, universally termed the "Golden Rule."

Primitive man was selfish and brutal. During unnumbered years of a savage state, extreme violence reigned, and horrible barbarities were suffered because human nature prevailed over the moral and the spiritual. It seemed to be, then, only a question of the "survival of the fittest,"—only the most powerful, physically or officially, could be the winners in any struggle.

But when the lowly Nazarene began his work in the world, he based his efforts on a different principle. He introduced the moral and spiritual side of all questions, and by his own example taught the people to treat others as they would like to be treated themselves. This teaching brought to them dreams of a golden age to come. In all nations this law is the acknowledged standard of right. Its influence brings human beings up, through all the stages of civilization, to its very highest degree.

Far back, in the history of Rome, Alexander Severus had the words of the Golden Rule inscribed over the door of his palace. This was because he delighted in the society of the wise and the good. He favored the Christians, and endeavored to promulgate any cause that was carried out according to that rule. The Golden Rule, if lived up to, can help in cutting off the oppressor and bring in that golden age when man will seek only the good of his brother.

Would it not be living by this law to send flowers to the sick, or remember some lonely one with a kind word or a timely visit, to render aid to the needy or sympathize with those who are worthy of sympathy? Does not this law imply solicitude for others' welfare,—doing the things which make people morally better, and human existence glad with a new hope?

Following the Golden Rule often requires sacrifice. The giving up of gain or of personal desires for the sake of others is demanded of us almost at life's very beginning. It is the first thing the child is taught, as soon as he can understand that the world is not made up of itself alone but of other beings also. The child can not be allowed to monopolize all the playthings, however desirable they may be. It must be taught to do by its playmates as it would like to be treated by them,—to be given a place in the game and a fair chance to be neighborly. He can not be allowed to keep, as his exclusive right, the use of his own choice of house furnishings. They are designed for family use. He must not be rude in his speech or rough in his actions, for his fellow-tenants object to injury. In the home the individual must give way to the family.

Charitable institutions are monuments of unselfishness; they are the working out of thought that passes beyond the needs of one's neighbors.

Pioneers are those brave, self-sacrificing people who pave the way for advancing civilization, and just how great have been many of their sacrifices, can never be known only to those who have made them.

The planting of a tree,—a small thing in itself,—is a noble act. Should it live and grow, it may furnish shade for the weary, food for the hungry, or shelter for the homeless, long after the planter has passed from view.

It is often considered extravagant to give generously. On the other hand, selfish keeping is even more costly. Whatever we try to selfishly keep from others, and hold for ourselves alone, we are sure to lose at last. We must share our possessions with other; if we do not, then the enjoyment of them escapes with the keeping.

Doing unto others as we wish to be done by makes life richer and fuller. The returns seem tenfold in interests and pleasures. It is very often noticed that what is done or given to help a good cause is never missed, proving another of Christ's teachings that "it is more blessed to give than to receive."

Whoever acts contrary to the Golden Rule, feels injured at every turn, and finds this life a constant warfare. It is only by merging our good in the good of others, smoothing the rugged pathway for tired feet, and loving some one else more than we love ourselves, that we really make life worth the living. It is by following this rule that we may understand what it really means to be a Christian, and to work for the happiness of the world.

The savage, instead of doing as he wishes to be done by, does as he has been done by,—hence his treachery when offended.

It is an undisputed fact that social conversation consists largely of gossip. It is also true that we can not praise the unworthy. However we find it much better to remain silent than to speak disparagingly of others or, if we do speak, to do so in a way that the one concerned may understand and have a chance to defend himself.

Is it not easier, after all, to follow the Golden Rule than to do otherwise? "Cast thy bread upon the waters and after many days it will be returned to you." Blessed are the Lord's precepts, and are not his commands the best to obey? There are many little ways that make life easier by the doing, or harder by omitting them. We are all burden-bearers, and without the helping hand or a cheerful word much of life's journey would be a long, weary march; for such helps would prove wings instead of weights.

"The world is wide, these things are small,
They may be nothing but they are all!"

Then, let us look for the meaning of true politeness. We find the answer in this little rhyme:

"Politeness is to do or say
The kindest thing in the kindest way."

Anything that tends toward the uplifting of humanity gives us a chance to do as we would like to be done by.

Watch the lives of the world's really great people,—those most loved by a nation! Their greatness grew out of their great hearts. They have fulfilled that law which required them to do as they would like to have been done by, and so occupied a high place in the hearts of the people.

Hearing a child's earnest appeal, leading some one into the right, setting a friend at ease, saving the weak from falling, and improving the condition of those dependent upon us,—these are examples!

The Example.

BY AUGUST BECK.

A SISTER asked me: "How is it that some people are more spiritual than others?"

It is a question hard to answer, because often it is only seemingly so. There are people living their own quiet life, doing good unseen, who are very near God. There are others, perhaps, not quite as faithful, not quite as self-sacrificing, who, to outward appearances, seem much more so, because they give more vent to their thoughts, feelings and spiritual inspirations. They feel a greater need to communicate to others their hopes and fears, whereas the one who lives a quiet life takes everything to God in prayer. These again, there are really some whom God seems to have especially blessed. They have opened their heart to the full,—the Holy Spirit fills it to overflowing. They have certain mental qualities, which God wants them to use in his service. Some of those are fitted for teachers, some for ministers, and others for missionaries.

But let us not forget that the one living the quiet life really does as much good, and often more so, than the popular preacher. The influence caused by a quiet life in God is far-reaching and lasting,—the example speaks louder than words.

The importance of the example, even in little things, struck me forcibly, one day, as I walked along the street near my home. Numerous pieces of sharp glass were strewn on the sidewalk. Bearing in mind the barefooted little ones, I brushed the glass as well as I could off the walk and went on. A man passed me whose hard-featured face made me morally certain, that he would ordinarily have left the glass where it was, but seeing me removing it made him think, therefore, on perceiving a few small pieces still on the walk, not noticed by me, he carefully pushed them down among the weeds.

This little act by a man of that stamp, brought the power of the right sort of an example forcibly before me. I thanked God for it. There are golden streaks in the hardest natures, which best can be drawn out by living among them, ever kind, ever loving, ever setting the good example.

A Sad Accident.

BY NORA E. BERKEBILE.

THE hearts of mothers and fathers, all over two neighborhoods, were made to ache in sympathy last Tuesday, Aug. 22, when the news was flashed from home to home, over the telephone, that the son of Bro. Edward and Sister Eva Lehman Kintner,—little John Jay,—had been drowned.

He was a happy, sturdy little lad of one year, two months and thirteen days,—just able to toddle about. He was an unusually bright child and had one of those interesting baby faces that makes one look the second time, and wonder what will be too great for him to do when he gets to be a man.

The mother was busy about her work in the house; the father had started away to do some work away from home, and baby was playing just outside, as usual. After a little while the mother went to get him and could not find him. She began to call and search, and while searching the father returned for some forgotten article. When Sister Kintner told him she could not find Jay, he searched with her for the lost one. Finally, in a water jar which they had often passed in looking about, they found the body of their darling child. They quickly took up the babe, but the spirit had fled.

It was one of the unavoidable things that might happen in any home for we all have water vessels about. We can only pray for the sorrowing parents who were so wrapped up in the life of their only child.

The body of little Jay was laid away in the North Poplar Ridge Cemetery. Funeral services were conducted by Bro. John Flory from Psalms 46: 1 in the Maumee church.

MEN and women live to be old and die without ever having known the thrill of enjoying a sunset or being delighted with a flower or understanding in the smallest degree the mysteries of the air and earth. In a universe which has been built and planned for the purpose of giving God's children pleasure, thousands walk through it without ever knowing how it is made; and busy themselves with insignificant trifles, calling them "entertainment" or "amusement."

☞All business and communications intended for the paper should be addressed to the BRETHREN PUBLISHING HOUSE, ELGIN, ILL., and not to any individual connected with it.

BRO. J. W. LEAR is engaged in a series of meetings at Udell, Iowa.

THE report of the committee on Rehaptism will be found at the top of page 571, this issue.

THE Brethren in Middle Indiana will convene in District Meeting in the Huntington City church Oct. 12.

BRO. C. E. WOLF has arranged to close his connection as pastor, with the church at Denver, Colo., Oct. 1.

SIX recently united with the Four Mile church, Ind., five of them being the fruits of a meeting held by Bro. J. W. Fidler.

BRO. A. C. AUVIL has been chosen to represent the Second District of West Virginia on the Standing Committee of 1912.

THE elders of Southern Illinois are requested to meet at the place of District Meeting, Girard, on Tuesday, Oct. 3, at 9 A. M.

BRO. MAHLON J. BROUGHER, of Kingwood, Pa., is booked for a series of meetings at Summit Mills, his State, beginning Sept. 21.

BRO. G. W. KIEFFABER, of Mount Morris, has moved to Sunnyside, Wash., where he becomes principal of the city school.

BRO. W. A. GAUNT, of Huntingdon, Pa., is to begin a series of meetings Sept. 30, at the Fairview house, George's Creek congregation, his State.

DURING a series of meetings at the Blackwater Chapel, Va., conducted by Bro. D. C. Naff, eight accepted Christ as their Savior and were baptized.

WE are requested to announce that the Hinds and Kesler debate is to be held nine miles south of Miami, Texas, beginning Sept. 19. See special notice on page 576.

BRO. JOHN UTZ and wife, of Taneytown, Md., spent a few days at Elgin, and while here attended our services last Sunday. They also called at the Publishing House.

WHEN last heard from, Bro. D. L. Miller and wife were at Cando, N. Dak. By this time they are probably at Wenatchee, Wash., with plans matured for going still farther West.

THE members at Lawrence, Kans., hope to resume work on their new church and push it to completion. For the want of funds they had found it necessary to discontinue the work for a time.

NORTH MANCHESTER COLLEGE opens Sept. 12, with a most promising attendance in view. Bro. S. S. Blough will be in charge of the Bible Department, and is planning for some very thorough work.

REFERRING to what a correspondent said about the Knights of Columbus, in our issue of Aug. 26, we should have given the number he reported for the United States and Canada as 250,000, instead of 2,500,000.

AUG. 27 the Sunday-school workers at Elk Lick, Pa., received a spiritual uplift. There were fifteen graduates in the Teacher-training Department. This means quite an addition to the teaching force of the congregation.

UNTIL Sept. 12 Bro. G. W. Hilton may be addressed at Wenatchee, Wash., in care of John Peters. After that date, and until the time of sailing for China, Sept. 18, he may be reached at Seattle, Wash., in care of Chas. Maust, Station B.

WE are announcing the District Meeting of Southern Iowa, to be held in the English River church, for Oct. 6. The Sunday-school, Ministerial and Christian Workers' Meetings will be held in connection, beginning the day previous.

IT is stated that Bro. J. E. Miller and party are not returning to America by way of New York. They probably landed in Montreal on Friday of this week, and should put in their appearance at Mount Morris the early part of next week.

IN the course of a week or two we shall publish the program for the Ministerial and Sunday-school Meetings of Eastern Pennsylvania, to be held at East Petersburg, in the Mountville church, Nov. 8 and 9. There will be services the evening before.

ON account of last Monday being Labor Day,—and, by the way, printers in large cities do not work on Labor Day,—we could not get as much late news in this issue as we should like to have done. Some correspondence of interest must be held over until next week.

SISTER SADIE J. MILLER left Waterloo, Iowa, Sept. 5, and had on her list thirteen churches to visit on the way to Seattle, Wash., from which place she sails Oct. 24. She is planning to spend ten days at our mission point in China, and hopes to reach Calcutta, India, in December.

BRO. J. G. ROYER called at the MESSENGER sanctum a few days ago. He had just returned from a trip to Woodford County, this State, and on another page tells our readers about some matters of interest, relative to the recent as well as the early history of the James R. Gish relatives.

BRO. A. H. DUNCAN, an aged pilgrim of McMinnville, Tenn., writes us that his neighbors are anxious to have some of our ministers expound the Scriptures unto them. He further says that this week he is to receive the anointing at the hands of ministers who will also conduct some public services while in his community.

BRO. PAUL MOHLER and family spent last Lord's Day in Elgin. Bro. Mohler will not go to France as soon as he expected to go, and for that reason he is prepared to hold a number of protracted meetings and Bible Institutes for congregations desiring his services. He may be addressed at 3435 West Van Buren St., Chicago, Ill.

IT is not usual to publish a statement of the work done by a committee, sent to a local church by the Annual Meeting, but the committee, appointed to assist the church at Covington, Ohio, suggested that it might be well to have something said about what was done at that place, hence the appearance of Sister Rosenberger's report, which will be found on page 564, this issue. The article was read and approved by the secretary of the committee before being passed out to the printers.

THE services, last Lord's Day, were a little out of the usual for the Elgin congregation. After the devotional exercises for the forenoon meeting, conducted by Bro. Paul Mohler, Bro. J. H. B. Williams preached on "Consecration." This he did in view of the departure of our two missionaries, Bro. Holsopple and wife, to the foreign mission field. In the evening Bro. Holsopple had for his subject, "Sacrifice." Consecration and sacrifice go together. Sister Holsopple read a scripture and gave a short talk. The services were largely attended, and the addresses delivered were in keeping with the spirit of the occasion. Bro. John Utz then offered a very touching closing prayer.

THE District Meeting for Southwestern Kansas and Southern Colorado, to be held in the Newton church, Kans., is announced for Oct. 18, with the Ministerial Meeting the day before. The elders are instructed to meet on Monday, Oct. 16, at 1 P. M.

BRO. G. E. YODER is laboring with the members composing the Welsh Run congregation, Md., in a series of meetings. He says that part of Maryland is a beautiful country, and that it is filled with a pleasant people. He is delighted on finding a congregation having such a large number of young members. This, as he remarks, means a fine church for the future.

BRO. W. F. ENGLAND, of Lordsburg, Cal., knows how to show an appreciation for prompt newspaper service. In his letter of Aug. 28 he says: "I want to congratulate you and the management of the Brethren Publishing House because of your ability to do things. I want to remind you how you do make things move. On Monday evening, Aug. 14, I sent you a night message in regard to the opening of Lordsburg College and on Friday evening, Aug. 18, I read the message in the MESSENGER, in my own home, here in Lordsburg, Cal. Now, I call that splendid and wonderful."

BRO. QUINCY HOLSOPPLE, in a well-received address, last Sunday evening, spoke his parting words to the members and friends at Elgin. The next day he and his wife (nee Sister Kathren Royer) started East to spend several weeks among the churches in Pennsylvania, before sailing for India, where they go as missionaries. They carry with them the love and respect of the members of the Elgin congregation, as well as the best wishes of a large circle of friends outside of the church. They are young in the Master's cause, but their hearts are in the work for which they have been set apart, and our prayer is that the Lord will bless them, and give them many happy years in their chosen field. They sail from New York Nov. 2.

ON Monday, Aug. 28, Bro. Joseph Stitzel, one of the elders of the Lanark congregation, Ill., passed from earthly scenes at the age of seventy-eight years and seven months. On account of impaired health he withdrew from official labors some years ago, but he did not cease attending the church services regularly until last fall. Bro. Stitzel was born in Greencastle, Pa., in 1833, and in the year 1845, when twelve years old, came with his parents to Illinois, and settled in Carroll County, where he grew to manhood, united with the church, became a deacon, then a minister, and was finally ordained to the eldership. He was never very active in the ministry, but as an exemplary Christian he had few equals in Northern Illinois. Those who knew him might not always agree with him, but they loved and respected him all the same. He was always prompt in attending church services. The weather did not figure materially in the matter. When the Lord's Day came, he made it his business to be at church, ready to do what he could to help along with the Lord's work. And what he did himself, in this particular, he always expected of his family. As a Christian man of high moral type, he leaves behind him a reputation that is a credit to the religion he professed. We have a more extended notice of his life and labors for the next issue.

Change of Church Relation.

CHANGING from one church to another is bad, as a rule. The selection of a church, as a religious home and school, should be done with intelligence and care, and in all seriousness of purpose, and then there should be firmness, steadfastness. True, there are those who join church without much effort or concern, apparently, and they resign their membership with as little effort as it cost them. They seek membership elsewhere in the same cheap way, to be held, for the time being, and so it goes. They are first in one church and then in another.

These are "they that received the seed into stony places, which, when they hear, receive the word with joy; and these have no root, which for a while believe, and in time of temptation fall away."

These are they of little earth, and because of this fact they are "floaters." They are shallow, without depth, without strong and settled purpose, driven about by the wind. The Word does not penetrate into the subsoil of their souls and anchor them to truth, and because of this fact they are victims of every new doctrine, sensational movement, the way of the crowd, etc. They grow to be professional "jumpers," and changing from one church to another becomes a matter of small account. And, certainly, there are few things that more surely break up the foundation of all true manhood.

Yet it is not to be understood that men should never change churches. Wise men may change. But there must be reasons for it,—good and sufficient reasons. Such changes always put men at disadvantage in public opinion, unless there are good and sufficient reasons for them; for it always creates the suspicion that there is want of stability of character, and those making such changes are so regarded until they prove the contrary true by actual conduct. This is true, to say nothing of God's attitude on the subject.

In the matter of choosing a church from among the many, it is, in the first place, solely a question of doctrine, or it should be so, whatever else may be considered in connection with it. This is the one and only thing deserving serious consideration; and this does deserve the most serious and patient consideration. What is true in the choosing of a church home, in the beginning, is true in changing from one church to another. When it is clearly seen that such a change will bring one nearer the truth as it is in Jesus, then it is his bounden duty to change, following the light. Not to change under such condition would be a great sin; it would be a refusal to follow light; it would be stifling conviction; and these are enormous sins. Above all things else, we should be willing to receive light and to follow our convictions of truth, no matter where or what. And, certainly, there can be no hope for a man who wilfully and deliberately closes his eyes to light, and sacrifices his convictions of truth.

It must be apparent to all that only questions of doctrines are of sufficient weight, fundamentally speaking, to become reasons for a change in church relation. Whenever one can better himself in this respect, he should do so. He is untrue to himself if he does not do so; but let him be sure of his ground.

Methods formulated and employed by a church to work out New Testament doctrines and teachings in practical form, are not of sufficient weight to become reasons for a change of church relation, unless they prevent obedience to the Word, or make it difficult. In such cases, persons would be justified in changing, provided the change is not made at the cost of doctrine. Doctrine must not be sacrificed. It must be maintained at whatever cost. That's settled. If, unfortunately, a church adopts methods not in harmony with New Testament teaching, and the members of that church can not unite with other churches for doctrinal reasons, then there is but one thing to do. An effort must be made to revise methods, and have them in such a form that they will facilitate gospel obedience, and not militate against it.

It sometimes happens that churches do adopt methods not in harmony with the Word. For example, churches have adopted the method of observing the communion at high noon, and separated it from the Lord's supper and the rite of feet-washing,—its gospel associates,—which is not in harmony with the Word. The same is true on other things. But in most cases, no doubt, there is great need of methods that the pure Word may be carried out. Especially is this true of that class of things that relate to worldly pleasure and fleshly indulgences. And it sometimes happens that when rules and methods, sharply forbidding these things, are adopted, some regard it as an excuse for a change of church relation. In most of such cases it would appear that the change is made with but little regard to doctrine. The only thing deserving serious consideration is overlooked, or at most, given but shallow consideration; and the things, such as the ways and means of doing things, church government, etc., which, at most, are of but secondary value, are made the basis of action. It is very foolish, and shows great want. H. C. E.

Making Disciples.

THE apostles were told to go and "make disciples of all nations" (Matt. 28: 18, American Revision). The Authorized Version says, "Teach all nations." Teaching was necessary, but the making of disciples, or learners, was the purpose. The Gospel was to be preached to every creature, in all parts of the world. Those who, after being taught, believed on the Lord Jesus, confessed his name and turned away from their sins, were to be baptized "into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." After this they were to receive more teaching. They were to be taught to observe all things whatsoever Jesus had commanded (Matt. 28: 20).

But in this article we wish to emphasize the importance of making disciples, or learners of all nations. By this we understand that it is the duty of the followers of Christ to teach the people. This means more than delivering an address on some passage of Scripture that happens to strike the preacher. The modern text method of preaching may prove interesting and entertaining to the mass of church-goers, but it is not teaching the people. Neither is the method of permitting each scholar in Bible class to say what he thinks about the Sunday-school lesson, teaching. No one would even think of adopting such a method in a class in college.

The teacher, having charge of a class in an institution of learning, is supposed to know what should be taught, and it is required of him that he teach his pupils what he knows. He can induce them to collect the information desired, well and good, but if not then he must tell them some things. Not only so, but when he sees that a scholar is mistaken on any point relating to the lesson, he is expected to correct him. His method of teaching enables him to train young people until they know something, and then learn how to make use of the knowledge and training acquired.

We need something of this kind when it comes to making disciples or learners of the people. We need men in the pulpit who know how to teach. They must first understand the Bible, and then be able to teach its principles and truths in such a way that those who listen to them can learn something. The work of the ideal evangelist is to teach. He ought to know much about the best methods of teaching; then be sure that he understands the lesson that should be taught.

It should be the mission of the Church of the Brethren to go forth and make disciples of all the people they can reach with the Gospel. It is not sufficient to deliver sermons that are made up mainly of fine selections of thought. Such preaching may be entertaining and, at times, inspiring, but it does not make learners. A congregation may listen to a score of sermons of this sort and not know much more about the Gospel than they did before.

We are sure that wherever the apostles went they told the people something that made them think. They did not waste time delivering fine-spun sermons. They had grand truths entrusted to them, and these truths were made known. Concerning Philip and the eunuch, it is said that Philip began at the scripture the eunuch was reading, and preached unto him Jesus (Acts 8: 35). The preaching was instructive and convincing, and resulted in the man of Ethiopia believing in Jesus, confessing his name and receiving baptism.

This is the kind of preaching Peter did on the day of Pentecost. He told the people something that they could not help but understand, and it led to the conversion of thousands. This was the kind of preaching done by Philip at Samaria, when the whole city was stirred. This was Paul's method. Wherever he went he had something to tell the people that they did not know. He dealt out the facts, commands and promises of the Gospel in a way that they could be understood. Wherever he went he taught. He had something worth listening to, and those who heard him and gave attention to what was said, became learners, or disciples.

This is the kind of work we need all over this country. We need more teaching and less mere sermonizing. We need addresses that are replete with Bible information. The people should be told something that they need to know that they may inherit eternal life, and it should be told in a way that it can be understood. This means not merely the best methods of entertaining the people and of drawing large crowds, but the best methods of making learners of those who listen to the preaching. For the Brethren church there is a wonderful field. We have the Gospel, the people are waiting, but we are, possibly, short of clear-headed teachers. We can do no wiser thing than to enter this field with our present force, and develop teachers as we go.

Principles and Methods.

THIS is a subject about which there has been done much careful thinking, speaking, writing and acting, and yet it continues to be a live subject, and one of vital importance to the Christian church, and our own people as well.

Upon the wise discrimination that must be made hinge matters of vast importance to the perpetuation of the true church of Jesus Christ. We are glad to believe that the Church of the Brethren is moving slowly, cautiously and wisely along this line.

The first thing we want to see clearly is the difference between a principle and a method, or the best method of carrying out the principle without, in any way, affecting its force and purpose. It has been said,—and frequently said,—that principles are unchangeable, but methods may change because of the conditions, as found where and when the principle is to be applied and made active. This fact must be evident to all careful thinkers and observers.

Jesus Christ came into the world, lived, labored, taught, suffered and died, to annunciate the conditional principles by which men may be saved from the power of sin, and made heirs of salvation unto eternal life. As cardinal principles and doctrines we have repentance, faith and baptism. And to these we may add feet-washing, the Lord's supper and the communion. Just how these principles are to be made active in our own lives, we have no definite methods set forth. It is true, we are told that faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God. But there are so many ways by which the Word of God may reach the human understanding, that it would be impossible to set forth unchangeable methods by which these principles are to be reached and made active in mind and heart.

The same may be said of baptism. We have water as the element to be used in the symbol, and the mode of application. But as to the kind of water, whether salt or fresh, cold or warm,—ocean, sea, river, lake or pool,—we have no definite instructions. Conditions and environments are supposed to determine these things, as far as the design and symbol is not lost sight of or destroyed. The same may be said of feet-washing. It is true, we have had some differences of opinion as to the best method of conducting the ordinance, but we all agree that the principle to be reached does not depend so much on the exact method used, as the spirit in which we "wash one another's feet."

As we said, Christ came to announce the principles of salvation, and left it to his disciples to apply these principles to the saving of the world. And, in doing this, they used such methods as were most suitable in carrying on the great work which he intrusted into their care, so that in the Gospel we find largely the principles of the plan of salvation, while in the writings of the apostles, or the epistolary writings, the working out, or living expressions of these principles, are given in actual work, touching the lives of the common people in their every-day life, as lived under then existing conditions. And the study of these methods, as applied, under the then existing conditions, is very interesting indeed.

This phase of studying the Book opens up a new and a wider field for investigation than some of us have appreciated as we should. Take, for instance, the different books. Beginning with Luke, the author of "Acts," we next have Peter, James, John and Paul. Though all of them are interpretations of the same principles, yet, in methods, manner of approach and genius of adaptation, there is a difference that shows forth, in a very impressive way, their different personalities, as developed by environments, education and home influences.

They, first of all, were filled with the spirit and principles of their Great Teacher, the Christ. They were unbiased by the opinions of others, and untrammeled by creeds and church rules, because, as yet, they had none of these. They were as pioneers entering a new country for the purpose of establishing new homes and making a living. They looked at things as they found them, and, holding to their purpose as their supreme aim, they made use of such methods as would, in their judgment, best accomplish the thing they desired to do. So did Peter, so did John, so did James and so did Paul.

As they entered their different fields of labor, first of all they learned the beliefs, nature and character of their people, and then used such methods of approach and work as would most readily enable them to accomplish their purpose. One way would interest the Jew, another way would catch the attention of a Gentile, and still another way would awaken the solicitude of the barbarian. They had no set way of making their approach to men. It was the way they thought, in their judgment, would most readily get the attention, the heart and the soul of those whom they wished to save, that they adopted. And because of this manner of approach, these apostles were so successful in gaining souls for Christ.

Paul, above all the other apostles, was most successful in reaching the people, and it was because of the great wisdom he used in his methods of approach. His education, his large experience, and his gift of human discernment, wonderfully helped him in reaching the hearts of the people.

Adaptation, after all, has been and always will be, the great secret of success in all the legitimate callings of life. Especially is this true in the calling of the ministry. He that would be an efficient minister of Jesus Christ must have enough wisdom, honesty and good judgment to get down with the people and become one of them until he has gained their respect and confidence. When this can be attained, they are ready for the message of salvation and in a state of mind to accept it. This was true in the days of the apostles, and it is quite as true today. While the principles of salvation are the same today as they were in the beginning, it must be understood that methods and the manner of approach, in applying those principles, necessarily differ in proportion as the conditions and environments differ.

What we wish to impress upon our minds and hearts is, that, while the principles of the Gospel of Jesus Christ are unchangeable, the methods in presenting and carrying out those principles may and do change to meet the varying conditions as they come to us in our own country, and also in the opening up of missions in foreign fields. Let us get the difference between a principle and a method clearly established in our own minds, study well the best methods that may be used to save souls, and then utilize the very best to that end. H. B. B.

The Money-Making Preachers.

DURING the last ten months Billy Sunday has broken all his previous records for money getting, having pocketed $70,507.77. Seven thousand dollars a month for a preacher looks like making money faster than the good Lord intended money should be made by an ambassador of the cross. It is certainly not in keeping with the spirit of 1 Tim. 6: 8, where we read: "Having food and raiment, let us be therewith content." This should apply to the laity as well as to the preacher, and in these days of money-getting it is violated by one about as much as the other. But how about $7,000 a month? Does the man earn that much? Certainly not. His ability to influence people along money lines brings the cash, and that is the way it all happens. But is it right? That is the question, and it would be difficult to find a man having a princely income to answer in the negative. Most people are only too glad to take all they can get, and wish for more. We ask again, Is it right? The poor may say no, and the rich may say yes. That is where we are. What would Jesus say? The rich would turn down if they knew the Master were to settle the question for them, but the poor would smile. After all, does not the right or wrong, regarding the large income, turn on the use made of the money received? If a man having an income of $7,000 a month, should spend half the amount for charitable purposes, no one would feel disposed to censure him. It is said that Mr. Sunday spends freely in the interests of charity, missions and education, and yet he stores away enough to make him a rich man. However, what we are saying does not dispose of the moral connected with the large salaries paid to some of the popular preachers and evangelists. It sometimes looks as though rich churches and prosperous cities vie with each other in raising big sums for their preachers and evangelists. The money spirit is getting hold of the churches as well as nearly everything else.

The Preacher's Rules.

We learn of a preacher in Indiana, who has been preaching fifty-three years, and during all of this time has been out of the pulpit but four Sundays, and this was on account of sickness. It is said that he baptized 3,000 people, attended 1,000 funerals, helped to organize over 100 Sunday-schools and did much other work besides. When he started out in the ministry, he felt the need of some rules to hold him strictly down to business, and for his life's work adopted the following:

1. Resolve to be brief, as this is an age of telegraphs and stenography.
2. Be pointed; never touch all around your text without hitting it.
3. State your propositions plainly, but do not stop long to particularize.
4. Avoid long introductions, but plunge into your sermon like a swimmer into cold water.
5. Condense; make sure that you have an idea, and then speak it out in the plainest possible terms.
6. Avoid high-flown language; quote no Hebrew or Greek; aim simply to be a preacher.
7. Be honest enough to own that you avail yourself of helps from any source, but in using helps be sure not to make stilts of them when your own legs are far better.
8. Expect the Father's blessing. You are his servant and can do nothing without it.
9. Stop when you are done.

The last rule is a fine one for those who pride themselves with the thought that they have so much to tell that they do not know when to stop.

Leading Others to the Light.

AN earnest sister, living in a city where the Brethren have no services, wishes to know if it would be proper for her to work with those of other persuasions in the interest of missions and reform work. Under the circumstances this might be a good thing for her to do, if she is strong enough in the faith to avoid being led away from the simplicity of the truth for which the Brethren stand. She may not be able to lead her associates into the full light of the Gospel, but by the life she lives, and by her chaste and well-directed conversation, she may be permitted to plant in their hearts some seed of the kingdom that will put them to thinking along right lines. It is one thing to lead the people with whom we associate, but quite another to be led by them. Our sister should make it her business to lead others into the true light.

The Truthfulness of Prophecy.

IT will be a matter of special interest to some of our well-informed Bible students to learn, as referred to by the Continent, that Prof. Harnack, the great German Bible critic, declares in a late summing-up of his studies in the Gospels that he "finds no positive sign in Matthew, Mark or Luke to make him think that either of them was completed later than 60 A. D. As this date is ten years before the fall of Jerusalem, the opinion of Professor Harnack involves an acknowledgment of real predictive prophecy in the mouth of Christ, for with this dating granted, the prophecy of Jerusalem's destruction, as given in Matthew and Luke, could not have been made up after the fact, as some radical commentators have argued. Dr. Harnack believes that Luke finished the Book of Acts two years after Paul was carried prisoner to Rome, and that he had finished the third Gospel several years earlier. It is apparent that higher criticism does not always upset the traditional view of Bible books. This conclusion about the date of the Gospels is fully as conservative as orthodoxy could ever have desired."

Cutting the Salary.

As told in the Sunday School Times, "Uncle Billy Watson" has certainly found a remedy for getting rid of the preacher who takes pleasure in whittling down the contents of the Bible. We give the remedy below, with the suggestion that it be passed on:

What would you have to do, nowadays, to wipe out God's Word? Kill all the Matthews, Marks, Lukes, and Johns. Some men are still whittling down the Book. The Rev. Hiram Crittick was of that sort. The first church of Laurel-on-Brandywine saw Isaiah, Jonah, and other parts of the Book go until there was only some of it left. The church finances got in bad shape, and the trustees met to consider. Uncle Billy Watson arose, and said, "As our preacher doesn't have the whole Book to preach any more, I move we cut the salary to suit." Carried. The next month the Reverend Hi announced that in the light of recent excavations and a more careful study of old manuscripts he was able to accept the old Book from cover to cover.

Consider the Lily.

A SISTER correspondent placed a nice white lily between the folds of a sheet of paper. On the back of the fold she wrote, "Consider the lily," and enclosed the same in her letter addressed to our office. This put us to thinking, and it occurred to us that the apt quotation might serve as the head for a very helpful article for the MESSENGER. It certainly would make a splendid subject for a sermon, and might make a splendid title for a book dealing with the beauties of nature. People who do things of this sort, when writing their friends, will never know, in this world, how much good they accomplish. We receive many letters containing flowers, and some of these letters, like the one containing the lily, are very suggestive. They give rise to the best and most helpful of thoughts.

These Little Groups.

To the little groups of members that settled in new localities and went to work in earnest, must be given the credit for building up more congregations than any other class among them. They have been instrumental in establishing more churches than all the evangelists and missionaries combined. Possibly three-fourths of our congregations have been started in this way. The method is a good one, and we shall do well to continue to encourage it. But while this is true, we should not neglect to send forth evangelists and missionaries to preach the Gospel and build up churches in localities where our own people are unknown. The apostles did not depend wholly on immigration to establish churches, and there is no reason why we should.

How to Keep Beautiful.

IN one of the papers sent to us from the West we find the following paragraph carefully marked, and there are thousands who should place it where they can see and read it every day or two:

"Keep the corners of your mouth turned up, do not permit them to droop. Have kind thoughts of others." Such is the prescription for perpetual beauty recommended by Mrs. Margaret Hughes, a most lovable old lady of Los Angeles. Try it, girls! It is harder to put on, but, once on, it will outwear a whole tank of face paste. Look about you and you will occasionally see women of seventy-five or eighty who have stuck to this formula and are still the most beautiful of God's creations. Smile and have kind thoughts of others; and the sunshine of your beauty will flood your whole life.

REPORT OF REBAPTISM COMMITTEE.

The New Testament plainly teaches that those who believe, repent and are baptized by trine immersion for the remission of sins have the promise of the gift of the Holy Spirit, and thus come into fellowship with the people of God (Mark 16: 16; Matt. 28: 19, 20; Acts 2: 38-42).

We urge the churches to teach faithfully and observe this doctrine, and be cautious in receiving others into the Church of the Brethren without rebaptism.

YORK, PENNSYLVANIA.

On Wednesday, Aug. 16, the Southern District of Pennsylvania held its special District Meeting in the Belvidere Avenue Brethren church in this city. The location for holding the Annual Meeting of 1912 was the most important topic of the day. By taking the vote of the delegates, representing the various congregations of the District, York was almost unanimously selected as the place of holding the next Annual Meeting. York is quite a railroad center, easily accessible by a half dozen railroads from all directions, trains being run almost hourly from and to Harrisburg, Philadelphia, Washington and New York on the main line of the Pennsylvania R. R. The lines of the Pennsylvania R. R., and the Western Maryland division of the Baltimore & Ohio R. R. run directly along the grounds where the Annual Meeting will be held. There are also several city and suburban street car lines. York is located just twenty-eight miles south of Harrisburg, one hundred miles west of Philadelphia and Washington, D. C., fifty-four miles from Baltimore, and twenty-five miles west of Lancaster, with the beautiful Susquehanna River halfway between.

On Thursday, Aug. 17, in the same church, was held our Ministerial Meeting for this District, followed the next day by our Annual Sunday-school Meeting of the District. All these meetings were very well attended, the house being well filled during both forenoon and afternoon sessions. Indeed, these were beneficial meetings, that will not soon be forgotten. If we do forget some of the excellent things that were said, the inspiration we get at these meetings is worth much.

ONE HUNDRED OR ONE THOUSAND!

Conference Temperance Addresses, by five representative brethren, is fresh from the press. A copy reached our desk this morning, and we have just read the last word. We are now ready fully to appreciate the many kind remarks that were made about the good talks at our second annual Temperance Meeting at St. Joseph, Mo., June 5, 1911.

The contents are as follows: "The Economic Side of the Liquor Problem," by D. W. Kurtz, of Pennsylvania; "The Present Outlook of the Temperance Cause," by J. J. Yoder, of Kansas; "The Temperance Problem in India," by S. P. Berkebile, of India; "The Christian's Duty at the Polls," by D. L. Miller, of Illinois; "Suggestions from the General Temperance Committee," by P. J. Brumbaugh, of Pennsylvania.

The first contains an array of facts; the second, a ray of hope; the third, a call for help; the fourth, a call to duty; the fifth, many helpful suggestions. These speeches are full of life, and have the right ring, being up-to-date in every way. They should be read by every member of the Brethren church and thousands of others. We wish that local Temperance Committees were in evidence in every congregation in the Brotherhood, and that in each one of them, from a hundred to five hundred copies would be ordered for the members and neighbors in their respective churches.

N. B.—"Winona Temperance Addresses" and "Dickie-Rose Debate" are out of print. We understand that no more will be published. Both are good, but their purpose has been served. Let no more orders be sent.

St. Joseph Conference Temperance Addresses is the book to push now. Some District Committees will doubtless send one to each family in their District. They have done as much with larger books that cost more money. A thousand or more of these booklets could easily be used in each of our larger Districts.

ORDER NOW at the following reasonable rates: 5 cents per copy; 50 cents per dozen; $2.25 per hundred. These addresses, so full of interest and helpfulness, will never be more fresh than now. Send them out in large numbers NOW. All orders will most certainly be filled if forwarded within the next four or six weeks. After that the type will be distributed and no more will be published.

Send all orders to Brethren Publishing House, Elgin, Ill. W. M. Howe, Sec. Gen. Tem. Com.

AT OCEAN GROVE.

Of course, nearly every reader of the Messenger has heard of Ocean Grove, the Mecca of the Methodist church. Well, Sister Geeding, T. T. Myers' wife and son, and self and wife, are now spending some days at the above-named place. Ocean Grove is, as already stated, the Mecca, of the Methodist church. It is here where they have their annual big meeting. Large buildings have been erected in the past for special meetings, such as holiness meetings, Bible readings, young people's meetings, prayer meetings, conferences, etc. Many thousands of Methodists, members of other churches, and strangers as well, come to Ocean Grove to enjoy the feast of good things given by the Methodist church during the months of August and September. Now and then some of our brethren or sisters, dressed in the plain order of the church, may be seen in the crowd, walking on the board walks along the side of the ocean, watching the breakers as they come dashing against the shore, sending their spray high into the air. It is at these pleasure resorts, where fashion and display are so manifest, that one appreciates the simple life and the plain attire of our people. Even the Methodists commend us, and speak encouragingly of our people at that line. To-morrow a great mass meeting is being called at this place, the purpose of which is to put a check upon the world-affiliating spirit of the Methodist church. They will deliberate concerning the future character of this Mecca—whether the spiritual and reformatory feature of the past shall continue, as it was designed by the founders and originators of the place, or whether the world-spirit shall predominate. We trust the result of the mass meeting will be in line with the original idea and purpose of the founders of the place. What Ocean Grove meetings have been to the Methodist church,—a founder and promoter of spiritual feeling in the past,—so let us ever strive to make our great annual gatherings,—the Annual Meetings. J. T. Myers.

BIBLE INSTITUTE OF NORTHERN INDIANA.

Our annual Bible Institute convened Aug. 23 in the Goshen City church, and continued for ten days. A day previous to the time given to the District Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meeting program, which closed with an excellent spirit, and indicated a strong desire, on the part of the members, to be of greater service to the Master. This seemed to create a hungering for more of the heavenly wisdom. The three days were crowded full of good things, and a goodly number of enthusiastic workers were in regular attendance. Bro. S. S. Blough, of South Manchester, Ind., opened the First Epistle of Peter to us, and revealed treasures that hitherto had been hidden to many. He gave us a glimpse of the Book of James, with a view of setting forth the real teaching on the holy ordinance of anointing. Certainly we realized a greater degree of service to our Heavenly Father, for his wise provisions in the hour of sickness, and for the precious promises which are ours by childlike, simple obedience. Bro. G. M. Lauver, of Bethany Bible School, gave us many new thoughts in Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meetings. His work was pointed and clear. The illustrations used were vivid and fitting, so that even the most active workers were made to see how incompetent they are. This stirred us to greater activity. One session was given by Bro. Lauver to the ministers alone. The burden of this hour was to prompt the ministry not to "entangle themselves with the affairs of life," but give body, soul and mind to the service of the Master. Sister Ella Miller Brubaker occupied the closing period of each day. The theme of the hour implied a fuller consecration and service. This, to many, seemed to be the climax of the day. When the good hour came, a number of testimonies were expressed that the time was so short, and that a whole year must elapse ere we meet again. Manly Deeter.

Milford, Ind., Aug. 27.

PIMPALNER, INDIA.

Refreshing Showers.

The last day or two have been glad times for many people on this side, for some rain is falling. Pimpalner people of all castes seemed utterly discouraged, just three days ago. All work was stopped and people were sitting discussing what to do, wondering and asking whether it is going to rain or not. Crops in some fields were literally burning up, while in other fields the sowed seed was counted wasted. The poor people who do not work for several days have real want and need, and come to us calling us "their parents who must provide for their stomachs, lest they die." People, even, who ordinarily will not eat the food of our hands agree to eat whatever we give them.

Fears of famine were not groundless either, for, instead of fifteen inches of rain, to date there have fallen but five here, and that fell in the early part of June. And in all India, save the northeastern section, there has been a great shortage of the water supply. Today the rain keeps falling gently, and we keep praising God in our hearts, for we know the horrors of famine will be averted. Although due to sail for the homeland Sept. 15 we had made up our minds to stay if famine comes on. In Pimpalner, to date, there has been mainly a famine of hearing the Word of the Lord, the true God. If the famine of bread and thirst for water were to be added, how could we be happy on the other side of the world! However, year by year Government is becoming better and better prepared against famine due to her extensive irrigation works and famine-relief. To pray that Government may continue such sensible measures is doubtless the best way of getting the answer to our prayers in times that would mean great distress, without these means.

A Sister's Misfortune.

On the eve of July 24 one of our good sisters, a mother of two small children, while in the act of picking up some clothes put in the sun to dry was attacked from behind and bitten severely on her left arm between arms and hands. The big dog then turned to bite her small three year old boy when our sister caught the dog by the ears, falling on him, and held him, screaming, till her husband, who was in the bungalow, ran to her aid. As soon as possible, the dog was shot, and our sister taken to the town dispensary where she fainted under the cleaning up of the wounds. The one bite must have been in the vein of the wrist, for from this there was a tendon several inches long was hanging. This the doctor cut off. After carefully bandaging her arm, and further inquiry, it was thought that the dog was mad. The doctor, therefore, gave a certificate to the effect that she ought to be taken to a Pasteur Institute where treatment is given free for such cases. We went next day to the courthouse and the Chief Magistrate of the county gave her and her husband an order on the railways, according to which to issue these two people passes to Kasauli, in the lower Himalayas. Government also provided their food en route, paying eight cents to each per day. That they got their passes and went their way, we know, but we have not heard from them since on the Hills. From this you will note the care the English Government exercises toward the Indian people in a medical way. Another woman, a caste woman, several miles away, was bitten by a dog that same day in the morning, presumably by the same dog. Her husband came to me asking what kind of medicine we applied. We told him what we did and offered our help in getting rid of the poison in ignorant, but well-meaning simply folk, uneducated, prefer running risks of dying, rather than going to all the trouble we do, to save a life.

A Bungalow Needed.

After a year of waiting we have been given the privilege of building near the Government bungalow here. Till the present, save the little time we have enjoyed the use of the Dak bungalow, I have had to live alone in a tent. Tenting is all right in the winter, but it grows monotonous and wearing when one has to pass several warm seasons in it. Although our present house is not a bungalow, yet how much better than a tent! And while at home, if God wills that we go, how much nicer and more comfortable to think of returning to live in this new teacher's house than to think of the separation and tent life of the last year and a half! As yet we have no proper site for the bungalow, so much needed here. Good sites are few, near this town.

Many Difficulties.

During the last nine months we have passed through many difficulties in the work. First, because of supposed bad climate, our teachers left us and did not get back, several of them, till nearly the first of April. Thereafter, on one occasion our teachers took the wrong way to win a set of Bibles, as opposed to us. The result was the opposite of what they hoped. Bhils still tell those who come to us that they are defiled. But even this is growing less and less every month, and the air is clearing for what we believe will be a good work in the days to come. We have four schools that bid fair to be permanent, we hope. They enroll from eight to eighteen, and all the children are Bhils. It is very encouraging to think that in a few years we may have workers from the children of the soil here, children from among the people we hope to win. This is our hope, anyway. We have recently been asked to open a fifth school. I think that within a year or so we may have fifteen or twenty, if the teachers and funds are forthcoming. This taluka, county, presents one of our opportunities for primary educational work. In this way we believe the people will come of their own will into our hands, to mould and fashion as we will. We cry that God may give us grace to mould them for eternity, that we may bring them to the true life as we live it in Jesus, that they may turn from dumb idols to the living God.

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

ILLINOIS.

Big Creek.—Our council was held one week sooner than our regular time. On account of our elder being absent, our council was held Aug. 26. Eld. D. J. Blickenstaff was moderator of the meeting. One letter was read. Church officers were elected for the year. Our delegates to District Meeting are Sister Randa Ridgely and Brother Dow A. Ridgely. Our love feast has been appointed for Nov. 4 at 5 P. M. Bro. West, of Iowa, is to commence a series of meetings Oct. 22, to continue until Oct. 29.—M. Forney, Beechgrove, Ill., Aug. 28.

Dixon.—We are in the midst of a series of meetings conducted by Bro. Henry Lilligh, of Mulberry Grove, Ill. The meetings have been going on one week. So far we have had a very pleasant members' meeting. We elected our delegates to District Meeting. Our love feast will be held at Pine Creek, Sabin, Ill., Sept. 2.

Maple Grove.—Bro. G. O. Stutsman, our missionary to Mount Vernon, was with us Aug. 13 and preached for us on Saturday evening, and on Sunday morning and evening. Our Saturday evening Workers' Meeting, under the leadership of Bro. S. S. Christian Workers' Meeting, under the leadership of Bro. S. S. Scrogum, and the Sunday-school, under the leadership of Bro. John Hellinger, are moving along nicely, with reasonably good interest. Bro. W. T. Heckman, of Cerro Gordo, Ill., is to be with us in a series of meetings beginning Sept. 16 to Oct. 1. Our love feast will be held Sept. 30.—J. J. Scrogum, Fairfield, Ill., Aug. 25.

INDIANA.

Anderson church met in council Aug. 26. The regular business was transacted in a Christian spirit. The church appointed Brethren J. S. Aldredge, Curtis Hilbert and Rose Martin as a nominating committee. Our love feast was appointed to postpone the love feast at Sept. 16, indefinitely, on account of remodeling the church. The date will be set through the Messenger.—Chas. E. Johnsonbaugh, Anderson, Ind., Aug. 28.

Bachelor Run.—We held an all-day Harvest Meeting at the country church, Aug. 20, having one sermon by Bro. Jacob S. River Bend, Colo., who delivered the morning sermon. Bro. W. H. Hood, of Greene, Iowa, talked in the afternoon. The meeting was a good one, in manhood at this place. These brethren have been in our midst for a few days and preached several sermons which were enjoyed by many. A collection of nearly $10 was taken for the China Mission.—Mattie Welty, Nora, Ind., Aug. 23.

Beaver Dam.—Our love feast will be held Oct. 7, at 6 P. M. The District Meeting of Middle Indiana will convene with the Huntington City church Oct. 12.—J. G. Stinebaugh, Akron, Ind., Aug. 28.

Bethel church met in council at the Chapel house Aug. 26, our elder, Bro. Manly Deeter, presiding. One letter was received. Our communion will be held Sept. 30, commencing at 4:30 P. M. A Harvest Meeting will be held on the following Sunday. A collection was taken for the Messenger, urging each congregation to hold local Sunday-school Meetings. Bro. Levi Horn, of Bethel, and Sister Bertha Deeter were appointed delegates to District Meeting. We decided to use Kingdom Songs.—Cora Hall, R. D. 1, Hillsboro, Ind., Aug. 28.

Bethel.—Our Harvest Meeting will be held Sept. 10, instead of Sept. 3, as stated in my former correspondence. Aug. 29 of the Messenger.—Annie Rogers, Matthews, Ind., Aug. 29.

Buck Creek.—Our Sunday-school is doing nicely. Our Sunday-school Institute will be held Sept. 30, commencing at 4:30 P. M. A Harvest Meeting will be held on the following Sunday. A petition was sent to the District Meeting, urging each congregation to hold local Sunday-school Meetings. Bro. Levi Horn, of Bethel, and Sister Bertha Deeter were sent as delegates to District Meeting. We decided to use Kingdom Songs.—Cora Hall, R. D. 1, Hillsboro, Ind., Aug. 28.

Bethel.—Our Harvest Meeting will be held Sept. 10, instead of Sept. 3, as stated in my former correspondence. Aug. 29 of the Messenger.—Annie Rogers, Matthews, Ind., Aug. 29.

Buck Creek.—Our Sunday-school is doing nicely. Our Sunday-school Institute will be held Sept. 30, commencing at 4:30 P. M. A Harvest Meeting will be held on the following Sunday. A petition was sent to the District Meeting, urging each congregation to hold local Sunday-school Meetings. Bro. Levi Horn, of Bethel, and Sister Bertha Deeter were sent as delegates to District Meeting. We decided to use Kingdom Songs.—Cora Hall, R. D. 1, Hillsboro, Ind., Aug. 28.

Beaver Dam.—Our love feast will be held Oct. 7, at 6 P. M. The District Meeting of Middle Indiana will convene with the Huntington City church Oct. 12.—J. G. Stinebaugh, Akron, Ind., Aug. 28.

Bethel church met in council at the Chapel house Aug. 26, our elder, Bro. Manly Deeter, presiding. One letter was received. Our communion will be held Sept. 30, commencing at 4:30 P. M. A Harvest Meeting will be held on the following Sunday. A petition was sent to the District Meeting, urging each congregation to hold local Sunday-school Meetings. Bro. Levi Horn, of Bethel, and Sister Bertha Deeter were sent as delegates to District Meeting. We decided to use Kingdom Songs.—Cora Hall, R. D. 1, Hillsboro, Ind., Aug. 28.

Bethel.—Our Harvest Meeting will be held Sept. 10, instead of Sept. 3, as stated in my former correspondence. Aug. 29 of the Messenger.—Annie Rogers, Matthews, Ind., Aug. 29.

Buck Creek.—Our Sunday-school is doing nicely. Our Sunday-school Institute in November. Bro. Brown is to hold a protracted meeting at a schoolhouse five miles from town in October, where regular preaching services have been held for several months. Bro. H. Brown and the writer were chosen to represent this church and Sunday-school at the District and Sunday-school Meetings, held at Thomas, Okla. Our work here is moving along encouragingly.—Minnie B. Rodes, Clovis, N. M., Aug. 27.

NORTH DAKOTA.

James River.—Aug. 27 Bro. Anfield Shiflet came to us and preached two good sermons,—one in the forenoon and one at four o'clock in the afternoon. Incidental to our regular meetings are cheering indeed. We live seven miles north of the James River congregation, and this makes it possible for our own ministers during the nine years we have lived here, Bro. A. C. Wine and myself, for us to visit them. How we would be glad if some minister would locate here, to give us regular meetings.—Ella Z. Row, Bruntsford, N. Dak., Aug. 28.

OHIO.

Beech Grove.—Our church met in council Aug. 26. Our elder, Bro. S. W. Blocher, presided. Bro. Jesse Baker was elected delegate to the Annual Meeting. Bro. H. F. Sharp gave us two interesting talks. Aug. 27 Bro. Miller, our assistant Sunday-school Secretary, visited our school, and gave us many helpful words. Our day-school work.—E. S. Hollinger, R. D. 1, Hollansburg, Ohio, Aug. 28.

Brookville.—Our church met in council today, at 10 A. M. Our elder, D. M. Garver, presided. Six members were elected letters of membership were received. It was decided to hold our communion, Oct. 14, at 4 P. M. Wolf Creek hasn't had our communion since Sept., 1910.—Mrs. Rena Kimmell, Brookville, Ohio, Aug. 29.

Dickey.—On Sunday our pastor, Bro. T. S. Moherman, preached a most appropriate sermon before leaving this place, to take up his work in Dallastle College, Va. Bro. H. C. Early has promised to hold a two weeks' protracted meeting for us after the last Saturday in October, or the first Sunday in November. We have decided to hold our love feast the first Sunday of the meetings. Brethren Marsh Helm and Will Sample have been chosen to represent the Dickey church at the District Meeting. Bro. A. A. Moherman and the writer, alternates. We have decided to give a Sunday-school entertainment the first month in the evening.—Ida M. Helm, Ashland, Ohio, Aug. 29.

Jonathan Creek.—Aug. 26 our elder, Bro. Samuel Sprankle, was with us, and preached for us. This is the most pleasant council we church has enjoyed for years. A report of the church visit was read, preparatory to the District Meeting, held Oct. 7, at 5 P. M. The decision on the dress question, as passed by a former council, came before the council, and the elder advised all the members to adhere to and accept it. Sister Hettie Stauffer was elected delegate. Aug. 26 to 28 Bro. Ellis Hollinger talks and lectures which were enjoyed by the members.—J. S. Leckrone, Somerset, Ohio, Aug. 29.

Lower Miami.—Our two weeks' series of meetings at this place has just closed. Eld. Dorsey Hodgden, of Huntington, Ind., did the preaching. While there was no accessions, the church feels much revived by his well-prepared discourses and labors among us. Prior to our meeting, Eld. Eld. J. H. Longenecker, of Pennsylvinia, delivered three sermons one evening. This was a harvest sermon, well appreciated. Last Sunday evening the time of the Christian Workers' Meeting was improved by Sister Mary Baker, who gave us a much appreciated missionary talk. I write this in the comfortable home of Eld. R. C. Davidson, where I came last night, to take in a series of meetings at Holloway Ohio.—Geo. Garst, R. D. 6, Dayton, Ohio, Aug. 27.

Maple Grove.—Our council met in council Aug. 25, at 2 P. M. Bro. Denberg presided. Bro. T. S. Moherman was with us, urging Bro. Dan Hall, in the work of securing subscriptions for the building of the churchhouse in Akron. Brethren Switzer and Denenberg were chosen as delegates to the District Meeting. Your were received recently by baptism. Our Harvest Meeting will be held Sept. 3, and the same evening will be a Sunday-school Rally.—Mrs. E. E. Denenberg, R. D. 7, Box 23, Ashland, Ohio, Aug. 28.

North Star.—Our church met in council Aug. 19. Our elder, Bro. S. Z. Smith, presided. Eld. J. H. Christian and wife were also present. Their annual visit having been a much appreciated business came before the church. Bro. H. Jesse Baker was advanced to the ministry. Bro. Christian and wife with Bro. Smith gave us a very helpful sermon on Sunday morning. Having planned a Joint Sunday-school meeting with Lewisville church Sunday-morning, nearly all of the North Star school drove over to the Ash Grove church, Sunday morning, Aug. 27, where a warm service was held in the forenoon. The preaching by Bro. Smith seemed to be filled with the Spirit. The meeting was very helpful. Sister Emma Stauffer was present. She gave us a good talk on her experiences in the land of Moab.—Lydia E. Myers, Aug. 28, New Weston, Ohio, Aug. 28.

Notice.—The District Meeting of Northeastern Ohio will be held Oct. 5, in the East Nimishillen church. Elders' Meeting will convene at 1 P. M.; at 1 P. M.; Ministerial Meeting, Oct. 4.—D. H. McPadden, Smithville, Ohio, Aug. 22.

Palmer.—Eld. Jesse Hollinger presided at our council Aug. 19. Ministering brethren with us were Brethren David Hollinger and Eld. John Ellenberger, from Indiana, visiting. Five letters of membership were received, and two were granted. Bro. Wm. Hollinger's license was advanced to the ministry, together with his wife, duly installed. The usual quarterly offering was taken up for the use of the ministers and visitors of the four Sunday-schools of the Ludlow congregation, to send the Gospel Messenger to those unable to pay for it. Our next council, Nov. 18, at 1 P. M.; Ministerial Meeting, Oct. 4.—D. H. McPadden, Smithville, Ohio, Aug. 22.

Painter Creek.—Eld. Jesse Hollinger presided at our council Aug. 19. Ministering brethren with us were Brethren David Hollinger and Eld. John Ellenberger, from Indiana, visiting. Five letters of membership were received, and two were granted. Bro. Wm. Hollinger's license was advanced to the ministry, together with his wife, duly installed. The usual quarterly offering was taken up for the use of the ministers and visitors of the four Sunday-schools of the Ludlow congregation, to send the Gospel Messenger to those unable to pay for it. Our next council, Nov. 18, at 1 P. M.; Ministerial Meeting, Oct. 4.—D. H. McPadden, Smithville, Ohio, Aug. 22.

Pleasant Valley.—Our church met in council Aug. 26. Our elder, Bro. S. W. Blocher, presided. Eld. H. F. Sharp gave us two interesting talks. Aug. 27 Bro. Miller, our assistant Sunday-school Secretary, visited our school, and gave us many helpful words. Our day-school work.—E. S. Hollinger, R. D. 1, Hollansburg, Ohio, Aug. 28.

Brookville.—Our church met in council today, at 10 A. M. Our elder, D. M. Garver, presided. Six members were elected letters of membership were received. It was decided to hold our communion, Oct. 14, at 4 P. M. Wolf Creek hasn't had our communion since Sept., 1910.—Mrs. Rena Kimmell, Brookville, Ohio, Aug. 29.

Dickey.—On Sunday our pastor, Bro. T. S. Moherman, preached a most appropriate sermon before leaving this place, to take up his work in Dallastle College, Va. Bro. H. C. Early has promised to hold a two weeks' protracted meeting for us after the last Saturday in October, or the first Sunday in November. We have decided to hold our love feast the first Sunday of the meetings. Brethren Marsh Helm and Will Sample have been chosen to represent the Dickey church at the District Meeting. Bro. A. A. Moherman and the writer, alternates. We have decided to give a Sunday-school entertainment the first month in the evening.—Ida M. Helm, Ashland, Ohio, Aug. 29.

Jonathan Creek.—Aug. 26 our elder, Bro. Samuel Sprankle, was with us, and preached for us. This is the most pleasant councils our church has enjoyed for years. A report of the church visit was read, preparatory to the District Meeting, held Oct. 7, at 5 P. M. The decision on the dress question, as passed by a former council, came before the council, and the elder advised all the members to adhere to and accept it. Sister Hettie Stauffer was elected delegate. Aug. 26 to 28 Bro. Ellis Hollinger talks and lectures which were enjoyed by the members.—J. S. Leckrone, Somerset, Ohio, Aug. 29.

Lower Miami.—Our two weeks' series of meetings at this place has just closed. Eld. Dorsey Hodgden, of Huntington, Ind., did the preaching. While there was no accessions, the church feels much revived by his well-prepared discourses and labors among us. Prior to our meeting, Eld. Eld. J. H. Longenecker, of Pennsylvinia, delivered three sermons one evening. This was a harvest sermon, well appreciated. Last Sunday evening the time of the Christian Workers' Meeting was improved by Sister Mary Baker, who gave us a much appreciated missionary talk. I write this in the comfortable home of Eld. R. C. Davidson, where I came last night, to take in a series of meetings at Holloway Ohio.—Geo. Garst, R. D. 6, Dayton, Ohio, Aug. 27.

Maple Grove.—Our council met in council Aug. 25, at 2 P. M. Bro. Denberg presided. Bro. T. S. Moherman was with us, urging Bro. Dan Hall, in the work of securing subscriptions for the building of the churchhouse in Akron. Brethren Switzer and Denenberg were chosen as delegates to the District Meeting. Your were received recently by baptism. Our Harvest Meeting will be held Sept. 3, and the same evening will be a Sunday-school Rally.—Mrs. E. E. Denenberg, R. D. 7, Box 23, Ashland, Ohio, Aug. 28.

North Star.—Our church met in council Aug. 19. Our elder, Bro. S. Z. Smith, presided. Eld. J. H. Christian and wife were also present. Their annual visit having been a much appreciated business came before the church. Bro. H. Jesse Baker was advanced to the ministry. Bro. Christian and wife with Bro. Smith gave us a very helpful sermon on Sunday morning. Having planned a Joint Sunday-school meeting with Lewisville church Sunday-morning, nearly all of the North Star school drove over to the Ash Grove church, Sunday morning, Aug. 27, where a warm service was held in the forenoon. The preaching by Bro. Smith seemed to be filled with the Spirit. The meeting was very helpful. Sister Emma Stauffer was present. She gave us a good talk on her experiences in the land of Moab.—Lydia E. Myers, Aug. 28, New Weston, Ohio, Aug. 28.

Notice.—The District Meeting of Northeastern Ohio will be held Oct. 5, in the East Nimishillen church. Elders' Meeting will convene at 1 P. M.; at 1 P. M.; Ministerial Meeting, Oct. 4.—D. H. McPadden, Smithville, Ohio, Aug. 22.

Palmer.—Eld. Jesse Hollinger presided at our council Aug. 19. Ministering brethren with us were Brethren David Hollinger and Eld. John Ellenberger, from Indiana, visiting. Five letters of membership were received, and two were granted. Bro. Wm. Hollinger's license was advanced to the ministry, together with his wife, duly installed. The usual quarterly offering was taken up for the use of the ministers and visitors of the four Sunday-schools of the Ludlow congregation, to send the Gospel Messenger to those unable to pay for it. Our next council, Nov. 18, at 1 P. M.; Ministerial Meeting, Oct. 4.—D. H. McPadden, Smithville, Ohio, Aug. 22.

Painter Creek.—Eld. Jesse Hollinger presided at our council Aug. 19. Ministering brethren with us were Brethren David Hollinger and Eld. John Ellenberger, from Indiana, visiting. Five letters of membership were received, and two were granted. Bro. Wm. Hollinger's license was advanced to the ministry, together with his wife, duly installed. the elders, and the congregation numbers about forty-members.

This seems to be a fairly good country, but I find that some of the western unrest exists among the people here, on account of short crops. How much better if mankind could but learn the wisdom of the words of a certain poet, who said:

"Then, pilgrim, turn; thy cares forego.
All earth-born cares are wrong.
Man wants but little here below,
Nor wants that little long."

We might then become better satisfied, and settle down to work, build up churches and stay with them.

Our meetings were well attended, considering the environments. The Brethren have a good country church in which to worship. The acoustic properties of the house are most excellent.

After closing our meetings, I went to Lone Wolf, about sixty miles north, to visit J. H. Bowman, a relative of mine, whom I had not seen for more than twenty-five years. I could hear of no members in that country. By request I preached one night to an attentive people. My subject was, "The Church of the Brethren, and What It Stands For." Some of the people talked as if they desired to know more of our people.

I spent one day at McPherson on my return trip, but met only a few of the Brethren there. After three weeks' absence I arrived at home. C. D. Hylton.

Bloom, Kans., Aug. 22.

WASHINGTON CHURCH, INDIANA.

Aug. 6 we were permitted to enjoy another spiritual feast at this place. We feel to thank God for these privileges that are ours to enjoy. Our Harvest Meeting was well attended and a very successful meeting. Bro. Harvey Hartsough, of Nappanee, Ind., delivered a splendid discourse on the forenoon. His subject was, "Beware, Lest Thou Forget." His sermon was given with spiritual enthusiasm, and inspired us to a higher plane of spiritual living.

At the close of the forenoon session a bounteous dinner was spread, and, as we gathered around the tables, our minds were carried to the One from whom all blessings come, and thanks were given to him for his goodness.

In the afternoon Sister Ella Brubaker, of India, a missionary, favored us with a talk that was much appreciated by all. In the evening she again talked to us on mission work in India, and of her labors while there. Sister Almeda Miller was with us, and conducted the song service throughout the day.

Many members from adjoining congregations were present, and helped to make the day one long to be remembered in the Washington church as a day of spiritual feasting. The work at this place, carried on under the supervision of the Mission Board of Northern Indiana, aided by our humble efforts, is progressing nicely. May the Lord continue to bless our work here, is our continual prayer! Viola Overholser.

PRESCOTT, MICHIGAN.

We have had a good attendance at our Sunday-school, preaching services and Christian Workers' Meetings. Sometimes the house is crowded. We have fine weather at present. Last month Bro. Ray Shepler, his wife and sister, of Logansport, Ind., visited us. They like this country well and expect to come back to purchase homes for themselves. Aug. 18 Bro. Frank Register, with others, came here from Southern Missouri. As soon as they can they expect to locate here. Several more brethren from Tennessee expect to be here next week. I am no land agent and do not have any land to sell, but I want to help all the poor brethren to good homes. It is to those that are thinking of buying land here had better do so at once, as land is advancing fast in price. We have good water and a healthful climate, with plenty of fuel. Our little band is composed of about fifty members, and there are prospects for more to come soon. We are much in need of a churchhouse, and expect to build next spring. All letters containing a stamped, addressed envelope will be promptly answered.

PERTH, NORTH DAKOTA.

An all-day Sunday-school Convention was held at the North Star church Aug. 20. The meeting was well attended by friends and neighbors from the near-by neighboring congregations, including several ministers. Bro. Wm. Deardorff was chosen moderator. Sister Rose Miller, of Zion, conducted the song services, using our new "Kingdom Songs." The five Sunday-school questions under discussion were ably handled by the various speakers. We were favored with two special songs by the Highland quartette. Recitations were given by Sisters Gertrude Gardener and Ruth Fisher. At noon the tables were spread from well-filled baskets, and all present enjoyed the dinner. The round-table talk was conducted by Bro. E. N. Huffman, of St. Joseph, Mo. Many points of interest were discussed. It was indeed a spiritual feast to all Sunday-school workers. We hope much good was done, and that a greater interest in Sunday-school work has been aroused. An offering of about $2 was taken for District Sunday-school work, which was given to the assistant District Secretary, Bro. Marvin Kensinger, of Zion, N. Dak., who assisted in the meeting. Today we shipped to Bro. Geo. Hilton, at Surrey, N. Dak., the three Swiss goats, which have been donated to the missionaries by Bro. Joseph Price and family, of Rollo, N. Dak., to take to China. Two of them are for Bro. Hilton's, and one for Bro. B. J. Heckman's. Sister Price hopes that this may be the beginning of an interest in mission work, in her family, and she hopes to see the time when her own children will be active workers on the mission field. Ida C. Fisher.

Perth, N. Dak., Aug. 21.

SALEM, OHIO.

This church met in council Aug. 17, with Eld. Wm. Minnich presiding. A number of visiting brethren were with us. Eld. Wm. Minnich was reelected as housekeeper of the church for one year. We have been favored, for the past two months, by having several visiting brethren with us, among whom have been Bro. Harvey Snell, of California, Bro. E. B. Hoff, of Chicago, Ill., Bro. Ezra Flory, of Sterling, Ill., and our outgoing missionaries, Bro. Homer Bright and wife, who are our services and visits were much enjoyed and appreciated by all.

We held our Harvest Meeting Aug. 5, in the afternoon. After these services the church held an election for one minister and two deacons. The election resulted in choosing Brethren John C. and Enos E. Brumbaugh to the ministry; Brethren Frank Macy and Lloyd Brumbaugh, to the office of deacon. They were afterward duly installed, the installation service being conducted by Bro. D. S. Filbrun, of Dayton, Ohio. Our Chinese brethren, Moy Way and Moy Wing, were with us Aug. 16 and 17. Each of them gave us an interesting talk. Bro. J. Homer Bright expects to begin a series of Bible lessons Aug. 21.

Union, Ohio, Aug. 10.

HURRICANE CREEK CHURCH, ILL.

Our church met in council Aug. 19. Our elder, Bro. J. W. Lear, of Cerro Gordo, Ill., presided. A great deal of business came before the meeting, and was disposed of judiciously. The writer was selected as church correspondent. It was decided to add a kitchen to our church. Brethren Burt Redenbo and Harry Borror were elected delegates to District Meeting. Bro. Lear preached four interesting sermons. Our community has had a great deal of discussion concerning the doctrine of grace.

"Once in grace always in grace." Bro. Lear preached a convincing sermon on the subject. He said, "A person has to be in grace before he can fall from grace." Bro. L. T. Holsinger, of Rossville, Ind., came in our midst May 11 and remained until July 30. He preached the Word with power and caused many people to inquire more perfectly concerning the way of the Lord. Bro. Holsinger is a strong advocate of personal purity and of the same he practices that they may be strong in the Lord. As a visible result two were baptized. The husband and wife went down into the water together, and Bro. Holsinger baptized them at the same time.

FALLEN ASLEEP

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

Baile, Sarah Lavina, daughter of Christian and Susan Eby, born April 13, 1829, in Baltimore County, Md., died Aug. 29, 1911, at her home, Warrensburg, Mo., aged 82 years, 4 months and 7 days. Sept. 13, 1838, she was married to John Baile, of Frederick County, Md., who died Dec. 31, 1874. At the age of twenty-two years she united with the Brethren church, and was a faithful member of the church for christ for nearly seventy years. After her husband's death she successfully managed the affairs of home, raising a large family of children, seven of whom are still living. She accumulated considerable property, which was a means of much help to the poor and needy and to public needs. She lived a retired life at Warrensburg, Mo., for about forty years. Services in the Brethren church at Warrensburg, Mo. Interment in the adjoining cemetery. Services by Eld. D. L. Mohler, assisted by Eld. M. S. Mohler.—Mrs. Jessie Baile Bowman, R. F. D. 3, Warrensburg, Mo.

Bellis, Henry J. G., born in Bristol, Ontario Co., N. Y., March 5, 1834, died at Delphine, Mont., Aug. 7, 1911. He was married to Phebe Clark Oct. 9, 1853, in Ivy, Va. He kept moving westward, and finally settled in Delphine, Montana, where he lived at the time of his death. He united with the Church of the Brethren in 1871, in Ivy, Va., in which he was born to them. He was very patient in his sickness. His wife died about a year previously. Besides him, he leaves a kind and loving husband and father.—Sarah Brailler, Greensville, Ind.

Brown, Eld. Jeremiah, born in Brownsville, Washington Co., Md., Dec. 31, 1826, died in New Windsor, Carroll Co., Md., July 19, 1911, aged 84 years, 6 months and 18 days. He was married to Maria Carver who preceded him thirteen years. He united with the church in his native county in the number of years in the Bush Creek congregation, where he lived the greater part of his life. He was called into the work and long as he had strength. He was laid to rest by his wife in the Pipe Creek cemetery.—Services by Brethren A. P. Reader and Ellsworth Englar.—Minerva Roop, New Windsor, Md.

Crawford, Sarah A., born about sixty-five years ago, died of heart failure at his home, Ryley, Va., Aug. 19, 1911. He had been in poor health for several months, but was better. He made shingles all day and evening, and after supper set at his supper as usual. As he retired, he remarked to his wife, that he would get up early. He gathered his shingles and his sheaf him growing. She spoke to him, but he only spoke a few words and died. He was a consistent and respectable old brother, and was one of the first to unite with the church since the work began in Saxon, about thirty-three years ago. He has ever since remained faithful. He leaves a wife, three sons and two daughters. Services by Eld. S. A. Bunger at the home of brother on Sunday afternoon. Interment in the family graveyard on Monday.—Nelle Wampler, Dyke, Va.

Davy, Sister Susan, nee Koller, born in Zore, Tuscarawas County, Ohio, Feb. 5, 1839, died at her home, 2301 Bellefonde Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 16, 1911, aged 71 years. She united with the Brethren church as soon as she was old enough in this city, for she had been a reader of the Messenger some time before. She was one of the most devoted and faithful members of this congregation. Services conducted by Eld. J. W. Rarick, at the home.—W. Carl Rarick, 274 N. Holmes Street, Indianapolis, Ind.

Garber, Anna Susan, daughter of Brother Noah and Sister Mary Garber, born Aug. 10, 1910, died in the home of the Noksville congregation, Va., Aug. 13, 1911, aged 7 years and 3 days. She was run up and killed by a horse which started to drive a horse away, but she was unfortunately kicked in the face by the horse. At that loving hearts and willing hands did all they could do, but four hours after the sad spirit took its flight. She was a bright little girl and a regular attendant at the church. Services by Eld. L. A. Miller, assisted by Eld. M. G. Early. Interment in the Valley cemetery.—Mary Miller, R. D. 3, Box 2, Bristol, Va.

Gilck, John W., born at Weyers Cave, Va., May 28, 1867, died at Trevilians, Va., July 25, 1911, aged 44 years, 2 months and 23 days. His wife preceded him to the spirit world eight years and one day. Soon after her death, he left his two sons, went west, remaining until last winter. He united with the church at the age of nineteen years and remained faithful until death. He was ailing for a year before he died. Two sons, an aged mother, four sisters and two brothers survive him.—Services by Bro. W. A. Myers, at Mt. Hebron, 9: 37.—Martha Click Senger, Trevilians, Va.

Grange, Mrs. Elizabeth, daughter of Daniel Grogey, died of typhoid fever in a hospital in Washington, Pa., Aug. 13, 1911, aged 24 years, 10 months and 13 days. Her mother preceded him to the grave. The father, with thirteen children, is left to mourn their loss.—Services in the M. E. church in Grantsville, Md., by the writer, assisted by the pastor of above-named church. Interment in the near-by cemetery.—C. E. Yoder, Elk Lick, Pa.

Horner, Sister Minnie B., nee Brandt, born Dec. 16, 1868, in Harlan, Iowa, died Aug. 13, 1911, at her residence, Quinter, Kans., aged 42 years, 7 months and 28 days. Her death was caused by consumption. Her health began to decline last fall, but she endured her affliction with great patience. She was united in marriage to Chas. Horner, to which union were born two sons and two daughters. Her husband and children survive. She was the youngest of a family of six children, and was the first to pass away. Funeral services were held here years ago. She united with the Church of the Brethren in March, 1892, in which faith she remained faithful until death. Services at the Osage church Aug. 16 by Eld. W. H. Leaman. Text, Psa. 71: 1. Interment in the Brethren's cemetery.—D. W. Shideler, McClure, Kans.

Jordan, Irvin D., died Aug. 4, 1911, at Howard, Pa., aged 29 years, 11 months and 2 days. He was the eldest son of Brother J. Z. and Hattie Jordan, of Fruitdale, Ala. He died very suddenly with nausea, which resulted in hemorrhage of the stomach. He only lived about twenty-four hours after the first attack. He was received into the Reformed church, but before he died, his wife being a member of that church. He leaves a loving wife, his parents, two brothers and one sister. Interment in the cemetery at Locust Hill, Pa., Aug. 7.—J. Z. Jordan, Fruitdale, Ala.

Leckrone, Bro. James F., son of George and Katherine Leckrone, born Nov. 19, 1855, died Aug. 18, 1911, aged 55 years, 9 months and 4 days. He was a member of the Loyalton church. He was married to Miss Lavina Leckrone May 18, 1876. To this union were born three sons and three daughters. One daughter preceded him three sons and three daughters. One daughter preceded him in death. He came to the Church of the Brethren from the Reformed church about thirty years ago, and was a Christian all his life. He leaves his wife and four children. Services in the Jonathan Creek church by Eld. Rufus Wyatt. Text, 1 Thess. 4: 13-18. Funeral was the largest funeral ever held in our house.—J. S. Leckrone, Somerset, Ohio.

Keagy, Sister Rayman, infant son of Brother N. and Sister Mollie Keagy, died Aug. 16, 1911, aged 28 days. Little Ellis was the first of our cradle roll members of the Pleasant Valley church at Manheim Grove Chapel, to be called home. The little body was laid to rest in the family graveyard near his home. He was laid to rest in the family graveyard near his home. Besides his parents, one brother and three sisters survive.—Nelie Wampler, Dyke, Va.

Marker, Sister Susan, nee Ulery, born near Dayton, Ohio, Aug. 11, 1821, died near Oakley, Ill., in the bounds of the Oakley congregation, Aug. 17, 1911, aged 90 years and 6 days. She was married to Elias Marker in 1844. Four sons and four daughters were born to them. Her husband and one son preceded her in death. She also leaves two brothers. She was united with the Church of the Brethren in Montgomery County, Ohio, when she was twenty-five years old, and lived faithful until death. Services by the writer.—D. J. Blickenstaff, R. D. 1, Oakley, Ill.

Mathias, Sister Hannah, wife of Bro. John Mathias, died Aug. 4, 1911, aged 90 years, 2 months and 14 days. Her husband preceded her about two years ago. Their home has been a favorite for the Brethren when in meeting. Funeral services in the Lost River church by Brethren J. Carson Miller and W. C. Hoover. Text, 2 Cor. 5: 1.—S. W. See, Mathias, W. Va.

Mowrry, J. B., born in Sandusky County, Ohio, April 23, 1840, died Aug. 9, 1911, in the bounds of the Quinter congregation, Buffalo Co., Nebr. His wife, two sons, three daughters and one adopted daughter survive him. Interment in the Kearney cemetery. Services by the writer. Text, Luke 23: 28.—W. McLellan, Lathchild, Nebr.

Poe, Chas. Elmer, son of Mr. Frank and Sister Mary Poe, born Aug. 14, 1887, in Wabash County, Ind., died Aug. 2, 1911, at Goodrich, Park, Mich., aged 24 years and 3 days. Aug. 20, 1907, he was married to Verna May Kinsey. To this union two daughters were born. His wife and two daughters survive. Services in the Salamonie congregation at the Lancaster house by Eld. S. B. Wike. Text, Rom. 6: 23.—Mrs. Chas. Poe, R. D. 6, Huntington, Ind.

Risser, Sister Annie H., nee Good, born Nov. 6, 1839, died near Mauertown, Va., in the bounds of the Woodstock congregation, Aug. 18, 1911, aged 71 years, 9 months and 12 days. She was a consistent member of the Church of the Brethren for a number of years. She is survived by her husband, Eld. S. A. Risser. Three sons and one daughter preceded her. Services at the Valley Pike church by Eld. Carson Miller. Text, 1 Peter 1: 24, 25. Interment in the cemetery, near the church.—M. H. Copp, R. D. 1, Mauertown, Va.

Shank, Sister Nellie, nee Wertz, the third daughter of John and Susan Wertz, born in Somerset County, near Johnstown, Pa., April 12, 1873, died at the old home farm in Quemahoning township, Marshall Co., Ind., Aug. 15, 1911, aged 79 years, 4 months and 3 days. She was married to William Shank, who survives her husband, Nov. 15, 1894, and for eight years after her marriage resided in the vicinity where she was born. March 21, 1866, she removed with her family to Marshall County, Ind., and for one year resided near Bourbon, after which the family removed to the present home in Union township, where, with the exception of a few years, she resided until death. The deceased was the mother of six children. After removing to Indiana she became a member of the Church of the Brethren, and until her death was a faithful member of the Camp Creek congregation, north of Etna Green, Ind. She not only tried to live up to the doctrines of the church, and the teachings and precepts of the Bible, but loved and cherished all that was just and right. For many years before her death she suffered untold agony from rheumatism, but bravely pressed forward and did her whole duty as wife, mother, neighbor and friend, until her body could no longer respond to the call of her Christian duties, and the kindly promptings of her noble heart. During the last year of her life she constantly grew more feeble until one week before her death, when she suffered a stroke of paralysis, from which she did not recover. Services at the Shank Chapel by Bro. John F. Appelman, of Plymouth, Ind., assisted by Bro. Levi Pasternaugh, of Argos, Ind.—J. A. Shank, Argos, Ind.

Salmonsberger, Sister Elizabeth, nee Nicewanger, born March 2, 1829, near Sharpsburg, Blair Co., Pa., died in the bounds of the Leamersville church Aug. 12, 1911, aged 82 years, 5 months and 10 days. She united with the Church of the Brethren, when she was eighteen years old, and lived a strictly consistent Christian life. She was always ready to assist in every way for the good of the cause of Christ. When she was deprived of church privileges, owing to infirmities, we visited her frequently. She loved prayer and song service, and took great delight in hearing the church choir. The last hymn the writer sang for her was "Jesus, Savior, Pilot Me." The last two weeks of her life she was unable to speak. Services in the Leamersville church by Eld. J. A. Sell and others. Interment in Carson Valley.—Sister J. A. Sell, R. D. 1, Hollidaysburg, Pa.

Spurgeon, Bro. Spencer Pinley, died at his home in the bounds of the May Mill church, Nov. 16, 1911, aged 51 years, 4 months and 4 days. He united with the church July 17, 1911. This act was one of several to which his wife's boyhood where he lived as being the turning-point in his life. He is survived by his wife and six children.—Sarah E. Spurgeon, May Mill church by the writer. Text, 1 Kings 16: 19.—Van B. Wright, Sinking Spring, Ohio.

Stover, Sister Angeline, nee Brown, born Nov. 18, 1840, died at Exton, Ohio, Aug. 31, 1911, aged 70 years, 9 months and 3 days. She was married to Jacob F. Stover. To them were born four sons, one of whom preceded her. She was a consistent member of the church for thirty years. Though she was greatly afflicted for twelve years, she bore it all with Christian patience until the Lord called her. She leaves her husband and three sons. Services at the home by Eld. J. F. Deaton and the writer.—S. P. Petry, R. D. 10, Exton, Ohio.

Walmer, Susan Priscilla, nee Brown, born May 15, 1836, died at her son's home, near Union Deposit, Pa., Aug. 10, 1911, aged 75 years, 3 months and 27 days. Services at the house by Elders John H. Witmer and Adam C. Shoop. Interment in the Union Deposit cemetery.—John J. Shiffler, Union Deposit, Pa.

WAR VERSUS PEACE

By Jacob Funk

The subject treated in this book is one which, more than any other, vitally concerns the civilized nations of the world, and the interest in it is growing. It is important that the people be intelligent on this subject. All need to know just the things that are herein given. The following subjects are taken up:

The Causes of War, The Evils of War, The Cost of War, A Brief History of the Peace Movement, and Ways of Advancing Peace.

The information concerning each of the above subjects is given in brief form and in a style which makes it interesting reading. It contains the cream of facts gleaned from many historical works, reports of conventions, published articles, etc.

The reading of the book gives one a clear vision of the horrors of war, the enormous cost in money and human life of it, and is sure to inspire greater zeal in the hearts of the people in the peace movement. It deserves a wide circulation.

Traits of Character

by
H. F. Kletzing, A. M.
Author of "Progress of a Race"
and
E. L. Kletzing, A. M.
Principal in Chicago Public Schools.

The book is divided into four parts: Part 1. Traits of Character Illustrated; Part 2. Marked Manhood and Womanhood; Part 3. Marred Manhood and Womanhood; Part 4. Sidelights.

In Part 1, the truths intended to be taught on the printed page are made more sensible and doubly impressive by the apt illustration appearing in connection therewith.

Part 2, in connection with their portraits, gives brief sketches of the lives of men and women who, by means of great and noble things accomplished, sometimes by making use of their birth, wealth, good fortune, etc., and again in spite of adverse circumstances, stand out as beacon lights to them who follow them in life's pathway.

Part 3, in a similar way, shows how men and women of bright intellect and strong personality, but lacking in character, have marred their lives by yielding to temptation.

In these truths are mostly illustrated in lighter vein, but none the less forcibly brought to the mind of the reader.

Character may be defined as that sum of qualities, which distinguishes one person from another. Some of these qualities, perhaps, are doubtless hereditary, but all these qualities are susceptible of development and training. The influences which surround men's lives are character builders. Next to the influence of a living personage over the life of another is that of the books he reads.

The reader of this book will be sure to find it full of helpful material in the way of incident, biography and narration.

The volume contains 363 pages neatly bound in cloth.

Notes from Our Correspondents.

much, but she seems much interested in the mountains, hills and the rolling roads. Our meeting began August 20 with good attendance. The interest and crowds increased until many could not get into the house. It was interesting to see many of the Hatcher's friends and relatives (some members of other churches, and many of them not belonging to any church) manifest such an interest in the meetings, encouraging him for the able sermons given each evening. One was reclaimed, eleven baptized, and two await the rite. Others seem very near the kingdom. Indeed, the church has had a spiritual feast, and all seem to be encouraged. Bro. Hatcher's powerful sermons, together with his and Sister Hatcher's personal work, did much for the interest of the meetings. We hope they can be with us again very soon.—C. E. Eller, Salem, Va., Aug. 24.

Salem.—Bro. Hatcher preached eighteen sermons for us, beginning Aug. 6 and closing Aug. 20.—C. E. Eller, Salem, Va., Aug. 22.

White Rock.—Our church met in council Aug. 5. Eld. Wyatt Reed preached on Sunday, Aug. 6. Bro. S. S. Shoemaker, of Roanoke, Va., began a series of meetings. He preached thirteen sermons. We feel that he has come home. He has revived and built up by these meetings. Thirteen united with the church and were baptized. We feel that others are almost persuaded to come.—Bertha E. Reed, Copper Valley, Va., Aug. 26.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Crab Orchard.—Bro. L. C. Coffman, of Daleville, Va., commenced a series of meetings at this place on Saturday, Aug. 26. During his stay he preached thirteen Spirit-filled sermons, held one council meeting, and presided at our love feast, held Aug. 19. During these meetings Brethren Lewis and Elbert Clower, and Bro. James Rogers, of Fayette County, W. Va., added much inspiration to the meetings. He was well received by baptism and one reclaimed. These four brethren are all young men. Coffman was a stranger here, but has won for himself a host of friends, both in and out of the church. Aug. 26 we held our regular council, and Bro. James Rogers, presided. He also preached for us on Sunday, to the interest of the Crystal Springs, Fayette County, Va., Aug. 29.

Packs Branch.—Brethren James Riner and James Rogers were with us on Saturday evening, Aug. 19, also on Sunday. Bro. Rogers preached two splendid sermons to large and attentive congregations at 10 A. M. and 8 P. M. Riner will preach again, at this place, the third Saturday night and Sunday in September.—Dixie B. Boles, Packs Branch, W. Va., Aug. 30.

ONESIMUS

The Runaway Slave

By Eld. H. B. Brumbaugh.

¶ A new book of 159 pages in which we have presented a charming story of the days of Paul the Apostle. Many years have been spent in bringing together the material for this fascinating and realistic sketch of Onesimus and his experience among the Christians of Colosse and Rome.

¶ After a careful perusal of this book you cannot but have a new interest in Paul and his several Epistles. In fact you have here an interesting and entertaining Commentary on the Epistle of Paul to Philemon.

¶ This book will be read with interest and profit by hundreds of young people and every student of the New Testament will enjoy every one of its nineteen chapters.

¶ Cloth bound. Artistic side title. Clear type. Short chapters.

THE GOSPEL MESSENGER

"SET FOR THE DEFENSE OF THE GOSPEL."—Phil. 1: 17.

Vol. 50. (Old Series Vol. 60.) Elgin, Ill., September 16, 1911. No. 37.

AROUND THE WORLD

The Uplift of Egypt.

The progress of gospel efforts in the land of the Pharaohs, during the last few months, is most remarkable, in spite of Mohammedan fanaticism and opposition. At present much attention is being given to the distribution of Christian literature, prepared by the Nile Mission Press. In view of the newly-awakened activities of Islam, it is doubly important that Christian literature be placed before the people, to maintain the ground so far gained, and to make further advancement. The present fanatic attempt of Mohammedans to reform Islam from within, is a clear indication that its insufficiency is recognized, and that a radical reform is deemed necessary.

Anonymous Millions for Missions.

Some one, fully imbued with the spirit of giving,—unheralded, and according to the New Testament standard, has recently made a gift of $1,000,000 to the Endowment Fund of the American Board of Commissioners of Foreign Missions in Boston. The name of the munificent donor has not been made known, but the gift is sure to go on in its noble work of human betterment, even long after the unknown giver has gone to his eternal rest. Again we are reminded that there is ample opportunity for large and bountiful giving, not "as unto men but unto the Lord." The brother or sister with ample means should well study the grave responsibility of wise stewardship, but even those of limited means are not relieved of their part in the work.

The Bible in the Engine Cab.

One way of utilizing spare moments to best advantage is shown in the life of Mr. Levi Jenks, of North Adams, Mass., an engineer for thirty years on an eastern railroad. He always kept his Bible on his engine and, when not engaged in the duties of his responsible position, was busily employed in reading his Bible. So faithful was he in this, that he managed to read the Sacred Volume most thoroughly, from cover to cover, three times. Nor did he fail to catch the spirit of its teachings, for his long and faithful service, with but very few accidents, bore eloquent testimony to his real worth. It was said of him that he took his Christianity with him on the railroad, and when, as was recently reported, he reached the end of his life, it doubtless served to cheer his last hours on earth. It always pays to read and study the Bible.

Marvelous Advancement.

In nothing else, perhaps, has there been as great an advancement as in the large liners that ply between the United States and Europe. Scarcely has the mail steamer, 881 feet long, and equipped with every imaginable convenience, been placed in service, until a larger vessel, 950 feet in length, with a motive force of 80,000 horse power, is announced as being under construction. Twenty years ago only two vessels boasted of 30,000 horse power, and the quickest voyage was about twelve days. Not until 1919 will occur the anniversary of the first transatlantic steamer, the "Savannah." This was a craft of but 350 tons, built in New York, that made the trip in twenty-six days. The modern steamship, with its comfortable and luxurious equipments, is so monumental in human achievement, that the wildest fancy of the Oriental dreamers has been fully eclipsed. Man's genius has become so effective that it has, in a way, subdued "bridged the ocean."

Unrest in Parts of China.

Missionaries in the outlying districts of the Sze Chuen province in China have been ordered by the Viceroy to retire to the larger towns where ample police protection can be given them. This is the information that comes from Peking under date of Sept. 7, and the reason assigned is the increasing unrest among the natives, engendered by the Government's "railroad policy," and other aggressive measures. These, while for the good of the country, are ascribed to the influence of the foreigners, and the prejudice of the lower classes against all things foreign is quite likely to show itself in acts of unreasoning hatred against the missionaries. The United States Government, in full touch with the situation, is already adopting measures that will insure safety for all American missionaries. As far as other parts of China are concerned,—especially those in which famine and plague prevailed,—there need be no fears concerning the safety of Americans. The unprecedented liberality of the people of this country, to mitigate the horrors of the awful famine, will never be forgotten, and the self-sacrificing efforts of our doctors and medical missionaries, in the control of the plague, will stand as an everlasting monument of American brotherly kindness. All this, it is to be hoped, will go far to avert any calamity, such as was experienced in the never-to-be-forgotten "Boxer" uprising, of several years ago.

Millions for Luxury.

Does it surprise you to be told that the people of the United States during last year spent $78,000,000 for candy; another $25,000,000 for chewing gum, and $320,000,000 more for soda water? These figures are not a mere guess but are based on statistics compiled by Congressmen J. Sharpe Moore, of Philadelphia, and presented by him during the recent session of Congress, to show that, in spite of the high cost of living, we pay highly for our luxuries, too. He further states that the jewelry, sold in a single year, represents an outlay of more than twice the cost of building the Panama Canal. One is made to wonder, after studying the figures and facts given, whether the cause of missions, with its comparatively few millions annually, is really as close to the heart of the Christian people as they claim it is. We say we love souls, but do we? Can we claim to stand guiltless before the Great Judge, as long as the pro rata expenditure for luxuries is many times larger than our gifts for gospel promulgation?

Will the Lord Share the Increase?

A recently-published announcement of the Census Bureau, comprising a review of general farm statistics, places the value of farm land in the United States at more than twice the value reported ten years ago. In 1900 the lands were estimated at $13,051,033,000. The last census puts the total value at $28,384,821,000, or $15,333,788,000 gain,—118 per cent,—during the ten-year period. These figures do not include farm stock, implements, etc., which add still further billions to the farmer's prosperity. All this is very good, but we should like to learn just how much the work of the Lord has prospered by reason of the wonderful increase. David realized his great indebtedness to the Lord when he broke forth in words of consecrated devotion, "What shall I render to the Lord for all his benefits?" The question is a most pertinent one, for each one of God's children today. He has been, indeed, been most gracious unto us. Shall we stand before him empty-handed, or will there be the fruitage of a well-spent life?

Is France Awakening?

So long and persistently have we been told about the religious decadence of France, that we are hardly prepared for the roseate forecast of Mr. Andre de Bavier, a noted French sociologist, who declares that many things are pointing toward a revival of religion in France. He says that the decline of religious interest is not going on religiously, can not continue as at present. The people are waiting for something. Romanism has been tried in the balances and found wanting. Souls are thirsting for life, —the vital essence of something that will satisfy the demands of the soul. It would seem that there is room for a mighty evangelistic movement in France, and that the auspicious, yea, the critical, moment for action is right now, lest there be a plunge into the abyss of agnosticism from which there is no ready escape. If there is really an opening for the entrance of the gospel message,—such as we are led to believe by the words of the eminent Frenchman, referred to above,—it is a challenge to the entire Christian world, a duty that can not be shirked,

The Song That Cheered.

After nine plucky but unsuccessful attempts to swim across the English Channel from Dover to Cape Gris-Nez, William Burgess, a Yorkshireman, has finally accomplished the task, struggling in the water for twenty-four consecutive hours. During the first four hours of his battle with the waves he was able to make but six miles, and adverse currents, all the way across, made the strain a most terrific one. While yet some miles from the French shore, his strength began to fail. His pilots, on the accompanying motor boat, noticing his waning powers, at once began a cheering song, and were rewarded by an immediate and encouraging response. Song after song floated across the waters to the lonely swimmer, until finally he gained the shore. Many a traveler, heavenward bound, becomes weary unto death; his strength almost fails. Then it is that the sweet songs of Zion speak peace to his soul. With renewed courage he presses onward, stirred by nobler impulses than he ever knew before. He can almost see the "palms of victory" on the golden shore, and the "crown of glory he shall wear."

Flood and Pestilence in China.

The American mission at Wuhu is in receipt of distressing reports from Hankow, China, according to which thousands of persons have perished by the floods which have devastated the entire region adjacent to the Yangtse-Kiang River. To add to the horror of the situation, a virulent pestilence,—caused, it is thought, by the large amount of decaying matter, has broken out. More than ninety-five per cent of the crops, in the region affected, have been destroyed. Renewed attempts to regulate the turbulent river systems of China, with a view of preventing, if possible, further disastrous floods, are now to be entered upon in real earnest. Western engineers, conversant with the conditions, declare that suitable embankments, and other devices, will do for China's rivers what has been so successfully done elsewhere, and the country will likely adopt the very best. There is hope for any nation that is ready to apply the best and most improved measures for the well-being of her people.

What Men of Conviction Can Do.

Recently a bull fight had been billed for Helena, Ark. While the better element of the community deplored the brutality of the proposed exhibition in the arena, and was more so because it involved such a manifest desecration of the Lord's Day, the promoters of the proposed contest,—"fellows of the baser sort,"—heeded not the protests made. Thereupon the Helena ministers went in a body to the place of the impending fight, and threatened that the laws of Arkansas, condemning such a contest, would be invoked, unless the proposed event were abandoned. At once the managers decided to give up the contemplated contest, and returned the entrance fees to the would-be spectators. We quote the incident to show what may be done by but a few men who are determined to stand for the right. Without a single violation of gospel principles we may from time to time show our most excellent advantage. It is one way of "letting our light shine" that will bring honor to the Lord and the cause we represent.

The Ravages of Cholera.

Fortunately for the people of the United States, the stringent measures adopted at our ports of entry have been successful in barring out the dread disease from our shores. Last reports from Italy show that, so far this year, the number of deaths from cholera is well beyond the 30,000 mark. From various parts of the sadly-stricken country most deplorable acts of violence are now reported. The inhabitants consider the authorities responsible for the prevalence of the plague, losing sight of the fact that much of the virulence of the epidemic is due to the filthy and unsanitary condition in which the people themselves,—and more especially the laboring classes,—are living. This disposition of mankind, to censure others rather than themselves when the shadow of a dire calamity hovers over them,—accentuated by their refusal to apply the needed remedies proffered them,—has been seen in all ages and among all nations of men. It does not require a great intellect or a high moral standard to become an inveterate faultfinder. Only those who have entered into the higher realms of personal responsibility to the Most High, are ready to say, after an introspective view of themselves, "Wash me thoroughly from mine iniquity, and cleanse me from my sin."

Let the Good Work Go On!

Great men are not always wise," is an adage that has been proved true by the uncalled-for recent attacks upon President Taft's well-formulated peace treaties, and that, too, by men who stand high in the councils of the nation. It was a surprise that there should be any such strong an opposition by the recent Senate, and still more unexpected and unwarranted was the heated attack by Col. Roosevelt. From one who has so persistently vaunted the golden quality of common sense, the criticisms offered are remarkably inopportune. In assuming that the treaties, if ratified, "can not be operated successfully by those in charge of affairs," he places a rather low estimate upon the ability of the "powers that be," nor does he credit the American people with the commonly-ascribed degree of fairness and willingness to do as they agree to do when he questions their readiness to comply with the terms of the treaties entered upon. By all means, let all lovers of peace give their hearty and out-spoken support to any and every peace treaty that may be proposed, and especially let the ratification of the treaties now pending be urged upon those who are responsible for such legal sanction. This is a practical way of showing our devotion to the cause of peace and all that will tend to bring it about more speedily.

ESSAYS

Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth

A Prayer.

Grant these gifts, O powers that be;
Lips that smile, and eyes that see;
Heart too brave and soul too wise
To choose wrong in pleasure's guise;
Hands and feet that patient strive
To keep right and joy alive;
Sense to share a brother's grief,
Wit to bring him swift relief;
Love that never faints nor fears,
Courage to bring joy or tears;
Spirit of eternal youth,
Pure devotion to all truth;
Gentleness that sweetens sorrow,
Faith to face the dim to-morrow;
Strength to let the small self die,
Unregretted, joyously;
And, for crowning grace to lend,
Let me never fail a friend!

A Picture of Life.

BY JAMES A. SELL.

Upon a certain occasion our Blessed Savior told his disciples to get into a ship and go to the other side of the Sea of Galilee, while he went into a mountain to pray. While they were on the voyage, there arose a contrary wind, against which they vainly rowed. It was night. Darkness was brooding over the water. At a late hour Christ came near to them walking upon the restless waves. When they saw him they were troubled. They did not know him and he would have passed by them, but when at last they called to him he came to them, told who he was, went into their ship, comforted them, stilled the storm, much to their amazement and wonder, and went with them, changing their perilous position into one of comfort and joy. And, strangely enough, they did not know him till they came out of the ship on the "other side" (Mark 6: 45, 54).

We have, in the narrative, a complete picture of human life. We are not at home here. Our home is beyond. The stormy sea of life is between us and that happy place. Over there are the fields Elysian, bedecked with unfading flowers. Through that better land winds the river of life, clear as crystal, on whose banks the redeemed walk clad in "linen clean and white," with palms of victory, crowns of glory and golden harps. They are resting in the shade of the tree whose leaves are for the "healing of the nations." They have access to the city whose walls are jasper, and whose streets are gold, and whose temple outshines the sun. Those who have passed over to that better country know nothing of sorrow or trouble. Their happiness is complete. They wave to us the beckoning hand, and wait our coming. There is no way of entrance there but by the way of crossing life's troubled sea. The night of sin and ignorance has settled upon us. Storms and contrary winds will arise. We know not what is awaiting us. Storms of severe trial will often lash the billows into foam. We meet with losses and crosses too heavy to bear. Our fondest hopes are turned to disappointments and our sweetest anticipations are trailed in the dust. We plan and work and struggle on through strenuous days and weeks and months and years, only to find disappointment. "The winds are contrary." We feel, like Jacob said, "All these things are against me."

At the most trying and darkest time, the Savior comes near to us, walking serenely upon the troubled waters, giving us the assurance that he has power over all the dangers that assail us. At first we may fear his approach. The sinner is not comforted in the first approach of the Savior. He is conscious of his presence but does not yet know him, and is troubled. He "supposes" a good many things and would get along without him, if possible. But the Savior is the only one that can give the help that is needed in this extremity, and he is always ready when called upon. "There is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." "Let us come boldly to the throne of grace that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need." Christ must be called upon, or "he would have passed by them." His message of cheer is ringing out over the dark surges of time to every tempest-tossed soul on life's troubled sea, "Be of good cheer; it is I; be not afraid."

When Christ is with us, the cause of very much of our trouble is removed. When the disciples took him into their ship, the "wind ceased" and they passed safely to the "other side." We need his presence every day, in every experience of our life. With him duties are sweetened, burdens made lighter, and dangers removed. What a change his presence can make! "They were sore amazed in themselves beyond measure and wondered." It is enough to amaze us to know that the Savior came away across the waters of time to "seek and save that which was lost." And he comes, too, just when he is most needed, and does for us what no other one can, and brings about such wonderful results. It is a wonder why he loves us, why he came into this darkened world, took upon himself so much suffering, just to help us across to the "other side," to share in his glory. His prayer for his people was "that they may be with me where I am; that they may behold my glory which thou hast given me." The whole plan of redemption is wonderful. "The angels desire to look into it."

Yet, with all the Savior's greatness, what he did and is still doing, with the good cheer and safety and comfort and help that his presence brings, we do not fully know him, nor ever will, till we come to the other shore. "And when they came out of the ship straightway they knew him." We do not know or realize what sin means or what it took to remove it. We do not know the boundless power of our Savior's wisdom and love, and goodness and grace, and we never will till we see in the perfect day over there, "Now we see through a glass darkly; but then face to face, now we know in part, but then we shall know even as also we are known."

The Minister's Place.

BY EZRA FLORY.

God said to Ezekiel, "I have made thee a watchman unto the house of Israel: therefore hear the word at my mouth, and give them warning from me. . . . When thou speakest not to warn the wicked from his wicked way, to save his life, . . . his blood will I require at thy hand." Jesus said, "I am come that they may have life and may have it abundantly." Paul declared to the Ephesian elders, "I shrank not from declaring unto you anything that was profitable, and teaching you publicly and from house to house, testifying both to Jews and to Greeks repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ."

Judging by the demands of some people, both in the ministry and in the laity, the minister must be a sort of Jack-of-all-trades, in order to accomplish his mission among his fellows. He must be a preacher, a lecturer, a society man, reformer, politician, and, if he has time, something of a thinker. It is too often forgotten, by both the preacher and his church, that his one great duty is to bring into the lives of men the transforming and saving power of the Savior, whose servant he is. There is no real and permanent reforming power in the world save the Gospel, hence why should one, called especially to be its advocate, yield to the temptation of substituting secular means in his effort to uplift men?

Just as the church fails, when she imitates the world in being a literary society, a theater or a restaurant, so the preacher misses his calling and fails with men when he seeks to be the scholar, the lecturer, the reformer, the general bureau of things intellectual.

True, he needs broad sympathies and learning, and he should be well informed and capable of advising his members on many things, but such traits are not his objective. His one great work must ever be weakened or neglected by the devotion of time and talents to secular though important affairs.

The time is past when the minister is the only man in the community who can write and do the teaching. He is now outreached by dozens who are specialists in lines intellectual. His particular business today is to be a specialist in standing for the knowledge of God, helping all men to know "the power of an endless life." In this way he is to be the channel through which all other specialists and all men's lives may be far more effectively vitalized than otherwise.

Sunday-School Convention of Western Pennsylvania.

BY A. G. FOUST.

One of our most largely-attended meetings in Western Pennsylvania is the annual Sunday-school Convention. This year the convention assembled in the Shade Creek congregation, Scalp Level house Aug. 24. The Ministerial Meeting was held the day before. The day was crowded with work and all of the three sessions were well represented by delegates from the various schools of the District. For the afternoon and evening sessions overflow meetings were held in another church. Throughout the day, the interest manifested and the unity of spirit prevailing were exceptional. The supreme aim of the day was the extension of the Lord's work through the Sunday-schools of the District. To accomplish this, elders, ministers and lay-members all worked in harmony. No opposition to the new movements, such as cradle roll, home department, and the like, was voiced during any session.

To begin with, the program committee used wisdom in arranging the program. Instead of selecting the ordinary topics that seem good, instructive and attractive, they looked over the field, found out the needs and made a program which should both bring the needs before the workers, and offer an opportunity for solutions. Theories were laid aside and practical experience appealed to. Only men and women who had done something in the actual field, felt like speaking on such a strenuous occasion.

It was learned from the Field Secretary's report that, during the year 1910, sixty-four schools were in session, with a total enrollment of 7,762 in all the departments. Out of these 64 schools, 63 per cent were open 12 months; 22 per cent, 9 months, and 15 per cent, 6 months of the year. It was shown that 20 per cent of the schools maintain a teachers' meeting; 23 per cent a teacher-training class; 24 per cent a home department, and 58 per cent a cradle roll. All the schools reported for the year. A full report was never before obtained in the history of the District.

The constitution, formulated and adopted at last year's convention, was ready for distribution in booklet form. The constitution has given us a basis of united effort. Any District Secretary may obtain a copy of it by addressing our Field Secretary, R. D. Murphy, Rummel, Pa. During the morning program, "Front Line Certificates" of recognition were presented to all the schools qualifying in the ten points of the "Standard of Excellence," adopted at last year's convention. The standard consists of the following points: (1) School open all the year. (2) Statistics reported promptly. (3) Contributions to the Field Secretary and Mission Funds. (4) Cradle Roll. (5) Home Department. (6) Teacher-training Class. (7) Teachers' Meeting. (8) Organized Adult Bible Class. (9) School represented at Annual Convention. (10) Average attendance, one-half of the main school enrollment.

Ten schools reached this standard. The certificates presented were secured at a considerable expense to the District but they are worth all of their cost as an aim to be attained. They are artistically engraved in one color on substantial paper, 14x21 inches, six kinds of letters being used.

The climax of the day's meeting was the part of the program devoted to missions. It was decided, first of all, to donate $120 to equip a dormitory in the Bible School to be erected in India, and $40 to erect a home for a native pastor. A letter was read from our representative upon the field,—Sister Ida C. Shumaker. If acceptable, this letter will be published in Our Young People. Finally came the question whether we should support another missionary from our own number upon the field. Without a dissenting voice it was decided to send another, and our Field

Secretary was asked to hear the call of the Lord given through the unanimous assent of the schools of the District. His answer was, "It is hard to say yes, on the spur of the moment, but harder to say no." We are hoping and praying that he may hear the call, allowing him to choose either China or India. Bro. J. M. Blough followed with a masterful address on missions. The remaining part of the day was spent in round table conferences and discussions.

Ministers, Be Inspired!

BY E. F. SHERFY.

THE minister, when rightly related to his Heavenly Father and his calling, is a prophet of God. Hebrew scholars tell us that the word "prophet," in its root meaning, is a "bubble over." A fountain can not bubble over unless there is a pent-up place,—a hidden supply seeking an outlet. Let us keep this in mind as we think of the "inspired" prophet or minister, as we may call him.

With what should a prophet bubble over? Invariably, when God calls a prophet (Isaiah and Ezekiel, for example), he gives him a message to carry to the people. With that message God's prophet, his minister, is expected to "bubble over." You and I, as ministers of the eternal truth of God, must therefore be inspired by a living, burning message from the mouth of God, if we would fulfill our God-given mission.

In the account of God's message being given to Ezekiel, chapter 3, we find the figure of "eating the roll" used. He masticated, swallowed and, according to the figure, I judge he digested and assimilated the roll, and it thereby became a part of his system,—his being.

I shall not attempt to interpret and apply this figure to twentieth century preachers, except to say that we must "eat the roll,"—we must get hold of the message, and it must get hold and take possession of us, —if we would be true prophets of God. It takes more than one or two swallows to do it, too, I think. It takes years of consecrated Bible study.

We may be ever so zealous but if at any time we are necessitated to stand before a congregation without a warm, palpitating, living message, if we have no particular message for that one particular occasion, or if we have nothing to say that our hearers already know, we may rest assured that the warmth of our zeal will drop several degrees. There is no inspiration to speak under such circumstances. What is said may be good, but it lacks the fervency which brings conviction.

On the other hand, fellow-minister, I am sure you will agree with me when I say that there is probably no greater inspiration to be enjoyed than that which comes with the discovery of some great basic truth unrecognized before,—something which, we are sure, will be edifying to our congregation. God would have all men come to a knowledge of the truth and thereby be saved (1 Tim. 2: 4). It ought, therefore, to be an inspiration to his servants to delve into the riches of his truth, not merely to know it for themselves, but also to be able to deliver messages from God that will edify and bring salvation to men.

Again, we need to recognize, perhaps more than we do, the value of prayer as a source of inspiration for our work. How often obstacles and difficulties arise in the path of the faithful minister,—obstacles which seem insurmountable. He may feel totally unprepared for a certain appointment which must be met, or he may feel physically below par. Perhaps there may be a false report out against him, or some other annoyance. At such a time,—a time when human ability sinks into significance,—how often he has sought the strength of the "Everlasting Arms," and as often he has found that strength all-sufficient. The sermon which, from the human standpoint, we might have expected to be his poorest, has proved to be one of his best.

The recollection of such occasions, in the past, increase our faith, and the strength gained becomes a great source of encouragement and inspiration as we face new responsibilities. Oh, that the ministers of the Brethren church, as prophets of God, might make more of prayer as a source of inspiration for their work!

I know of one great preacher who spends the same length of time, approximately, in fervent prayer on Sunday morning that he spends in the pulpit. Just prior to that great sermon on the Bread of Life, Jesus spent the greater part of the night alone with the Father in prayer. Can we afford to do less?

There is one other source of inspiration, of special importance to the man who stands in Christ's stead as an ambassador for God. I speak with regard to the Holy Spirit.

The old prophets did not live in our Holy Spirit age, but they were all richly endowed by the Holy Spirit, nevertheless. In Ezekiel's case "the Spirit entered into him" at the same time that God gave him his message (Ezek. 2: 2ff). Those two events have always accompanied each other. We can not expect to receive God's message until we receive of his Spirit. We may study our Bible, but unless we have the Holy Spirit to "lead us into all truth," as Jesus promised, we can not get hold of the truths of the Word,—we can not get his message.

And without the unction of the Spirit we can not give the message either. Jesus, when he was about to leave the earth, was careful to plan for the propagation of his Gospel. He delegated to his apostles and their successors, the responsibility of carrying the Gospel to the nations, or, as he said, "witnessing" for him. All was imperative that there should be no delay in this most important work. But, in spite of the urgency of the work, Jesus tells them to tarry in Jerusalem a while (ten days). There the world was dying for lack of a saving Gospel. Why this seemingly uncalled-for delay? Simply because it was absolutely necessary that they be "clothed with power from on high."

To attempt to witness for Christ, to profess to be an ambassador on behalf of Christ, reconciling men unto God without having been clothed upon with the power of the Holy Spirit, is worse than useless.

We may put up "good talks" in the pulpit, but the Spirit must prevail if conviction is driven home to the hearts of men (John 16: 8). In this day of sin, under the guise of respectability, we must be inspired by the Holy Spirit if we would have the boldness that John the Baptist had to condemn sin. In those perilous times, when the apostles and disciples prayed for boldness, we see how the Holy Ghost came in power, "and they spake the Word of God with boldness."

Our outlines may be well put up, but that does not make strong sermons. The Holy Spirit must have a larger, more vital place in the sermon than the outline, or it will be beautiful rather than helpful.

As some critics said of Paul in his day, our "presence and speech are weak and our speech contemptible." We may be far from being pulpit orators, but if God could use Paul whose speech (according to the opinion of some) was contemptible, or no account, R. V., he can use us too, by the power of his Spirit.

Why is it that people (members of other churches), who want to hear a good, strong, helpful, edifying sermon, will come to hear one of our "farmer preachers," in preference to going to hear a seminary man? Simply because the farmer preacher, whose speech may be "of no account," his "presence weak," has the inspiration of the Holy Spirit.

O that we might lay hold on Luke 11: 11-13, and pray our Father who is more anxious to bless than an earthly parent, to baptize us anew and inspire us with his Spirit!

Ours is the greatest of all great works, because we are to "preach the Word"—that Word which will save men's souls for eternity. We are ambassadors for God. We actually stand in "Christ's stead" to reconcile men to God. We must therefore be inspired for our God-given work, if we would be true prophets,—true ministers of God,—if we would be used to carry the great message of Divine Truth to men. May God help us to this end!

THE day of small beginnings is one of the best days that ever dawns, for it is the day when something is going to be done.

Death of Eld. Joseph Stitzel.

BY I. B. TROUT.

BRO. JOSEPH STITZEL, of Lanark, Ill., was born at Greencastle, Pa., Jan. 20, 1833, and departed this life Aug. 28, 1911, at the age of seventy-eight years, 7 months and 8 days.

At the age of twelve years he came with his parents to Carroll County, Illinois. June 23, 1845, they reached the locality of Lanark, there being no town here at that time. They took dinner with the family that lived in the old log house that stands near the creek on the Hanna farm just north of town.

He was the third of six children, Mary Rowland and Elizabeth Arnold being older than he, and Henry Stitzel, Susan Arnold and Sarah Grossman being younger. Only his brother, Henry, and sister, Sarah, are left of his father's family.

On Feb. 28, 1858, he was united in marriage to Mary C. Slifer, daughter of Thomas and Louisa Slifer, by Eld. Christian Long. To this union were born ten children,—Laura J., Thomas M., David H., Louie S., Frances E., Minnie E., Daniel D., Alice M., Isaac R., and Bessie V. All his family remain to mourn their loss, except Alice and Louie. Both of these daughters, as well as himself, died in the triumph of faith in Jesus Christ.

In early life he taught a term or two of school. In June, 1858, he united with the Brethren church, and since that time he has been a faithful member, and one of the church's most earnest supporters. In 1864 he was elected to the office of deacon by the church at Arnold's Grove. In the fall of 1868 this same church elected him to the office of minister, and later advanced him to the second degree of the ministry. May 18, 1906, he was ordained to the eldership in the Lanark church. He served the church faithfully, and to the best of his ability, in these various offices. He was an earnest, sincere and conscientious Christian man. He was a man of decided convictions. One always knew where to find him; he was not two-faced or disposed to play double. He would stand for his convictions if the whole church voted against him. And when such a thing happened, he would not be cross or surly about it, but would be ready to do his work just as if nothing had crossed his path.

He was a man who was deeply interested in the welfare of his children, especially in their spiritual welfare, and was easily moved to tears when any minister in his sermon touched that important phase of life. Up to the time when his health became so impaired that it was impossible for him to attend church, —which occurred last fall,—he was a most faithful attendant at all the services. He was one that the minister could count on being present, day or night, storm or shine. The weather had practically nothing to do with his presence in the services of the church. He had a large heart of hospitality toward his friends and neighbors, and no one was ever turned away from his door who came and asked for something to eat. It would be a good thing for the church if she had scores of such members as was Bro. Stitzel. There would be no such a thing as backsliding members, but all would press forward in the Christian race with a zeal that would insure success. We have missed him greatly in the past few months from our services, and we shall continue to miss him in the time to come, but we shall be the better for our fellowship with him and our labor in the Master's vineyard by his side.

The funeral was held in the Lanark church on Wednesday, Aug. 30, at 2:30 P. M. The sermon was preached by the writer from Rev. 14: 13. Elders Wm. Eisenbise and S. I. Newcomer assisted in the services. He was buried in the Lanark cemetery.

Lanark, Ill.

A Voice From India.

BY W. B. STOVER.

—WE are always glad for every bit of good news from the home land, from the home church. The country is dear to us all,—"My country." But the church is dearer,—"My church."

—It is now a settled thing that the new King of England is to come to India to be crowned Emperor of India at Delhi. The date of his arrival is the end of November, and his departure is set for the end of January,—two months. The idea is immensely popular in India, and gigantic preparations are being made in Delhi for the great days.

—And along with this hangs the skeleton lower and lower, near and nearer to India,—the death-dealing famine. Last mail I wrote to the Board, in the monthly letter, that the second rains had come, and every one was rejoicing, as now it was assured there would be no famine. But the rains have not reached Ahmadabad! Famine prices already prevail to the north of us, and the worst is expected. Every one, every morning, breathes one and the same prayer for rain. The crops from Ankleshwer to Bombay will be very good, so far as the present indications are concerned, even though the delay of the rains has killed some of the early rice. But northward, in Ahmadabad City and in all of Khatiawar, the cry is, "No rains!" An earnest Christian appeal has been sent out from those parts, asking that all the Christians of Gujerat, of whatever faith, unite in the one common prayer, in a special manner, on the coming Sunday, Aug. 13. The outlook is indeed dark.

—It is a great thing to gather into the fold a whole large company of simple people untaught, but it is an infinitely greater thing to inspirit them, teach them, and hold them for the Lord Jesus! This is the work of the missionary. First gather them in, then get them into such close contact with the Lord Jesus that they will come to know him as he really is, and be to them all he really desires. This is the work we have before us, and it is the same at home.

—I heard, some days ago, that a certain well-educated dear brother of unquestionably good character had withdrawn from the church. O, how that kind of news pains us way out here in the front line of battle, where we teach and believe that we should stick to the church through thick and thin, through persecution and hardship, and yet remain firm,—not only firm in the faith of the Lord Jesus, but firm in our relation to the church. There is nothing quite so disappointing, it seems to me, as the sad predicament of him who left our church for some idea he had in mind, and then failed to realize the expected benefit. So far as I have been able to observe, it is a usual thing that, when a brother leaves the church,—be his intent never more clear, high or honest,—he does not get what he dreams of getting before he took the unfortunate step. Then the mental experience is a secret matter, known alone to him and God. How much better it would be were that dear brother to throw in his strong influence with us continually, for what we, perhaps, need the most! How much better, if he would confer with those who know the true secrets of leadership, and then lead, with others the hosts that are always willing to be taught, provided the teaching has a scripture to support it. I can not help feel the young Hindoo university graduate's wisdom in such a matter as given below, is greater than that of the more advanced brother who withdraws from his church, even though I cannot approve of all the Hindoo says. On being approached concerning his faith in Hinduism, and his perpetuating such a bundle of superstitions, and being asked the question why he did not openly accept the Lord Jesus as his Savior, the Hindoo answered the question by saying that he had thought of doing so, yes, candidly considered the question many times, but, said he, "When I cut myself off from my people, then my influence with them is done, and I want to do the greatest possible good to them while I am spared in this world. If I can lead them on, which I think I can do, it will be by staying with them, and just far enough ahead that I am not separate from them. Then they will follow, and we will reach the goal together."

—On the other hand, it greatly rejoices our hearts to learn that some of our members are in the advance line of battle for the greatest work of the church, even abreast with the best leaders of the most missionary churches. In a recent paper, circulated for general information, a "Report of the Committee on the Formation of a Board of Missionary Studies for North America," the name of Martin G. Brumbaugh appears in a list of some thirty-six names as the appointed committee, together with the proposed constitution of the committee. Our houses are full of books made by other people; why should we not be placing, with more enthusiasm and zeal, the books that our people have made, into others' houses? The reason usually assigned is that we have not yet made many books, and thus other books get the preference. The reason I do not presume to explain. But I praise the Lord that some of our people are getting way to the front in missions, temperance, education, and simple-life work. The Governor of Pennsylvania, in appointing the State Board of Education, recently appointed Bro. M. G. Brumbaugh, not only as a member of that board, but for the longest term, that is six years. But this is home news. One paragraph makes our hearts full of joy, while the next paragraph makes us sorry. Perhaps, if our love for the church were less, it would not affect us.

—It is interesting to note that just last week the information came to us, by special letter from the Collector Sahib, that six liquor shops in this county would be closed from next April first. This is the result of some work on temperance lines with Indian officials. First the Collector was approached as to the number of saloons in the county, with the request that they be lessened. He responded very readily by appointing me as a member of a Temperance Committee to look into conditions, and report. In making recommendations, however, it was understood that such were not to be mandatory. There were five of us, all Indians but myself. We could not agree. One recommended reduction of two saloons, another agreed to the reduction of four, and the other three of us insisted on six. We should like to have gotten them all out, but went feeling our way, with the happy result that we got all we could. Meanwhile, a number of less hopeful residents rather made fun of us, saying that our efforts would be in vain. We rejoice for this much, and will try it again next year, if the Lord continues to work with us.

Bible Memory League.

BY S. N. M'CANN.

(Those wishing to take part in the line of study here referred to, can address the General Mission Board, Elgin, Ill., for cards. The Board will keep the necessary records, and conduct the correspondence. Send for cards and introduce the plan. For copies of a Pocket Testament, address Brethren Publishing House. We have a small well-bound Testament for 35 cents. The Gish Pocket Testament, with references and larger type, may be had for 60 cents.—Ed.)

"Let thy heart retain my words; keep my commandments and live" (Prov. 4: 4).

While thousands are joining the "Pocket Testament League," thus becoming regular readers of the Holy Book, there is still much careless reading,—much reading just to get over the required amount, without any effort to retain the Word.

Twenty-five and thirty years ago I gave some time to daily committing a verse or so of scripture, later on rehearsing daily all that I had committed for the last week or two weeks. This has proved one of the greatest blessings of my life. In the hours of temptation and trial the scriptures committed would flash into my mind and prove a defense for me, stronger than human power. In the pulpit the texts committed were always within easy reach, and I could use them without notes or special effort.

In talking to those that I would try to lead to the light, the scripture that I had committed proved my greatest help.

I urged others to commit daily one verse. Some took up the work and they have testified to me that the scriptures thus committed have proved to be their greatest blessings.

Many of the boys and young men whom I urged to the task of daily committing one verse, are now in the ministry, and the mental training and the fund of knowledge, gained by work of this kind, is valued as highly as any other training. I have spent hours behind the plow, in sweet meditation on the Word, committing, rehearsing, and meditating, while at work. While chopping in the timber, the work seemed light if I gave my mind to committing and rehearsing.

I have engaged in no kind of physical labor where I did not and could not, make it brighter, and myself happier, by committing and rehearsing something useful. My time was generally given to the Word of God.

Since urging our people to join the "Pocket Testament League" I have been constantly impressed with the thought of a League for the committing of Scripture. I cannot get away from this responsibility. Hence I write, to the readers of the Messenger family, my plan, and will be glad for any suggestions.

The Plan.

I hereby accept membership in the Bible Memorizing League by making it the rule of my life to memorize one verse of scripture each day, and to rehearse each day all that has been committed for the last seven, fourteen, twenty-one or twenty-eight days, and on Sunday to rehearse all for the last twenty-eight days, and further to rehearse, on every fifth Sunday, all that has been committed for the last fifty days.

Name, ...

Date, ...

"Let thy heart retain my words; keep my commandments and live" (Prov. 4: 4).

In signing the card, the daily rehearsal should be whatever you pledge yourself to do. Underscore the number of verses you will rehearse. If twenty-one, underscore 21 as indicated.

On the back of the card will be an explanation thus:

This is a world-wide organization of those who agree to endeavor to commit one verse of scripture daily.

There are no fees in the work.

The purpose of the League is to make all better who join it; to store the mind with God's Word, thus giving one of God's means of resisting the tempter; to strengthen the memory, and to lead all to personal touch with God.

There is no law for the development of a good memory like the law of committing and frequent rehearsal.

Let every member seek to get ten new members. Send for membership cards.

Recommendation for committing: Entire sermon on the Mount; John 14; Rom. 8; 1 Cor. 13; 2 Cor. 5; Psalms 23 and 90; Ephesians, entire book; entire New Testament.

CORRESPONDENCE

"Write what thou seest, and send it unto the churches"

FINDLAY, OHIO.

We had the privilege of attending the Ministerial Meeting of Northwestern Ohio, held Friday, Aug. 31, at the Black Swamp church, Wood County, and found the program to be one of unusual interest and helpfulness. The attendance was quite good and the spirit of the meeting splendid. The spiritual development of the individual and congregation was made prominent. Especially were the addresses of Eld. S. S. Blough appreciated and instructive. As an instructor and Bible teacher Bro. Blough has few equals and it was a rare privilege for the ministers and Sunday-school workers of Northwestern Ohio to come under his teaching. Bro. John I. Kaylor and wife, who soon leave for India, and Bro. S. P. Berkebile and wife, at home from India on enforced furlough, because of Bro. Berkebile's ill health, were at the meeting. John R. Snyder.

853 Maple Avenue, Findlay, Ohio, Sept. 1.

SECOND DISTRICT OF WEST VIRGINIA.

Our Sunday-school and Ministerial Meetings convened Aug. 24, in the Valley River congregation, and were, I believe, the best I ever attended in the District. All seemed to have studied their subjects well, and all had something good to say. Bro. D. H. Zigler, of Broadway, Va., a member of the Sunday-school Board, was with us, looking after the interests of the Sunday-school work. Bro. C. W. Guthrie was also with us. We were indeed glad for the presence of these brethren, as they rendered helpful assistance. In the evening Bro. Zigler delivered a strong temperance discourse, giving us great encouragement, to unite our forces in the conflict. Bro. Zigler said: "It is a big thing,—a large proposition,—and it will take our combined forces to drive it from the field."

Aug. 25 and 26 our District Conference convened. The organization was as follows: Bro. Z. Annon, Moderator; Bro. W. J. Row, Reading Clerk; Bro. J. B. Shaffer, Writing Clerk. All business passed off pleasantly. We appointed a District Temperance Committee. The writer is to represent on the Standing Committee of 1912. The District Meeting for 1912 will convene with the Brethren of the Pleasant Valley congregation. In the evening of the 26th (as has been our custom in these meetings), we had a love feast. Thirty communicants surrounded the tables of the Lord. Bro. Z. Annon officiated. Ten elders, one minister in the second degree and four ministers in the first degree were in attendance. We had a better representation than usual.

Thornton, W. Va., Aug. 28. A. C. Auvil.

BUENA VISTA, VIRGINIA.

Our series of meetings began Aug. 6, and continued until Aug. 20, conducted by Bro. C. M. Driver, of Waynesboro, Va., during which time Bro. Driver preached a number of very impressive sermons to well-represented congregations. In his short talks, from evening to evening, just before public services, Bro. Driver showed what the New Testament teaches in plainness, simplicity, and many other points, required of the followers of Jesus Christ. As a result of his efforts, four came out on the Lord's side and were received by the church. Sister Mae Allbright was in our midst most of the time and assisted in the song services and personal work. Aug. 20 she and her class, of Hinton, Va., rendered a program for us, which was greeted by one of the largest audiences since our organization. We hope that Sister Allbright and her class will soon come back again.

Our pastor, Bro. Howard Alley, is now well again and at his post of duty. We feel much encouraged by the efforts put forth, and trust that the much needed seed sown will bring forth a harvest for Christ's kingdom.

Buena Vista, Va., Aug. 31. W. E. Gilbert.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA.

Our members have recently enjoyed a brief visit by our esteemed and beloved brother, Eld. D. L. Miller, and wife. On their visit to the Northwest they made this their business and purpose to visit the Mission here,—a thing which many others of our ministering brethren might do.

They came to us on Sunday morning, Aug. 27. Bro. Miller gave us two most helpful and edifying sermons on this day, and on Monday evening a talk on his travels in the Bible Lands. The attendance at the services was greatly above the average, and all were greatly edified by this visit. Many regretted that their stay with us was so brief. We hope it may be possible for them to spend a longer period with the Mission here, in the future.

Other recent visitors at the Mission were Sister Eckhart, of Nappanee, Ind., Brother and Sister Kieffaber, of Mount Morris, Ill., and Sister Ollie Fribum, of Waxmatchee, Wash. We are always glad for these visits, and the words of concern and helpfulness, expressed by the visitors. The fellowship of kindred spirits is strengthening to those of us who are out in missionary fields, from communities of our own people. May we have the united prayers of all in behalf of city mission work everywhere, that God's name may be exalted in our great cities!

DEATH OF ELD. ABRAHAM HULL.

Eld. Abraham Hull was born in York County, Pa., March 16, 1844, died in the Upper Canowago congregation, Adams Co., Pa., July 25, 1911, aged sixty-seven years, four months and nine days.

He was married May 5, 1867, to Hetty Raffensberger, daughter of Eld. John Raffensberger. To this union were born three sons and one daughter, who are yet living. Bro. Hull was made to rejoice, about two years ago, when two sons and his daughter united with the church.

Eld. Hull united with the Church of the Brethren in 1877, during a series of meetings held at the Latimore house by Eld. Jas. A. Sell. He was baptized with a number of others by Bro. Sell, was elected to the deacon's office in 1882, and to the ministry in the same year, and the eldership in 1909. Bro. Hull always stood firm for the principles of the Gospel. The last Sunday he lived he filled his appointment, and on the following Tuesday, July 25, he left his home, seemingly in good health, to visit his sons, but just before retiring for the night, he had one of his attacks of heart trouble, and died a few minutes later in the arms of his companion. His remains were laid to rest in the Latimore cemetery. Services in the Latimore church by Eld. D. M. Baker, assisted by Elders D. H. Baker, Hezekiah Cook and others, to a large assembly. This gave evidence of the esteem in which our brother was held. W. G. Group.

York Springs, Pa., Aug. 29.

DEATH OF BRO. WILLIAM K. MOORE.

Bro. Wm. K. Moore was born in Union County, Pa., July 31, 1831, and died in the Mexico congregation, Illinois, Aug. 28, 1911, aged eighty years and twenty-eight days. He was united in marriage to Sister Caroline Myers, in his native State, in 1856. Together with his wife and two children, a son and a daughter, he moved to Illinois in 1869, settling in the Waddams Grove church, where he lived and labored until his death. His wife and daughter preceded him to the spirit world.

In December, 1892, he was married to Sister Elizabeth Sheaffer, who, with his son and two grandchildren, mourns his departure. He had the good pleasure of seeing his children and grandchildren in the church. Bro. Moore first served as a deacon, was elected to the ministry in 1873, and advanced to the eldership in 1901. He was not only a good citizen and a careful business man, but he was a faithful Christian and an earnest minister of the Gospel. He spent much time and thought for the church's best interests. He loved the church with a sincere devotion, and was willing and anxious to be used in its cause. His last few years showed many signs of a ripened life. As life's shadows were gathering more and more, it was pleasing to note that his faith was getting stronger, and his hope brighter. He lived an active, useful life. His home was a model of neatness. His busy, earnest life was an uplift to the community and the church, and they were made better by his having lived among them.

The Waddams Grove church has suffered heavy losses in her ministry, during recent years. In the last five years, four of her faithful elders have been laid away to rest. Peace be to their ashes! The funeral occasion was improved by the writer from Heb. 10: 34, assisted by the brethren. His body was laid away in the family lot, by the side of his first companion and daughter.

Rockford, Ill., Sept. 4. P. R. Keltner.

WAYNESBORO CHURCH, PENNSYLVANIA.

The Bible Institute, held in the Waynesboro church Aug. 14 to Aug. 26, was a spiritual uplift to many. Bro. E. E. Hykes, pastor at Batavia, Ill., and a student at Bethany Bible School, and Bro. H. P. Garner, of the same school, had charge of the work. There were two sessions of two periods, held daily.

The subjects of "Prayer" "Soul-winning," and "The Holy Spirit" were carefully and profitably studied. Much interest was manifested in the study of "Selected Portions of Matthew's Gospel," which included the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth chapters.

The study of the Book of Hebrews gave us new reason to "hold fast," "take heed," "consider," and "give diligence" "to the things which we have heard." Our great High Priest "hath passed through the heavens" after having been tempted in all points like as we are. Because of this he "can bear gently with the ignorant and the erring," and give "grace to help in time of need." Having offered his own self, he hath secured for us a New Covenant, with God-bought one-another, who we have remission of sins, eternal redemption and sanctification.

Were more of these Institutes held, we believe that many church problems would solve themselves. The problem of evangelization would not be difficult for the true believer, after "learning to handle aright the Word of Truth," would be eager to lead souls to Christ. The need of special revival services would not be so great, for the Word of God, in the heart of the individual believer, would be a "seed-sown-and-God-caused-to-grow." Being known and read of all men, the personal worker has oftentimes a greater winning power for God than many sermons. In our seeking to keep the New Testament commandments, let us not forget 2 Tim. 2: 15.

THE ROUND TABLE

The Annual Meeting Reports.

BY C. H. LIGHT.

THERE are some very good reasons why the Full Reports of every Annual Conference should be carefully read by every member of the Church of the Brethren.

In the first place it is the Christian duty of every brother and sister to keep in close, sympathetic touch with the business transacted at these great meetings. The decisions that are made there concern every member, no matter how insignificant he may feel. Too often these decisions are violated, not willfully, but because of ignorance concerning them. How many a difficulty and irregularity in the local churches could be avoided if all the members were informed by the proceedings of the Annual Conference, and could fully realize that its various decisions were arrived at under the guidance of the Holy Ghost.

If every member of the church would read these Reports in the right spirit, his sympathies would be aroused and he could not help but conclude that the Spirit of God is the Unseen Hand that adjusts all matters for the best of all concerned. Too frequently members become impatient with this representative body, because it disposes of some query contrary to their ideas. If, however, we read these Reports and carefully note the speeches of those whose experiences, relative to the point in question, are different from ours, we get a many-sided view of the matter, and we are then better able to judge for ourselves whether or not the best disposition has been made of it.

By reading these Full Reports our desires for the welfare of the church at large are augmented. We realize what dangers confront her and we can more fervently pray for her well-being. We realize, in a measure at least, the great concern and anxiety of those upon whose shoulders rests the burden of the work, and our prayers and fastings, in their behalf and in the behalf of the church, are heart-felt.

Thus we understand each other better, we sympathize with each other more, we unite our efforts more firmly, and we advance with more power of the Spirit to conquer the evil around us.

The fault lies not with the Conference. It publishes these full reports and sends them to any address at a very low cost, but it seems to me the importance of reading them is not emphasized as it should be. Would it not be well if the elders and ministers of every church were to encourage every member in their respective congregations carefully to read these Full Reports and get the matter firsthanded?

"Family Entrance."

BY FRANK G. REFLOGLE.

ON a recent trip to Chicago I noticed a great many saloons, the side-doors of which bore the above sign.

To one accustomed to city ways, perhaps, this would not be so shocking, but to the average rural observer it is something to be wondered at.

But why be alarmed? Is the front door not as much a "family entrance" as the side door? For every tread the father makes over the front step of that saloon, does not his family share equally and, ofttimes more, in the resultant debauchery which it brings? For every glass he sups at the front bar, does he not add another wrinkle to his wife's brow and another cry of starvation to the mouth of his innocent child? For every dollar that he lays upon the front counter of that devil's den, does he not add another step downward to the moral degeneracy of his family, as well as of himself, and rob them of the noble companionship they should find in him as a man?

Family Entrance! God pity the family. It is all too plain that it matters not whether the family ever enters the side door in person, yet they must suffer cares and cold, persecution and poverty, hunger and hell, because some one,—perhaps father,—has entered the front door.

The devil knows full well that the side-door business is simply a more respectable-looking trap to ensnare the families in our cities, and rob them of money, morals, minds, children, heaven. Beware!

Well-Rounded-Out Church Notes.

BY M. M. ESHELMAN.

ON opening the GOSPEL MESSENGER I turn first to the church correspondence, next to the editorials, and lastly to the essays. Of course, there is edifying correspondence and then, again, some that merely fills up space. What is edifying correspondence? Let us see.

1. The quality of fairness to all persons. The absence of special pets, who are never missed in the telling. There are people who are everlastingly sitting upon the seat of our affections, and when we take up our pen to write, they are quite sure to be noticed, even at the expense of the more worthy. Cut out the partialisms.

2. Power to edify in the telling. This is a splendid trait. The sweet things do not all abide in the traveling or visiting ministers. The stay-at-homes also contain the substantial meats and edifyings. The feeder of the flock, the watchman who stands guard over the babes, is worthy of notice too. I enjoy the news of his excellent work.

3. Ability to sift out the chaff of mere praise of men from the divine wheat that brings joy. Boil up the scum, and skim it off.

4. Ability to discriminate. Discernment between actual spiritual growth in holiness of the congregation, its union in Christ, its activities in "good works for necessary uses," and the mushrooms of mere society-isms and light-minded gatherings. Use the sieve of truth and wisdom and shake the sieve most earnestly.

A Jesting Pastor.

BY DAVID M. ADAMS.

I RECENTLY heard a certain lady say, "We like our new pastor very much. He is so jovial. He is so full of jokes. He is not afraid to relate a funny anecdote."

Certainly a pastor of that kind will not serve the best interests of his congregation. What saith the Scriptures? "Be sober, be vigilant. But fornication, and all uncleanness, or covetousness, let it not be once named among you, as becometh saints; neither filthiness, nor foolish talking, nor jesting, but rather giving of thanks. Every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment. For by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned."

Surely, he who is commissioned to preach the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and direct the lives of God's people, should, above all, be serious, sincere, earnest and vigilant. His conversation should always be as becometh an ambassador of Christ. He should speak the words of truth and soberness.

A jesting, trifling minister will, by his conduct, lower the standard of religious sobriety and ethics in his community. He is to be pitied. He should be faithfully dealt with by the elders of his District. He needs the prayers of all those who have the cause of Christ at heart.

Giving the Best.

BY WEALTHY A. BURKHOLDER.

IS it not true that people of this world are much more likely to go to God for help and strength in time of affliction and sorrow than at any other time? It is the rule to seek for Divine strength in the dark hours only, and this is wrong. It is seeking for strength when our own is exhausted. The best way is to give him our best service when the world looks bright and joyous,—when the birds sing and the grass is green. If we want to honor the Master, we must give him our best days, our best service, and at all times and on all occasions.

This emphasizes the thought that we should remember the Creator in the youthful days. It is better to give the whole life to the service of the Lord, and not to wait until the powers of the mind and body are exhausted, and we have only the dregs to offer.

When everything goes right, and we are enjoying the many blessings of life, we too often forget to be grateful for the great benefits we enjoy. We forget to be thankful for the pleasures and numerous blessings showered upon us and too often we forget to show our gratitude until the dark days come. We should give the best of our strength, time and means to the Lord's work. That is giving it to him. He desires the whole heart and not a half-hearted service. Which will it be?

CHRISTIAN WORKERS' TOPIC

David's Popularity and Peril.

1 Sam. 18: 2-16.

For Sunday Evening, September 24, 1911.

David's victory over Goliath introduced him to Saul the king. High honors were heaped upon him, but in equal proportion perils overtook him. Our lesson passage gives us evidence of both.

I. David's Sudden Rise.—(1) The slaying of Goliath (1 Sam. 17: 49-51). (2) The friendship of the king's son (18: 1). (3) Introduced to the king (v. 2). (4) Promoted (v. 5). (5) His popularity (vs. 6, 7).

II. Perils Come.—Singularly enough, (1) They began with the king (v. 8). (2) Envy, the great element (v. 9). (3) Its manifestation (v. 10). (4) The deadly weapon thrown (v. 11). Here the life of David was exposed to the greatest danger; but God in his preserving providence delivered him.

III. David Was Preserved from an Evil Spirit.—Here is much to delight us: (1) David was not over-elated by his prosperity. He acted "wisely" (v. 5). (2) He did not return evil for evil (v. 14). (3) His words to Saul (24: 9-11).

IV. We Learn:—(1) How strange the scene! The father—the enemy; the son—the friend. One palace contained both. (2) In the day of prosperity we may rejoice; but let it be with trembling (1 Cor. 10: 12). (3) Trust in the Lord in the days of evil. He alone can shield us (1 Pet. 3: 13). (4) "Without me ye can do nothing."—Jesus.

PRAYER MEETING

The Walk that Honors Christ.

Eph. 4: 1-3; 14-16.

For Week Beginning September 24, 1911.

1. It Must Harmonize with Our Calling.—No other life is worthy an heir of eternity; no other can honor our Lord and Master. We have been redeemed with a price,—the precious blood of Jesus Christ. It is but right that we should glorify God in our bodies and spirits which are his. Our horizon not now what it once was. We are able to see the glorious vision of the Lord "high and lifted up," his "train filling the temple." We hear the soul-ravishing chorus of the seraphim, "Holy, holy, holy is Jehovah of hosts." To him, whose lips the angel of God has touched with a live coal from the altar, there grows a broader outlook which impels to the highest possible service,—the purest possible walk (1 John 1: 6, 7).

2. A Walk Implies Energy.—Standing still is not walking. Walking implies action. The walk that honors Christ is an energetic service in the cause and Kingdom of Christ. The indolent Christian is not honoring his Master. Duty always means service. While, with advancing age, we may be compelled to refrain from certain activities that characterized our younger years, yet even then our "walk" may be illustrious and lovely,—consecrated and pure. Our very retirement from the more conspicuous public duties may bring us nearer to Jesus, and enable us to show forth the beauty of holiness, the blessed fruitage of a consecrated life (Col. 1: 9-11; Gal. 5: 16, 25).

3. A Walk Implies Vision.—We walk with open eyes, wide-awake to the beauties all around us. We see the flowers by the wayside as they proclaim to us their message of cheer, but we also see the thorns, the briers and the thistles,—fit emblems of sin's destructive influences. As we walk,—Christ-honoring,—we catch visions of better things just ahead. We become "long-suffering, forbearing one another in love." Lowliness and meekness bring us very near to the loving Christ (1 Cor. 7: 17).

HOME AND FAMILY

Deal Gently with the Erring One.

BY D. MANCY QUELLHORST.

Deal gently with the erring one,
For though he did you wrong,
It was his weakness made him fall,
Be glad that you are strong.

We'll never know how hard he tried,
Like you and I—to stand,
But failed, perhaps, because we did
Not lend a helping hand.

We need not pull our brothers down,
Old Satan plays that part,
If we're Christ's, we'll strive to help
Him shun the tempter's dart.

We'll speak the kindly word in time,
The fallen to retrieve,
And with a Christ-like love we'll help
The sin-sick to relieve.

And He Built Tadmor in the Wilderness.

BY ELIZABETH D. ROSENBERGER.

As we read of the glory and magnificence of King Solomon's reign, it is left for the imagination to see the temple on Mount Moriah, with its molten sea, its tables inlaid with gold, the cherubim with wings of gold, and all the vessels and swinging censers, made of the same precious metal. We read of the ivory palace and the roads built by Solomon, and we know that during his reign the city of Jerusalem was the wonder of his age. Other nations feared and paid tribute to a king so great and powerful. But, greater than all these, was the project which Solomon conceived after he had been reigning for twenty years, and temple and palace were completed. As if we had been told so much of the power and wisdom of Solomon that it was not necessary to say much about this undertaking, we are simply told that "he built Tadmor in the wilderness."

The builders and carpenters, his architects and cunning workmen, were set to work. A whole army were told to get ready for the task of building a city in the wilderness of Gilead between the river Euphrates and the city of Damascus. The army of workmen were assembled, and then began the weary march over the hot, dry wilderness way to the hills where they were to go to work. The very men who had set up the mysterious temple on the crest of Moriah were now called to undertake a journey which was toilsome, and called for the endurance and patience which is always linked with some great purpose. I wonder whether any of them complained about being sent away from Jerusalem to journey into the wilderness where no one ever came, and where they had to forego all the comforts of civilization. It may be that some were ready to mutiny and rebel against their hard fate, but daily they drew nearer to the place where the king had planned to build the city of Tadmor.

They stopped at last in the wilderness. And what a location they found! No cities near by, no conveniences of any kind, only that terrible barren waste stretching away in the dim distance. Can we imagine the architects going over the chalky limestone range of hills and taking a survey of the ground on which houses and buildings of all kinds must be erected? Olive and palm trees must be planted, and vegetation of all kinds must be grown there. And then, when Tadmor was in the course of being really built, did some men wonder why it was not built closer to Jerusalem, why it was erected so far away from the highways of civilization?

But all these things were made plain when Tadmor was completed and inhabited. The caravans, crossing the wilderness, rejoiced because Tadmor was not so far away. There they could stop long enough to rest, and lay up a fresh store of provisions. It changed the highways of commerce, to build in that terrible wilderness a city, the like of which had never been seen before. Only a great king, like Solomon, could cause to arise a wonder city like Tadmor,—a city of temples and palaces and palm trees. Of such a man the poet writes:

"There are pioneer souls, that blaze their paths
Where highways never ran,—
But let me live by the side of the road,
And be a friend to man."

The dangerous wilderness was robbed of half its terrors by the building of Tadmor. Men could cross its hot, dry wastes in safety, knowing that Tadmor was not so far away, and at Tadmor they could rest.

The world is all gates, all opportunities, to a king who can use them. Power and splendor were lying everywhere, even in the most out-of-the-way places for Solomon. These things await the eye that can see, the ear than can hear, the hand that can accomplish. And it is so today. From the same material one man erects a hut, and another finds in it the stuff out of which to build a palace. There were many kings on the throne at Jerusalem but only Solomon was equal to that wonderful project of building Tadmor in the wilderness.

In our own hearts there are wilderness tracts,—as barren, as deadly, as apparently hopeless, as the ground whereon King Solomon set up his wonder city, Tadmor, or Palmyra, as it was called several centuries later. Is there any hope that, through our humble endeavors, the wilderness may rejoice and blossom as the rose? What can be done to reclaim the wastes of the mind? Shall we go on our way as usual, without even planning to improve? Some of us say, We are doing the best we can when, in the wilderness of our heart, the weeds and thistles of evil thoughts and stubborn wills, and ill tempers, are rioting and flourishing. Oh, let us at least attempt to build a city in this wilderness whose spires shall point heavenward!

Above every soul there is a vision of things, higher and better, which makes us discontented with yesterday's achievement. We can build, if we will, a city in the heart, made up of things pure, of things lovely, and of good report. Block by block we lay a foundation of patient endeavor, by being true, and working on in spite of discouragement or unkind criticism. Step by day a palace of kindly deeds is slowly erected, a structure of truth assumes form, and a tower of Christian charity slowly rises. On every side the "stately mansions" of the soul are seen. And if we do not grow weary in well-doing, we shall build a city in our wilderness, greater than Tadmor of old.

And here is the sharp alternative. We must build our city of faith and good works in the wilderness of the heart, or we shall be lost in this same wilderness. Natural depravity and our besetting sins shall make life a failure if we do not stand out against them. We can act so cravenly and cringingly as to invite defeat; we need but succumb to circumstances. On the other hand we can, day by day, build up the walls of a city; we can conquer our environment, and thus prevail over our surroundings, and build our Tadmor in the wilderness. And God himself will dwell there, and make us glad.

"God made his dwelling in my heart today:
Flung wide the shuttered windows to the dawn,
And let the light in, ray on level ray,
Till all the dark was gone.
The shapes of fret and discontent and hate,
That had been wont to claim the place as home
Paused fearful in the shadow of the gate
And dared no nearer come."

Picking Gooseberries.

BY JAMES M. NEFF.

After spending several days each week, for a number of weeks, in my mountain camp, I am feeling better and am at home again for awhile.

While touring about, over the mountains, on the old donkey, I found some gooseberries,—the wild berries that are covered with thorns. Those of my readers who have seen the thorny wild gooseberries of other States must remember that about everything found in California is just a little more so than the same thing found elsewhere, and then they will understand what California wild gooseberries are like. On inquiry I found that these berries are highly prized for jelly, but how to manage the thorns seemed to me something of a problem. After some deliberation I figured out that I had the choice between two alternatives,—let the berries alone, and thus avoid the thorns, or get the berries in spite of them. But having a sort of a natural relish for overcoming obstacles that are not too formidable, and likewise a relish for jelly, I was inclined to the latter alternative.

I was materially aided in the solution of the problem before me by a neighbor camper who had had experience with thorny berries. He had taken a piece of board about three inches wide and ten inches long, driven a row of nails through it across one end, and whittled the other end down to a handle, letting the nails serve as teeth, thus making a little rake. With one of these rakes, which my friend very kindly offered to loan me, grasped in my right hand, and a heavy glove for my left, I was prepared to pick (or, speaking more accurately, to rake) gooseberries.

It was several miles from camp to where the best berries were to be found, and the old donkey and I labored up the steep, tiresome mountain trail, spent nearly all day and came into camp in the evening, with only enough berries to make a few pints of jelly. Under other circumstances it would have seemed small pay for the time and effort, but in the absence of more profitable employment I found pleasure in it, and repeated the trips till I thought the home demand for jelly with the wild flavor of the mountains in it was well supplied.

And herein are suggested two thoughts that will admit of spiritual application:

1. Don't let thorns frighten you away from any of the good things to which you are entitled.

2. If you lack strength or capacity for doing great things, try to find pleasure in doing small ones.

You Did Not Speak.

BY D. H. BAKER.

I was at the District Ministerial and Sunday-school Meetings in York, Pa., recently. My heart went out in sincere prayer for the dear young brethren, that the good Lord might always keep them under the influence of his Spirit. I have observed that some of the speeches at meetings of this kind have a little too much theory and not quite enough practice. I had prepared speeches on different topics, with incidents that I had gleaned from religious literature outside of our own, but it so happened that the brethren to whom the topics were assigned gave my speeches in substance, and referred to the very same paper I had in mind. The speakers on the temperance topics became quite enthusiastic when they referred to the Civil War, to slavery, and to the remarks of the President, back in the sixties, and I, too, felt like speaking. I am very glad that we have young Elishas to receive the mantle of the aged ones as they go to the glory world. I hope they will continue to show themselves workmen that need not be ashamed. There is nothing that gives me more joy, in my old age, than to see that our young members are taking such an active part in the church work.

A Sweet Presence.

BY IDA M. HELM.

The smaller duties,—the opportunities for doing the trivial things,—make up the larger part of every life. The innocent Lamb of God came into a lowly home and lived a beautiful life in humility. No grander life was ever lived. He lost sight of self in doing the Father's will. He comes into the humble walks of life, and sweetens the irksome, bitter tasks.

Living with Christ, closely connected with our Leader, doing his will in all things,—what a happy state! life will lead us safely all the way. The valleys of humility shall be exalted and every mountain and hill of difficulty shall be made low. The crooked ways shall be made straight, and the rough places over which we must travel shall be made smooth and plain. God has given us these promises in his Word. "The grass withereth, the flower fadeth; but the Word of our God shall stand forever" (Isa. 40:8).

☞All business and communications intended for the paper should be addressed to the BRETHREN PUBLISHING HOUSE, ELGIN, ILL., and not to any individual connected with it.

BRO. M. J. MISHLER, of Kansas, has changed his address from Conway to McPherson.

A RECENT revival at Bridgewater, Va., conducted by Bro. D. C. Flory, closed with eight accessions.

IN November Bro. W. D. Keller closes his connection as pastor with the church at Washington, D. C.

BRO. C. P. ROWLAND, of Lanark, this State, is devoting a few weeks to evangelistic work in Colorado. This week he is at Towner.

As the fruits of the late series of meetings, held at Trotwood, Ohio, by Bro. B. F. Heckman, twenty-eight were gathered into the fold.

BRO. A. S. THOMAS did some effectual evangelistic work at the Branch house, in the Sangerville congregation, Va., and ten persons were added to the fold.

WITH a fair attendance and an encouraging interest, Bro. J. M. Mohler, of Mechanicsburg, Pa., is engaged in a series of meetings at Hanover, his State.

BRO. D. M. ADAMS announces that his connection with the Scalp Level church, Pa., as pastor, closes Oct. 15. We are not informed of his plans for the future.

OUR correspondent for the Sugar Creek church, Ohio, reports seven conversions, as the fruits of a number of meetings held by Bro. A. L. Klepinger, of Dayton.

THE brethren at Akron, Ohio, will endeavor to have their new church ready for dedication Dec. 3, and have arranged with Bro. H. C. Early to conduct the services.

UNTIL further notice Bro. T. A. Robinson, late of Muscatine, Iowa, may be addressed at Maxwell, same State. He starts on his western trip the early part of November.

THE Beachdale church, Pa., is nearly completed, and will be dedicated Sept. 24, with Bro. J. H. Cassady, of Johnstown, conducting the services. He will also follow with a series of meetings.

SPRING BRANCH church is the place announced for the District Meeting of Middle Missouri, to convene Oct. 5, with the Ministerial Meeting the day before. The Elders' Meeting is announced for Oct 3.

ON account of a breakdown from overwork, Bro. Jacob Funk has decided to close his labors as pastor at Wichita, Kans. Hoping to regain his health and strength by living a more quiet life, he has accepted a charge in a country congregation at Peabody, his State. Bro. M. S. Frantz, of Colorado, will take up the work at Wichita.

ON his way to the Cherry Grove church, north of Lanark, Ill., where he is now engaged in a series of meetings, Bro. A. I. Heestand, of Wooster, Ohio, spent a few hours at the Publishing House last Saturday afternoon. We regret that he could not see more of the House when everything was in operation, as it is our rule to close down on Saturday at 12:30.

DURING some late revival work at Pyrmont, Ind., Bro. I. D. Heckman, of Certo Gordo, Ill., delivered twenty-five well-received addresses. Five made the good confession and were added to the church.

AT the late District Meeting of North and South Carolina, Bro. S. P. Jones was chosen a member of the Standing Committee for 1912. This is one of the meetings which, for some reason, was not announced in the MESSENGER.

BRO. J. F. APPELMAN, Traveling Secretary for the General Mission Board, called at the House a few days ago. He reports that he is very kindly received wherever he goes, and that his work in the interest of the mission cause is encouraging.

WE have the program for the Sunday-school and Ministerial Meetings of Southern Missouri and Northwestern Arkansas, to be held in the Cabool congregation, Mo., Oct. 4 and 5. The same will be published in the course of a week or two.

AT the Lower Lost River church, W. Va., a series of meetings was held by Bro. S. D. Long, which resulted in eight making the good confession and accepting Christ in baptism. Two were reclaimed, and others are expected to unite with the church soon.

THE District Meeting of Southeastern Kansas, convenes in the Paint Creek church Oct. 26. The elders are to meet at 7 P. M., Oct 23. Beginning with Oct. 24 there will be Temperance, Christian Workers', Sunday-school and Ministerial Meetings, with their respective programs.

WE shall soon publish the program for the Ministerial Meeting of Middle Missouri, to be held at the Spring Branch church Oct. 4. There will be special addresses on the evenings of Oct. 2 and 3, as well as on the two evenings following. The District Meeting is announced elsewhere.

THE managers of Blue Ridge College, Union Bridge, Md., ought to be happy. Bro. Chas. D. Bonsack writes us that the fall term opened with really more than had been expected in the way of students. He further says, the new teachers are proving efficient helpers in their respective lines.

A CORRESPONDENT informs us that the foundation for the mission meetinghouse at Akron, Ohio, has been laid. The house, 40x70, is to be veneered with brick, and supplied with a baptismal pool, and other church and Sunday-school conveniences. The building, when completed, will cost about $12,000.

THE Brethren in Northern California have announced their District Meeting for Oct. 6, with a Ministerial Meeting the day before, and the Sunday-school Meeting the day following. The elders are requested to meet Oct. 4, at 10 A. M. All these meetings are to be held in the Empire church.

THE fourth annual Sunday-school Institute for Nebraska, to be held in the Octavia church, opens Sept. 30, with Brethren Galen B. Royer, M. W. Emmert and John A. Clement in charge. The Ministerial Meeting of the District opens at 8 A. M., Oct. 3, to be followed by the Christian Workers and other meetings. The District Meeting convenes Oct. 4, at 1 P. M.

AN aged brother, who occasionally writes for the MESSENGER, has this to say: "If you can't publish the article I sent you some time ago, all right. God bless the MESSENGER. It is getting better every week." This certainly shows a better spirit than that manifested by a brother, who at one time threatened to discontinue his subscription because we failed to publish what he wrote.

GENUINE faith always has a hearty "Amen" for anything that the Lord says in his Written Word. The reason why some people do not say "Amen" to the Word of God is, because they do not have the right kind of faith. Furthermore, those who have the true faith always do the things that the Lord tells them to do. Genuine faith and true obedience go together. Where one is found the other will be found also.

WE are planning for a special doctrinal issue of the MESSENGER to appear sometime in October. We hope to make this the most interesting and attractive doctrinal paper ever put out by the house. About 40,000 copies will be printed. Of this issue more will be said later.

THE Thanksgiving number of the MESSENGER for this year will be our Sixtieth Anniversary issue. Considering how our publishing interest has grown since the starting of the Gospel Visitor in 1851, we certainly have reasons for being thankful. We shall be pleased to consider any article offered for this special issue.

IT is said that every true prayer is full of praise. In too many instances we instruct the Lord what to do for us and those of our own kindred, but we fail to praise him for what he has already done. The prayers recorded in the Bible are full of praise. Devout men and women, who prayed as they were moved by the Holy Ghost, thought more of praising the Lord who made heaven and earth than they did about telling him what to do.

WITHOUT attempting to meddle in politics, but solely in the interest of universal peace, the Elgin church, at a recent meeting, instructed the pastor, clerk and another member, acting for the church, to urge the two senators for this State to give the International Peace Treaties with England and France, as they were originally drawn up, their hearty support. It is believed that the Senate made a serious mistake by not approving of these treaties at once.

FOR the benefit of the different congregations in Northern Illinois and Wisconsin, we are requested to say, that Bro. Elmer Zook, of Lanark, Ill., has been elected Secretary and Treasurer of the District Mission Board, and that all contributions and correspondence intended for the Board should be addressed to him, instead of to Bro. J. H. Fike, former Secretary and Treasurer. This announcement is made by order of Bro. John Heckman, Chairman of the Board.

BRO. WILLIAM H. PYLE and wife, of Greene, Iowa, are visiting some of the scenes of their early life in Pennsylvania, and on their way east spent a few days at Akron, Ohio. They speak very highly of the church in that city, and think that a splendid work is being done. They also stopped at Huntingdon, Pa., and have some nice things to say about the Huntingdon brethren and their school. At this time they are probably in the Spring Run congregation, their old home church.

IN view of the fact that a number of members' children drift away from the church of their parents, Bro. Wm. Flickinger, of Morrill, Kans., suggests that it would be wise for well-to-do parents to send $25 to the Publishing House and have the MESSENGER sent to a son or daughter going from home, for his or her life-time. He thinks that reading the MESSENGER year after year would keep such young people in touch with the church, and that it might be the means of winning them to the Lord. Our brother thinks this would be a good way for some fathers and mothers to dispose of a part of their surplus means, and he is wondering who will be the first one to take up the suggestion.

WE have sad news regarding the death of Sister Marie Mohler, wife of Bro. Ezra Mohler, of Plattsburg, Mo., District Sunday-school Secretary of Northern Missouri. Last week Bro. Mohler started to the Sunday-school convention in Ray County. After his departure his wife, in removing the bread pan from a shelf, overturned an open can of oil, which fell into the hot stove, ignited and immediately enveloped her in flames. As quickly, as possible she wrapped herself in rugs, but they caught fire, and as a last desperate effort she tore her own clothing from her, but not until she had been fatally burned. Her children were absent at school, but help came to her relief, and after hours of effort Bro. Mohler was reached with a message. By means of three automobiles, in relays, he reached home in time to talk only briefly with his wife before she passed away. The painful death stirred the whole community as it has not been affected for years. A suitable obituary notice will appear in due time.

A series of meetings at Greenville, Pa., conducted by Bro. D. K. Clapper, closed with seven baptized and one restored to fellowship.

Three Missionaries Ordained.
